REVOLT IS FEARED.

Paris Strike Grows Alarming.

Cut Off from the World the City Is Face to Face With Hunger.

Police Raise Fund for the Aid of the Striking Operators.

Government May Be Forced to Dismiss Secretary Simyan.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hourly the strike situation here becomes more alarming. The socialist, and even some of the more conservative of the press make no attempt to conceal their belief that the country is on the verge of another revolution. Papers like Humanite, a socialist organ, fairly chortle in the havoc which the strike has brought upon the country, and predict that the present industrial war will end only with the bankruptcy of the present régime.

Cut off from Europe and even the province of France, by the total suspension of telegraph and telephone communication, Paris today is face to face with famine. Already the prices of food are mounting, and the dealers in provisions declare that unless some means is found to send payments and orders the city will be starving soon.

The police, having proved that their sympathies are with the strikers, as well as the municipal guards, whose attitude is unknown, have been removed from the work of protecting the general postoffice, and their places have been taken by soldiers. This step was taken after a long conference between President Fa[illegible]res and Minis[illegible] morning.

POLICE RAISE STRIKE FUND.

The discovery that the Parisian police had raised a fund among themselves, and sent it to the Strike Committee is among the most serious aspects of the situation, and has done more to alarm the authorities than any other one thing that has happened since the troubles began.

While it has not as yet been acknowledged by the postal and government officials, it is understood that because of this action of the police, the government will endeavor to get rid of M. Simyan, under secretary of posts, whose unpopularity was largely the cause of the failure to reach some sort of a compromise before the actual outbreak. But the move is not expected to do much good, even if attempted.

The strike has now become general all over the country. Lyons, Marseilles, Stettin, Bourges, Rouen, Havre, Grenoble, Limes and other large cities are almost as badly tied up as the capital.

The European edition of the Herald says M. Barbhou, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, scored a triumph in a speech which the chamber ordered placarded throughout France. He announced that acts of willful destruction had been committed by the strikers. The debate closed at 1:30 o'clock this morning, with a vote of confidence in the government by 368 votes to 211.

The situation now is about as bad as could be. Paris is absolutely literally cut off from all telegraphic and telephonic communication with the rest of the world.

LINE TO LONDON OPEN.

No lines are working to Germany, Italy, Belgium, or Switzerland, while some of the provincial lines are interrupted, among them those to Lyons and Havre. With London there is no telegraphic communication. One telephone line is supposed to be working, although as a matter of fact, this too is only available at intervals.

At the Bourse telegraph office the officials declared that the intermittent nature of the one line communcation with London was not due to the strike, but to bad atmospheric conditions. The telegraph office is particularly empty, most of the foreign correspondents having given up in despair.

In the hope of sending late dispatches to Berlin, correspondents sent off a portion of their telegrams by train to Brussels and telegraphed from there to the German capital.

The representatives of the London newspapers and agencies dispatched copy by the 4 o'clock train from the Gare du Nord. The Italian correspondents fared the worst, since the only available resource, the railway express, naturally could not convey dispatches in time for the day's paper.

The outlook today is blacker than ever. Telephone and telegraph employés with whom the Times correspondent talked stated emphatically that the vote of the Chamber last night would have the effect of fanning the flames of the present postal agitation into a veritable explosion of revolt, and that in all probability not a single telegraph line would be available in Paris today.

The general situation of the strike throughout the whole of France is also anticipated with a consequent paralysis of all business between the great industrial centers of the country.

RAIN IN NORTH.

San Joaquin County Crops Get Needed Moisture; Downfall Is General.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, March 20.—A general rain is falling in San Joaquin county tonight, and will do great good to the crops, which are in fine condition, but need a little moisture to make them certain. Reports from the west side of the river are that rain has been falling lightly there as here and will be of vast benefit to the growing crops. Crop prospects throughout the country were never more encouraging.

REDDING, March 20.—The northern part of this State has been struck by a wintry wave. Rain is falling as far north as the Oregon line. Snow is falling in Weaverville.

COLD DRIZZLE AT SACRAMENTO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—A cold drizzle set in late this afternoon, which after nightfall increased to light rain with raw, strong southwest wind. The moisture should give an impetus to growing crops, unless it is followed by heavy frosts. In that event the peach crop might suffer some.

DROWN AT DOCK.

BARROW-ON-FURNESS (Eng.) March 20.—A gangway connecting the battleship Vanguard with the wharf at the Vicker Sons-Maxim yard collapsed today. Fifty workmen were precipitated to the dock. Three of them were killed and fifty injured.

HARD ON TRAIL OF WHITLA'S KIDNAPERS.

Woman Who Is Believed to Be Chief of Gang Is Being Closely Shadowed by Constabulary, and Arrests May Be Made This Morning.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SHARON (Pa.) March 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An arrest of a woman in the Whitla kidnaping case is near this morning, and with it is expected to come the clearing up of the mystery of the affair and the return of "Billy" Whitla to his parents.

Preparations for the capture were made at midnight, when one of the armed troopers of the Pennsylvania State constabulary, who has been shadowing a woman who is believed to be the leader of the gang that kidnaped the boy, called upon Chief Crain of the Sharon police for aid. The trooper informed the official he believed that he had sufficient evidence to take the woman into custody, but wanted to be sure that her confederates could not escape. It was to get them that he asked for assistance. The woman is said to have conducted the negotiations for the $10,000 ransom sought by the gang.

Men were immediately sent from Sharon to help the trooper, whose whereabouts was not revealed, but who is known to be within a few miles of this city.

"It would have been difficult for conspirators to have chosen a more prominent victim in this part of the country," a Sharon official said today. "Billy Whitla is one of three heirs to the fortune of Frank P. Buhl and the estate in which the boy's mother participated.

"Mr. Buhl had a controlling interest in the Sharon Steel Company, which was sold to the steel trust for $6,000,000. He also is the owner of immensely valuable lands in the West. He retired from active business following the steel trust negotiation, and being childless he centered his affections on 'Billy' Whitla, Selima Whitla, aged 12, and the twelve-year-old son of Harry Forker, the latter being his wife's brother. It was no secret that the three children would be the principal heirs of their uncle, and that also they would come into the property of other rich relatives. Of the three, Billy's portion would be the largest, as he was his uncle's favorite."

Mrs. Buhl's two brothers, Thomas and John Forker, both bachelors, live in an old brick mansion adjoining the Whitla property. Another brother, Harry Forker, took up his residence in the "Brick House" as it is called, following legal separation from his young wife several years ago. Mrs. Forker visited the Buhls within the past fortnight. She has light brown hair and eyes, is vivacious and popular among the younger set in Sharon. She makes her home with her parents in Norfolk, O.

Mrs. Whitla has ceased to be terrified by declarations of the kidnapers that they will kill her son if the ransom is not paid. Her husband has had published in the newspapers specified by the conspirators the following notice:

"A. A.: I will do as you desire. J. P. W."

Detectives have been keeping close watch on a woman whose home is near this city. She is guarded with the greatest secrecy by the police and private agencies employed by the Whitlas, but it is learned from an unimpeachable source that the woman suspect will be arrested if she makes any effort to leave Sharon.

It is believed that she is a member of the kidnaping band, and to her is delegated the work of communicating with Mr. Whitla and getting the $10,000 without danger of the arrest of any of the conspirators.

Frank H. Buhl, the millionaire uncle of the missing boy, returned from Cleveland today, where he had gone to investigate the report that the boy had been found and that his abductors had been captured. Mr. Buhl said that his visit had been futile and that all rumors emanating from the Forest City had proved incorrect. Mr. Buhl said that he had an idea that the boy would be found near Youngstown, O.

An important conference was held in the office of Attorney Whitla this afternoon, to which Chief of Police Martin Craig had been called.

Information from a very close friend of the family was that important developments were expected soon in the East, probably Buffalo.

No statement will be issued by the family until this evening.

Sobbing and crying, James P. Whitla, the father of the kidnaped boy, broke down today when no word had been received from the abductors, and in a statement to the Associated Press, said he wanted to impress upon every person in the country that all he wanted to see was his child safe back home. He said he was ready to pay the $10,000 ransom at any time, and had authorized agents to pay over the money. He said that there were no new developments in the search for his child.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

CZARINA VICTIM OF TERRORISM IN RUSSIA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is reported here, on all but official authority, that the Czarina of Russia is in a serious condition as the result of long nervous strain and shock. Her Majesty is said to be living in the closest retirement, unable to see any visitors, and excluded from any part in the court life by order of her physicians.

The Kreutzer Zeitung states that a distinguished personage, recently received by Emperor Nicholas, was told that the Empress was ill and has been forbidden to receive any visitors. The Emperor expressed considerable apprehension as to her condition.

The life of the Czarina has been well calculated to inspire the bravest of women with terror. For years she has lived in the constant fear of death for her husband or her children. The atmosphere about the royal household has been surcharged with rumors of plots, and assassination has frequently approached close to the head of the government.

Laboring under this constant strain the Czarina was in no condition to withstand the shock that came with the accident to the imperial yacht in Finnish waters. This incident, though not serious, was fraught with the terror of all the cumulative dangers about the Russian throne. It came as the explosion of a harmless match to a person living over a mine of dynamite.

Since the accident, it is said, Her Majesty has never regained her composure. She has suffered from an increasing nervousness and, night and day, lives in dread of a recurrence of the attacks of semi-hysteria that followed her fright.

The physicians have ordered complete rest. One of the difficulties of the situation is that there is no rest for a crowned head today in Russia. There is no retreat to a place of safety where the trouble might readily pass away. Insomnia is adding its dire influence to the serious condition of Her Majesty.

The members of her family and household are praying that no untoward violence may add fresh fuel to Her Majesty's disturbed peace of mind. A repetition of some of the scenes of violence that have approached close to the palace walls in recent years might even go so far as to overthrow Her Majesty's mental equilibrium permanently.

TOWNS THIRSTY, TOO.

OLYMPIA (Wash.) March 20.—Acting Governor Hay today vetoed a bill passed by the Legislature which authorized the issuance by the State board to hotels of fifty rooms or more in first-class cities, licenses to sell intoxicating liquors with meals on Sundays. The Governor expressed the view the bill was unjustly discriminating between cities and towns.

STEEL TRUST RETRENCHING.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The United States Steel corporation has decided, unless business speedily improves, to close down the principal plants of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company at Ensley, Ala., on April 1. The Ensley plant has a capacity of 850,000 tons annually.

PROPHECY COMES TRUE.

Director of Spanish Observatory Foretells the Quake That Shakes the City of Barcelona.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BARCELONA (Spain) March 20.—An earthquake shock was felt in Catalonia province at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The earthquake shock referred to in the dispatch from Barcelona fulfills a prophecy made a fortnight ago by Emile Marchand, director of the observatory of the Pica Du Midis in the Pyrenees.

M. Marchand also predicted an earthquake for February 21 in the Alicante district, and his prophecy came true. His second prophecy created great consternation among the lower classes.

CABINET TALKS TARIFF.

President Discusses Need for Issuing Bonds to Meet Treasury Deficit With His Advisers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A conference of two hours on the tariff bill and its relation to the revenues of the treasury was held at the White House this afternoon.

Secretary MacVeagh, Secretary Knox and Senator Aldrich were with President Taft. At the conclusion of the conference the opinion was expressed that it will not be necessary to issue bonds to meet current expenditures before next autumn, if at all. The revenues of the treasury are increasing and the outlook is more hopeful than some time ago, it is stated.

Issues of Panama Canal bonds are expected before a great while to repay advances from treasury funds for the construction of the canal.

PARK BILL PASSES.

Quarter-Million for Los Angeles.

Legislature Votes Money for Big Exhibition Building.

Means Agricultural Park Will Become One of Show Places.

Gov. Gillett Expected to Put His Name to Act Without Delay.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The bill appropriating $250,000 to aid in the improvement of the Los Angeles Agricultural Park passed the Senate this afternoon and now goes to the Governor.

Senator Hurd of Los Angeles called up the measure and strongly urged its passage.

"The amount asked of the State," he said, "is only a fraction of the amount called for in the plans to make Agricultural Park one of the most attractive spots in the world. With the $250,000 we would erect a building in which to exhibit the products of all the counties of th eState. The city of Los Angeles has agreed to spend $100,000 to beautify the grounds. The county of Los Angeles stands ready and has agreed to spend $150,000 on an art building. This will make a total of half a million dollars. With that sum we will make a park that will attract thousands of visitors and prove one of the best advertisements the State has ever had. There are 114 acres in the grounds, all absolutely owned by the State and worth at this time $1,500,000. The present speed track will be maintained. Many attractions will be added, and the gates of the park will be [illegible] without charge to all visitors [illegible] to all residents of the State."

Senators Leavitt of Oakland, Wolfe of San Francisco and Willis of San Bernardino also urged the passage of the bill, declaring that the Agricultural Park project was deserving of the appropriation asked and predicting that the expenditure would prove of great advertising value to the State, besides serving as a pleasure ground for countless thousands of California's guests.

The roll call revealed a few members against the bill, but these changed from no to aye before the vote was announced and the measure was finally given unanimous approval. Members of the Los Angeles delegation express themselves as confident that Gov. Gillett will sign the bill. It is reported that the Senate Finance Committee waited until all doubt as to executive indorsement was removed before it reported in favor of the appropriation.

A bill by Senator Thompson granting the trustees of Agricultural Park increased powers passed the Assembly tonight. This measure will make the changes in the law necessary for the carrying out of the plans for the improvement of the big park in Los Angeles.

Elder Hustles to Head Off Marriage Between His Messenger and Fiancee.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BROOKFIELD (Mo.) March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pius Kiel today took a fast train for New York after receiving a letter from his younger brother, Peter, who had been sent to Germany to bring his elder brother's fiancée, Miss Sibilia Lambert, to the home Pius had built for her on his farm near here. The letter follows:

"Dear Pius: We have reached America, but the officers are keeping Sibilia at Ellis Island until they hear from you. If it is all the same to you, I will marry her, and then she will be free to enter this country."

Pius made no reply to his brother. He will leave it to her to choose between him and his brother, refusing to believe she has broken her engagement with him, made in Germany eight years ago. Pius left nobody in charge of his farm, and walked to town today. Neighbors will feed his live stock. He is prosperous and a good citizen.

STILL FIGHTING.

COOPERS ARE FOUND GUILTY.

Second Degree and Twenty Years the Verdict.

Prisoners Give Bonds of Million and Half.

Attorneys Move for Declaration of Mistrial.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NASHVILLE (Tenn.) March 20.—After filing a bond totaling nearly $1,500,000, Col. D. B. Cooper and Robin J. Cooper, convicted of murder in the second degree, and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary for the killing of former United States Senator E. W. Carmack, retired to the home of Judge J. C. Bradford tonight.

Although Judge Hart fixed the bond at $25,000 for each defendant, there was a rush to sign it on the part of the wealthy citizens of Nashville.

In vain the clerk protested that there were more than enough sureties signed, but the invariable answer was, "We want to put our names on that bond, too."

When there was no more room for names at the foot of the document, the new bondsmen indorsed it across the face until it was difficult to decipher the signatures.

Immediately after the report of the jury this morning the defense moved to set aside the verdict, because of the verdict of disagreement of yesterday, and asked the court to declare it a mistrial.

Judge Hart said he would listen to arguments on this motion later. The verdict coming as it did upon the heels of Foreman Burke's declaration yesterday that "we are hopelessly tied up as to the Coopers," was a decided surprise.

The defendants took it coolly, almost without emotion. Mrs. Burch and Mrs. Wilson, the daughters of Col. Cooper, were brave, and aside from tearful eyes, restrained their emotion gamely. Mrs. Burch sat with her arm around her brother Robin's shoulder, and Mrs. Wilson was at her father's right. The suspense for the two young women had been heartrending and any verdict, however unfavorable, was a relief.

The jurors were tired, too, looking disheveled, and when the court said, "I thank you, gentlemen, for your patience and devotion to the State, and dismiss you to your homes and your personal avocations," the entire twelve sprang from their seats as one man and hurriedly left the courtroom. The defendants and their counsel remained to complete the bond preliminary and motions for a new trial.

COURTROOM CROWDED.

Various and insistent rumors that the jury had agreed were responsible for a crowded courtroom this morning, and for the presence of attorneys for both sides, long before the usual hour for convening court. As soon as Judge Hart entered the court and even before he removed his coat, he ordered the jury and the defendants brought into court.

"I understand they have agreed," he remarked to the press table, "and am sending to see."

In almost a moment—9:25 to be exact—the twelve men entered the room and took the same seats they have occupied for nearly nine weeks.

"Have you agreed upon a verdict, gentlemen?" said Judge Hart.

"We have," replied Foreman E. M. Burke, hoarsely.

"Advance, Mr. Foreman, and read the verdict."

"We, the jury, find the defendants, Duncan B. Cooper and Robin J. Cooper, guilty of murder in the second degree and assess their punishment at confinement in the State penitentiary for a period of twenty years."

"So say you all, gentlemen?"

"So say all of us," in chorus.

MOVE MISTRIAL.

Then after the court had dismissed the jury, Judge Anderson of the defense was on his feet exclaiming:

"Your Honor, we move the case be declared a mistrial because of the verdict yesterday. We contend that yesterday's verdict was the only one and that it acquitted John Sharpe and declared a disagreement on the other defendants. We also ask that the defendants be admitted to bail."

"The verdict of the jury makes it a bailable case," was the court's retort. "Hence, I will fix the bond of each defendant at $25,000 unless there be some objection. In that event, I will hear arguments."

"It is satisfactory to us,' said Atty.-Gen. McCarn.

"And satisfactory to us," retorted Judge Anderson.

"There seems to be nothing less than for the court to pass sentence," said Judge Hart.

"I don't think that necessary," said Judge Anderson. "We move that judgment be suspended and that we be given a new trial. We will be prepared to rague the motion later—probably next week."

"All right, judge," remarked the court, "I know you will not delay unnecessarily, and I take it upon your own convenience."

"Bring in the bond books," said the judge.

MRS. BURCH COLLAPSES.

It was done and the defendants signed the bond and returned with their relatives and friends to the room they have occupied in the jail building. Mrs. Burch, who stood bravely and even smiled in the courtroom, collapsed as she reached the narrow corridor leading to the jail and had to be supported by her husband. Mrs. Wilson's eyes were streaming with tears. Both young women have counted confidently on an acquittal, although even their counsel advised against placing too much hope on the result.

The jurors were not inclined to talk, but one of them said:

"On the first ballot we disregarded John Sharpe and discredited the conspiracy theory. On this same ballot we stood six guilty for murder in the first degree, with mitigating circumstances, five for murder in the second degree, with twenty years, the maximum penalty, and one for acquittal. The ballots Wednesday and Thursday showed the same result. Yesterday the man who voted for acquittal went over to murder in the second degree, but demanded that only ten years be assessed. The rest of us did not deem ten years as anything like adequate, so we disagreed again. Of course this all refers to the Coopers, not to Sharpe, whom we had acquitted.

"Early this morning the man who was holding out for ten years agreed to twenty years and the six who were voting for a first degree agreed to this verdict."

ONE MAN HUNG JURY.

While the juror did not say who the man was who held out for acquittal, it is known from remarks overheard by the deputies that he was J. Hide.

John Sharpe hurried to the Courthouse when he heard of the verdict and was soon closeted with the defendants and their counsel.

Mrs. Sharpe was in court when the jury reported and comforted the daughters of Col. Cooper. Several other friends were with them and accompanied them to the room of the defendants, where they awaited the arrival of bondsmen.

After the bonds had been signed the party was whirled away in the Burch automobile to the Bradford home. There will be no further proceeding in the case for about a week.

LUMBER MEN PROTEST AGAINST TARIFF CUT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lumbermen threaten to descend in force on Washington. Congress is preparing for the onslaught.

"Lumbermen who are protesting against the lowering of the tariff on lumber," said Congressmen Kahn today, "are probably not aware that paragraph 17, in which the duty on lumber is imposed, contains this provision: 'That if any country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government shall impose an export duty or other export charge of any kind whatsoever upon, or any discrimination against any forest product exported to the United States, or if any county, dependency, province or other subdivision of government forbids or restricts the exportation of any forest product to the United States in any way, there shall be imposed upon all of the forest products of such country when imported into the United States the duties prescribed in section 3 of this act, during the continuance of such export duties, charges, embargo, discrimination or restriction.'"

Congressman Kahn said that this proviso meant that if Canada continued to require lease of crown stumpage to manufacture the logs into lumber in Canada, then this country would continue to charge a duty of $2 per thousand board feet on the finished product. Congressman Fordney of the Ways and Means Committee, who is a lumberman, is credited with getting this proviso inserted. Congressman Needham said it was a fact that many Americans had leases on crown lands, and that they claimed they were discriminated against. There is much doubt whether this proviso will affect the action of the Canadian government, so that in all probability certain lumber will continue to pay the same duty it now pays.

BIG FIGHT PROMISED.

Many telegrams have been received today by Congressmen from California protesting against a reduction of the duty on lumber. G. X. Wendling, D. E. Skinner and Arthur R. Briggs of the State Board of Trade, are among those who have wired.

Congressmen express the opinion that it would not be wise to send on a lobby to urge the duty on lumber. Farming sections are insistent for free lumber, and there may be a big fight yet on the subject. At present indications are that if it came to a vote the House would uphold the Ways and Means Committee.

Congressman Knowland has received protests from the California cap works at Stege and the Coast Manufacturing and Supply Company at Berkeley, the latter makers of fuses. The cap company claims that it has had hard work to compete with Germany in selling blasting caps with a duty of $2.36 per thousand or about 90 per cent. ad valorem and under the 35 per cent. duty proposed, the cap factory would have to close up. The importations of blasting and percussion caps last year amounted to about $16,000, nearly all from Germany.

SEES RUINATION.

A. H. Merrill, president of the Coast Manufacturing and Supply Company, making fuse, said he had hard work competing with Germany under the present duty, and that to lower it would mean ruination of his business. The new schedule puts blasting fuse at 35 per cent.

Everyone is diligently studying the bill in an endeavor to understand its provisions, which are sufficiently involved to give rise to much discussion.

SCHOOL HAZING FATAL.

Boy Hung from Sapling Head Downward Dies and Arrests May Follow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAPORTE (Ind.) March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The authorities of White county are investigating the death of a boy named Charley Stintson, with a view to arrest and criminal prosecution. The students of what is known as the White School rebelled against authority, and drove several teachers away.

Several days ago a teacher was hired, who proceeded to establish order by whipping the unruly pupils. The pupils who were punished blamed the Stintson boy for their humiliation and proceeded to haze him by tying him by the ankles and suspending him head downward from the top of a sapling near the schoolhouse.

He was found several hours later in an unconscious condition, and died as the result of the treatment received.

Five Miners Killed and Score Hurt by Explosion in Indiana Coal Mine.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EVANSVILLE (Ind.) March 20.—Five men were killed, a score more were injured and many were overcome by gas in an explosion in the Sunnyside mines today.

The explosion was caused by a windy shot, due to an overcharge of powder.

The victims were killed by sulphuric fumes which followed the shot. The mine was swept as if by a whirlwind. Twenty-nine men were in the mine at the time.

STARVE TO DEATH.

BERKELEY, March 20.—Two deaths from starvation were reported to the police today. James Hickey, aged 75 years, an unemployed carpenter, was taken to a hospital shortly after he was found dying by the secretary of a local charity association. He succumbed before physicians were able to afford relief.

Courtland Crossman, aged 73 years, was found dead in his home by the police and his death is attributed to starvation and exposure.

POLITICS.

TRY TO BREAK TOGA DEADLOCK

Traction Companies Versus Trunk Lines.

Congressman Lowden Now an Active Candidate.

Interests Arrayed Against Senator Hopkins.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Traction companies and public utility corporations are bidding against the trunk-line railroads in an effort to break the Senatorial deadlock in Illinois, according to a story that leaked out today from authoritative sources. Congressman Lowden, who is at the Auditorium Annex, is an active candidate for the toga of Albert J. Hopkins, with the backing of the railroad interests, say Lowden adherents.

Congressman McKinley of Champaign is the candidate looked upon with favor by the traction companies and public service corporations, assert men who are keeping close watch on developments at Springfield. The plan of campaign in which the big interests are involved on both sides is to convince the Hopkins loyal supporters, first that it is impossible to land their man. Then it is the game of the Lowden people, as well as the McKinley followers, to come out in the open and fight hard to pick off the Senatorial plum.

McKinley it was who developed the Illinois traction system, and for the last few weeks, it is said, Postmaster Weir of Rantoul, Champaign county, has been at the State capital keeping his ear to the ground and letting the Champaign man know just how matters stand. An effort is to be made next week to crush Hopkins out of the race. The interests against the former Senator are said to be ready to work hard to accomplish this.

Political prophets are figuring that if the opposition to Hopkins should be successful in pounding down his votes so as to eliminate him, it will be just as hard to land either Lowden or McKinley.

BEVERIDGE AS BOSS.

Senator Gets Party Leadership in Indiana Relinquished by Fairbanks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The announcement is made by friends of Charles W. Fairbanks that he has retired from politics for the present, and that after an extended tour of Europe he will settle down to the practice of law. On the heels of this announcement comes the report that a new chairman of the Republican State Central Committee is to be chosen in the near future, to succeed James P. Goodrich, who for eight years has been recognized as Fairbanks' manager in Indiana, and out of it, too, when there was need of his services.

It is known President Taft will make a number of changes in the personnel of Federal offices in this State, and that these changes will be made on the recommendation of Senator Beveridge. With the changes in the State Central Committee, and a complete change of Federal officers, it would seem that Beveridge is to be the supreme power in the State organization, a position that Fairbanks has held for more than fifteen years.

FIGHTING TO STAY AWAY.

Alleged Monrovia Bank Robber Combats Extradition from Ohio.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLUMBUS (O.) March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Sheriff Hammel of Los Angeles presented the requisition of the Governor of California for George Beatty, alleged Monrovia (Cal.) bank robber, to Gov. Judson Harmon this morning, he found that Beatty, anticipating such action, had secured from the Governor the promise of notice and a hearing on the application.

Beatty has employed John P. Eagen, a criminal lawyer of Dayton, to contest the case for him, and says he will fight the extradition to the last ditch. Sheriff Hammel has employed former Congressman Robert M. Nevin of Dayton to represent the State of California in the case. Gov. Harmon has set the case for hearing on Monday next. Beatty desired longer time to prepare his case, but Gov. Harmon was unwilling to cause unnecessary delay and expense to the California authorities.

NOVELIST GETS MEDAL.

NOTRE DAME, March 20.—The Laetare Medal is to be given by Notre Dame University this year to Frances Christine Fisher Tiernan, a novelist of Salisbury, whose pen name is Christian Reid. She has published forty novels since 1871.

JEER AT CAR FUNERAL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—The Quickstep and the Dead March mingled in a weird and curious medley at the obsequies of "the last of the trailers" in Chicago. After almost a third of a century of continuous service, No. 75 made the last trip late last night on the lines of the Chicago Railway Company, and was forced, bucking and hurdling rails, to the last, to a fiery end. Surrounded by a horde of people, sunk in the mud, defaced by brutal curio seekers, defiled with kerosene, jeered at and derided, the ancient vehicle which had carried over a million and a half of Chicagoans, blazed gloriously for a short time, and then gave up the ghost.

"KILL STOCKING TAX."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—"Killing the stocking tax!" A country-wide movement against certain features of the Payne Tariff Bill, which will be participated in by more than 2,000,000 women, is seen in plans just launched here. Chicago club women have determined to enlist the National Federation of Women's Clubs in at attack on the schedule in its application to stocking material.

KILLED BY MISTAKE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—A fragile woman, with an eight-months-old child, is today mourning the loss of her husband, Joseph Finn, 26 years old, who lies dead because Alexander Scott, a policeman, mistook him for "Pickles" Kilroy, a suspected robber, and shot him. Immediately after the killing Scott realized his mistake and notified his station, surrendered, and was held in custody pending the Coroner's investigation. When he was informed that the widow of his victim, with her child in her arms, was wondering why her husband did not come home to supper, he was overcome, and it was some time before he could explain the shooting in detail. He said he fired only after Finn refused to stop upon being ordered to surrender, and had made a motion as if to draw a weapon. Gilroy is much older than the man whose life was ended.

WHEN UNETHICAL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—It is unethical, not to say impolite, to wash a young woman's face without providing her with something to protect her hair, President Schneider of the Board of Education, offered this ruling, and as a result, the board at its next meeting will be asked to make a special appropriation for six rubber caps. It is the custom at some schools to scrub the boys regularly in the morning, and it has been found necessary to include some of the girls.

BEAR FIGHT IN CITY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MINNEAPOLIS, March 20.—A bear fought a crowd of citizens in the street yesterday, and after a long battle, was killed. The beast, which probably came down the Northern Pacific track or the river, was discovered by a boy who saw the animal hiding under a box car. An alarm was given and a crowd gathered. It was suggested that the animal be captured alive, and men with ropes and clubs surrounded it. Once brought to bay the bear made such attacks upon the crowd that none dared approach. It was finally killed with a shot.

UPSETTING.

AKING PEACE OF NO AVAIL.

Surprises Confreres by His Decision.

Couples Cannot Stop Divorce.

Get Final Decree Before Remarrying.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FRANCISCO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Sturtevant handed down a decision today which was received with surprise not only by attorneys and divorce litigants, but even by fellow members on the Superior bench. According to the new reading of the law, after six months has elapsed from the granting of an interlocutory decree of divorce, neither the plaintiff, the defendant, or both, can obtain a dismissal or vacation of the decree on any ground. If a reconciliation takes place the only remedy is for the people to wait until the year has expired, have a final decree entered and then remarry.

Judge Sturtevant bases his decision on the statutes, and the decision of the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court in the case of Barron against Barron.

Other courts have occasionally vacated an interlocutory decree on the application of the plaintiff after the twenty-six months have elapsed, it showing that the parties had become reconciled and wished to resume marital relations. Judge Sturtevant finds, however, that there are but two ways in which an interlocutory decree can be set aside—either by appeal, which must be taken within six months, or by the action of the court, also within six months, in which a showing that judgment was obtained against him through fraud, mistake or excusable neglect on his part.

WIDOWS CLAIM REMAINS.

VICTIMS OF EXPLOSION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

IDAHO, March 20.—A special from Wallace, Idaho, says:

Disputing that the twenty pieces of mutilated flesh and bone found in a dirty nail keg are the mortal remains of her husband, two widows of victims of the powder mill explosion are contending for the right to bury the bodies.

Mrs. E. Slitsburg wants to ship the remains to California. Mrs. P. E. Pisko wants them shipped to Seattle. As Albion Nelson, the unmarried victim of the explosion, was also from Seattle, it is argued that the majority should rule.

LOCAL OPTION IN UTAH.

PASSES LEGISLATURE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SALT LAKE CITY, March 20.—Both branches of the State Legislature passed a bill today regulating the sale of liquor.

The bill gives to all counties local option, and to cities of 12,000 population or more, a separate vote on the abolition of saloons. Where prohibition is not adopted, saloons are to be open only from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., except on Saturday, when the hours shall be from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Special elections on the question of local option are to be called on the petition of 25 per cent. of the legal voters.

It is believed the bill will receive the signature of Gov. S. y.

GERMAN PERIL.

BRITISH KEEN FOR BIG NAVY.

German Activity in Building Starts Panic.

Vote of Censure Proposed for Government.

Navy League Insists Upon Eight Dreadnoughts.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, March 20.—The dramatic confession of the Cabinet ministers in the recent debate in the House of Commons that Germany had caught the British admiralty napping and stolen a march on this country by so expediting the construction of Dreadnoughts that Great Britain would have little, if any, margin in the number of new ships in 1911-1912, has been followed by something like a panic throughout the United Kingdom.

There is no doubt that were Premier Asquith at this time to appeal to the electorate, little would be left of the present Radical party in the Commons.

The direct vote of censure which A. J. Balfour, leader of the opposition, will move against the government on Monday, will bring the issue as to whether four or eight Dreadnoughts should be definitely included in this year's naval programme squarely before Parliament, although there is a chance that the national outcry will cause Premier Asquith to yield and give definite assurances that the four "phantom" Dreadnoughts will be constructed this year in addition to the four provided for in the estimates.

All the adherents of a big navy want this promise and have started campaigning the length and breadth of the country in support of it. The Navy League, which represents no particular party, is in the forefront of this movement.

The movement has the support of the most influential people of the country and plenty of funds are promised. The League insists the minimum in the programme in the construction of Dreadnoughts in 1909-10 must be eight, claiming that less will not suffice to maintain Great Britain's naval supremacy.

The newspapers, ever since Tuesday's debate, have been filled with lurid pictures of the "German peril."

SIFTING ITALY FOR ASSASSINS.

MANY ARRESTS IN PURSUIT OF PETROCINO'S SLAYERS.

Palermo Authorities Believe Plot Was Hatched in Naples—Details of Search Kept Secret to Prevent Mafia from Getting Information. Detective's Body Not Yet Shipped.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PALERMO, March 20.—Signor Geola, the head of the local police, said in an interview today that the authorities were doing everything possible to apprehend the slayers of Joseph Petrosino, head of the Italian bureau of the New York police department, who was killed in this city, March 12. Ample funds have been provided for this end.

New arrests are being made daily, but the details are being kept secret in order that the Mafia may have as little knowledge as possible of the direction of the search.

The activity of the authorities has been extended to Naples, where Petrosino spent three days before coming here. The authorities think the plot was hatched in Naples.

The statement that the body of Petrosino was placed last night on board the steamer Slavonia for conveyance to New York was an error. It has not yet been decided by what vessel the body will be sent home. In the meantime, the coffin is reposing in a warehouse on the dock, closely guarded.

The police have been warned that an attempt may be made to prevent embarkation.

ROOSEVELT TO MEET DUCHESS.

ALSO AFRICAN TRAVELER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NAPLES, March 20.—Theodore Roosevelt's stay in Naples on his way to Africa will be short, possibly not more than twenty-four hours.

Ambassador Griscom, who will come down from Rome for the purpose of meeting Mr. Roosevelt, has arranged for a private meeting of Mr. Roosevelt and the Duchess of Aosta. The meeting is desired by the Duchess, who last winter made a trip through Africa, covering practically the route of the Roosevelt party.

The Duchess has not abandoned her idea of returning to Africa, and she is even considering a visit to King Menelik of Abyssinia.

CONTAGION IN JAMAICA.

KINGSTON (Jamaica) March 20.—It is believed that the foot and mouth disease which has appeared among the cattle in the banana district of Jamaica, was introduced through American and Canadian corn and hay and members of the Council are urging that the importation of fodder from these countries be prohibited.

BROWNSVILLE SPECTER.

President Hampered in Investigation Authorized by Congress Through Lack of Needed Funds.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The President finds himself somewhat hampered in the execution of the Foraker act providing for the appointment of an army court of inquiry to determine the eligibility for reënlistment of the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, colored, discharged on account of the Brownsville affray.

The act makes no special provision to meet certain expenses connected with the investigation. Owing to the peculiar conditions of the case, it is deemed advisable to select retired officers not below the grade of colonel for service on the court.

After a conference with Secretary Dickinson on the subject, the President has decided to ask Congress to authorize the payment of full active pay to all officers on the retired list who served on the Brownsville court.

Among the officers said to have been considered for service on the court are Lieut.-Gens. Bates, Chaffee, Young, Miles and MacArthur, Maj.-Gen. G. W. Davis, Brig.-Gen. Schwartz and Judge-Advocate-General Liber.

CRITICAL.

FOREIGN APPROVAL OF PRESIDENT'S POLICY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mr. Taft's handling of the latest Central American imbroglio is studied critically by European statesmen, not only because it is the maiden venture of the new administration in foreign affairs, but because that of a conviction that it is only a question of a short time before the Central American republics will fall under a Washington protectorate.

"It may be assumed," says a recognized authority, "that the Republican party, intrenched in public confidence, is committed to a view of the mission of the United States in the three Americas, which demands that the most be made of every chance to strengthen the hegemony of Washington. The Central American communities have been an irritating factor, and if Mr. Knox has cracked the whip over them he deserves to be thanked, as was Mr. Root for bringing the pressure to bear at Caracas which precipitated the fall of Castro.

IMPATIENTLY WAITING.

LONDON WOULD HURRY TARIFF LAWMAKING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Now that the Payne tariff bill is before Congress British business men are more interested in seeing it hastened to passage than in any changes likely to be made. What the market leaders desire above all else, is a revival of trade in the United States, as they lay upon American shoulders the blame for the devitalized condition of business in Europe. Winston Churchill refers to the "sickening influence of the successive terrible crises in the United States."

That American trade is destined to see great expansion as soon as Mr. Taft's signature is appended to the bill is generally believed, but a warning against overconfidence is heard.

One reason Lloyd-George's budget is kept in the background until some undisclosed date after the ending of the fiscal year is found in the desire of the government to have clearer conceptions of the American programme.

MME. STEIN LOSES.

SENTENCE STANDS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, March 20.—The Senate has rejected the appeal of Olga Stein, who last December was sentenced to sixteen months' imprisonment on charges of forgery and embezzlement. The appeal was based on the allegation that the indictment against the woman mentioned a crime that was not covered in the extradition papers.

Mme. Stein was arrested last March in New York City and extradited to Russia, where she stood trial on charges of forgery and embezzlement committed in St. Petersburg.

Papers Seized by Salvadorean Officials and Passengers Warned Not to Go Ashore—Ship Allowed to Proceed Only After Zealots Were Sure of Her Errand.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—Held for an hour at La Union, Salvador, while officials of the Central American republic took possession of her papers and warned the passengers not to attempt to land or leave the harbor, and allowed to proceed on her way only when an examination of the papers had convinced the Salvadorean zealots that she was on a harmless errand, was the experience of the German steamer Ella, of the Jebsen line, which arrived today from ports on the lower west coast.

The Ella was seized as soon as she entered the harbor of La Union, and an armed guard of Nicaraguan infantry was placed on board, while the port officials preëmpted the ship's papers and went ashore to examine them, admonishing all aboard the Ella not to attempt to leave the vessel. After the officials had rowed away, said Capt. Bruhn, the soldiers left to guard the ship proceeded to question those on board in a manner that indicated that the vessel was suspected of carrying Nicaraguan belligerents or spies.

In an hour or so, the officials returned to the ship, the papers were restored, and the Ella proceeded on her way northward.

CHILD DIES IN CELLAR.

Circumstances Point to Crime, But Autopsy Shows Cause Was Bronchial Pneumonia.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—With a pale blue strip of cloth, such as might have been used for the tail of a child's kite, tied so tightly around her neck that it left a great red mark, the body of seven-year-old Lena Muzio was found today in the cellar of a vacant house at Silver avenue and Cambridge street, a few hours after the child had left her parents' house near by to play with her three-year-old brother.

The finding of the body at first led to the belief that the little girl had been the victim of a vicious assault, and was strangled, but a coroner's autopsy, performed by Dr. John R. Clark tonight, showed that her death probably was due to bronchial pneumonia.

Lena was the daughter of Amil M. Muzio, a vegetable gardener, who lives at No. 700 Cambridge street. She left home early with her small brother, Herbert, who, a few hours later, returned to the house and babbled incoherently that some harm had befallen his sister.

The child's mother and Jaquemo Salvia, a lodger, at once started in search of the missing girl, each in opposite directions. The body of the girl was found by Salvia.

SALMON IN SHOALS.

NEW ROAD FOR MONTEREY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PACIFIC GROVE, March 20.—An unusual run of salmon has entered the Bay of Monterey, and induced the launching of quite a fleet of fishing boats, manned mostly by Japanese. The fishermen landed 1500 fish yesterday, mostly of small size. Sea bass, cod, sole and rockfish are also quite plentiful.

Monterey is to have another electric road built. Two routes are being surveyed to connect the old capital with its new suburbs of Vista del Rey, Del Monte Heights and the Hot Springs country. The estimated cost of laying the track over the Live Oaks Park route is $35,000, and somewhat less over the beach line.

SAFE BLOWERS WRECK SAFE.

RUNNING FIGHT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—A gang of safe blowers wrecked the safe in the Palm Café on the San Bruno road early today and succeeded in escaping with $500 after a battle with Henry Danz, proprietor of the place, and Benjamin Daly, a bartender who attempted to enter the café after the safe had been blown with dynamite. When the explosion occurred, Danz and Daly, two of the eight persons sleeping in the building, hurried to the lower floor and found the doors barricaded. As the robbers left the two men opened fire on them and a running battle, in which many shots were exchanged, ensued. The interior of the café was wrecked but none of the occupants was injured.

THANKS FOR CLEAN CITY.

TO HONOR DR. BLUE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—The Citizens' Health Committee is rapidly completing arrangements for the complimentary banquet to be given in honor of Dr. Rupert Blue, in charge of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, as a token of appreciation of his work in conjunction with the Citizens' Health Committee in cleaning this city.

Invitations have been sent to the heads of the Federal health service, and to the members of the staff who assisted Dr. Blue in that work; to Gov. Gillett, Mayor Taylor, prominent men in business and professions and the heads of several State departments, besides editors of leading papers of the country. Invitations have also been sent to all subscribers to the sanitation fund.

The banquet will be given in the ball room of the Fairmont Hotel, on Wednesday evening, March 21.

FIGHTS GROSS TAX LAW.

TELEPHONE COMPANY APPEALS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SALEM (Or.) March 20.—The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company has served notice on Atty-Gen. Crawford that it will appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Oregon to the Federal Supreme Court, in the decision to collect money under the gross tax law. The appeal will be based on the contention that the initiative and referendum law and primary system, under which the gross earnings tax was enacted, is in contravention of section 4, article 4, of the Federal Constitution.

The State Supreme Court upheld the law.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—Alleging non-support, Mrs. Thomas H. Graydon, who, as Helen Beryl Whitney, eloped from the Misses Ely's school in New York six years ago, with the Harvard football player, is seeking a divorce.

Mrs. Graydon is the daughter of J. Parker Whitney, a California millionaire, and she met her husband while he was in Harvard, and she was in the eastern boarding school.

Failing to overcome parental opposition to their proposed marriage the couple eloped. Mrs. Graydon arrived here from her home in Cincinnati last week, and she is now staying with her parents.

OUTLOOK DARK FOR SALOONS.

"Drys" Are Growing Stronger in Wisconsin.

Campaign Has Spread to the Larger Cities.

Liquor Interests Spending Money Lavishly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADISON (Wis.) March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A hot campaign is being waged by the anti-saloon element throughout Wisconsin. In more than two hundred communities elections on the question of no license will be held, and the probabilities are strong that in a majority of these places the "drys" will win out.

The campaign this spring is by no means confined to the smaller towns of the State, but has spread to cities like Ashland, Euclaire, Beloit, Oshkosh, Marinette, Sturgeon Bay, Antigo, Waupun, Neenah, North Milwaukee and Wauwatosa. In Euclaire more than $5000 has already been raised by the "drys," and it looks as though the saloon men will be given the worst drubbing they have as yet experienced in the State.

Appleton is likewise affected because of the fact that several officers of the Anti-Saloon League living in that city, are desirous of making as good a showing in their own home city as they anticipate will be made in other places where the campaign is in the hands of deputies.

While the saloon element is spending lots of money, it is conceded that in months past mistakes have been made which will cost them many votes, and which cannot be made good by the expenditure of money.

Manufacturers and dealers in brewers' supplies as well as the cigar trade have been thoroughly organised by the liquor interests, and addresses are being given by speakers in many of the towns in an attempt to stem the tide against the saloons. Both sides are heavy advertisers in cities where the outcome is doubtful.

PLAN CELEBRATION.

PROHIBITIONISTS INTERESTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The fortieth anniversary of the launching of the Prohibition party, in Farwell Hall, Chicago, September 1, 1869, will be celebrated on September 1 next. The national committee purposes to observe this anniversary in an appropriate way, and plans are now under consideration to that end.

The convention in old Farwell Hall forty years ago, brought together more than 500 persons from nearly all the leading States of the Union, and the national committee wishes to secure the names and addresses of those now living who were delegates or attended that convention, that they may be specially invited to attend this celebration.

The coming international prohibition convention, to be held in London July 18-24 next, is attracting much attention and the national Prohibition party will be officially represented on that occasion. Chairman Jones wishes to correspond with prohibitionists who can arrange to go to London.

Hardly any recent event in prohibition annals has provoked more widespread interest than the announcement of the debate to be held in the Hippodrome, Milwaukee, on Friday of next week between Mayor Rose of Milwaukee and President Dickie of Albion College, Michigan, on the question: "Resolved, that prohibition as applied to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages is right."

MRS. TAFT IN BARGAIN RUSH.

FIRST LADY OF LAND RIDES ON TOP OF 'BUS INCOGNITO.

Mistress of White House Slips Into New York Quietly and Elbows Way Through Department Store Crowds Doing Her Spring Shopping—To Return to Washington Next Week.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. William Howard Taft, wife of the President, and first lady of the land, today enjoyed a genuine bargain counter rush.

Accompanied by Miss Mabel Boardman, the mistress of the White House skipped over from Washington to do her spring shopping. Mrs. Taft traveled incognito and succeeded in keeping her identity a secret from everyone on the train and in the stores of New York.

In one of the principal Broadway department stores there was a special sale on lingerie and hosiery. The counters were piled high, and the aisles were crowded with a struggling mass of women intent on securing the best that was to be had at the cheapest price.

Mrs. Taft and Miss Boardman elbowed their way through the throngs and the couple secured what they wanted and walked away with a large bundle each stowed under their arms. Mrs. Taft on leaving the store visited several other emporiums and did nearly all of her spring shopping.

She rode on top of an old Fifth avenue 'bus to and from the Hotel Buckingham, where she stopped.

Tonight Mrs. Taft and Miss Boardman received their friends at the hotel and the first lady of the land dissertated at great length on the art of shopping and securing bargains. Miss Boardman and Mrs. Taft will return to Washington next week.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senate over the Direct Primary Bill, that body adopted late this afternoon a resolution directing the sergeant-at-arms to go immediately to Palo Alto and bring back Senator Marshall Black, if the latter is able to travel.

Senator Black's presence is necessary to break the deadlock, as the vote on the Assembly amendment to the bill providing for election of United States Senators by advisory vote by legislative districts, instead of a State-wide advisory vote, stands 20 to 19.

The only way the proponents of the amendment can secure its adoption is to have a full attendance of the forty Senators. In that event the vote would be 20 to 20, a tie, and then the Lieutenant-Governor would cast the deciding vote.

The organization Republicans, led by Senator Wright of San Diego, who have two Democrats with them, held a caucus this morning and decided to stand pat and keep the Legislature in session until Senator Black should recover.

The plan of sending the sergeant-at-arms after Black a second time, also was proposed, but was not decided upon until the afternoon session was well under way.

Senator Weed offered a resolution which provided the sergeant-at-arms should proceed at once to Palo Alto, and with a physician to be appointed by the President of the Senate, determine whether or not the Senator was too ill to return. In the event that the patient, in the opinion of the Senate's specially appointed physician, was able to make the trip to Sacramento, the sergeant-at-arms was authorized to convey his charge to the capital by special engine and car.

Determined opposition to this resolution arose. It was pointed out by Senators Stetson, Walker and Caminetti that such action upon the part of the Senate would be an insinuation that that body believed Senator Black was shamming illness in order to cause a deadlock on the matter in hand. Caminetti engaged in a lively tilt with the Lieutenant-Governor when he questioned the right of the Senate to appoint, through its presiding officer, a physician to pass upon the health of any member.

Lieut.-Gov. Porter said he regarded this remark as scurrilous and intended to apply to himself. He declared he would call the Senator from Amador to order if he did not desist.

Senators Wolfe, Leavitt and Wright, who were leading the fight for the resolution, then agreed that it should be withdrawn and that a less objectionable one should be substituted. Shortly before adjournment this evening the substitute was introduced. It provides that the doctors appointed by the chair should consult with Senator Black's own physicians as to the advisability of removing him. It aroused another storm from the opponents of the amendment on the ground that it still reflected upon Senator Black.

Senator Cartwright offered a substitute, merely directing the president to telegraph Black requesting him to return at the earliest possible moment, but this, too, was voted down and the first substitute was adopted.

Further consideration of the amendment to the bill was postponed until Monday at 11 a.m.

Dr. John Galwey of San Francisco was named as the examining physician with the understanding that if he were unable to undertake the commission, Dr. Howard Morrow should be called upon to do so.

The Senate passed a bill that was opposed by many physicians, amending the medical laws so that the Governor would have sole authority to nominate as well as appoint the board of medical examiners. The measure also admits to practice in California, without examination, a physician holding a certificate issued in any other State.

BLACK'S DOCTOR'S REFUSE.

SENATOR WOULD GO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN JOSE, March 20.—A special from Palo Alto says: Following Senator Black's refusal to accompany the sergeant-at-arms back to Sacramento, Lieut.-Gov. Porter telegraphed to ask Black if he would come to Sacramento, provided a special car was sent for him.

Black wired that he would, but the doctors have objected and it is probable that he will not go. Doctors H. B. Reynolds and Howard Black have certified that the Senator has a bad case of bronchitis.

BARS ALL GAMBLING.

BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—The Assembly passed tonight W. J. Costar's bill, prohibiting all gambling. The bill is sweeping in effect, and amends the Penal Code, which specifies the kinds of gambling games prohibited. This bill, if it becomes a law, will prohibit all games of chance.

MANY BILLS DIE.

RECALL AMENDMENT, TOO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the Senate decided tonight to pass no more of its own measures, but to hereafter confine its work to the Assembly third-reading file, and to amended bills, it consigned to the scrap heap many proposed changes in the law. One of the measures booted into oblivion was Senator Marc Anthony's constitutional amendment, providing for the recall of State officials. Anthony made a hard fight for his pet, and got considerable labor-union backers, but two-thirds of his colleagues declared themselves flatly against any such innovation. This discouraged its San Francisco sponsor, and rather than be beaten in open battle, he reluctantly let the amendment die on the file.

DOCTOR SAID

Much Sickness Caused by Coffee Drinking.

It is wise to use care in the selection of your table beverage.

The experience of several Ills. families proves this, and one of them is a very interesting story.

"We were induced to quit coffee about eight years ago because of its injurious effects. The doctor advised us to stop it entirely and we began to use Postum.

"While we drank coffee we had headache, sleeplessness, stomach troubles, palpitation of the heart, etc. We have found no injurious effects from Postum and are clear of all the old coffee troubles. It has a fine color, a delicious flavor, and we feel free to drink all we wish of it.

"My brother's family has used Postum for eight years, and has been benefited as we have. A Swedish family, neighbors, used to drink coffee for years, but finding it harmful, have quit and now use Postum.

"A number of other families we know here who were habitual coffee drinkers, with the usual results, have now taken up Postum. The doctors here say much sickness is caused by drinking coffee.

"Some of them did not like Postum at first, but when we showed them how to make it dark and rich, according to directions on pkg., they liked it better than coffee, and it agrees with them."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

voter has not yet stage in his development agree with thousands of just what name should be written on the ballot. The process is attended with many dangers. Thousands of votes would be lost because of technical errors.

There is a better plan, according to a number of Republican leaders, but, as already mentioned, its details cannot just now be made public.

It is the general belief among party politicians who have looked carefully into the matter that the court will decide against the holding of the recall election that is set for next Friday.

This belief is based on the opinions of eminent lawyers who have studied the provisions of the charter and who are satisfied that an unexpired term is an unexpired term, and that the language and intent of the charter cannot be changed by any juggling with the recall.

The petition for an injunction to restrain the holding of the recall election will be heard by Judge Bordwell in the Superior Court tomorrow. In addition to the petition already filed, the court will have under consideration another injunction suit, filed by the same plaintiff, Henry S. Jones.

In order to bring the matter more fully before the court, Mr. Jones, through his counsel, Jones & Weller and E. A. Meserve, yesterday filed another suit, seeking to enjoin the City Auditor from auditing any demands for bills and expenses incurred in mailing sample ballots for the recall election.

The first suit, filed Friday, is directed against the City Council, Clerk, Auditor and Treasurer, and pertains particularly to the final preparations for the election. Yesterday's suit strikes at the payment for work already performed and brings the matter in more concrete form before the court.

Pending the decision of the court, which, it is expected, will be reached by Tuesday or Wednesday, the politicians will continue in their speculations as to just what the voters will do.

Some of the wiseacres give to Alexander, in the event of an election, the vote that went to Lee C. Gates, the non-partisan candidate for Mayor, a little more than two years ago. In round numbers this was 8000. Dr. Lindley, the Republican candidate, had about 9000 votes, and Harper received about 11,000. Wilson, the Union Labor candidate, received about 2500 votes; the Socialist candidate about the same, with less than 2000 for the Prohibition candidate.

The city vote this year is estimated at 35,000. Wheeler, the Socialist candidate, is assured of probably 4000 that cannot be swerved. He may corral several thousand more in the Sixth, Seventh and Eighth wards, and scattering throughout the city, from persons who want to vote for some one, but who will not stand for Alexander.

What will become of the great Democratic vote that elected Harper?

For whom will be cast the 9000 Republican votes that went to Lindley at the last municipal election?

Here are 20,000 votes upon which no one can count with certainty.

It is predicted by experienced politicians that a great proportion of this vote will not come out next Friday, should the election be held.

Alexander got a rousing reception, after the audience had heard other speeches for two hours. "They say I'm an old man," said he, "but I wonder why they are so afraid of an old man. Los Angeles is on trial before the world, not me."

It is merely a question whether the voters would choose him or Fred Wheeler, the Socialist candidate, he said. "I have experience and a record for faithfuly fulfilling my trust, and he hasn't," he declared, "and I know the tricks of the trade, and he doesn't. The machine has sent out word for Wheeler."

He urged everybody to make up their minds between the two and vote for the one preferred, and he would be satisfied with the result.

Then three cheers for Alexander closed the meeting, and in a general way, the recall campaign speaking.

SEWER BILL PASSES.

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—The Senate bill designed to permit Los Angeles to lay a sewer through the town of Vernon to connect with an outfall sewer passed the Assembly this afternoon without opposition.

GROWTH OF ENTERPRISE REMARKABLE.

Tariff Unnecessary to Reduce Price of Building Requirements.

LOS ANGELES, March 21.—Through the columns of local papers a week ago this "Home Industry" was announced. A perspective of the building was shown, which is the most modern of its kind in the world. It will employ, when in full operation, about 150 men, who will receive a total salary of about $6000 weekly. This will mean more money in circulation in support of local merchants.

Glass is a necessity. The investor in capital stock is buying the most remunerative on the market. Windows are larger in California. More buildings are going up here and in territory adjacent to California than in other localities. Dealers are paying dearly for this necessity in freight rates and breakage, which will be practically eliminated when this factory is in operation. Located in the city at the junction of the Salt Lake and Santa Fe railroads. The vast amount of raw materials are within one hour's ride from Los Angeles, on railroads, and are the purest discovered. This corporation is composed of successful Los Angeles business men and practical Eastern management and labor, which will give this locality a necessity at a fair price. The savings in freight and breakage on a recent shipment of 35,000 boxes of glass from the East to the coast would be enough to build the plant.

In the last week this industry has received the highest indorsement of the business men of Los Angeles. The evidence is strong in the taking of practically all the block of 25,000 shares put on the market seven days ago.

This corporation is not soaring skyward on an unfounded principle, they have not been attracted by an isolated gold mine in nobody's land with its impossibilities. Glass is almost as necessary as water in this community. It is practically an absolute necessity.

The only question to be raised about this enterprise is, "Have they the raw materials?" Yes, and the best and purest the world affords.

It is not very long ago that America had no great and extensive industry in glass making. It has already attained a far-reaching importance in the East. Conditions surrounding this local industry are, at the outset, far in advance to those of their Eastern competitors. Glass can be made cheaper here than in the East. Is there a better place to invest money—to earn money?

When a body of men, well principled, are assembled to promote a good cause, look into it, it surely is a worthy one.

This is not the time to degenerate in principle. Now is the time to show principle of the highest order in the business methods you employ.

Look into this industry. There awaits the opportunity to invest in a most remunerative enterprise, worthy of any man's time and consideration.

We are past the time for the use of flowery language and soft-spoken sentences; the public—the investor—want the "show me" method employed.

General offices of the California Glass and Soda Manufacturing Co. are 607-8-9 Grant Building.

TRAIL OF KIDNAPERS.

of the interest excited here by the kidnaping of Willie Whitla at Sharon is reflected in a signed statement made by State's Attorney Wayman here today. It says:

"Chief of Detectives O'Brien, with all the aid at his command, and Chief of Police Shippy are using the entire police and detective force, not only in an effort to catch the kidnapers, if they should come into the State, but are giving advice to the eastern officials as to the methods to be employed.

"I believe the kidnaping of a child is the worst offense that can be committed. I think the penalty should be capital punishment.

A dispatch from Cleveland, tonight says that at 12:50 a.m. the Whitla kidnaping case seemed near solution.

Detective Perkins of Pittsburgh, who came to Cleveland at midnight, it is understood, had definite information that the boy was near Cleveland.

At 1 o'clock Chief Kohler said developments were expected at any moment.

The Cleveland Leader telephoned to Mr. Whitla, at Sharon, father of the boy, at 1:45 a.m. W. W. Schilling answered the call. He would not say whether Mr. Whitla had made arrangements to go to the place at which it was expected "Billie" would be found.

MURDEROUS FRENZY.

THREE DEAD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

RATON (N. M.) March 20.—Antonio Dijulio, a coke worker, started out last night to rid himself of his enemies, and as a result, three persons are dead. Dijulio attacked his cousin, named Bartole, and shot him in the abdomen. Bartole ran to the home of his brother, Francisco Bartole, pursued by Dijulio. The latter threw open the door of the house and fired inside, the bullet lodging in Mrs. Bartole's head, killing her instantly. Enraged at the sight of his wife lying dead, Francisco Bartole plunged a dagger into Dijulio's body, killing him. Bartole died later in a hospital.

WHOLESALE THREATS.

HAS IT IN FOR OFFICERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN RAFAEL, March 20.—For alleged threats against the lives of Judge Lennon, Dist.-Atty. Boyd and Sheriff Taylor, Joe Morris was arrested today.

The threats are alleged to have been made in connection with the trial of Giuseppi Pia, who was convicted of having assaulted a young woman here on February 6.

Morris was a witness for the defense, and on the stand he used profane language. He is alleged to have said later that he would "get" the judge and the rest of them, and "get them bad."

CRIME BRIEFS.

Bank Safe Dynamited.

COLD WATER (Okla.) March 20.—Robbers dynamited the safe in the Bank of Cold Water early today, and escaped with their booty. A heavy rainstorm aided the robbers.

Worse Than Felon.

SEATTLE, March 20.—In sentencing Philip Caplin to hard labor in the Walla Walla penitentiary for from one to fourteen years Superior Judge J. E. Morris gave the prisoner one of the bitterest scorings today in the history of the court. He called the prisoner a deliberate perjurer and a thief. The man forced Mrs. Harriet Garton, stenographer for a local real estate man, to steal $260 and after taking the money from the woman turned her over to the police in Portland.

Fatal Fight on Train.

CLARENDON (Tex.) March 20.—An unidentified man is dead, and Floyd Autrey of Fort Worth, is dying here as the result of a three-cornered fight with revolvers in a Fort Worth and Denver train near Giles, Tex., today. Autrey and his cousin, Frederick Garrett of Forth Worth, killed a third party in the fight and threw the body out of a coach window. Autrey is in a hospital here and he and Garrett are in custody.

Safe-Crackers Destructive.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—Cracksmen, fully equipped with dynamite, fuse and caps, wrecked the safe in the office of the Mettan, Gehardt Tanning Company some time last night, broke open every desk in the place and destroyed many valuable papers. All the booty they secured was 75 cents in small change. The robbery was not discovered until today.

San Quentin for Jordan.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—San Quentin was designated by Judge Lawlor today as the place of confinement for Thomas Jefferson Jordan, the soldier who killed Police Sergeant Nolting. The jury which convicted Jordan fixed the punishment at imprisonment for life.

Safe-Blowers in Iowa.

DES MOINES (Iowa) March 20.—Safe-blowers last night dynamited the safe of the First National Bank of Imogene, Page county, and took several thousand dollars.

HURL VICTIM FROM TRAIN.

Robbers Follow Him to Platform, Take Money and Jewelry and Throw Him on Tracks.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, March 20.—A young man who last evening was beaten, robbed and thrown from an eastbound Pennsylvania Railroad train at Wilkensburg, recovered partial consciousness today and said he was J. Ryan, 25 years old, a graduate of Yale and resided in Chicago. His condition is critical and it is probable he will be paralyzed for life. Two operations were performed today. After the first Ryan revived somewhat and said he had been followed by two men.

"In passing to another car," he said, "I met the men on the platform. They grabbed me by the throat and demanded my money. They took my jewelry and money and then pushed me from the train."

After the operation he again lapsed into unconsciousness.

SUES BROTHER'S SLAYER.

Asks Seventeen Thousand Dollars from Extensive Property Owner as Price of Life.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ROSWELL (N. M.) March 20.—Frank Shirley, administrator of the estate of his brother, Ollie Shirley, today brought suit in the District Court against W. T. Wells, capitalist and extensive property owner. He asks judgment in a claim for $17,000 for Wells's alleged act in shooting and killing his brother, March 9.

Wells shot Shirley in a dispute over labor troubles, and is under $12,500 bond awaiting the action of the grand jury. It is reported that the American Federation of Labor will have one of the foremost lawyers of the United States here to assist in the criminal prosecution of Wells.

REVOLT IS FEARED.

statement tonight concerning the strike, in which the situation was said to be notably improved, many of the strikers, especially the telephone girls, having returned to work.

The strike leaders, on the other hand, were loudly proclaiming war, and there were disquieting rumors of railroad and other coöperative strikes.

The belief prevails that there will be important developments over Sunday. It is too early yet to gauge the effect of the endorsement of the attitude of the government in the present strike situation voiced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, but on the surface the outlook this morning was blacker than ever.

The organization for the protection of the rights of trades unionism, has called meetings of every branch of industry and commerce, when it will be proposed to join them unless the government finds a quick solution. The organization voted $1000 to aid the cause.

ELIMINATE SIMYAN.

What is going on behind the scenes can be judged from the open intimations in government organs that M. Simyan, Under Secretary of Posts and Telegraphs, will be effaced, either by transfer or by the reorganization of the department, by which his position will be converted to that of controller under the Postmaster-General as in the English system.

The lack of food in the capital, an outcome of the impossibility of forwarding payments, is making itself felt today, and provision dealers declare that if there is no improvement the city in a few days, probably will be confronted with famine conditions. The loss to business in Paris alone is variously estimated at from $600,000 to $1,200,000. Only a few wires today connect Paris with Europe and the outside world.

SITUATION UNIMPROVED.

A semi-official note issued today says that a considerable number of women have returned to work but in spite of this the situation has not sensibly improved. The government has formally notified the strikers that forty-eight hours of grace will be allowed them to return to work after which their dismissal will be irrevocable.

No attempt yet has been made to restore the money order and registered mail service in Paris. The paralysis of business is becoming more serious with every hour. Every conceivable expedient is being used to maintain communication. Special couriers are being sent out in automobiles to the frontier and bicyclists are being employed for the delivery of messages throughout the city.

The government has organized a special service to insure communication between London and King Edward who is at Biarritz. One thousand colonial infantrymen have been put to work sorting and delivering the accumulated mails. No newspapers have been delivered since last Tuesday.

REJOICE IN HAVOC.

Humanite, the organ of M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, says today:

"The proletariat now can estimate the tremendous power that possession of postal telegraph and telephone communication will give them when later in the decisive hour, they enter upon the great battle for emancipation."

"HELLO GIRLS" ESCAPE.

Flagstaff on Telephone Building in San Francisco Struck by Lightning. No One Injured.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—A terrific crash of thunder, following a single blinding flash of lightning, which struck the flagstaff on the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph building on Bush street, was the unusual phenomenon, that marked the rainstorm that commenced here early this evening.

A bitter cold rain began falling shortly before 6 o'clock, and the precipitation was continuing at midnight.

A few minutes after 10 o'clock a lightning bolt struck the slender flagpole on the ten-story building. The pole was badly splintered, several pieces falling to the street. The crash that followed the flash was of remarkable intensity and startled the entire city.

Of the several hundred girls working in the exchange at the time, none were aware that the building had been struck.

Reports tonight indicate that rain is falling throughout the central and northern parts of the State, and heavy snow in the mountains.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, March 20.—The Masonic building on Marine street will be the scene Monday evening of a reception to be tendered by the South Coast Civic League, to and Mrs. W. R. George, who are soon to depart from the beach after a residence of some weeks here. Mr. George is the founder of the George Junior Republic, and during the evening will speak briefly of his work, which is for the upbuilding of boys and girls.

The attraction at the ocean front auditorium last night was a society dance, the first of the season. There were numerous box parties and the programme was participated in by more than 150 couples.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Louise Grant to Charles Sheldon. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Grant. The marriage will be a social event of the early spring.

THE PIMPLE AND THE FACE

First Show Signs of the Blood Poverty Which Causes Most Skin Diseases

It is a strange truth that pimples usually appear upon the face, thus illustrating that nature uses the most direct method of convincing man that the blood is filled with poison.

The human circulatory system is said to be the most wonderful of all evidences of nature. It carries health, food and strength to every part of the body. It also carries from every part of the body all germ life, waste matter and decay.

If through poor eating, indigestion, constipation, etc., the blood is filled with poisonous, decaying, irritating fluids, these poisons are carried to the lungs, where they are attempted to be cleansed by the oxygen from air inhaled.

If this does not accomplish the results demanded the blood takes away the poison and carries it to the little cells of the skin, where they leave it. Here these poisons irritate and decay, until at last they form pimples and blackheads and other skin eruptions; at last bursting or are removed by man.

When you have pimples it is a certain sign your blood is wrong, that the great human blood system is turned into an intricate series of sewerage canals which are filled with impurities.

Science long ago learned that Calcium Sulphide was the most powerful, harmless and beneficial blood purifier obtainable.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers, under chemical tests, conclusively prove themselves to be one of the best methods of preserving the full strength of this great blood cleanser.

The real beauty of Stuart's Calcium Wafers lies in their rapid work. Their good effects are seen after only a few days' use, and a face full of pimples has been made clear and clean after only five days' use of these wafers.

These wafers, by the peculiar Stuart process, preserve and hold the full strength of Calcium Sulphide, so that the system obtains this wonderful purifier in its most efficient state.

Other methods of administering and preparing Calcium Sulphide have proven Stuart's Calcium Wafers to be the best method.

Go to your druggist and buy a box of these little pimple eradicators today, price 50c, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Lange Makes Bad Start, But Recovers Himself.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a combination of baseball and water polo at Recreation Park today the Seals and the Tannigans of the White Sox stood 6 to 6 at the end of nine innings. The water was rapidly rising over the fielders' heads at the end of the ninth, and as the park management had neglected to provide life preservers, Arbitrator McCarthy declared the game called. The weather was rather trying on the visitors, some of whom were poor swimmers, but the Seals were used to the submarine going.

At the end of the sixth inning when the score was tied, a deluge like one which caused Noah to study navigation and build the first navy came on and the bleacherites were driven under the shed where the high brows sit. The hope which springs eternal in the human breast stirred the rooters for the Seals in the eighth, when Jimmy Williams clouted for a safe one and Melchoir shot one into the right-field fence, but these hopes were killed by Lange's curves. Score:

BASEBALL BANQUET.

COMISKEY HONORED GUEST.

President Charles Comiskey of the White Sox ball team and the eastern rooters and newspaper men were guests last night of Henry Berry of the Los Angeles team at a banquet given at the Alexandria Hotel and in a feast in season and a flow of soul and bowl, three very pleasant hours were spent in renewing old friendships and talking of the great national game. The menu was all that could be desired and the speeches that followed were equally delightful.

Covers were laid for thirty-two and a novel feature of the feast was that the attendants were dressed in baseball uniforms. Tom Darmody acted as toastmaster and in the line of speeches slashing homers, triples and doubles were made by Charles Comiskey, J. Cal Ewing, Ted Sullivan, John Agnew, John Brink, Mano Zan, Hugh Keogh, Harry Lelande, J. W. Brooks, Henry Berry, George Rice, John Burns, Charles Hughes, Happy Hogan and Judge Parker.

Those present were Charles Comiskey, Frank Dillon, H. M. Walker, J. F. Howard, M. J. Conway, Mano Zan, Charles Hughes, John Agnew, Hugh Keogh, Charles Fredericks, J. Winchester Holman, George Rice, Dave McCuddy, John Brink, Harry Lelande, Henry Berry, C. F. Parker, J. Cal Ewing, W. C. Henderson, R. W. Kenney, John Burns, Jacob Schaffer, J. W. Brooks, Grey Oliver, Harry Williams, Theodore Lohman, Ted Sullivan, Henry Crosby, Happy Hogan, Thomas Stephens, Thomas Darmody and Dr. R. B. Griffith.

SENATORS FIRST.

BEAT ST. MARY'S TEAM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, March 20.—The Sacramento Coast Leaguers won from the Phoenix team of St. Mary's College this afternoon in a ninth-inning finish, 2 to 1.

Up to the ninth it looked as if the bushers would repeat the shutout of last year, but Arnold, the new first baseman from Fresno, singled and was followed by Graham's hit over second. Levy, a local boy, who is trying out with the leaguers, brought both in with a fierce smash through short. Score:

Sacramento, 2; hits, 5; errors, 1.
St. Mary's, 1; hits, 7; errors, 1.

Batteries—Baum and Byrnes; Hart and Simpson.

LINCOLN TEAM LOSES.

The Thirtieth-street grammar school baseball team defeated the Lincoln school of Pasadena yesterday afternoon by a score of 7 to 6. This was the first time the Lincolns have been defeated this season. The game was a hard one, with very few errors, Clark of the winners knocked a two-base hit with three men on bases, and Michel got four hits out of four times at bat. Baker brothers of the Lincolns played well, but Haskett and Deniger were the best of the two batteries.

KLING TO RETIRE.

A dispatch from Shreveport, La., where the Chicago Cubs are, states that Manager Chance of the Cubs has received a telegram from Catcher Johnny Kling, stating that he will not be with the team this year. It is not a question of salary, but of private business, that will keep the greatest catcher in the world from playing ball.

BANK CLERKS LOSE.

The South Pasadena High School team defeated the German-American National Bank Clerks team at baseball on the High School grounds yesterday afternoon by the score of 9 to 7. Coles of the Bank Clerks and Bisbee of the High School team made home runs. Foster pitched a good game for the Clerks. The batteries were: Bank Clerks, Coles and Moriarty; High School, Foster, Bisbee and Coots.

PLAY TIE GAME.

BERKELEY, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The California 'varsity nine played a 2 to 2 seven-inning game with the Olympic Club this afternoon in California Field. The 'varsity played errorless ball, and scored twice in the fifth. Forker allowed five hits, and fanned three, while Lyman gave the 'varsity four hits and struck out three.

DOUBLE-HEADER BALL.

There will be a double-header played today at Athletic Ball Park in Boyle Heights. The first game will be called at 1 o'clock, between the Cuban Blues and the Wilmingtons, and the second will be at 3 o'clock, between the L. A. Cubs and the All Stars.

NEW LEAGUE FORMED.

SALINAS, March 20.—A baseball league of the central coast counties, to be known as the "3 C" League, has been organized here with six clubs, representing Salinas, Monterey, Hollister, Watsonville and Santa Cruz. The season is to open April 11 and close October 4.

JOY PARK GAME.

The Los Angeles Colored Giants and the Woodill-Hulse team will clash at Joy Park this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Giants will show a new heaver in Johnson of the Chicago Union Giants, while Grayson, formerly of the Salt Lake team, will pitch for the "electrical" nine.

POLO AT CORONADO.

English Team Beats Bryn Mawr Men, While Riverside Trims Club from Los Angeles.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN DIEGO, March 20.—Polo enthusiasts witnessed two games in the tournament at Coronado this afternoon.

In the first the Ranelagh team contended with Bryn Mawr. It was an elimination game, the winner to meet Burlingame Monday in a contest that will close the tournament and be for the All-American and Spreckels cups, and the Pacific Coast championship.

The game today was one-sided from start to finish, and rather featureless in respect to individual plays. The Pennsylvanians who had previously displayed good form, seemed to go to pieces. They could not hit the ball and their poor team work was in sharp contrast with that of the other games in which they took part. The Englishmen, on the other hand, were at their best, hitting accurately and doing plenty of aggressive team work. The final score was: Ranelagh, 11; Bryn Mawr, 1.

Two accidents marred the sport. In the second period of the first game F. J. Mackey and Alexander Brown came in collision and the latter was hurled under a bunch of ponies and had his leg sprained quite severely. Mackey was also injured in the wrist. Both players managed to continue the game.

In the fifth period W. Huhn's pony went to his knees and threw his rider over his head. Huhn was badly shaken up but stayed in the game.

The second game was between Riverside and Los Angeles and was also one-sided. Neither team has played very strong in this tournament, and made a worse showing than before. Riverside played a hard game but lacked team work. Tom Weiss and H. G. Pattee did the best individual playing. The Los Angeles players were very inaccurate when they attempted to hit the ball. The final score was: Riverside, 8; Los Angeles, 1.

SANTA PAULA VICTORIOUS.

Has Little Trouble in Beating the Oxnard Team in Track Meet by Decisive Score.

The Santa Paula High School track team defeated the Oxnard team in a meet held on the Sant Paula campus yesterday afternoon by the score of 58 to 37. The results were as follows:

The 100-yard dash—Pressey (Santa Paula,) first; Schwartz (Santa Paula,) second; Badger (Santa Paula,) third; time 10 2-5s.

Shot put—L. Crinkley (Oxnard,) first; C. Crinkley (Oxnard,) second; Sharp (Santa Paula,) third; distance 43 ft. 1 in.

Mile run—C. Crinkley (Oxnard,) first; S. Wasson (Santa Paula,) second; time 5m. 8s.

Hammer throw—L. Crinkley (Oxnard,) first; Aggen (Oxnard,) second; Saviers (Oxnard,) third; distance 52 ft. 8 in.

The 440-yard dash—Pressey (Santa Paula,) first; C. Crinkley (Oxnard,) second; H. Munger (Santa Paula,) third; time 1m. 57 2-5s.

Pole vault—A. Foss (Santa Paula,) first; Peyton (Santa Paula,) second; Bond (Santa Paula,) third; height 10 ft.

The 880-yard dash—B. Munger (Santa Paula,) first; Woods (Oxnard,) second; C. Crinkley (Oxnard,) third; time 2m. 21s.

The 220-yard dash—Pressey (Santa Paula,) first; Badger (Santa Paula,) second; Schwartz (Santa Paula,) third; time 25s.

Broad jump—C. Sharp (Santa Paula,) first; L. Crinkley (Oxnard,) second; Aggen (Oxnard,) third; distance 19 ft. 2¾ in.

High jump—Peyton (Santa Paula,) first; Johnson (Oxnard,) second; Weber (Santa Paula,) third; height 5 ft. 6¾ in.

SUTTON WINS HONOR.

Defeats Bruggemann at Bowling for First Position, in Singles at Pittsburgh Tourney.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, March 20.—The ninth international tournament of the American Bowling Congress closed at Duquesne Gardens tonight, with the roll-off of the tie for first place in the individual matches between F. Bruggemann of Sioux City, Iowa, and Larry Sutton of Rochester, N. Y.

Three world's records were broken during the tournament.

In the roll-off of the tie for first honor Larry Sutton of Rochester, N. Y., made a score of 214 against 179 made by F. Bruggeman of Sioux City, both of the men having rolled a score of 631 in the previous events.

VALUABLE HORSE SOLD.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—The Limit, a green five-year-old pacer which as a three-year-old worked a mile in 2:10, has been sold to Mr. Estabrook of Denver, the owner of Spanish Queen and other horses. Lou Crelleton of Pleasanton, owner of the pacer, received $1000 for the animal. The Limit is by Searchlight, out of Bertha, the famous brood mare. The horse will be shipped by express today in charge of Gus Macey, driver and trainer for Estabrook.

AMERICANS VICTORIOUS.

PRINCETON (N. J.) March 20.—For the second successive year the American college chess players easily defeated the combined talent of Oxford and Cambridge today in the annual cable chess match for the Rice international trophy. Five of the six games ended tonight with the score 4 to 1 in the American's favor. The sixth game, unfinished, goes to the referee for adjudication, but the American player has the call.

FOOTBALL FAVORED.

COFFEYVILLE (Kan.) March 20.—The matter of football for Baker University was again taken up at the session of South Kansas conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church today and after a long fight the conference voted against restricting the game. The vote was 60 against restriction to 48 to restrict. Yesterday's conference voted against permitting the sport.

SLAVIN A BLOOMER.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bob Slavin, the cowboy boxer, showed little class in his scheduled ten-round bout tonight with Jimmy Clabby before the Royal Athletic Club and the seconds of the Westerner threw up the sponge in the third round. A knockout would have resulted had not the vanquished Californian surrendered.

BOWKER PUT OUT.

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tommy O'Toole, featherweight champion of the East, knocked out Jem Bowker of England at the National Athletic Club tonight before a house which taxed the spacious club. The final punch was a left hook to the jaw which Tommy whipped to the chin in the second round.

PROOF THAT CHARCOAL WILL ABSORB IMPURITIES

Many People Are not "From Missouri" But They Like to Be Shown—A Simple Yet Effectual Test for Charcoal.

Frequently people like to know if an article will do all that is claimed of it, and we agree with these people for it is perfectly right that they should know. The F. H. Stuart Co. has gone to considerable expense to perfect some simple method by which it could be convincingly proven that their charcoal Lozenges possessed all the medicinal qualities claimed of them, and herein print a simple yet effective proof.

Take anything which emits an obnoxious odor and place it in some convenient place, say in a box or something that can be easily covered. Then pulverize sufficient of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to completely cover the decaying or odious matter. Care must be taken that the pulverized charcoal completely envelops whatever the odor is coming from. It will be immediately noticed that there will be no odor; the charcoal will absorb positively all the odor, and should you make the test with a piece of meat or something that decays rapidly, complete disintegration will take place without the slightest traces of an odor noticeable.

This is proof positive that Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will eliminate odors and insure the user a clean, sweet breath. While the general improvement in the health and action of the stomach and bowels will be sufficient to convince the most skeptic.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are for sale everywhere, 25 cents a box, guaranteed to contain nothing but young willow wood charcoal and pure honey; sample sent free upon request. Address F. A. Stuart & Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Sluggish Liver

makes life a burden, as thousands of suffering men and women know. Food does little good. There is no energy for business or pleasure. Headache, sleeplessness, yellow skin, coated tongue indicate that the liver is not doing its work and the bile is not being carried off.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

which is purely a vegetable compound, is an absolutely safe and permanent cure for all inflammatory and other diseases of the liver. It corrects the functional trouble by increasing the flow of bile into the bowels to a healthy standard and keeping it so. It aids in removing the waste material that obstructs the circulation of the liver, and by its tonic and purifying properties brings to a condition of perfect harmony all the organs of the body.

In diseases of the liver, the bowels are usually constipated because the flow of bile is lessened. WARNER'S SAFE PILLS quickly relieve this condition, and no ill after-effect is experienced.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two sizes and is sold by all druggists at 50 CENTS and $1.00 A BOTTLE. Refuse substitutes containing harmful drugs which injure the system.

Sample Bottle Free. A sample bottle of WARNER'S SAFE CURE will be sent postpaid to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times.

GUESS.

WHO'S WHO IN THIS INDICTMENT MYSTERY?

WHO has been indicted by the Los Angeles grand jury? It's anybody's guess. The court will not permit the identity of the indicted one or ones to be made known till after arrest.

So all we can do is guess. Who is it?

Is it Nick Oswald?

Is it A. C. Harper?

Is it Sam Schenck?

Is it Edward Kern?

Is it a joint indictment, as some lawyers think?

Who is who? What is what? Guess again.

Nick Oswald and William Lawrence Vetter, his companion fugitive from justice, are not at Tia Juana, nor in the country round about, according to Chief Detective Browne of the District Attorney's office. Browne returned yesterday from the little town across the Mexican border, with the statement that the men under suspicion are not the fugitives, who are sought, not under indictments by the special grand jury, but on warrants issued early in the week by a local justice court.

Browne and the entire force at the command of Under Sheriff Dishman, acting in the absence of Sheriff Hammel, are spreading their search throughout the country for the two fugitives and for the person or persons indicted on Friday.

DEMOCRAT INSURGENT.

BROUSSARD TRAINS FOR GOVERNORSHIP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is the general opinion here, among those best qualified to judge of things political, that, far from being read out of his party for having refused to follow Champ Clark in the matter of tariff revision, Congressman Robert F. Broussard has made a long step toward the Governor's chair.

"Bob" Broussard, or "Cajon Bob," as he is called all over the State, has long since been stung by the gubernatorial bee. He is a staunch Democrat—at home. At Washington, he votes uniformly with the Republican standpatters, which accounts in part for his popularity. This course, however, is that generally adopted by the Louisiana delegation to Congress. There are bitter denunciations of the Republican party, the trusts, and the negro at every campaign, but at Washington, the Senators and Congressmen may be depended upon to fight hard and steadily for a continuance of tariff protection for Louisiana products.

When the Wilson bill was before the Senate, Senator Don Caffery, a consistent Democrat, voted for the bill. His action was met with a storm of indignation at home. The Senator explained that he had voted honestly, in accordance with his political principles. The explanation brought only jeers and shrugs. Don Caffery, politically, died the death then and there. He was succeeded in the United States Senate by Murphy J. Foster at the expiration of his term, and never was heard from again in a public way.

Don Caffery's home was in Southwest Louisiana, the Evangeline country that also gave life to Bob Broussard, and "Cajon Bob" is not likely to ignore the lesson thus laid before him, nor will his people, or the people of any part of the State, take it to heart that he should have lightly cast aside political pretenses to save a vast section of the State that can produce only rice, and this under the most favorable conditions.

Rice, in Southwest Louisiana and Southeastern Texas is the principal, practically the only crop, but it can scarcely be produced here under a selling price of 3 cents a pound for the finished article. Rice may be imported from the Philippine Islands and sold in the New Orleans market for about 2 cents a pound—2½ cents at the most.

Bob Broussard knows all this, he knows that his State would be ruined by absolute free trade, but Bob Broussard also knows that his people are chronic Democrats, and that the only manner in which he can hope to continue in office is to keep on calling himself a Democrat and voting with the Republican standpatterns in all matters concerning the tariff.

Broussard's cherished goal is the gubernatorial mansion at Baton Rouge. The Democratic organization told him nay at the primary elections last year, bade him wait another term of four years, while Jared Sanders took the field against other Democrats, free lances who had no show of success. Southwest Louisiana patted Bob on the back for his fine discipline as he took the stump for Sanders, and Bob was promised the Governor's job "for next time."

The consensus of opinion is that this will be a hard promise to break, in view of the Payne bill vote, and Bob's withdrawal from the Democratic caucus, which, from the local viewpoint, does not in the least affect his political fealty.

PREMATURE DENIAL.

ROOSEVELT CAUGHT BY SLIP OF MEMORY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) March 20.—Ex-President Roosevelt's testimony in a suit of a photographer who seeks to recover $5000 from the Town Topics Publishing Company for the publication of three photographs of Mr. Roosevelt in the book, "Fads and Fancies," was taken by deposition here today.

Mr. Roosevelt said that when public attention was first attracted to the publication in question he did not recall that he had ever given permission for the use of the pictures. He thereupon discussed the matter with Secretary Loeb, he said, and as the latter also had no recollection that permission had been granted, he allowed a statement to this effect to be published.

Some time afterward, however, the ex-President said, Mr. Loeb came across the letter in which he had authorized the publication of the pictures.

"We are caught, not in a falsehood, but in a forgetfulness," Mr. Roosevelt told Secretary Loeb, according to his testimony today.

Mr. Roosevelt added, according to counsel for the publishing company:

"I had no knowledge, of course, that the photos had been given until Mr. Loeb had found the letter. Of course, in giving out any pictures or other matter pertaining to me, he acted with my full authorization."

The letter referred to was in part as follows:

"OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) Sept. 23, 1903.—My Dear Judge: I am in receipt of your favor inclosing proof of article, which I return to you with a few slight additions. It is all right to use it, but, of course, please do not have it appear as in any way indorsed by the President or myself. You will understand my reasons for this.

"I send you the following pictures, which are all that I have on hand suitable for the purpose: The President's house at Sagamore Hill, the tennis court and Theodore, Jr., the President on the lawn, and the President on his jumper, Bleistine.

"Faithfully yours,

"WILLIAM LOEB, JR.

"Hon. James M. Duell, No. 452 Fifth avenue, New York."

The photographer brought his suit shortly after the publication of the President's denial that he had authorized the use of the pictures.

STEAMER HAMBURG IS READY FOR ROOSEVELT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—The German steamer Hamburg, on which ex-President Roosevelt with his hunting party are to make the first leg of their trip to the heart of Africa, arrived in the harbor, and will dock at Hoboken.

Although the steamer is to leave for Naples next Tuesday at 11 a.m., arrangements have been made to give the quarters reserved for the distinguished hunter and his companions, a thorough overhauling, so that nothing that may conduce to their comfort will be overlooked.

The Roosevelt party will have accommodations upon the upper promenade deck, Mr. Roosevelt occupying what is known as the Emperor's suite. This apartment, which was used by Emperor William of Germany on two of his trips, consists of parlor, bedroom and bathroom, furnished in regal style. Mr. Roosevelt's fellow-hunters, including his son, Kermit, Maj. E. A. Maerns, R. Holler and J. A. Loring, will occupy chambers adjament to the ex-President.

Mr. Roosevelt's liking for exercise will be gratified during the twelve days' voyage to Naples. The extensive promenade deck of the Hamburg offers opportunity for long walks in the open air, while a well-equipped gymnasium, including mechanical camels, will enable them to learn the intricacies of the motion of the camel.

The Hamburg is due at Naples on April 4. Mr. Roosevelt is scheduled to leave the next day on the new twin-screw steamer Admiral for Kilindini Harbor, Mombasa, in British East Africa.

The distance from Naples to Mombasa is 4000 miles, and the journey will consume sixteen days. From Mombasa the expedition will proceed by the Uganda Railway to Nairobi, thence into the jungle.

KNOCKED OUT WITH CLUB.

Man Tells Police He Was Held Up on Long Beach Avenue and Assaulted.

J. G. Browning of No. 108 East Fifth street reported to the police yesterday that he had been held up and robbed of $194 Friday night.

He said that while walking along Long Beach avenue, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, he was attacked by two men; that one of them hit him on the head with a club and that he was unconscious until 3 o'clock yesterday morning.

LIVED LONG IN CHINA.

D. Willard Lyon, international secretary of the Y.M.C.A., who has spent fourteen years in China, arrived in this city yesterday, and will speak this afternoon at the men's meeting in the association auditorium. He was the first secretary to represent the association in China, and will relate many interesting experiences of his long residence in the Flowery Kingdom.

Watching a Stomach Digest Food

Was the Means Whereby Science Made Possible the Cure of Dyspepsia.

The Abbe Spallanzani was the first scientist to study systematically the chemical powers of the gastric juice, but it was by the careful and convincing experiments of Beaumont that the foundation of our exact knowledge of its composition and action was laid.

Beaumont was an army surgeon, located at an obscure military post in Michigan, while it was yet a territory, and was called upon to treat a gunshot wound of the stomach in a Canadian voyageur—Alexis St. Martin. When the wound healed a permanent opening was left by means of which food could be placed in the stomach and gastric juice taken from it.

Beaumont made scientific experiments with his crude means and wrote a book, which today is recognized among the classics of physiology.

Beaumont blazed the way for other scientists, so that today medicine knows what the stomach does with food and what food does to the stomach.

Science also knows what the gastric juices are and how to make them best for the system.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, thanks to the poor army surgeon and Alexis St. Martin, give man a means of digesting food, replenishing the exhausted juices, soothing the nerves and correcting dyspeptic conditions of the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are natural fruit and vegetable essences reduced in concentrated form and by tremendous power compressed into a tablet. These wonderful little digestors are known all over America and Canada. Full meals have been digested by them in glass tubes and they are sold by every druggist.

Physicians to the number of 40,000 use them. They are meritorious and powerful. Go to your druggist and buy a package today, price 50c, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. H. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

ADVANCE GUARD HERE.

Main Body of Fraternal Brotherhood Delegates to Supreme Lodge Expected Today.

The advance guard of the two hundred delegates to the quadrennial meeting of the Supreme Lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood arrived at the Hotel Hayward yesterday, and the main body is expected today.

The meetings will continue for one week, and much business of importance will be transacted. It is stated that some very vital changes in the laws of the order will be made.

The first session will be held tomorrow morning in the Fraternal Brotherhood building on Figueroa street.

The programme is as follows:

Tomorrow, at 10 a.m., deputies' convention in Maple Hall, Fraternal Brotherhood building; light lunch served by the Presidents' and Past Presidents' Association to Representatives, Deputies and visiting members from 12 m. to 2 p.m.; in the evening Uniform Rank parade, class initiation at Goldberg-Bosley assembly rooms, corner Sixteenth and Flower streets.

Tuesday, 10 a.m., opening of Supreme Lodge in Alhambra Hall, Fraternal Brotherhood building; 10:30 a.m., address of welcome by Hon. William D. Stephens, Mayor of Los Angeles; response by H. F. de Souza, Bisbee, Ariz.; 8:30 p.m., formal reception in the home office building to representatives, deputies and visiting members.

Wednesday, Supreme Lodge session; in the evening, meetings of Royal-California Lodge, No. 490, Washington and Griffith streets; Laurington Lodge, No. 600, Maple Hall, Fraternal Brotherhood building; Minerva Lodge, No. 645, Mammoth Hall, No. 517 South Broadway.

Thursday, Supreme Lodge session; in the evening, lodge meetings of Los Angeles Lodge, No. 1, Alhambra Hall, Fraternal Brotherhood building; Fraternity Lodge, No. 317, Paulk's Hall, No. 1224 West Washington street; Sunshine Lodge, No. 448 Caledonia Hall, No. 119½ South Spring street.

Friday evening, gentlemen will be entertained by La Grande Lodge, No. 9, in Fraternal Brotherhood building; ladies will attend theater under escort of the ladies of the Executive Council.

Saturday, general round-up of Supreme Lodge business; in the evening, Supreme Lodge banquet at Hotel Hayward, at 8 o'clock.

UNGRATEFUL GUEST.

E. S. Sully of the Tourist Hotel, on East Fifth street, shared his room with a stranger Friday night and when he awakened yesterday morning he found that the guest had departed with $40 in cash and a $2 watch that belonged to the host.

STAR-CRESCENT TREASURER.

Thomas T. Robinson was elected treasurer of the High School Star and Crescent Society Friday, and not Charles Robertson, as reported.

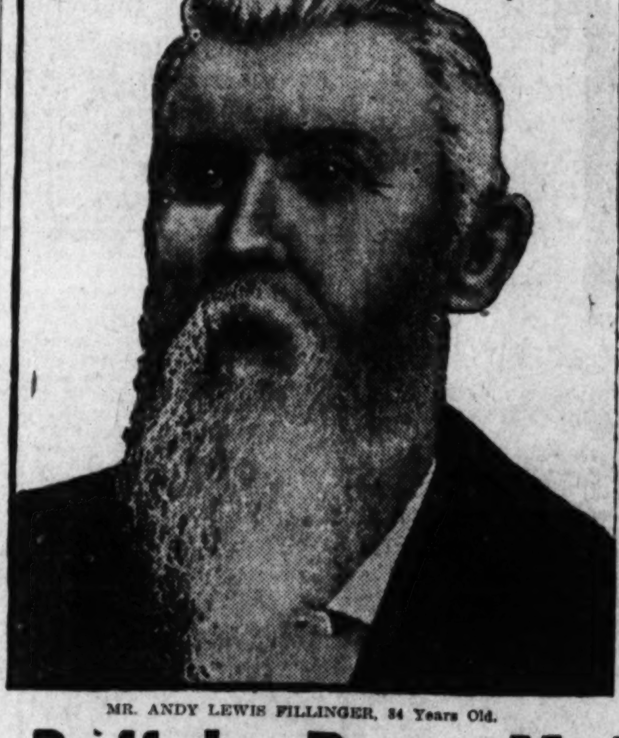
Helped Build Lincoln's Cottage Only 35 Years Old in Spirit



MR. ANDY LEWIS FILLINGER, 84 Years Old.

Mr. Andy Lewis Fillinger, of Danville, Ill., who is 84 years old, and helped to build a cottage for Abraham Lincoln about 1855, says he has been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey since that time as a tonic medicine with entire satisfaction. He feels like a man of 35.

April 4th, 1908, Mr. Fillinger wrote: "As I now remember I began using your medicine as a tonic and stimulant in about 1855, or at least at the time I was building Abraham Lincoln's house in the city of Springfield, Ill., and have continued its use until the present day with beneficial results.

"I am now past 84 years of age, and feel like a man of 35 years. I can truthfully say Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey gives entire satisfaction to the user."

Every testimonial is guaranteed genuine and is published in good faith with full consent.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children; is a promoter of health and longevity; makes the old young and keeps the young strong.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It is the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for a free illustrated medical booklet and free advice.

FIND ERRORS IN TARIFF BILL.

Criticism of Measure Brings Them to Light.

No Hope of Direct Duty on Oil, Jays Needham.

House May Even Cut Out the Present Provision.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As result of criticisms of the tariff bill, several errors have been discovered. These will be remedied as soon as possible. The chief error occurs in Section 4, by which the maximum and minimum rates are fixed. In fixing the minimum rates the Philippines are excepted, but in the following paragraph fixing the maximum rates the Philippines are not mentioned. This was an oversight, or perhaps a clerical error.

Furthermore, in the same section it is provided that under certain conditions the maximum rate shall be put into effect against countries making discriminations against products of the United States, except that "this provision for additional duties shall not apply to the case where the preferential duties to other countries are those which are given by a province, dependency or colony to the mother country only." This would not allow the mother country to give preferential duties to dependencies, but the bill was intended to sanction such discriminations, and it will be changed.

Congressman Needham has received a number of telegrams from California, urging that straight duty instead of countervailing duty be put on petroleum. He says that it would be impossible to get the House to consent to that, and that nothing but the menace of Mexican oil caused the committee to consent to the countervailing duty. As it is, Needham says, all the La Follette Republicans are shouting that it was Standard Oil influence which got the countervailing duty restored, and on the vote of the House even that might go out.

Among the items on the maximum and minimum list are beeswax, drugs in unprepared state, fruits and berries, not specially provided for in Sections 1 and 2 of the act; furs undressed, glue stock, hides, iron ore, lemon, lime and orange juice, citrate of lime, crude magnesite, denatured olive oil, bologna, shrimps and other shell fish, tallow, vegetable or mineral wax, logs, ship timber and hoop poles.

INDICTMENTS DISMISSED.

Charges of Conspiracy to Defraud United States Removed from Co-defendants of Senator Borah.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Atty.-Gen. Wickersham today directed the dismissal, as to the persons against whom it is still pending, of the indictment secured by the former United States District Attorney for Idaho, Norman E. Ruick, against Senator Borah, members of the Barber Lumber Company and others for conspiracy to defraud the United States of certain timber lands in Boise county, Idaho.

Senator Borah made no technical objection to the indictment, but stood trial and was acquitted.

John I. Wells and Patrick Downs, two of the other defendants, filed pleas in abatement to the indictment based upon the alleged improper conduct of Ruick before the grand jury in urging the return of the indictment. Their pleas were sustained by Judge Whitson in the United States District Court for Idaho. In view of the finding of Judge Whitson, the Attorney-General decided that the indictment should be dismissed as to all the other defendants against whom it was still pending. The pleas in abatement filed by Wells and Downs are based upon the affidavits of two of the grand jurors, Latham and Sloan, as to the conduct of Ruick before the grand jury. Latham and Sloan were subsequently indicted for perjury by another grand jury in making such affidavits.

PANAMA LIBEL PROCEEDS.

Present Administration Will Not Abandon Cases Instituted by Roosevelt.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—There will be no abandonment of the Panama libel prosecution by the administration, according to a high administration official today. The cases will be handled in the regular order, as reached on the calendar. Reports were circulated today that the administration had decided to let these cases lapse for the next four years.

Atty.-Gen. Wickersham's investigation of these cases, it is said, has satisfied him that the government should proceed with the prosecution. Whether he has advised President Taft of his attitude is not known, although he was today in conference with the President.

LIFELONG JOBS.

BILLS FOR EX-PRESIDENTS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Once a President, always a government employé, if either of two bills introduced in the House becomes a law.

One, offered by Representative Coudrey of Missouri, makes ex-Presidents honorary members of the United States Senate for life and as such gives them a salary of $25,000 per annum.

The other, introduced by Representative Bennett of New York, provides that ex-Presidents of the United States shall have a seat in the House of Representatives, with the right of debating but not voting.

Under this bill they would receive the same compensation as members.

LAWLER ACCEPTS.

BEGINS DUTIES NEXT MONTH.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The position of Assistant Attorney-General of the Department of the Interior has been accepted by Oscar Lawler of Los Angeles, United States District Attorney, for the Southern District of California.

It is said he will assume the duties of the new position about April 1. Mr. Lawler will succeed George W. Woodruff, who at one time, was coach of the University of Pennsylvania football team. Mr. Lawler was recommended by Secretary Ballinger.

RUSH ORDER FOR CANAL.

GOETHALS DOUBTFUL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—It developed today that during a recent conference between President Taft and Col. Goethals of the Isthmian Canal Commission, the President expressed his desire that the canal be completed by the 4th of July, 1913.

Col. Goethals, however, is not at all sanguine of accomplishing any such result, holding to his heretofore expressed opinion that January 1, 1915, will see the canal open to navigation.

"NEAR" DUEL ON STEAMER.

Polish Count Wants to Mix Up With American Insurance Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Extending his card at arm's length to Edward P. Fitch, secretary of the Iowa State Insurance Commission, who was his fellow passenger on the steamship Pannonia to this port, Count Hilderminius von Lodynski said in broken English: "I will fight you."

The challenge of the Count to fight was made in European fashion. Fitch had edited a newspaper on the steamship called "The Atlantic Mercury." In this paper had appeared jokes which Count Lodynski seemed to think were aimed at him.

News of what might have been a "duel" got about the ship and Capt. Irvine of the Pannonia had an anxious half hour this evening with the Polish Count before he could persuade him that it was better to settle differences, if such existed, over champagne in the smoking room than by stabbing and thrusting with sharp swords in the forecastle or on deck.

Former Republican Whip of House Offered Governorship of Porto Rico and Cuban Ministry.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana, who was the Republican "whip" in the House, and who lost his fight for the Governorship, has been offered and has declined the Governorship of Porto Rico and the Ministry to Cuba.

Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, called at the White House today for the first time in eight years.

PRESIDENT AT HOME.

MRS. TAFT IN BOSTON.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—President Taft arrived in Washington from New York at 7:12 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Taft and Miss Mabel Boardman, who accompanied the party from this city, have gone to Boston, it is said, to look at some summer homes in that neighborhood. The President was immediately driven to the White House in the Taft automobile.

CHANGES MADE IN EMBASSIES.

PRESIDENT TAFT ANNOUNCES NEW MINISTERS.

Ambassador Leishman at Constantinople to Go to Rome, Attorney Sherill of New York Minister to Argentina, Henry B. Ide Assigned to Spain—O'Brien Stays in Japan.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The following contemplated changes and appointments in the diplomatic service were announced today, following a conference between the President and Secretary Knox:

Ambassador Leishman, now at Constantinople, to go to Rome.

Charles H. Sherrill, New York, to be Minister to Argentina.

Henry B. Ide to be Minister to Spain.

There are to be no further changes in embassies for months and probably not until autumn.

The announcement was made officially that Thomas J. O'Brien, now Ambassador to Japan, would remain at that post.

Mr. Sherrill, who goes to the Argentine Republic, is a lawyer of New York City, about 45 years old and speaks Spanish and French fluently.

Mr. Ide, who will be Minister to Spain, has been Governor-General of the Philippines.

Neither Ambassador Leishman nor Ambassador Griscom, at Rome, whom he succeeds, will relinquish office for some weeks.

KEEPS MUM ON GRAFT.

Councilman of Pittsburgh Jailed and Fined for Refusing to Answer Grand Jury Questions.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, March 20.—Councilman Klein, who was sent to jail Thursday for refusing to testify in the graft investigation, was called before Judge Davis this afternoon and reiterated his refusal to go before the grand jury. He was sentenced to serve thirty days in the County Jail and pay a fine of $100.

The results obtained by the grand jury inquisition will probably be made public Monday.

WISE TALKS

By The "Office Boy"

Most people want what they want, until they get it, and then they don't need it. In Tennessee, a miserable hermit recently starved to death, though in his house was found money enough and more to keep him in opulence for many a year. In Pittsburgh a young promoter, scarcely thirty, has been sent to an asylum a physical and mental wreck, resulting from his strenuous efforts to accumulate too many dollars. His check is good for something like three millions of them, but his head is good for nothing. Thus do the pendulums that count out our little lives o'er swing themselves. To a man in a madhouse or a madman in his own house, a pile of gold and a pile of sand are equally valueless. Gold means the power to enjoy within a certain limit only. Beyond that limit it means the power to oppress and the one chiefly oppressed is the possessor. The Tennessee hermit is not the first nor will be the last to starve in the midst of plenty and not all mad money seekers are in madhouses. Look around you. Is it worth the price? The man who paves his path with gold and naught else is greasing the incline to the dump heap. There is something more in life than the desire to get. I believe the desire to give a much sweeter passion. A gentleman calling on the Old Man the other day said, "I am one of your customers, Mr. Silverwood. You folks all sell goods at about the same price, anyway. Why," he said, "here's a Crofut & Knapp hat I just bought from ——— for $4, and I believe it is worth $5." The Old Man rang for one of the hatmen, holding up the hat so that the hatman could see it, he said, "Have you this hat?" "Yes," replied the hatman. "Send me one." He did so. "Now," said he to the man "here's the same identical hat. It is marked in plain figures, $3, and we are satisfied with our profit at that price. I do not do this to win you over. I merely want to show you you know nothing about values, and that you are not fair when you say our prices are as high as others for the same quality of goods." We have built our great business by giving values. We are not get-rich-quick merchants. We believe in building slowly but building well. We are not money worshipers. We believe in honest business methods. No discounts. No price fooling. Either store.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH.
Of Robert Marsh & Co., H. W. Hellman Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "It didn't hurt a bit."

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

DRIFTS INTO THE MOUNTAINS.

BIG BALLOON LAST SEEN JUST BELOW ALPINE TAVERN.

Capt. Mueller Has Trouble from the Start—Week of Sports Results in Much Advertising for City—Waterhouse Will Publish Campaign Paper—Another National Bank.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, March 21.—Drifting into the mountains just west of the "Cape of Good Hope," below Alpine Tavern, Capt. Mueller's balloon, in which are the pilot, Richard Halsted; a local merchant; Harold Barker, photographer; Edward Duschutz foreman of a local garage, and Lane C. Gilliland, a visitor at Hotel Maryland, was lost to view last night, and no word has been received up to early this morning of the whereabouts of the party. From Mount Wilson last night a report came that a light wind was blowing due north and if the party cleared the summit of Mount Lowe, a landing could not be made in the darkness and fog. The only safety for the men would be to remain high in the air and take the chance of blowing back into the valley and landing safely today. Capt. Mueller has always made it a rule to take plenty of provisions for one day at least. When he left Tournament Park yesterday under unfavorable conditions he is said to have been well supplied with food. This will mean much if the craft lands far back in the mountains, for it may take several days for the party to reach civilization.

There is a chance that Capt. Mueller landed yesterday afternoon just at dusk on one of the crags this side of the range, and that the party will camp all night on the mountainside, being afraid to risk the descent in the dark and fog, which would be perilous even on a trail.

From the start yesterday the balloon had trouble. Just outside of the fence at Tournament Park the drag rope wrapped about three electric wires and held the big bag captive until a rope was thrown over the feeler of the balloon and the craft brought down in order that the drag rope might be cut. Then the big bag shot northward again and appeared to go about 1000 feet high over the city, coming down again almost to the ground in Altadena. Here two sand bags were dropped and the balloon shot heavenward, disappearing in the clouds over Camp Sierra.

Some people have thought that Capt. Mueller might take advantage of the north wind and try to make a record-breaking trip, but he has not enough provisions to risk being blown out on the desert. It is believed that word will be received from the party early this morning.

WEEK OF SPORTS SUCCESS.

Although the past week of entertainment may not have been a financial success, it is felt that the advertising the city has secured from the carnival will more than make up for the cost of the events. Roy Knabenshue, who was unable to make ascents in the airship after Tuesday afternoon before the crowd at the park, was blamed by many people, but his experience on Tuesday, when he had such a struggle to reach Tournament Park again, after rounding the place several times, made him cautious. As a strong wind blew every afternoon, he did not dare to attempt the flights at a risk of his life. In order to give the public its money's worth, he is to remain another week here and will attempt to break the record for remaining in the air and also to travel to Mount Wilson, if the weather is fair.

A fair-sized crowd watched the entertainment yesterday afternoon, of which the balloon ascension was only a small part. Ten members of the Junior A class of the local Y.M.C.A., under the direction of Physical Director Kerr, did mat stunts and received much applause for their tumbling.

In the burro chariot races Ray Beck won easily, having the best team, and after securing two heats from John Pinkham, he drove another heat for the benefit of the crowd, his best time being 1 minute and 58 seconds, which is the track record. The time seems almost impossible, but was given out by the judges, though many in the crowd credited the speed made because the burros were scared into a gallop all the way around the track, tin cans being used to aid them along.

James A. Gaut, the local horse fancier and owner of Belle Mason, the trotter, failed to break his record of Thursday, when he drove the distance around the track in 1 minute and 2½ seconds.

WILL ISSUE PAPER.

Former Mayor Waterhouse and his backers are to publish a paper during the remainder of the campaign. The announcement was made last night by George F. Kernaghan, chairman of the Publication Committee, and he will be assisted in his work by E. D. Barry and Earl M. Wright.

Although the campaign has proceeded quietly, the closing days promise to be full of life. For the past two years the men behind former Mayor Waterhouse have complained that the local papers did not give them a fair chance to appeal to the public. It is the intention that the paper shall die with the close of the campaign on April 5.

WATERHOUSE BUYS.

Mr. Waterhouse yesterday purchased the Warren J. Richardson residence at No. 80 Ford Place. The house is a two-story modern building and the property is in one of the best sections of the city and highly improved. The consideration is not made public, but is said to involve about $10,000.

ANOTHER NATIONAL BANK.

Word was received from Washington yesterday that the Crown City Bank has been granted a certificate to become a national bank and business was begun yesterday under the laws governing a national bank. The name is henceforth to be the Crown City National Bank. The paid-up capital is $100,000. The institution is located with the Baniers Savings Bank, which has a paid-up capital of $50,000. J. B. Coulston is president and other officers are Harry Schlauderman, vice-president; Albert Mercer, cashier; A. B. Palmer and Henry W. Meyer, assistant cashiers.

Owing to the laws governing national banks, the branch established in East Pasadena will be dropped.

EARLY MORNING FIRE.

Through the watchfulness of the patrolman of W. W. Freeman's detective agency yesterday, the lives of a number of lodgers in the Brockway building were probably saved, as the vigilance of the man resulted in the discovery of a fire in the office of Lindley & Kay, which appeared to have generated from the stove in the building. A bad fire in the wall was found when the fire department arrived and this was only overcome by the hard work of Chief Clifford and his men. It is believed the fire started from the stove in the office, although the two men say the stove was not in use.

SUNDAY KEEPS TEAM AWAY.

Because he was unable to secure Tournament Park for a Sunday baseball game, Manager Harry Dexter of the Pasadena team canceled the game scheduled for today with the Portland Coast League team. No arrangement has been made for other games as McCredie cannot fix his schedule to admit a game in Pasadena.

MT. WILSON TEMPERATURE.

The temperature on Mt. Wilson today was 32 deg. at 7 a.m., 36 deg. at noon and 28 deg. at 4 p.m.

RELICS ARE RESOURCES.

W. H. Workman Tells Whittier Audience of Value of Restoration of Pico Mansion.

WHITTIER, March 20.—That relics of the past are among the most precious resources of the State was emphasized by W. H. Workman of Los Angeles yesterday in the address he delivered in the throwing open to the public of the partially restored mansion of the late Gov. Pico. Said he:

"The preservation of the historic landmarks of California should be a matter of deep interest to every resident of the State. These places, around which centers the romantic interest of the early times, beside their historic and sentimental value, have also a distinct significance in this pleasure ground of the nation. Travelers seek such spots on their journeys. The majority of people go to Europe to view the art galleries with the paintings of the old masters, the ancient cathedrals, the historic buildings of all descriptions, the homes and haunts of celebrated men and the relics of the past, and there are few who go there to see the factories. The increasing number of travelers who come each year to California also find their greatest interest in the noble remnants of the early missions, and the crumbling remains of the old dwellings once peopled by the men and women of early California history. These relics of the past are among the most precious resources of the State."

He remarked that the restoration of the home of Pio Pico, last Mexican Governor of California, must commend itself to every citizen of our commonwealth. "The Pico Memorial Association organized by public-spirited women of Whittier has undertaken this work, and we are assembled to encourage their efforts, and to commemorate their achievement. Special honor is due Mrs. Harriet Strong for her indefatigable devotion to the cause."

He congratulated the ladies of the association on what they had already accomplished in the restoration of the old mansion and trusted their untiring efforts would have continued success in completing the work of restoring the old landmark.

AUTO CLUB.

An auto club was organized here this week, with the triple object of "promoting good roads, benefiting auto conditions generally and for the benefit and protection of the club members." The officers are A. H. Gregg, president; Walter Butler, secretary and treasurer; Dr. F. J. Bold, William Wood, A. H. Gregg, R. J. McClure, C. W. Redman, W. L. Dressor and T. H. Buckmaster, directors. The club has a membership of forty.

The Glee Club of Whittier College will give its annual "home concert" at the college auditorium the evening of the 26th inst.

The Board of Trade has just completed arrangements to issue 20,000 booklets advertising the city.

BETTER THEATER PLANNED.

Fraternal Aid Building at Pomona to Be Enlarged—Popular Young People Engaged.

POMONA, March 20.—The lot adjoining the Fraternal Aid Theater, on the east, has been purchased by George M. Simpson, who will erect on it a two-story brick building.

Plans are being made for the alteration of the Fraternal Aid building into a larger theater, the whole lower floor to be converted into the orchestra, with a balcony and gallery above.

The Women's Club will meet at the home of Mrs. W. R. Cogswell on West Second street, Monday afternoon.

IN CUPID'S NET.

The engagement of Miss Opal Chain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Chain of West Fifth avenue, to Almond T. Richardson, of the "Pomona Progress," is announced. Miss Chain is a graduate of the Pomona Valley Hospital Nurses' Training School, and one of this city's most popular young ladies. Mr. Richardson also has hosts of friends here. Both young people are being showered with congratulations.

The talented Chinese children, who have sung from ocean to ocean, will give a concert at the First Methodist Church tomorrow evening.

SIMPLE, SOLEMN SERVICE.

Last Words Are Spoken at Covina Over Remains of Col. Chapman—Interment at Hollywood.

COVINA, March 20.—The funeral service for Col. F. M. Chapman was held at 10 a.m. in the Christian Church. The edifice was filled with the friends and neighbors of the deceased, who had congregated to pay their last tribute of respect to his memory.

The service, simple but solemn, was conducted by Rev. W. G. Conley, the pastor, and Evangelist Martin. C. C. Chapman, brother of the deceased, in a few broken words paid a tribute to his character as a relative and a business partner of thirty-five years.

The casket was of solid oak, with plain heavy brass mountings. The colonel's cap and sword and a magnificent wreath of white carnations and purple hyacinths, sent by the Columbia Land and Water Company, of which the deceased had been president ever since its incorporation, were placed upon it. The whole platform of the church was covered with floral wreaths sent by friends.

After the service, the body was taken by Pacific Electric car to Hollywood to be interred at the cemetery there.

The friends and neighbors who acted as pallbearers are E. H. Lakee, Dr. G. D. Jennings, A. M. Seeley, J. A. Houser, A. W. Aldrich and J. L. Matthews.

FLASH.

STAR IS AID TO FLIRTATION.

MAN USES IT TO IMPRESS THE GIRLS OF A LAUNDRY.

They Were Dazzled, But Long Beach Professor on Whom It is Tried Fails to See Virtue in It and Has Wearer Arrested for Impersonating an Officer.

LONG BEACH, March 20.—Edward Burgin, a driver for a local laundry, was arrested this morning by Detective Phillips on a charge of impersonating an officer. Burgin secured possession of special police star No. 37, which had been issued to a bath-house employé, and used it in collecting laundry bills from slow customers and also in flirtations with some of the laundry girls. Yesterday he went to Carroll Park School and flashing his star attempted to bulldoze Prof. Huff because a young relative had been punished for infraction of the school rules. Huff notified the police and Burgin was arrested. He pleaded ignorance of the gravity of his offense and as the complaining parties were inclined to be lenient he was released on surrender of the star and an apology to all whom he had approached as an officer.

DIES SUDDENLY.

News was received here today of the death at San Diego of Mrs. R. M. Bowzer, formerly of this city. Mrs. Bowzer had been ill for some time and members of the family going to her room at noon found her dead. Heart failure is assigned as the cause.

Rev. Chester P. Dorland of Plymouth Congregational Church, who has been asked by his congregation to reconsider his resignation filed some weeks ago, has promised to return a final answer Wednesday evening. His resignation was due to an offer to enter a new field of the church at a much larger salary.

SPIRITUALISTIC.

Word has been received from George B. Warne of Washington, president of the National Spiritualistic Society, that he will be here in August to attend the Spiritualist Congress of California. Elizabeth Lowe Watson, the founder of Sunny Brae, Cal., has also notified the local committee of her willingness to attend.

The regular monthly dinner of the Long Beach Realty Board will be held Tuesday evening. There will be several speakers present from Los Angeles, including the secretary of the State Federation of Realty Boards.

GIRLS CHALLENGED.

Miss Lilly Kincade, manager of the champion High School basketball six, received a letter this morning from the girls' team of Healdsburg, Sonoma county, with a challenge to compete for the championship of the northern half of the State. The Healdsburg team are champions of that part of the State north of San Francisco. The expenses of the local team will be paid, and a good time assured. Misses Kincade and Upton will confer with the school authorities for permision to make the trip. It is also proposed to accept the challenge of the San José team from the central part of the State, so that both games can be played on the one trip.

EL MONTE.

EL MONTE, March 20.—The play, "The Merchant of Venice" (up to date) to be given by the seniors of the high school in the school auditorium Friday evening, is expected to be quite the event of the season to judge by the amount of advertising. The town is literally covered with placards of varied, peculiar and artistic design calling attention to this event for which the class has been so long in preparation. The cast will include Beatrice Everett as the Duke of El Monte, Walter Robinson as Antonio, Harold Cogswell as Shylock, and Edith Garver as Portia.

The funeral of Miss Alice Metcalf, who died at the home of her mother, Mrs. M. Metcalf in Sawtelle, on the 14th inst., was held here at the old family homestead on Tuesday.

Mrs. Powell, and daughter, Ruth and sister, Miss Flos Pond of Los Angeles, were guests of their sister, Mrs. L. A. Farrington, this week. The entertainment given by the Current Events section of the Shakespeare Club last evening was very successful, and well attended. A neat sum was netted toward the clubhouse fund.

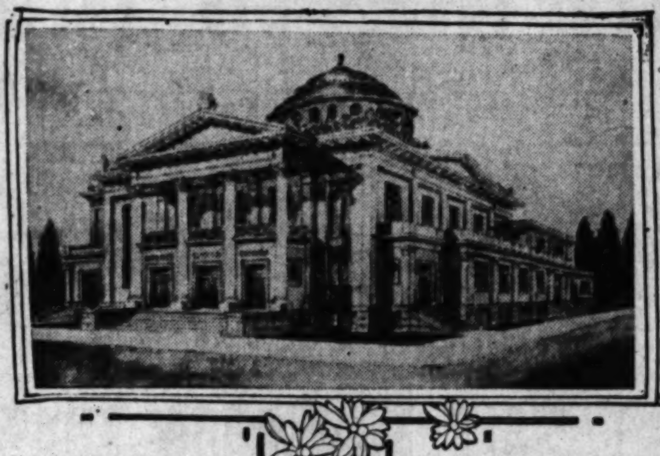
HANDSOME.

WHITTIER TO HAVE IMPOSING CHURCH.



New Congregational Edifice.

Architect L. B. Valk's drawing of proposed $25,000 structure of Greek architecture to be erected to accommodate the needs of the Plymouth denomination at Whittier.

WHITTIER, March 20.—The members of Plymouth Congregational Church have decided to erect a $25,000 building, to replace the one they have outgrown. This important decision was reached at a church meeting a night or two since, great enthusiasm being expressed by the members and officers. The step has seemed absolutely necessary since many people have been unable to obtain seats at the regular church services. Recently, in order to accommodate the large number who wished to hear a series of lectures given by the pastor, Dr. Alexander McGregor, the service was held at the high school auditorium, which was filled.

In answer to their strenuous demand for larger quarters a quiet little campaign for funds for a new church was started by the pastor. The result was announced by him at the church meeting this week when he stated that he had talked with forty members, had not received a single refusal, and had pledges of $8000.

The structure planned is of Greek architecture, will have an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1000, and a pipe organ. It will be of manufactured stone, and will be one of the finest edifices of its kind in any of the smaller cities of California. It is proposed, temporarily, to use the present church building for the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor meetings, the main auditorium only being built at present. L. B. Valk of Los Angeles has the plans in charge.

The church now owns three lots on South Greenleaf avenue, on one of which is located the present building. The new one will stand on the two adjoining lots, 100 feet of frontage being on Greenleaf and 140 feet on College street.

GRATIFIED.

INSPECT HOME, ARE PLEASED.

OFFICIALS SATISFIED WITH DECIDED IMPROVEMENTS.

Cleanliness of Members' Clothing Particularly Impresses Them—Old Soldier Falls from Second-Story Window of Sawtelle House and Sustains Two Fractured Ribs.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 20.—Col. W. E. Ellwell, inspector and surgeon-general of N.H.D.V.S., completed inspection of this branch at noon today, and with the president of the board of managers, left at once for the East. Both gentlemen expressed themselves as pleased with the conditions they found here. The inspector said that there was a decided improvement in every direction, and particularly in the cleanliness of members' clothing.

Veteran Michael Fuhrman, who was knocked down by a street car in Los Angeles, was yesterday brought to the home suffering from a bad fracture of the right hip.

FALLS FROM WINDOW.

Gilbert Hanson, a member of Home Co. E, while working about a window in the second story of a house in Sawtelle yesterday, lost his balance and fell to the ground, sustaining the fracture of two ribs. The home's ambulance brought him to the hospital.

Sometime last evening Washington Williams, an epileptic patient in ward 12 at the hospital, sprang from a window of that ward on the second floor, and evidently struck on the graveled walk, face first. A broken nose, a number of contusions and other injuries not yet determined resulted.

For the second time this week Cupid has made his presence felt in the hospital here. Assistant Surgeon Calvert L. Emmons, one of the most efficient on Surgeon McNary's staff, and Miss Minnie Lundgren, a popular trained nurse in this hospital, were married on Thursday, and are now on their way to Overton, Neb., where Dr. Emmons has decided to enter on the regular practice of his profession.

Miss Minnie B. Thaxter a graduate of the Los Angeles Emergency and General Hospital, is appointed nurse, vice Miss Lundgren, resigned.

LeRoy Leggett, late Co. B., Seventieth Indiana Infantry, is appointed sergeant of Home Co. A, vice Creigh, promoted to commander of "L."

RECENT DEATHS.

Thomas Bramel, late Capt. Mead's Arkansas Mounted Rifles (Mexican War,) a native of Missouri, admitted in 1906 from Laramie, Wyo., died March 17; aged 84.

Lewis Savoy, late Co. C, Second New York Cavalry, a native of New York, admitted in 1899, from Los Angeles, died March 19; aged 72.

Mayor Dudley is in San Diego, where he went to be present at the polo tournament.

Mrs. I. W. Lamb and Miss Carrie Purdy of Perry, Mich., are the guests of seaside friends.

Herbert James of Cleveland, O., is a visitor at the home of his uncle, City Engineer James.

The wonderful Arrowhead Hot Springs will cure that rheumatism. A model hotel and unapproachable baths. Secure rooms at Coronado now.

How He Got Rid Of Consumption

Remarkable Rescue of Prominent Indiana Man a Matter of Life-and-Death Interest to All Throat and Lung Sufferers.

For Benefit of Times Readers, He Tells How He Cured Himself at Home. Costs Nothing to Try.

"I think I owe it to all sufferers of lung and throat trouble and consumption to tell them some mighty good news, a sure way to cure themselves right at home with little trouble," said E. S. Stroh, of Angola, Ind., yesterday as he passed through.

At 63 I Was A Consumptive Given Up to Die, Weight 137 Lbs. Now Here is My Picture at 66, Hale and Hearty Weighing 166 Lbs. I Was Cured by Dr. J. Lawrence Hill's Home Treatment.

"Coming from me, probably, some people might doubt this, but let me tell you," he said, as his 66-year-old face flushed with a resurrected, youthful smile, "over two years ago I was a weazened-up wreck, a consumptive at 63. Three lung specialists passed me up. Every day I would cough up about a pint. I had chills and fever every afternoon. I could hardly eat, even the plainest food, coughed nearly all night, and was down to 137 pounds when I hit on the cure. Well, you see me now. I weigh 166 pounds, frisky as a boy at 66, can do a big day's work, and eat like a prince.

"Now I am not trying to boost anybody, but I must give credit where credit is due. Dr. J. Lawrence Hill, 295 Hill building, Jackson, Mich., the well known lung specialist of America and probably so far the only successful one, cured me. That was two years ago. I have just had my lungs examined again and there is no trace of consumption nor danger of its returning. Dr. Hill makes a specialty of treating throat and lung sufferers at a distance who have not the means of visiting his office personally. That's the way he cured me, and I know of many others who had one foot in the grave almost brought back to life by what he calls his Rational Treatment. It certainly is a wonder.

"I wish every reader of The Times who has weak lungs, catarrh of the bronchial tubes or catarrh in any form, chronic bronchitis, asthma, chronic hacking cough, loss of flesh, night sweats, hemorrhages, soreness or pain in the chest or under the shoulder blades or any other deadly symptom of consumption, to send to Dr. Hill for his free package. This treatment checks at once further progress of the disease, develops atrophied cell tissues and brings on new resisting power, appetite, flesh and good health." Fill out the free coupon below and mail today.

CHRONIC CATARRH, STOMACH AND LIVER TROUBLE

O. A. Dunman, 1413 Buena Vista St., Los Angeles.

Mr. Dunman says: "For fifteen (15) years I have been a victim of CATARRH. I have always had weak lungs. For the past four (4) years I was always short of breath. Would choke up and wheeze. I always had a pain in the chest and headache. My nose would stop up until I was compelled to breathe through my mouth and I would hawk and spit a great deal, especially when I would take cold, which was a great deal of the time. I also had trouble with my stomach and liver. I would bloat up and was always constipated. I was weak and run down in every way. This was my condition when I began Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment. I can say they have helped me in every way. I feel like a new man, and I take great pleasure in recommending Drs. Shores to all sufferers for they have done wonders for me. Any one doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me, for I feel sick people should know of Drs. Shores' great skill.

(Signed) O. A. DUNMAN.

If Your Trouble Is Any of the Following, Drs. Shores Can Cure You:

Catarrh of the head, nose, throat and lungs, in all stages.

SUDDEN AFFLUENCE.

"WORTHLESS PATCH" PROVES GOLD TRAP.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 20.—George Luna, after struggling for three years with poor luck to support his family by raising fruits on a Lytle Creek ranch, discovers that he possesses a half-acre, considered a worthless patch of rock and gravel, which is a veritable gold mine. From groveling poverty he awakened this morning to find himself at least temporarily in affluence.

Luna's sixteen-year-old son was loading a wheelbarrow with gravel this morning on the patch, when a yellow pebble attracted his attention. He hastily carried it to his father, having seen nuggets before, and the pebble was at once identified as pure gold. But the father would not trust his own decision, and with his son hurried to town, presented the lump at the bank, and exchanged it for a $10 gold piece.

Luna is beside himself with excitement. He states that the patch, which he has regarded as worthless, is so situated that there is no doubt in his mind but that it has been a gold trap for centuries. He believes that by sinking to bedrock many nuggets will be brought to light. This afternoon word came that he and his wife, who are eagerly working over the gravel, have found four more nuggets, one of which is almost twice as large as the one sold to the bank.

WHERE IS HE?

WRITES MYSTIC AND IS LOST.

REDLANDS MAN MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS FROM HOME.

Wife Fears He Has Met With Foul Play—Wild Turkey Hunter Returns to San Bernardino—Yucaipa Mining Claims Are Involved in Litigation—Trowel Reception.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 20.—Mrs. William Ortman of Redlands has appealed to the Sheriff to locate her husband, who has been missing for three days, and she fears foul play. According to the woman's statement, he left behind letters showing that he has been in correspondence with mystic doctors at Los Angeles.

Commissioner Van Slyke has just returned from a four months' absence in Mexico, hunting wild turkeys for the State Fish and Game Commission. Owing to the widespread criticism which followed the commissioner's first trip he will give out no information as to the results of the visit just concluded, but explains that he made one shipment to the commission, and that the turkeys which he secured have been turned loose in the game reserve near Haywards.

Mary Talley, asserting that she purchased two Yucaipa mining claims from A. C. Bullock of Los Angeles, visited the County Recorder's office to record a deed to the properties. A man named Gallagher, also of Los Angeles, has filed a proof of labor on the property. The claims are involved in litigation.

Oscar Lawler, Grand Master; M. P. Flint, Past Grand Master, Senior Warden Weller of Los Angeles, and seventy-five other distinguished Masons paid San Bernardino a visit tonight as an escort to the traveling trowel. The reception which followed was one of the most brilliant ever given in Masonic circles in this city, delegations to the number of 500 from all over the valley participating.

Building permits for the first twenty days of March total $50,051, as compared with $26,299 for the entire month of March last year. The largest item in the record is $30,000, to be expended for the new technical building, which the city school authorities are building on the F street grounds. The outlook for the balance of the month is bright.

The suit of the Seal of Gold Mining Company against a group of Riverside stockholders, who for the past two years have endeavored to obtain control of the property, was submitted to the court this morning. Judge Bledsoe stated that he would continue the case until he can hear the arguments at Los Angeles.

The Santa Fé Baseball Association has perfected its organization here by the election of these officers: J. D. Eldridge, president; C. J. Baker, vice-president; Charles F. Cross, treasurer, and J. E. Glenn, manager. The association is to incorporate for $2500, and an effort will be made to interest the business men of the town in the stock.

FULLERTON.

FULLERTON, March 20.—At a special meeting held last night by the Methodist people the sum of over $8000 was subscribed to build the new church and the additional $2000 needed is now in sight. One or two people subscribed $1000 each.

In a well-played, evenly-matched game of baseball, the Fullerton Union High School defeated the Orange High School in a thirteen-inning struggle by a score of 4 to 3 on the local diamond here this afternoon. This puts the Fullerton High School in the lead for the county championship. Last year the same teams played a fourteen-inning game on the same grounds, Fullerton winning by a score of 3 to 2. The battery today for Orange was Heinrichs and Witt; for Fullerton Buzzard and Collins. Heinrichs struck out nineteen men, Buzzard seven. Orange secured hix hits off Buzzard, while Fullerton secured eight hits off Heinrichs. The Orange pitcher was not as well supported as the Fullerton boy, his team mates losing the game.

THROAT CUT FOR NICKEL.

Man Asks Hobos for Five Cents and Is Brutally Treated by Them.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, March 20.—James Dumphry had his throat cut today by two hobos in this city because he asked them for 5 cents with which to buy bread and meat. D. Snyder struck the man with a hammer and the other slashed his throat with a pocket knife. Both ran away through a saloon and were captured in the rear of the building by Marshal Kelley. Dumphry's offense was that he had heard the two men talking of getting hold of some bread and meat for a stew. He interrupted them to say that he would secure the articles if they would give him a nickel. They resented his "butting in" and tried to kill him. Their preliminary examination has been set for Monday morning.

NO EXCITEMENT AT REVIVAL MEETINGS AT CORONA.

Just Plain Talks Are Given to Largest Religious Gatherings Ever Held in Town—Squabble Over Few Inches of Land Delays Building Operations.

CORONA, March 20.—The largest religious gatherings ever held here are the Jones-Burch meetings in session in Taber's rink. The seating capacity is over 800 and so great has been the interest that the attendance has been swelled to 1000, many persons standing through the entire service.

Evangelist Jones, who was formerly associated with Moody, conducts his meetings differently from most revivals, there being no excitement—just plain talks. Mr. Jones is assisted by his singer, Carl E. Burch, who has a fine baritone voice and not only leads the choir of over sixty voices but appears in vocal numbers each night, playing his own accompaniments. The meetings, which have been held under the auspices of the different local churches, are to close tomorrow evening. Messrs. Jones and Burch were brought to Corona directly from the East for these meetings.

COUNTY ENDEAVOR.

The county convention of the Y.P.S.C.E. is to be held here April 1, 2 and 3. The Congregational and Christian societies are arranging for the entertainment of the delegates.

A strip of land with a five and one-half-inch frontage on Main street and extending 120 feet, the length of the Masonic building, is blocking work on the two-story brick structure which Dr. Robert Todd has started next to Masonic Hall.

When the Masonic Hall Association erected its building more land was needed so Dr. Todd, whose lot adjoins, gave his consent for the wall to stand just eight inches on his land on condition he was to use the wall when he wanted to build.

After the Todd building was started the agent of the Masonic Hall Association, for some reason, forgot the written agreement with the doctor and objected to his using the wall. Surveyors went to work and soon found instead of the eight inches agreed the Masonic Hall stood fourteen and one-half inches on the doctor's land in one place and thirteen and one-half inches at the other end. Dr. Todd offered to deed the strip of land to the association and to the Misses Brown who own the first floor of the lodge building, on condition he was given a bill of sale for one-half the wall. As yet no agreement has been reached.

ANOTHER NEW BUILDING.

Frank W. Alden is to erect a one-story brick building on East Sixth, near Main street, to replace his wooden structure. The building which will cost about $2000, will have a seventy-foot frontage on Sixth street and a depth of twenty-five feet. The building will probably contain two stores which have already been leased.

BUYS RANCH.

J. T. Payton of Pasadena has bought the Taylor ranch of ninety acres across the Santa Ana River for $15,000. Seventy acres of the tract are already in alfalfa and the remainder is soon to be seeded.

Messrs. Bollinger and Crane of Riverside and H. A. Prizer of Corona have bought the extensive gypsum deposit in the near-by foothills, formerly owned by George Lord, and have commenced shipping.

AUTO FOR MAIL CARRIER.

Beginning Tuesday Arthur Austin, carrier on the star route from Corona to Elsinore, will carry the mail and passengers in a two-cylinder Buick.

Juan Jacobs, a young man from San Jacinto, while driving his auto in Corona night before last, was thrown to the ground and sustained a double fracture of the right ankle. His father was summoned from San Jacinto and as soon as a change can be made he will remove his son to a Los Angeles hospital.

Mrs. A. F. Gillet was taken to the Riverside Hospital yesterday to undergo an operation on one of her ears.

Mrs. W. C. Barth has gone to Long Beach to spend a month.

All ladies agree, that a hat must be becoming, to be liked and if at same time, they do not need to pay fancy prices for this, they like their hat still better. This is possible in the way Mrs. Kruseman, milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich (four blocks west of Figueroa) is conducting her business, which way is in great favor with her many customers. Mrs. Kruseman, who learned her trade in Europe, makes only to order, guaranteeing perfect satisfaction, so that ladies ordering, do not run any risk whatever, and as she has consequently no high rent to pay, no waste of spoiled materials and other high expenses, she can be and is always reasonable and enables her even to use the finest materials for medium priced hats. As retrimming is given the same careful attention, the results are always wonderful and pleasant for the customers.

Remember the slogan: "Buy and Boost Home Products." For daily references, see page 9, Part II, of The Times, containing list of wide-awake manufacturers, under the heading "Made in Southern California." You will find there are manufacturers of necessities and luxuries here—manufacturers of things to eat and drink—things for the home, the factory, the office and the farm. Buy them! Try them! There are none better. Buy and Boost, and keep your money at home where it will do you and yours the most good!

Times' Cook Book No. 3 ready today, and until the edition is exhausted, is placed on sale the largest, most elaborate and comprehensive cook book of the series issued by The Times. The 318 recipes for hot Spanish and Mexican dishes and the hygienic department are big features of the publication. The recipes, brought out by The Times' prize cooking contest, are generally from Southern California housewives and noted chefs. Price 25 cents; by mail 5 cents additional. Address The Times, Los Angeles.

The millinery opening of the "Ville de Paris" last week was an event of exceptional interest to fashionable dressers. The enthusiastic comments of the throngs that visited the millinery department, and the large number of hats sold is evident proof of the approval of "Ville" headwear for spring 1909. Individuality of style is a feature that is manifested in a greater degree this spring than any previous year. "Ville" styles will maintain their exclusive elegance and artistic charm all season.

WHOLESALE GROCERS MEET.

State Association Discusses Bankruptcy and Pure Food Laws and Later Enjoys Banquet.

The California Wholesale Grocers' Association held its semi-annual meeting in the offices of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association yesterday. The bankruptcy and pure food laws were discussed and routine business was attended to.

Representatives of the following-named concerns were present: Channel Commercial Company of Santa Barbara; R. L. Craig Company, Haas, Baruch & Co., M. A. Newmark Company, Stetson, Barrett Company and the United Wholesale Company of Los Angeles; Cook-Haddock Company, Klauber-Wangenheim Company of San Diego; Hall-Luhrs Company, Melius & Drescher Company of Sacramento; J. R. Garrett Company of Marysville; Peter Musto Company of Stockton; William Cluff & Co., Tillman & Bendell, Haas Bros., Sussman-Wormser Company and Frank Peterson Company of San Francisco.

Twenty-six plates were laid at the banquet of the association, which was held at the Hotel Westminster last night. The dining-room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and Mrs. R. L. Craig was the guest of honor.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Sacramento.

LOYAL LEGION'S OFFICERS.

Elected at Annual Meeting—Business Followed by Buffet Luncheon and Addresses.

The annual meeting of the Southern California Association, Companions of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, was held last night at the Alexandria. The officers elected are: President, Col. James E. Montgomery; first vice-president, Gen. O. H. La Grange; second vice-president, Maj. Ben. C. Truman; third vice-president, Capt. J. A. Osgood; secretary, Charles S. Gilbert; treasurer, F. B. Braden; chaplain, Rev. William F. Hubbard, U.S.A. (retired.)

Secretary Gilbert received an ovation when he was reëlected for the twenty-second time.

The banquet hall of the hotel was appropriately decorated with flags and flowers, and after the transaction of business a buffet luncheon was served and impromptu addresses made.

DIED WITHOUT WARNING.

As Wilson Houser, aged 70 years, was engaged in superintending the erection of a house yesterday, he dropped dead at No. 709 West First street. The deceased came here from Illinois more than twenty years ago and leaves a widow and a sister, Mrs. Belle Rector, in this city, and a daughter resides in Oregon. Funeral arrangements await word from the latter.

FINE VIEWS OF AFRICA.

An interesting free stereopticon entertainment and lecture will be given in the First Methodist Church on Tuesday evening by Rev. W. P. Dodson, who for twenty-four years was a missionary in Southwest Africa. His views contain a vast number of historical value, especially those bearing upon the last days of Livingstone in the dark continent. He also shows a series illustrating the advance of the people under Christian teachings.

FUNERAL OF DR. HIGGINS.

The funeral of Dr. C. P. Higgins, who died in this city on Friday, will be held at the parlors of Bresee Bros., on Monday afternoon. The services will be held at the Los Angeles Crematory, Sixteenth and Grover streets, at 3 p.m., under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity. The deceased leaves a widow in this city, and a daughter, Mrs. J. A. Morgan, in San Francisco. He was aged 68 years, and was father of the late Dr. T. J. Higgins.

LARGE DOINGS.

U. S. C. WINS BIG HONORS.

First in Conference Meet by Good Margin.

Captures Eight Out of Fourteen First Places.

Thomson and Sloane Are Best Individual Men.

U.S.C., 57; Pomona, 37; Occidental, 27; Whittier, 5.

The track and field athletes of U.S.C. scored a decisive victory over Pomona, Occidental and Whittier in the annual conference meet at Bovard Field yesterday afternoon.

The Methodists assumed the lead early in the contest, and the other contestants gradually fell behind as the scores in the events were registered. The real contest was between Pomona and Occidental for second place. The Tigers were second until three-fourths of the events were run off, when Pomona came up strong and fell in behind U.S.C.

No intercollegiate records were broken, but all the races were exciting and closely contested. All the reversals in form occurred outside of the ranks of U.S.C., and the Methodists annexed many points that they had not claimed in the "dope" sheets.

Occidental began to go on the rocks when Baer failed to place in the 100-yard dash on account of being set back for jumping the gun, when Thomson was crowded back into third place in the low hurdles by Lennox of U.S.C. and Parker of Pomona, and when Carus, pole vaulter, and Bonner, half-miler, failed to break into the points.

Pomona did not fall far behind the expectations of its supporters, but the lead that U.S.C. got through the failure of the Highlanders to hold up their end made it impossible for the Claremonters to get within striking distance of the Methodists.

About 1200 persons were on the bleachers. The Occidental and Pomona supporters equaled in numbers the rooters that occupied the U.S.C. section, but the Whittier contingent was small. Three college brass bands and well-trained rooting clubs maintained a continuous volume of noise that swept out over the field and encouraged the athletes to do their best. The color display was gorgeous. Each rooting faction occupied reserved sections in the bleachers that were decorated with college colors, and the waving pennants and bobbing rooters' hats formed a bright moving mass that shown brilliantly in the sunlight.

BIG MAJORITY.

U.S.C. won eight firsts, four seconds and five thirds; Pomona took four firsts, four seconds and eight thirds; Occidental captured one first, seven seconds and one third, and Whittier took one first. The Methodists' abundance of good all-around material, and the lack of many first-place men by Pomona and Occidental were responsible for the result of the meet.

Mills of Whittier College was the only Quaker who broke into the points. He won the mile race in 4m. 39 4-5s., the fastest time that has been made in the south for two years. The Quaker ran Sturges of Pomona and Hall and Scott of U.S.C. off their feet, opening up a sprint in the home stretch that made him an easy winner.

Fred Thomson of Occidental was the best individual performer, scoring seventeen points for the Highlanders. He took first place in the high hurdles from Lennox of U.S.C. in a heart-breaking finish, and captured second in the shot put, hammer throw and broad jump and third place in the low hurdles. The latter event went to Lennox of U.S.C. in the closest finish of the day. Thomson, Lennox and Parker of Pomona started over the last hurdle simultaneously, but Lennox ran through his hurdle and he and Parker reached the tape a few inches before Thomson.

Capt. Sloane of Pomona won first in the 100 and 440-yard dashes and in the broad jump. In none of the events was he pressed hard to win, and he did not reach his best marks in any of them. Capt. Rush of Occidental finished an easy second to Sloane in the quarter-mile race, and Thomson of Occidental was only a few inches behind the Pomonan in the broad jump.

Trotter of U.S.C. threw the shot 42 feet 2 inches, falling five and three-quarter inches behind his intercollegiate record. Thomson of Occidental reached 42 feet 7¼ inches. Thomson led Burek of Occidental for some time in the hammer throw, but the Methodist landed first place on a good toss from a triple turn.

U.S.C. won the relay event, with Occidental second and Pomona third. The Methodists got a big lead on the first lap and Pomona was well ahead of Occidental, but although U.S.C. never was passed, Baer and Rush of Occidental overtook Pomona on the last two laps and landed the Tigers in second place.

FLASH IN PAN.

Capt. Mills of Whittier started the track events by winning the mile race in the good time of 4 minutes and 39 4-5 seconds, thereby annexing five points, the only place won by a Quaker.

Hall surprised the field by romping in second, seven yards behind Mills and three yards to the good of Scott, the second U.S.C. entry, while Sturges, the Pomona crack runner, finished fourth.

Gobar, Bruce and Sharpless were strung out a half to the rear. As the runners came through the far gate on the final lap, Scott was leading Sturges by a yard and fighting hard. The Pomona runner started to sprint a furlong from the finish and passed Scott a hundred yards from the tape, Gobar dropping to the rear and Hall, with a wonderful spurt, passing the tired Scott on the last turn and finishing a strong second.

Capt. Sloane of Pomona captured the century event in one of the prettiest finishes of the meet, hardly a foot separating Martin and Trotter of U.S.C., who got second and third, respectively. On the first start all the runners jumped the gun except Parker of Pomona, and he was given a yard advantage. Again the sprinters got set and again Starter Hempel was obliged to call back Trotter, Baer and Rush, who jumped the signal. Martin and Sloane were a yard ahead of the field on the third start, and as the gun

BOXING.

ANOTHER FINE CARD IS BEING ARRANGED.

THE fight card furnished Friday night by the Pacific Athletic Club proved very satisfactory to a large bunch of fight bugs, and the one provided for Tuesday night of next week promises to be equally attractive, for it will bring together Ad Wolgast and Frank Picato for the ten-round main event.

These boys scarcely need an introduction, for they have fought a number of times for the local bugs, and each one has always come up to expectations. There is nothing slow in either one, and they put up the kind of scrap that always pleases the average crowd, and this is something in which both slugging and boxing are combined.

Wolgast is near the top of the heap in the featherweight division, and yet is to fight Picato, at the lightweight limit at 6 o'clock in the evening. Ad is getting heavy, and it is hard work to do 125 pounds, and as very good feathers seem to be scarce right now, he will doubtless work himself into the lightweight class this year.

Picato, while he is not considered in the same class as Wolgast, has shown so well in his recent bouts that he aspires to tackle some of the real good ones, and even though he may be beaten by Wolgast it would be no particular disgrace to him. The boy has a lot of class and in meeting Wolgast he will need all of it, for Ad is a very hard boy to hit effectively, as even Abe Attell found out. There is no use guessing the result of their meeting, for prize fights are very uncertain things to gamble on.

The programme will consist of the ten-round main event, a ten-round semi-final, a six-round go and two of four each, and the only one in sight at present is the semi-final. Manager McCarey has picked out Webster and Hefron for this and hopes to get them, if Webster is agreeable, for Hefron's consent is taken as a matter of course, as he is a real fighter. There are any number of good kids in this section for preliminaries, for which no one really cares, only as "appetizers."

ROQUE TOURNAMENT.

Play to Begin Tuesday Morning on Pasadena Court and Continue Through Week.

The Pasadena Roque Club is to open a tournament at Pasadena Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock to continue all week. The club is composed of eastern players, some of whom have been champions in their home clubs.

The courts are in prime condition, one of them being in every particular equal to the best courts at Norwich, Ct., where the national tournaments are held.

The Los Angeles Roque Club will be represented by Champion Greenslit, L. N. Evans, William Durham and other experts. Pomona, Santa Ana, Ontario, Upland, Glendale and other outside clubs' players will also participate.

There will be two gold medal prizes, awards given to the winners in each of the two divisions. The Round Robin style of playing will be observed, every man playing one game with each of the other contestants of his division.

A general invitation is extended to any player who has a knowledge of this game to participate.

COBE TROPHY RACE.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Chicago will have full charge of the stock chassis road race, to be run for the Cobe trophy. The Chicago Automobile Club has decided to make the event for the West and has advanced the dates to June 18-19. Mr. Cobe has withdrawn his offer to the national organization. The big race will be held in this section for two years, but all western clubs have the right to bid for it annually. It embraces the territory from Pittsburgh to the Pacific Coast and from the Rio Grande to the Canadian line.

THE KIDS.

THREE NEW MARKS SET.

High Jump, Half-Mile and Relay Broken.

Los Angeles High Beats Poly by Three Points.

Best Field Meet Ever Held by High Schools.

Los Angeles High, 46; Polytechnic, 43; Harvard, 11; Long Beach, 6; Whittier, 5; Pasadena, 3; Throop, 3; Hollywood, 1.

Los Angeles High School won the annual County League conference track meet at Harvard Military School yesterday afternoon, beating Polytechnic, its nearest rival, by a margin of three points. The relay race, for which a special banner is presented, was won by Polytechnic by a close margin over the High School and Harvard teams.

Three new Southern California interscholastic records were broken and two were equaled. Walberg of Polytechnic set a new record of 5 ft. 8½ in. in the high jump. The old record was 5 ft. 8 in., made in 1906 by Hotaling of Pasadena High. McClure of Los Angeles High cut 2-5s. off the record for the 880-yard run, covering the distance in 2m. 5s. The old record was held by Robb of Harvard and was 2m. 5 2-5s.

The Polytechnic relay team established a record of 3m. 36s. in the mile relay race. Geissler of Los Angeles High made the 100-yard dash in 10 1-5s. which equals the interscholastic record. The record was also equaled in the 220-yard low hurdles by Lugo of Los Angeles High, the time being 26 3-5s.

The prettiest and most exciting race was the half-mile run. McClure took the lead on the first turn, but before the first half of the lap had been covered he was passed by Wheelan of Polytechnic, who held the lead until after the second lap had been started, but the pace was too hard for him and McClure passed him early in the lap. Kirchoffer made a hard struggle during the latter part of the race to gain the lead and finished close behind the winner.

VERY CLOSE RELAY.

The relay race was very close from start to finish. Polytechnic took the lead at the beginning and at the end of the first lap had a lead of five feet. Los Angeles High was ahead at the end of the second lap by three feet and the third ended with Polytechnic and Harvard tied. Yerkes ran the last lap for the mechanics and at once began to draw away from his competitors. He won by a wide margin and finished in good form.

Dodd of Long Beach surprised the local schools by finishing first in the mile run. Not until the last lap did he seem to have a chance to win. At the end of the first half of the last lap he was running leisurely in fourth place. Chamberlain of Poly, Simpson of Los Angeles High School and Vallely of Harvard were running ahead of him as named and one of them was expected to take first. Dodd then started on one of the fastest sprints ever seen in a local high school mile race and passed his opponents in short order, winning easily and in excellent form. Chamberlain and Vallely were almost shoulder to shoulder at the finish but the mechanic crossed the line slightly in the lead.

The 100-yard dash was won easily by Los Angeles High as Jones was the only Polytechnic entry. Throop, Polytechnic's crack sprinter, did not enter as he thought he could win the 220-yard dash if he stayed out. In this way the Hill boys took first and second place in the century. Geissler and Rubio ran a close race from start to finish and at the tape Geissler was only two feet in the lead.

HILL A DARK HORSE.

Hill of Hollywood surprised even his most enthusiastic supporters in the quarter-mile and took third place. He had never trained for the distance, and ran in good form. McClure and Rogers made a hard struggle for first place and at the last turn were running side by side.

Robertson of High School and Heath of Harvard ran close together in the high hurdles and covered the distance in fast time, but the contest was more of an obstacle race than a hurdle event as not one hurdle was standing after the race had been finished.

The 220-yard dash was a good race between Geissler, Throop and Rubio and for the first 100 yards they were almost abreast. Geissler gained a slight lead near the finish and Throop crossed the line a few inches ahead of Rubio.

Redman, the only Whittier entry, took first place in the broad jump, by a margin of four inches, notwithstanding the fact that in the second jump his right ankle was so badly sprained that he had to be carried from the field. Franklin of Polytechnic took second place by a margin of a quarter of an inch over Geissler of High School. Their distances were 20 ft. 3½ in. and 20 ft. 3¼ in. respectively.

The hammer throw was won easily by Olmstead of Polytechnic, who threw the weight 142 ft. 9½ in. Thompson of Pasadena was second with 130 ft. 7 in., and Geissler of Los Angeles High third with 129 ft. 8 in.

Meyer of Poly, Ellis of Throop, and Morrison of Long Beach each put the shot over the 43-foot mark. There was only two inches difference between Ellis's and Morrison's distance.

Bean and Giffin of Polytechnic were close together in the pole vault, and easily bested their other opponents. Hall of High School was third.

The results:

The 120-yard hurdle race, first heat: Won by Heath (Harvard;) Harrigan (L. A. High,) second; Slaughter (Poly,) third; time, 16 sec. Second heat: Won by Anderson (Poly;) Risdon (Throop,) second; Robertson (L. A. High,) third; time, 17 sec. Finals: Won by Robertson (L. A. High;) Heath (Harvard,) second; Harrigan (L. A. High,) third; time, 15 sec.

The 100-yard dash, first heat: Won by Geissler (L. A. High;) Jones (Poly,) second; McLaughlin (Hollywood,) third; time, 10 3-5 sec. Second heat: Won by Rubio (L. A. High;) Robb (Harvard,) second; Anderson (Pasadena,) third; time 10 2-5 sec. Finals: Won by Geissler (L. A. High;) Rubio (L. A. High,) second; Robb (Harvard,) third, time, 10 1-5 sec.

OVER THE BOARDS.

EAST AND WEST TO MEET AGAIN.

De Rosier and Derkum to Spin at Coliseum.

Things Which Happen Behind Scenes Interest.

Motorcycle Club to Conduct Today's Fast Card.

The races today at the Prince motorcycle coliseum will call out the best amateurs of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club.

There has been a reversal of the dope since Sunday and those who saw only victory for Derkum before the fast westerner met De Rosier, now admit that the Frenchman always had a notch or two in reserve as he raced over the course. Derkum says he will ride until he defeats the visitor.

There were many thrilling scenes at the meet and many more will probably result before the final race is held, but some of the more interesting happenings were enacted behind the scenes and away from the crowds which hung on the result of the races.

The problem of pulling off a big meet, with the fastest riders in the world pitted against each other and with a crowd that was three times as large as he thought it would be, proved too much even for the veteran Prince. Crowded to the wall he threw up his hands and called for help. It came, but only at the box office where the tickets were being sold.

Prince built a grand stand to accommodate 2000 spectators and 3000 tried to crowd into it. He had an additional stand on the back stretch which could accommodate 1500, when crowded. At least 2000 tried to find their way into this. The "Sold Out" sign was hung up long before the first race was started, but still the people came.

They crowded out into the oval and then onto the track and it was here that "Grand Aveune Bill" Ruess came to the rescue of the overburdened Prince. It was well that Ruess came, as the riders threatened to take the meet into their own hands and arrange the handicaps to suit themselves.

THREW HIM OFF.

When one rider objected to his allotment Ruess promptly threw the man off the track. When a wrangle occurred at the start and one of the riders tried to force his machine into the pole position, Ruess swung into action, flourishing a .45 caliber Colt's revolver. He was using it to start the races. It was loaded with bullets. It proved a splendid pacifier and one glance into the barrel sufficed to send any rider trembling to his place.

It is possible that Prince will consider a suggestion made this week for Ruess to conduct the meet. The automobile man has the initiative necessary. He enforces his commands to the letter, allows on back talk and keeps things moving.

Ruess established a reputation at the Pasadena-Altadena automobile hill climb where he ran off eleven events in an hour and thirty minutes, with no delays.

Should he be chosen to run the motorcycle meets he will keep things moving right along. He used to be a motorcycle rider and knows the game thoroughly. He cannot be hoodwinked and is a good starter and finisher.

Jack Prince will remain here for about three weeks, and then will leave for the East. His track has been built hastily. It is the largest of its kind in the world. Just how it will resist the California sun is a problem which may become annoying. Prince will keep an eagle eye on the boards while he is here.

SUN IS TOO HOT.

The track is not inclosed. The thin strips may warp. This would necessitate the resurfacing of the course.

The directors of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club promise that today's meet shall be conducted differently from the first day's races. The course is to be policed. Extra grand stands have been erected and the crowd is promised better accommodations.

The card will be as fast that of last Sunday. Jake De Rosier will again meet Paul Derkum. The struggle between these two track champions will be interesting. Arthur Mitchell on an N.S.U., Eddie Langenfelder on a Thor, T. E. Samuelson and W. Samuelson will complete the professional list.

In the amateur list will be Freddie Huyck, Will Hoag, M. J. Graves, Richard Garvey, Raymond Seymour, A. Ward, Albert Earhart, Frank Loge and Gal Blaylock. These fast riders should furnish enough sensations for the most exacting.

A team of three cyclists from Riverside, Currie, McIvor and Knoll, will attend the meet and will be seen on the track in some of the fast events.

The first race will be started promptly at 2:30 o'clock, the officials say, and things will be kept moving until the finish.

TAXICAB BUZZERS BUSY.

Nobby Little Cars Will Glide to Any Part of the City on Short Notice.

That the taxicab service has become an importnt part of the automobile industry of this city is shown by the great increase in the trade during the last month. The Western Motor Car Company is about to add to its number of Chalmers-Detroit taxicabs in order to keep pace with the growth of business in the downtown districts.

As a result of the general demand for the busy little buzzers, prices have been lowered, and because of the cut it is possible to ride anywhere within the city limits for the same expenditure as was formerly charged to ride within an area bounded by Pico, Figueroa, Los Angeles and Temple streets.

WAY IS OPEN.

CASITAS PASS BARRIERS DOWN.

HIGHWAY TO CHANNEL CITY CLEARED OF OBSTACLES.

Santa Barbara-Los Angeles Road Can Be Traveled—Landslides Have Been Scraped from Steep Mountain Passes and Autos Can Travel in Safety.

For the first time in many years the trip to Santa Barbara promises to be over good roads this summer, according to William Ruess and George Adair, who made the run to Ventura in a Pope-Hartford last week. They found but few bad places and the long stretches of badly cut up highway and rough road which prevented many motorists making the run have almost entirely disappeared.

By running easy, Ruess drove to Oxnard in two hours and thirteen minutes. He was through Calabasas well under the hour.

They drove to Oxnard and after a brief stay there went on to Ventura, only a few miles this side of the Casitas grade, which, until a week ago, was blocked by landslides that closed the road to Santa Barbara.

In the Calabasas country Road Overseer John Hass has done much work, and Ruess says one of the best stretches on the trip will be in this district. Work is to be done before the summer touring begins.

Ruess and Adair know this road better than the average man knows Spring street. As an illustration, Ruess was the center of a discussion recently on the matter of making speed. One motorist held that it was advisable to slow up for turns. In less than a minute Ruess had counted up the number of turns between Los Angeles and Calabasas. Probably no two men in Los Angeles motoring circles know this road as thoroughly as Ruess and Adair.

The trip from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara is one of the most delightful in Southern California. It takes the motorist through Hollywood and the Cahuenga Pass. This grade brings the cars to a rolling country.

From Hollywood to Calabasas there are no settlements other than an occasional ranch house. Beyond is Chalk Hill, which the Pope-Hartford took on the high speed. Further on the car has the winding Canejo grade to descend. On this some of the turns are so short cars of a larger wheel base have difficulty.

The sand at El Rio no longer gives trouble and Ruess states that there is no better road in the State than that from Oxnard to Ventura.

There is a good automobile road through the Casitas Mountains, but the motorist should be sure his breaks are tight before attempting the hills. There are two mountains to top before Carpinteria is reached. The road follows the coast from there, going through the little town of Summerland, where the oil wells have been dug in the sea bottom. Directly ahead is Santa Barbara and its attractions. Motorists who have never made this trip will find it an attractive run.

"While the roads promise to be good all summer," said Ruess," nevertheless I would advise motorists to make the trip before July, as the dust is sometimes annoying in midsummer."

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

The Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Car Company report the following sales to date: J. F. Sims, a miring man of Prescott, Ariz., has purchased a four-cylinder Premier touring car. H. H. Beckwith of Monrovia has also bought a four-cylinder Premier.

The Dorris Motor Car Company has sold the following named cars: T. R. Landis, a Dorris roadster; W. H. Babcock and Conrad Stumph, Dorris touring cars.

P. A. Renton went over the coast route to San Diego Sunday in the big four-cylinder Matheson which he has just received from the factory. He returned Tuesday by way of the inland route and reports the roads rough in places.

Louis Schwaebe of the Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Company, will remain in the East for about three weeks.

R. L. DuBroy is back after a trip to the Portland show in the interest of the Oldsmobile. He says the show there was a success but was not as beautiful as that held in Los Angeles.

Leo Garrod, manager of the Gorham Rubber Company's branch in Seattle, and E. H. Parish, vice-president of the same company, were visiting here last week. W. J. Gorham, the head of the concern, is still here.

The Electrical Construction Company has secured the agency for the Fritchle electric cars for Southern California.

The Gorham Rubber Company has received a shipment of the new Goodrich steel-studded tires. One of the features of this tire is that it is two-ply on the protection strip. The steel rivet runs through this protection strip which prevents the studs pulling out. The tire companies are advocating the steel-studded tire in preference to the chains. Chains do not last long, they splash mud and cut tires.

The H. O. Harrison Company report the following sales to date: H. Benson of San Diego, a Peerless touring car. H. H. Ramsay of this city, a Peerless "thirty."

A. J. Smith, a western representative of the Elmore Motor Car Company, and his family, are in Sacramento.

Rene Brassy of the Thomas Motor Car Company received a shipment of Thomas Flyers yesterday.

L. H. Allen of this city has purchased his second Buick "White Streak." Thomas H. B. Varney has also purchased a Buick.

ROAD RECORD SMASHED.

Another road record has been established in Southern California by the Buick "White Streak." In one of these runabouts Charles A. Dundas of Riverside, accompanied by Messrs. Wallace, Evans and Heap, on Friday broke the automobile record between Hemet and Riverside, the distance of thirty-eight miles from Hemet to the Gage canal in Riverside was made in exactly one hour. The best previous time was 1h. 15m. The first stretch of eighteen miles from Hemet to Perris was negotiated in 25m. The record for the trip is considered remarkable on account of the condition of the road which has two passes and is not considered in any too good condition for ordinary traveling.

ROUND THE BAY.

The ability of the Buick "White Streak" to negotiate bad roads in remarkable time was demonstrated at San Francisco on March 12, when the journey around the bay over a distance of 100 miles from Oakland to San Francisco was covered in 3h. 27m. The roads were in bad condition and caused considerable tire trouble and no less than forty-five minutes out of the total time was lost on that account.

New York-Seattle.

Stipulating that prizes and trophies should be guaranteed and that the rules must meet with the approval of its Contest Committee, the Automobile Club of America has sanctioned the proposed transcontinental run from New York to Seattle, and the event will occur late in May or early in June. Although the entry blanks have not yet been issued, three foreign and one American entries are practically assured.

THE REAL SOCIETY PILOT

And well may this—"The Ideal Car"—be termed.

This comes from the fact that so many of the best people in the world are now buying and using the famous Thomas touring cars. Please note, when you are on the boulevard, passing the most beautiful homes in California, that swell straight line, luxurious car waiting for the people who own these beautiful homes, is a Thomas car.

Again, please remember, last Sunday that silent, beautiful, luxurious car that passed you on the road was a Thomas. You know the one you couldn't but said you would find out what car that was when you got back to town.

"The home of automobiles" is now open at 842-44-46 South Olive garage any gasoline automobile for $5.00 per month. See this, one of the proof garages west of the Mississippi, and you will say, "Los Angeles will town."

PUSHING THE AIR.

MOTORCYCLES FITTED WITH AIR PROPELLERS.

TO SHOW the great power to be obtained by operating propellers in the air, experiments are being made with motorcycles by members of the Aëro Club of California in an effort to propel them like an airship. J. S. Zerbe's experiments with his aëroplane in which he sent the 500-pound machine along the ground at the rate of eighteen miles an hour, shows that great speed could be obtained under right conditions.

It is proposed to fit one or two motorcycles with air propellers and establish a new kind of record. It is planned to send the machine around the running board of the new saucer track, and if enough speed can be obtained to take the high banks at the best pace possible.

A member of the Aëro Club is adjusting an aëro propeller on an automobile. If the experiments are successful exhibitions will be given in connection with the aëro show, but it is not likely that great speed will be obtained by the autos in the small space.

FIVE-LAP COURSE.

MOTORCYCLE TRACK TO BE SPLINTERLESS.

MOTORCYCLISTS are eagerly awaiting the opening of the new saucer track at Fiesta Park billed for April 25. The track will be doubly surfaced, smooth as it is possible to make it, and should be fast. It will be five laps to the mile.

Races on this track will have the sanction of the National Cycling Association, and also of the Federation of American Motorcyclists whenever an exclusive motorcycle meet is held. The latter association only grants a sanction for a single meet.

Work is being rushed on the big track and when the saucer is completed it will be possible to race bicycles and motorcycles at top speed over the boards. The course is to be inclosed by a brick wall.

Manager Pickering stated yesterday that the work will be completed in about five weeks. He is planning to hold a big race meet, Los Angeles has become such an important race center that motorcyclists are flocking here to take part in the many events planned.

There is a large force of men at work on the construction of the course, and grand stands, adequate for a crowd ofr 12,000, will be built.

There are several advantages which the Fiesta Park course will have over any other. It is closer to the center of town, and can be reached by several fast car lines. No one will be allowed inside the track when races are in progress.

The pine strips that are being used are surfaced, and the floor of the course is splinterless. This is an important item to cyclists, who have sustained severe falls on tracks, and are constantly in danger of suffering from serious accidents.

All riders on this course will use the protective helmet. This, it is claimed, has saved the lives of several riders, who otherwise might have been instantly killed.

There is every reason to believe that the Fiesta Park track will be exceedingly fast. Experts are carefully planning the banks of the course, and efforts are being made to eliminate possibility of danger to the riders.

SANE AUTO LAWS.

Five automobile measures are now before the Rhode Island Legislature through the efforts of the Rhode Island Automobile Club and the Rhode Island Motor League. The most important bill provides that no chauffeur or other person shall drive or operate any motor vehicle upon any public road or highway in Rhode Island in the absence of the owner of such motor vehicle without such owner's consent.

Thousand-Mile Race.

An important change has been made in the plans for the speedway at Indianapolis, Ind. The outer track is to be made two and one-half miles long and the inside loop track the same length, the original plans calling for an outer track of two miles while the inner track was to be three miles. It is believed that with the change to be made, greater speed can be attained. A national stripped stock car race of 1000 miles a day for ten days will probably be the first contest held on the track.

LOCO MAN CONFIDENT.

The dealers will turn out in force to watch the track battle which will be interesting from the snap of the pistol until the winning car crosses the tape. The 150-mile track struggle will be one of the fastest matches ever held in Los Angeles, as it will bring together two of the fastest cars in the West.

The Locomobile has a host of friends who expect Leavitt to carry off the honors. The car is being carefully prepared, and if preparation counts the Loco will not have any handicap when it starts at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

This course is well known to the Locomobile people. It was at Ascot only recently that the big car won a creditable victory in the twenty-four-hour race against a string of cars including the Pope-Hartford, Chalmers-Detroit, Sunset, Franklin, Studebaker and Reo.

The 150-mi race must be a flyer from the moment the cars leave the tape. There is no chance for loafing, and the Loco is to be kept bouncing every minute. There are to be no delays if the Loco camp can avoid them and the car will be kept humping and hiking along to victory if possible at a rapid pace.

ONE-EYED DRIVER.

The Locomobile has a string of victories behind it. It is fast and a consistent plugger. The Loco has the reputation for staying qualities which are dear to the autoist. It remains on the course and bumps along at a lively rate for mile after mile, reeling off a nice fat total.

In securing Murray Page as driver Leavitt has scored. Page is especially fitted for a circular track race. He has only one eye, but he uses that lone optic to better advantage than most men do their two eyes. Murray will be hard to beat as he never quits until the last few yards of the race have been run.

HOLLYWOOD AUTO CARNIVAL.

Fast Motor Cars Will Speed Over Two-Mile Stretch on Sunset Boulevard on May Day.

Motorists of Los Angeles are to take part in the Hollywood race tournament planned for May Day. The carnival of motor dashes will be held on the improved portion of Sunset boulevard leading into Hollywood.

There is a smooth stretch of level road, two miles in length, over which the racing motors can be speeded. There will be a chance to try for world straightaway records. The Reo Bird may lower several marks if it gets into action. Leon T. Shettler will enter the "Bird," and Harris Hanshue will drive.

The Chalmers-Detroit will probably be entered by the Western Motor Car Company, as Bert Dingley is soon to be brought south again to prepare for the July 4 road race. The "Bluebird" is one of the fast cars this year.

Among the probable entries are the Franklin, Marmon, Buick "White Streak," Pope-Hartford, Premier, Tourist and Stoddard-Dayton, as well as several others. These cars, with machines at Hollywood, should furnish some interesting sport.

A forty-horse-power car has been ordered by Atlantic City, N. J., for its fire chief. The car will be equipped with extinguishers, a fire bell, and a box at the rear for the chief's helmet and rubber coat, in addition to room for carrying axes and other fire-fighting apparatus.

Stretch at Hollywood, Where Automobile Races Will Be Held May 30. "Greyhound," with Ralph Hamlin and Leon T. Shettler, is being tried out over the fast course in preparation for the race.

INTO THE BLUE.

CLIMBING MILE HIGH ATTRACTS AUTOISTS.

AN AUTOMOBILE hill-climb with the finish a mile in the air, is the novel programme prepared by the motorists of Redlands for a race meet on Saturday afternoon. Los Angeles autoists will take part in the high climb.

The start will be from the Casa Loma Hotel in Redlands. The finish is on Oak Knoll, 5280 feet above sea-level. The route is sixteen miles long, and the grade at places is 12 per cent. The Redlands people promise to provide a real hill-climb.

For the first time local autoists have an opportunity to test their cars on a hill where it will be impossible to race to the summit without changing gears. It will be absolutely necessary to go into the gears on the run as there are several steep places which will test the mettle of every car in the climb.

Only stock cars, regularly equipped, are to be allowed to start in the first five events, and these must be owned by Redlands agents or must be Los Angeles cars with representation in Redlands.

The Franklin "Greyhound" will start in the free-for-all events with Tabasco II, and probably Fenner's White Steamer and Bill Ruess's Pope-Hartford. With the addition of one or two other cars in Redlands this should be one of the interesting events of the day.

There will be one or two Packards, a Pierce-Arrow, a Thomas and a Peerless from among the Redlands contingent. These big machines should give an interesting exhibition of speed on the long course.

In the smaller class there will be Cadillacs, Maxwells, Buicks, Jacksons, Stoddard-Daytons and Tourists. The races arranged for these cars will be as good as any during the day.

The rules will permit of only one car of any one model being entered in an event. The machines will make standing starts, and the driver must take his chance if he misses his gears. The entries will close on Wednesday at midnight. The entrance fee is $25, four-fifths to be returned if car starts.

The first race is for cars costing $500 or less. The second event is for cars from $501 to $1000. The $1500 and under class figure in the third race. The fourth event is for cars from $1501 to $2000, and the fifth race for $2001 and over cars.

The sixth event has been left open for all cars, with no restrictions. This will be the fast race of the day and will call out a number of speedy machines.

The starter will be G. A. Mansfield, and the judges H. D. Ryus, Edward Roberts and Frederic Pabst. The timers, W. D. Brookings, W. Burroughs, M. E. Ginn, C. Lukens, H. M. Barton and E. Wilshire.

Those who desire to enter cars can direct their entry blanks to E. S. Graham, president of the Mile-High Hill Climb Association, Redlands, or to Austin Park, the treasurer, or Leon Atwood, secretary. The association plans to make this climb an annual event.

TWENTY-TWOS.

SMALL CALIBER RIFLE GIVES GREAT SPORT.

WITH snipe the sole legitimate game left to interest the scatter-gun sportsmen, gunners are turning their attention to the small rifle in seeking companionship on occasional day's outings in the country. Ducks and quail are now prey of the past, and small game, as jack rabbits, cottontails and squirrels now claim the attention of shooters.

Only those who have taken a day's trip with a small caliber gun can appreciate the sport to be had. The cost of operating the 22-caliber gun is trifling compared to the expenditure necessary in shooting the shotgun, and the small rifle can be fed liberally all day for a small outlay.

Game for the .22 rifle is quite plentiful and near at hand. The ground squirrel affords the best of marks, and in fact it takes a goot bit of practice to bring down the furry fellows before they find safety in their holes. In some places the squirrels are more numerous than elsewhere, but a ride on any of the suburban car lines will carry the gunner to good squirrel country.

At this time of the year the squirrels are especially lively, making inroads on the freshly scattered grain, and storing up their feed for the summer and winter months. Toward Redondo in the great wheat fields stretching back from the Palos Verdes the little animals are thick as bugs at a prize fight, and a day's tramp in this region should furnish the expectant gunner unlimited sport.

Another pleasing variety of small rifle hunting is the pursuit of jackrabbits. Jacks can be shot on the run by capable marksmen, but it takes an experienced rifleman to secure many of the lively animals in this manner, and the beginner cannot hope to accomplish much at such a difficult game.

On a rabbit warren of which there are several in the near vicinity a good shot can secure a half dozen in an afternoon if conditions are right. The rabbits hole up at the approach of a man, but show unwonted curiosity generally and as a rule expose a pair of ears and a bright eye to draw the shot of the gunner.

Driving along a country road in the twilight the gunner can often get some ridiculously easy shots, as the rabbits feeding close by are seemingly unmindful of a passing team in contrast to their unusual alertness at the approach of a man. The best sport for the ordinary hunter is to be obtained in the washes of the dry streams of the county. Toward Puente Hills and the San Gabriel wash the animals are quite plentiful.

Blackbirds, crows, owls and linnets are all legitimate prey for the rifle, and the variety of sport is sufficient to tempt the ordinary gunner.

NEW YORK HAS GLIDDEN.

NEW YORK, March 20.—This city has been selected as the starting point for the Glidden tour this year. The date of the start, however, has not been selected, principally because the list of starters is not fully determined.

Preparations are being made by the Minnesota State Automobile Association for the publication of its annual route book, containing information as to routes, roads and hotels throughout the State.

"Auto Sparklets"

The past few days have brought to light much news of vital importance to our city. Following closely upon the heels of Mr. Harper's resignation, comes the news that the Stearns-Loco Race is on. At lahst, at lahst, our fondest hopes have been realized.

"To race or not to race," has been the teeter-word for the past two months.

The amount of money wagered by the agents of the two cars in question, is variously estimated from "four bits" to $.0000. All those vast sums of conversation money have failed to materialize, but as no one expected any other outcome of this fiasco, I do not see any reason for dwelling on the already over-ripe subject.

The sooner the race is over, the better. We only hope the loser will have the good taste to take his beating like a man, and as for the winner, I will see to it that he is not overlooked, as soon as I can get a "Jack Rabbit" from the factory.

"MONEY TALKS"

Our Millionaires have come to terms,
And laid their jaws in rest;
Two months or so, they each have claimed
That THEIR car is the best.

They each contracted writer's cramp,
Had trouble in the throat.
And then, in turn, each man would steal
The other fellow's goat.

I swear I never saw such sports,—
To hear their talk was funny,
Until they started in to bet
Their "conversation money."

We don't see why it took so long
To make a little bet;
We're mighty glad the trouble's o'er,
Or they'd be talking yet.

LANKERSHIM "FEELS RACY."

Residents of Suburb Make Fair Proposal.

Dealers May Consider Fernando Road Course.

Six Thousand Must Be Spent to Make It Right.

Citizens of Lankershim have invited the Automobile Dealers' Association to hold the Fourth of July road race on the San Fernando road course. A delegation of the residents of Lankershim, with Leon T. Shettler and Ralph Hamlin of the Dealers' Committee, went over the course on Wednesday.

Fred Weddington and R. Gwynn of Lankershim, with John Lankershim, went to Burbank and consulted with residents there. They found the sentiment favorable for a big race. The course will lend itself to such a contest, as it will be easily guarded. There are few residences along the twelve-mile stretch over which the cars will be speeded.

It will be necessary to spend at least $6000 on the course to get it into shape for racing. There are several miles where a road must be built before the cars can go at top speed. The curve leading into the San Fernando road, which will be the principal stretch, will have to be leveled, rolled, oiled and slightly banked. This will take at least $2000.

MANY SPECTATORS.

Should the San Fernando road course be chosen it will be with the idea of holding the race on the road for the next five years. In that way the dealers could hope to reap some return from the money expended.

Shettler is of the opinion that the road race this year would be a paying affair. He stated yesterday that it will be possible to reap $10,000 from the race. This should more than cover the expenses which, according to Shettler's estimate, should be about $7500, which should cover the cost of building grand stands and reserving an inclosure for parking space.

There would be, it is estimated, at least 20,000 spectators on the San Fernando road course. They would be brought there largely by the Southern Pacific trains which stop at Roscoe, where the grand stands would be built.

The road could be used for practice purposes for at least a month before the big race, and the cars could hum over the course without danger to residents, as the few places where there are houses could be guarded.

One of the obstacles is that the coast line tracks of the Southern Pacific cross the northern leg of the course. It would be necessary to keep a flagman constantly at this crossing, and the race would have to be timed to railroad schedule in order to avoid a dangerous collision.

The start would be at Roscoe on the San Fernando road. There is a stretch of four miles along which the cars could be watched by spectators in the grand stand as they hummed along.

The distance which the committee favors is 300 miles. The course will probably be chosen within the next two weeks, as the time is growing short. It would take at least a month to put the San Fernando course into shape.

Ralph Hamlin still holds out for the Santa Monica course, which has many advantages. Hamlin believes that a far greater number of people would see the race at Santa Monica than on the San Fernando road stretch.

William Ruess, the third member of the committee, is looking for a course which he will submit. He favors a twenty-mile run.

Robert Atkinson, of the Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Car Company, has arranged to enter a Premier car in the race. He asks that a Technical Committee be appointed by the dealers to look over every car. He urges that the race be strictly for stock cars with local drivers up.

The Premier car which Atkinson is to enter will be shipped from the factory within a short time. Louis Schwaebe is now in the East and in a telegram to Atkinson yesterday he told of the plans of the Premier people to hurry the car out here in time for the big event.

There are a number of dealers who are anxious that a light car race shall be held as a preliminary to the big event. There would be more than a dozen entries in this race and it would undoubtedly prove an attractive feature.

BOWLING SCORES.

High scores rolled on Morley's Spring-street alleys during the week were:

ACTION POSTPONED IN AERIAL RESEARCH.

On account of the failure of Congress to appropriate money for the purpose of conducting experiments in military aëronautics this year, the War Department of the United States has found it necessary to take no action on the invitation of the Aëro Club of Southern California to place at the disposal of the army its equipment and services for experimenting in Southern California.

J. S. Zerbe, president of the Aëro Club of California, received the following letter in answer to the invitation of the club sent to the War Department:

"WAR DEPARTMENT.

"Washington, March 11, 1909.

"The President of the Aëro Club of California, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge your letter of the 3rd inst. addressed to the Honorable Secretary of War and forwarded to this office, which is charged with the subject of military aëronautics.

"In reply I have to thank you for the club's offer of its services to the War Department in conducting aërial experiments.

"The unfavorable action of Congress on the appropriation asked for this year for developing military aëronautics, necessitates suspending work along this line for at least another year. As the matter now stands there will be no funds available during the fiscal year 1909-1910.

"Should Congress change its views and pass an appropriation next winter, it will be possible to resume this work in July, 1910, and it is hoped to place the United States on an equal footing with European nations in aërial warfare.

"Very respectfully,

[Signed] "JAMES ALLEN,

"Brigadier-General, Chief Signal Officer of the Army."

Although the local club is disappointed on account of the lack of possible action to promote government aëronautic experiments in this city, it is encouraged by the courteous acknowledgment of its letter. The favorable climatic conditions in Southern California and the activity of the local club makes it probable that the time is not far distant when the War Department will conduct aërial experiments here.

The Aëro Club is to hold a meeting at its headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night for the purpose of making the final arrangements for the aëronautic exhibition to be the opening attraction at the new Fiesta Stadium about the middle of April. Several committees will be appointed to carry out the plans that will be arranged and it is expected that the show will be a signal success.

MAKE GOOD TIME.

BERKELEY, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The annual interclass field day of the University of California was won this afternoon by the seniors with a score of 44. The sophomores made 30 points, the freshmen 25, and juniors 18.

The day was cold and windy and hampered the men considerably, although good times were made in the two-mile, high, and low hurdles. Martin, a freshman, took the long distance race in 10m. 14s. Capt. Cowles equaled the intercollegiate record of 15 4-5s. in the high hurdles, and Edwards of Santa Barbara took the low in 25 4-5s., this being considered very good time for the narrow and curved California track. H. Johns fell on the last hurdle and did not place. The results follow:

The 100-yard dash—Won by W. R. Johns (J.,) Allen (F.,) second; Crossfield (J.,) third; time 10 2-5s.

Mile run—Won by T. Smith (So.;) Erskine (S.,) second; Boydson (So.,) third; time 4m. 41s.

The 120-yard hurdles—Won by Cowles (S.;) H. Johns (J.,) second; Donald (So.,) third; time 15 4-5s.

The 440-yard dash—Won by Cheney (S.;) Dozier (S.,) second; Beckett (S.,) third; time 53 2-5s.

Two-mile run—Won by Martin (F.;) Goldman (S.,) second; Gaines (S.,) third; time 10m. 14s.

The 220-yard dash—Won by W. R. Johnson (S.;) Donald (So.,) second; Kretsinger (So.,) third; time 23 2-5s.

The 220-yard low hurdles—Won by Edwards (J.;) Grubb (So.,) second; Wallace (F.,) third; time 25 4-5s.

The 880-yard run—Won by E. F. Smith (S.;) Kelly (F.,) second; Saxon (F.,) third; time 2m. 41-5s.

Hammer throw—Won by Munn (So.;) Gobert (F.,) second; Sturtevant (F.,) third; distance 137ft. 9½in. Second distance was 135ft. 8in.

Shot-put—Won by Dignan (J.;) Munn (So.,) second; Harold (F.,) third; distance 39ft. 7in.

Broad jump—Won by Kretsinger (So.;) Rathbone (F.,) second; Chapman (So.,) third; distance 21ft. 8in.

High jump—Won by Bull (J.;) Stout (S.) and Taylor (F.) tied for second; height 5ft. 11in.

Pole-vault—Undecided.

Relay five men running—Won by seniors; sophomores, second; freshmen, third; time 3m. 27 1-5s.

PEERLESS CARS BUMP THE BUMPS.

STAUB'S WORD LAW AT HIGH-CLASS FACTORY.

H. O. Harrison Returns from East and Tells of Testing Tour With Motor Car Expert—Peerless Factory Contracts for Entire Year's Output—Prospects Good.

When the last word in the construction department at the Peerless factory is said, William Staub, one of the most expert autoists in this country, must utter it. Before the car is turned over to the finishers Staub must pass on its fitness. His eagle eye must detect possible flaws.

Because he is a noser out of weak places Staub has been chosen to put the Peerless machines through their paces. In the gruelling tests to which the cars are subjected Staub is always at the wheel.

When it is necessary to bounce a car over the roads at from sixty to seventy miles an hour Staub is chosen for the job. He is impassive, has nerves of steel and never shows the white feather. When he passes on a car it must be fit, as it has withstood a most severe test.

H. O. Harrison, Peerless agent, returned from the factory Thursday, after an absence of several weeks. He rode with Staub on one of the testing tours, and his experiences were thrilling.

"It seems scarcely possible," said Harrison, when speaking of the test run, "that steel and wood can stand the strain to which the Peerless cars are put. They come out of a crucible where weak spots, if they exist, are certainly discovered. Then when the car makes good it is given to the men who put on the finishing touches, and still another tester must pass on the machine before it goes to the agent."

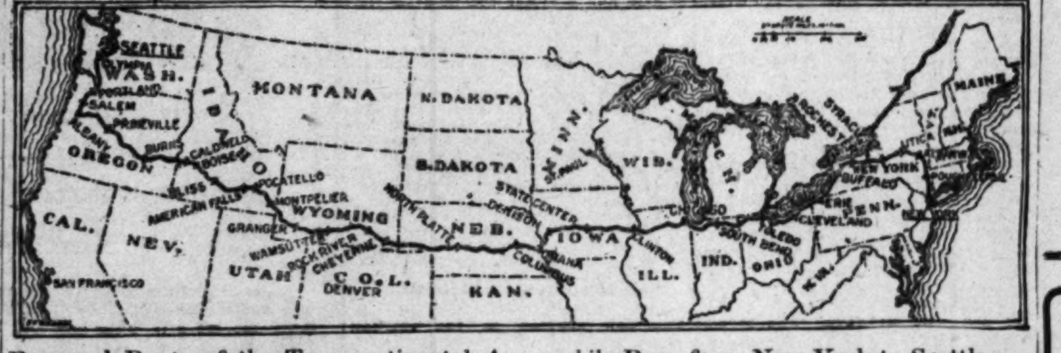
While he was in the East Harrison passed ten days at the factory watching the work of constructing Peerless cars. He was given an insight into the methods of the factory people, who are preparing the big cars to be shipped all over the country.

He secured an allotment of twenty-nine Peerless cars for this city in 1910. These are to be shipped to him from time to time as they are gotten ready. He must take his turn, however, with scores of other agents who are clamoring for cars.

According to Harrison, the outlook in the East is encouraging. The Peerless people already have contracted for every car they can make next year. The entire output this year is already sold.

This is the case with a number of other factories and the demand for automobiles promises to be greater than ever.

William Staub, Expert at Peerless Factory, who bounces the new cars over the roughest roads in search of weak spots. This keen-eyed searcher for flaws is the last word in construction before the finishers take a hand.



Proposed Route of the Transcontinental Automobile Race from New York to Seattle, which will start from the Empire City the latter part of May. The cars will pass over some of the worst roads in the United States.

BRIGHT SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

A motor police patrol wagon will soon be put into service in Philadelphia. Others will follow in event the experiment proves a success, which is not doubted.

As a result of the industrial motor trials, lasting twelve months, in Paris, a French automobile manufacturer has been given an order for 250 vehicles at a cost of more than $900,000.

The Manitoba Motor League has arranged with the Provincial Legislature so that it may affix road signs on telephone poles, thereby saving the expense of erecting posts.

Chicago now has fourteen motor vehicles engaged in municipal service, one of which has traveled 97,000 miles in two years, while another has covered 52,000 miles in a single year.

New York-to-Paris Racer, Which Won the Round-the-World Auto Contest, Leaves for Seattle.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Thomas car which will act as pathfinder for the international transcontinental automobile contest for the M. Robert Guggenheim trophy, from this city to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition on June 15, started for Seattle from the City Hall this noon.

The Thomas pathfinder is the car which won the New York to Paris race last year and George Miller, who acted as mechanician in that event, will drive to Seattle. The crew took with them a letter of felicitation from Mayor McClellan to the Mayor of Seattle.

Besides Miller the crew consists of L. W. Reddington, C. Exton and J. S. M. Eley. It is expected the trip will take about forty days.

NEWMIRE BEATEN.

H. Gower of U.S.C. caused consternation in the grand stand by stealing first place from Newmire in the half-mile in one of the prettiest races of the day. Bonner of Occidental had the pole and got a good start. Carver was second and Newmire was third,, as they raced through the gate and disappeared behind the building. As the bunch emerged from the opposite gate, Newmire was in the lead by five yards, with Carver second and Bonnel third. The first lap was covered by Newmire in 57s., and as the field passed the bleachers Gower began closing the gap, passing Bonner and Carver before he got to the gate again.

As the bunch came through the second gate for the last time, Newmire and Gower were running side by side, with Carver ten yards to the rear, and O'Brien and Bonner still farther behind. The two Methodists ran neck and neck to the last fifty yards, when Gower let out his reserve and passed Newmire, winning by five yards. Carver was three yards behind Newmire. The time was 2m. 4 1-5s.

Pomona took all the points in the two-mile event, Sturgis, Lorbee and Rau finishing in the order named, yards ahead of Montgomery of Occidental. The event was uninteresting till the last lap, when Montgomery sprinted in a supreme effort to pass Rau, and causing Lorbeer and Sturges to let out more speed as they came down the stretch.

Sturges took the pole on the third lap, with Lorbeer, Rau, Montgomery and White strung out behind. On each lap Sturges increased his lead till the final 100 yards, when the Occidental grinder spurted, but failed to get in the point.

GREAT RELAY.

The relay furnished the most sensational race of the meet, Lennox winning the last lap from Baer by the safe margin of seven yards from Rush of Occidental with Sloane a five yards to the rear. The feature of the race was the performance of Baer, who gained ten yards on Reed in the third lap, passing Carver of Pomona, and giving the second position to Rush for the last lap but five yards behind Lennox.

Roberts, Newmire and Case ran the first lap, Newmire beating Case fifteen yards to the tape, with Roberts another fifteen yards behind Case. It looked like a walkaway for the Methodists, and Burek, O'Brien and Conrad finished the second lap about the same distance apart. Baer of Occidental got the pass from Conrad, and tore like a flash after the receding Carver. The Occidental runner passed the Pomona third lapper just as he passed through the far gate, and with great strides began to eat up the intervening distance of twenty yards to Reed, the 'varsity runner. Baer ran well, and was but seven yards behind Reed as he gave the pass to Rush.

Lennox was too fast for the speedy Rush, however, and although Rush made up perhaps two yards on the back stretch he was unable to further cut down the lead of the lengthy Methodist captain, and Lennox finished strong five yards ahead of Rush, with Sloane a like distance behind Rush. The time was 3m. 36s.

FIELD EVENTS.

Burek won the first of the field events from Thomson after the Presbyterian had made the best mark in the qualifying trials of 121 ft. On the third trial in the finals Burek threw the missile 122 ft. 10 in., snatching the honors from Thomson who was unable to surpass his qualifying mark. Richardson was third with a mark of 115 ft., Renneker and Clark failing to qualify. The throwers had much trouble with the big ball, Conrad once letting the weight slip when he had made but half his third turn, the ball flying just over the heads of several of the judges.

The shot put furnished a great exhibition with Trotter and Thomson both putting the weight over forty-two feet. Trotter on his first effort hurled the weighty sphere 42 ft. 1½ in., with Thomson making a mark of 41 ft. and Clark of Pomona third with 39 ft. Conrad and "Big" Renneker failed to qualify after three attempts, and Trotter, Thomson and Clark finished in the same order as in the semi-finals, Trotter's best mark being 43 ft. 2 in., Thomson making 42 ft. 7½ in.

Murray took the high jump for the Methodists after a drawn out struggle. Murray, Lorbeer of Pomona and Gordon of Occidental were tied for first place at 5 ft. 8 in. for three trials. The judges gave each of the three contestants three more trials, the winner to take the event in the smallest number of trials. Murray took the bar clearly on his second attempt. Gordon topping the height on his third try and Lorbeer failing to jump over the bar until his fourth trial.

Richardson annexed the pole vault at 11 ft., winning from Seward and Pierce of Pomona in a hotly contested struggle. Carus dropped out of the running at 10 ft. 6 in., and Pierce failed to get higher than 10 ft. 9 in. On the last trial of the final Richardson cleared eleven feet, beating Seward by one inch for the first honors.

Capt. Sloane captured the broad event easily, winning by a margin of six inches from Thomson of Occidental. Goodsell of U.S.C. finished third with a mark of 20 ft. 2½ in. Martin of U.S.C. was the fourth man to qualify, and cleared 19 ft. 9 in.

'VARSITY SHELL SPLITS.

Rowers Thrown Into Water and One Nearly Drowned Because He Is Unable to Swim.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, March 19.—Leslie Robertson, a member of the freshmen boat crew of the University of California, was nearly drowned late this afternoon in the estuary, as a result of a shell boat, recently purchased from Cornell University, splitting open and throwing the entire team into the water.

Robertson was the only one of the nine men in the boat who was unable to swim. He floundered in the water for a moment and then sank. W. S. Hager, one of the crew, rescued the drowning man after he had disappeared twice and held him above the water until the coaching launch arrived and took the crew aboard.

Just what the cause of the accident was is not known except that the boat was not waterworthy. It was purchased from Cornell University recently at a price of $200 and was thought to be not only staunch but strictly modern. It suddenly separated while the eight oarsmen were bending all their efforts to secure speed.

The Origin of Woman.

Man still carries the original number of ribs, but he is short of a lung lobe. Where did he lose it? Eve got it. Man's right lung today consists of three lobes, man's left lung today consists of two lobes. Let us consider the missing lobe on the left. The lungs, mind you, are the life. Eve was made out of Adam's third lung lobe on the left, the lobe nearest the heart. She was constructed out of wind, mostly. That is, she took part of Adam's breath away. Adam's posterity of the male persuasion in these later days can count on only five lobes to both lungs; while Eve's daughters can count on seven; which accounts for woman having the last word in a controversy.—[New York Press.

Arabia's Good Climate.

Of Arabia's climate a writer says: "The desert air is extremely dry and clear, always invigorating, and even the great heat in summer is not as insupportable as in a damper climate where the thermometer is probably lower. Climate has, without doubt, a great effect an the human character and intellect and the nervous, high-strung temperament of the Arab is to a great extent the creation of his environment of desert, with its splendid mirages to fire the imagination and sparkling air to keep the nerves always alert."—[Exchange.

WILL NOT STOP.

ANOTHER EASY SOX VICTORY.

Defeat Los Angeles Team by Lop-Sided Score.

Winners Give Fans Chance to See Hard Slugging.

Locals Help Along Big Score by Eight Errors.

White Sox, 10; Los Angeles, 2.

The Sox showed yesterday that they do not have to make twelve runs in every game they play in this end of the State, for they got but ten. This might be due to the fact that Catcher Sullivan said before the game that it would be a good scheme to can some of those extra runs this winter when the crop was heavy and easy to pick, so that a few cans could be opened next summer about August and some runs dished out for Detroit and other teams 'way down East.

It was the kind of a game that the grand jury might look into, but not at, and the proper way to tell about it is in that funny sign language that is three-fourths fingers and one-fourth grunt. The less noise you make about it the bigger hit you will make. It was like the private lives of many prominent men.

The Sox simply pulverized Tozer, making seven swats in the fifth inning alone and with some of the locals trying to play ball arrayed in gum boots and boxing gloves, it is a wonder that the Sox did not make seventy runs, and they probably would have done that easily if the locals had scored sixty-nine. Every one of the Sox in the game made a run except Smith and Dougherty. Smith had but one chance and flew out, and Dougherty, batting for Sutor, had no chance because he was passed and died on base.

MORE HARD HITTING.

The thumb-nail history of the game is that the Sox made one triple, two doubles and thirteen singles, while the locals were piling up eight errors. No one who knows as much about a ball game as Happy Hogan's dog should ask any more, but for those that must be shown it is recounted that the first Sox run came from Sullivan's triple over first and Hahn's single. The next two were due to two singles, two steals and Delmas's juggle and wild throw past first base.

In the fifth two doubles, five singles, two passes and errors by Ellis, Daley and Dillon made seven runs and the Sox seemed to quit then from that tired feeling that the patent medicine factories tell us we have in the good old summertime. In this fifth inning Cravath made two singles, not by using two bats at once, but in going to bat twice, eleven men facing Tozer in that round. Tozer was kindly put on the bench after this fearful inning and Briswalter went in for the last four innings and kept the Sox from making more runs.

Sutor heaved for the Sox for five innings and but four of the locals reached second base. Smith replaced him in the sixth and the locals went to the eighth inning before they got their first run, which resulted from Godwin's double over third base, Ellis's out and Dillon's hit to center. Two more came in the ninth from two singles, a pass, a muffed throw by Parent and an out.

There were very few fielding features, the only real one being a fine running assist by Parent back of the pitcher's box in the first inning. Other good ones were Mattick's running catch of Ellis's fly in the fourth and Dillon's running catch of Atz's foul fly near the players' bench in the third inning.

A good-sized crowd saw the game, but it was not of absorbing interest, owing to the lop-sided score. The result:

BANKERS STUNG.

SAINTS HIT HEAVILY.

St. Vincent's defeated the First National Bank baseball team by the big score of 14 to 2, on the St. Vincent's campus yesterday afternoon.

In the second inning the Saints encouraged the money handlers by letting them make two runs on wild throws. The Bankers have the making of a very good team, their outfield displaying much skill in handling the many flys sent them by the husky St. Vincent's batters. Their poor showing yesterday may be attributed to their lack of practice, as this was their first game of the season.

Shute and West were absent from the Saints' team, and their places were filled by Kennedy and Buckles.

The Bankers' pitcher was easy for the Saints, as the latter made fifteen hits off of him. Score:

CUB SAINTS LOSE.

DUBOIS PITCHES FINE GAME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Santa Ana High School baseball team more than evened its record with St. Vincent's "preps" of Los Angeles this afternoon by defeating them 5 to 0. Two weeks ago the Saints won in a ten-inning game by 4 to 3, and the Santa Ana team came home sore on account of alleged unfair treatment in beating of cans, ringing of bells, and throwing dust from the side lines.

Believing they could beat St. Vincent's if there was no interference of either side, the Santa Ana team today prohibited any one leaving the bleachers until the game was finished.

The game was closer than the score indicates. Twice the Saints had the bases full but could not score. Santa Ana scored three in the second and two in the seventh. In the second Tedford hit, Dubois walked, and Phoenix got to first on an error by Hickson, while Tedford came home. A ball passed catcher and Dubois scored. Phoenix scored on Head's two-bagger. In the seventh Vanderlip and Head scored on a poor throw by L. Couts to first, which O'Brien missed. In the third the Saints were in a fair way to score when a triple play was executed by Santa Ana, Pitcher Dubois catching a fly and throwing to third where Walbridge got two men.

In the sixth, with Hickson, Murray and O'Brien on bases, Swenson sent a long fly to center which was caught by Vawter and the third out made. Dubois pitched one of the best games he has ever put up.

DIAMOND WORK BEGINS EARLY.

U.S.C. BASEBALL MEN TO DO PRELIMINARY STUNTS.

Good New Material for Winning Team Despite the Loss of Such Men as Shute, Bridwell and Richardson—Battery Positions Especially Strong—Other Places.

Baseball candidates for the University of Southern California team will begin active practice of a few days prior to the spring vacation which is to begin next Friday. Immediately following the holidays the team will open a series of practice games in preparation for the intercollegiate contests.

Material is plentiful for the diamond squad this season, and the competition should be keen. The team will lose several stars of last year's aggregation, Bridwell, Shute and Richardson being the principal absentees, but a majority of the winning nine of last season will be on hand.

For the battery positions the new squad seems especially favored. Both the pitching and catching staffs will have players of excellent ability, and if the fielders' places are filled with as good players the team will be one of the best the 'varsity has ever produced. Crossman, Trotter, Burek, Hatch and Henderson are the stars available for the battery berths.

Both Burek and Trotter averaged well over the .300 mark in batting percentage last season, and next to Bridwell and Richardson were the most consistent stickers on the squad. Trotter played in the outfield last year, but he will undoubtedly break into the pitchers' ranks this season as he is twirling with great speed in practice and next to Crossman, appears to have the best chance to occupy the box. The Santa Paula boy has shown a variety of curves, and with a few weeks of practice should get the necessary control.

THE PITCHERS.

Crossman as runner-up to Bridwell last year, stands first in the row of candidates for pitcher. Although small of stature, he possesses speed and endurance, and made good in several important games in the 'varsity schedule last year. He is Cromwell's first choice for the slab.

Bill Hatch and Henderson are both prominent candidates for the catcher's position, and both have had considerable experience. Hatch played summer ball with the Rivera team for two seasons, and is considered one of the best amateur backstops in the South.

Henderson played in a number of the intercollegiate contests of last year and made good in every game. He possesses a reliable wing, and in a tight place may be counted on to play the game right. He bats about .250, and is fast at running the bases. He is at present in better form than either Burek or Hatch, and stands a good chance to get in the early season games at least.

Burek was ranked the leading catcher of the South in intercollegiate circles last season, and at the close of the season received a flattering offer to enter professional ball. He chose to graduate first, however, and will captain the 'varsity for the second season this year. He may break into the pitchers' ranks if necessary, and if he can acquire sufficient control will make good, for he has a good assortment of curves and plenty of speed.

"Bonehead" Cooney, the find of the season last year, seems the most likely candidate for the initial bag. He has a batting average above .260, and a fielding per cent. close to .960. Hatch has also had a good bit of experience at first base, and with Henderson and Burek making such a strong bid for backstop work, he will likely push Cooney for the first bag position.

SHUTE IS MISSED.

Shute, the 'varsity second baseman of last year, will be missed, but Fraser, the crack second baseman of Long Beach High School team will try for the vacant position. Steve Clark is also out for the second bag berth, and thinks he has a cinch on the place, owing to the fact he has been trying for 'varsity positions for four years. Clark's principal failing is a tendency to take a trip over the balloon route at critical moments, and this unfortunate characteristic has kept him on the reserve bench during three years of his collegiate course.

For shortstop, two good men are mentioned for the place, H. Gower, the 'varsity half-miler, who played three years with the Hollywood High School at shortstop, and Gates.

"Teeney" Wirsching, who has played third base for three years, is again on hand to try for his favorite camping ground, and he seems so far to have first call for the place. Hall, who batted a shade over .300 last year, may come in from the field to try for the place, but he will have to move lively to grab the honors. Wirsching is a live wire, and is always in the game.

For the field positions a number of good candidates are busy at practice. "Sousa" Coloneus, Wallace, Thornton, Hackett and Malcome are the more experienced of the field squad, and it is likely the three positions will be filled with selections from this bunch. Coloneus, Wallace and Hackett are the live ones, and will be given first chance to play the position.

ARE GOING NORTH.

SAINTS HOPE TO WIN.

The St. Vincent's baseball team leave for the north Monday afternoon to play their northern series with Berkeley, Stanford and Santa Clara. The Saints feel confident of taking three out of the five games scheduled. They have improved a great deal in hitting and base running since they played Stanford and Berkeley here. Shute, Workman and West are leading the team in batting and Shute by far leads in base stealing.

It was thought for awhile that O'Connor would not be able to play in any of the games up north, but his finger has been improving rapidly in the last week and it is thought by Coach Moores that he will be able, if necessary, to take part in some of the games. Davisson nad West will do the catching for the Saints. Both catchers have showed up well in the last two weeks and are expected to play good ball. Davisson will work with Buckles and West with French.

The team has been much crippled the last week in practice from the loss of Capt. Ybarrondo and First Baseman Workman from illness, but both will be able to accompany the team north.

The games which the Saints expect to be the hardest of all are those with Santa Clara, which has beaten Stanford and has also held the White Sox No. 1 down to a score of 3 to 0. As one of these games is to be played at San Francisco, the Saints hope to win this one as it is on neutral grounds.

Those who are to take the trip are: Buckles and French, pitchers; Davisson and O'Conner, catchers; Workman, first base; Shute, second base; Sullivan, third base; Ybarrondo, shortstop; Callahan, left field; Griff Kennedy, center field; West, right field, and Gerald Kennedy, substitute.

TWO SUNDAY GAMES.

VERNONS WILL TRY AGAIN.

The Sox will take another whirl at the Vernon team this morning at the Vernon grounds, the game to begin at 10:30 o'clock. Happy Hogan has been putting his men through strenuous practice this week and expects to beat the Sox, but great expectations have been dashed before.

The Los Angeles team will meet the Sox at Chutes Park this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Hosp will probably pitch for the locals.

NADZU WINNER OF LONG RACE.

THORNTON STAKES RUN OVER A DRY TRACK.

Four-Mile Contest Witnessed by Twelve Thousand Persons—Rain Falls After the Feature Event Is Completed—Time Does Not Equal That Made at Los Angeles.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, March 20.—Nadzu, the clever son of Lodowic in the stable of H. G. Bedwell, won the Thornton stakes at four miles in easy style at Emeryville today, finishing thirty lengths in front of Orcagna with Mendon a distant third.

The long-distance event was run in the presence of over 12,000 persons, and was over a dry track. Cloudy weather prevailed and rain fell after the stake was decided.

A field of six went to the post. Milford went to the front soon after the start and led for two miles when Nadzu assumed command. After that the Bedwell horse drew away and won as he pleased.

Milford tired badly, Orcagna moved up the last mile and ran into second place.

The winner's share of the stake was $5030.

Results:

Thornton stakes, four miles, $5030 to winner: Nadzu, 105 (Toplin,) won; Orcagna, 97 (Coburn,) second; Mendon, 97 (C. Miller,) third; time 7:18 4-5. Milford, Cloyne and Benvolio also ran.

Mile and seventy yards, selling: Erbet, 86 (Glass,) won; Barney Oldfield, 107 (Archibald,) second; The Peer, 97 (Deverich,) third; time 1:45½. Ocean Queen, Red Leaf, Capt. Kennedy, Joe Rose, Don Enrique, Cadichon and Earl Rogers also ran.

Six furlongs, Tyler Handicap: Cloudlight, 98 (Deverich,) won; Julia Powell, 99 (Walsh,) second; Jacobite, 102 (Ross,) third; time 1:13 1-5. Jeanne d'Arc, Blagg, Madman, Pio Pico, El Paso and Hector alos ran.

Six furlongs: Pills, 86 (Glass,) won; Hush Money, 104 (Clark,) second; Curriculum, 108 (Archibald,) third; time 1:15 1-5. Cleopat, Yank, Billy Bowlegs, Deneen, Givonni Balerio, Romaine, Black Domino, Zick Abrams and Royal N. also ran.

Four furlongs, purse: Elfin Beau, 107 (Lee,) won; Eddie Graney, 96 (Walsh,) second; Quality Street, 107 (Sandy,) third; time 0:49. Follie Levy, Purer, Roberta, Sainotta, Garnicht, Mary Deese, Creuse and Maternus also ran.

Six furlongs, selling: Anna L. Daley, 93 (Deverich,) won; Antigo, 112 (Archibald,) second; Belle Kinney, 109 (Mentry,) third; time 1:14 2-5. May Amelia, Osorine, Please, Procla, Adena, Fireball, Phalanx and Buna also ran.

PROMISES VETO.

NO RACES IN COLORADO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER (Colo. March 20.—Whatever hopes some people may have had that horse racing and bookmaking would be legalized in Colorado have been blasted by Gov. Shafroth.

The Governor has emphatically stated to several persons who have sounded him on the subject that no matter what bill legalizing race-track gambling is passed, it will be vetoed by him.

So plain did the Governor make himself on this point that a bill introduced in the House will never come out of committee.

The bill in question permits racing and betting at any fair or association exhibiting stock and produce.

AGAINST BAKERSFIELD.

Long Beach High School Girls' Basketball Team to Meet Northern Champions.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 20.—The girls' basketball team of the local High School is to play Long Beach High here next Saturday afternoon. The girls are expecting a hard contest and have been practicing faithfully for the game.

The Bakersfield team is the champion of the San Joaquin Valley and has not lost a game in two years. The hardest games this season were won from Fresno, Selma, Visalia, Tulare, Hanford and Porterville. The girls as well as Long Beach are now trying for the State championship.

Prof. Gainro of the High School has been coaching the team. Mollie Harris and Ysabel Forker play well together at center. The guards, Clara Bender and Elsie Slater, are considered by many to be the best in this section of the State. Katie Grenville and Ardis Hare play a fast game at forward. Miss Grenville is especially good at throwing baskets from most any angle. Miss Hare is good in the field work and in progressing the ball.

SPORT AT RIVERSIDE.

Driving Club Gives Very Successful Matinee Which Is Witnessed by Fair-Sized Crowd.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, March 20.—The Riverside Driving Club held a successful St. Patrick's Day matinée on the local track. The course was fast, and several hundred spectators witnessed the events. The results:

Mile race, for horse traveling nearest to three minutes: Dedrich (Parker,) won; time 2:58; Margeta Wilkes (Nelson,) second; time 2:57; Hy Yu (Kelley,) third; time 2:46.

Racing, mile dash: Wayne C. (Judd,) won; Andy Carnegie (Bonnell,) second; time 2:25.

Trotting, 2:30 class: Tom McKinney (Miller,) won; Dedrich (Parker,) second; Lola Bell (Fotter,) third; time 2:26½.

Mixed, 2:40 class: Teddy Roosevelt (Parker,) won; Ira (Beatty,) second; On Conn (Kelley,) third; time 2:31¼.

Pacing, 2:30 class: Buena (Backstrand,) won; Adalantha (Bonnell,) second; time 2:27. Monk scratched in second heat.

The officials were: H. G. Stanley, starter; Jack Thompson, Dr. T. I. Fletcher, Thomas Holmes and G. W. Prescott, judges; W. L. Scott, P. M. Coburn and W. A. Hayt, timers, and F. P. Ogden, clerk of the course.

Entries for Derby.

NEW YORK, March 20.—For the so-called Marathon derby, which will be held at the Polo Grounds in the upper part of New York on April 3, five entries have already been received. They include Longboat, the Canadian Indian; Johnny Hayes, the Olympic Marathon winner; Alfred Shrubb, the English champion; Dorando Pietri, the Italian runner, and Henri St. Yves, the French runner, who has just arrived in this country.

An outgrowth of the local automobile show is a four-day endurance run that will be given by the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association April 27 to 30. A day's mileage under the schedule will be from 100 miles up and suitable prizes will be awarded.

ANGLING.

SURF FISHING IS IMPROVING.

EARLY SEASON SPORT BETTER THAN EXPECTED.

Long Wharf and Santa Monica Furnish Good Baskets—Pompano Have Been Running at Playa Del Rey and Ocean Park—Bass and Jacksmelt Seem Plentiful.

The beach casters have enjoyed mid-season sport with the gamey surf fish the last week, and the fishing has been good all along the West Coast shore. Particularly productive has been the sport between the Long Wharf and Santa Monica, where some very fair catches have been made.

Harry Magoffin, Charles Grace and Pete Richards fished from the beach about midway between the wharf and Santa Monica, and the trio caught a nice mess of fourteen surf, averaging two and one-half pounds apiece. A strong wind was blowing from the northwest, and the surf was quite heavy, but the fish took the hook greedily.

Buck Horton and M. J. Graney, both experienced good luck with surf on the north beach, Horton bringing in four three-pounders, and his companions catching three not quite so large. The boys used clam bait, and made the catch in a little more than an hour.

At the long wharf fishing has improved a bit during the last week, with good catches reported of jack smelt, halibut and bass. The smelt have been especially numerous, and some very good catches, varying from ten to sixteen smelts, have been made. Monday George Merriam, Jim White and M. Tompkins fished about midway off the north side of the wharf, and caught a total of twenty-five smelt in two hours.

Bass, sheepshead and mackerel are also caught occasionally from the outer end of the wharf. The big fish feed regularly on the mussels on the piling, and those of the visiting fishermen who care to risk a ducking can get good sport fishing from the stringers underneath the wharf.

At Playa del Rey and Ocean Park pompano have been running quite strong the latter part of the week, and several creditable catches were reported from Ocean Park. This palatable fish is eagerly sought by the local fishermen, and although the pompano is not as gamey as other varieties, it is by far the best eating of the small fry.

Surf are still running at intervals at the southern points, although the catches have been scattering, and many of the visiting fishermen have been unfortunate in fishing at unfavorable times. Huntington Beach, Sunset Beach and Anaheim Landing have been the most frequented points, and catches averaging from three to a half-dozen fish have been the rule.

A few bass are to be had at Balboa, and quite a few catches have been made by fishermen from the bay points. On the outside, mackerel and jewfish are the extremes to be found, with smelt running closer in.

TO SAVE TIME.

The majority of strainers supplied to motorists, whether they be for filling gasoline tanks or lubricating tanks, are made on an extremely wrong principle, according to an expert motorist. It will be found that with most of them one can pour in the liquid much more quickly than it will run out, so that one has to stop pouring to avoid waste and mess. This is sometimes due to the smallness of the outlet, but it is very much more often because the gauze strainer is of such small area. The fineness of the gauze is not referred to, for if the area of the strainer is large enough one can pour in gasoline through an ordinary fine mesh without the least accumulation of the liquid upon the top of the gauze.

ROAD SIGNS.

The Automobile Club of California has completed the erecting of road signs in Contra Costa county and part of San Joaquin, Stanislaus and Fresno counties. The club has posted 1200 miles of road within a radius of 250 miles from San Francisco.

Taxicabs to Aid.

The British War Office, which recently conducted successful experiments in transporting troops in motor buses, is negotiating for the use of the taxicabs in time of national danger. Already the government has subsidized 2000, and it hopes to increase the number under subsidy of 4000 within the next few months, the proprietors receiving payment for the use of the vehicles and each driver wearing a stripe marked "Territorial Force Reserve Transport."

Announcement

There is no use keeping the readers of automobile news in suspense any longer as to who is going to handle the already famous "Columbia" cars, or the much talked about "Herreshoff," and if you will have a little patience to read every word in this announcement, you will know.

These lines have not been secured without giving every minute detail the most careful consideration. What we wanted was something we could offer to the public, and know we were giving value received. We have given these cars some very rigid tests; have investigated factories, manufacturers' policy in caring for their trade, output, deliveries, workmanship, quality of materials, style and finish—in fact, everything which the buyer should investigate and know. The result is we are in position to offer a most complete line.

We can supply you with a "Herreshoff," with the manufacturer's guarantee that the motor will deliver to the rear wheels a greater horse-power per pound of weight than that of any other car. Speed? Lots of it. No one has ever questioned what the name "Herreshoff" stands for. They know it stands for the best and nothing but the best. As yacht designers, this name stands at the top. As motor designers, it has never found its equal, and when you see this car, you will be pleased, and when you ride in it, you will be "tickled to death." (Undertakers please furnish 'phone numbers.)

If you want a car that can be used as a four-passenger (toy tonneau,) a three-passenger (rumble seat,) or a roadster for two, we can supply this in the "Columbia." We will furnish this combination of "three cars in one" without extra cost. There is nothing to denote that this change can be made when the car is shown in any of the three combinations. In other words, every part is a finished part, no matter how you look at it. On this same chassis we can furnish you a limousine or landaulet body, equipped in a manner which cannot help but please the most critical. And we want to show you that you can buy a "Columbia" car which will take the place of three cars, for the low price of twenty-seven hundred and fifty dollars. We can also furnish the luxurious five-passenger model at this figure. This price means the price you pay us here, and don't forget this car is equipped with the famous "make and break" system, used only on the very highest grade of cars.

If you would prefer to buy what has been termed the "light cob of the automobile stable," then you can secure a "Herreshoff" for the extremely low price of eighteen hundred dollars here, (equipped with best Bosch magneto, of course.)

So you see you don't have to mortgage your home to buy either one of these cars, and at the same time have that satisfied feeling which comes only from owning an "exclusive" car.

Cars are now en route, and we will be located in our new home at 1231-1233 South Main street soon after the first of April. We will always be pleased to have you call, and a welcome will be extended to dealers as well as others. In the meantime if you should like to know more about these cars, or see how they look in a photograph, come to 311 West Second street, or phone A1671, or Main 1671. We invite comparison, but make none.

Have Your Tops Made To Order
Touring Car Tops $50.00
Gentleman: Don't allow yourself to be steered up against high-price top makers. The automobile dealer puts the price on the car and a merchant tailor puts his on a suit of clothes and there is no deviation from these figures. Up to the present time, no automobile top maker has had the courage to put a price on his own goods. I am selling a top for a five-passenger car complete with side curtains, the best of brass bow separators and strapped thoughout, finished on your car for $50. All automobile users know that a top does not last very long and keep looking well. I think the time has arrived when the public calls for a lower priced article than heretofore. By this means they can renew their top twice in a season for the price they have been paying. Call at the shop and I can give you an eye-opener on this proposition as well as showing you the top and goods that enter into its construction. M. L. MORAN, 154½ N. Los Angeles st. Phone Main 5416.

HUSTLING.

ASSIGN DAYS FOR SPORTS.

Y.M.C.A. Committee Has General Programme.

Details Being Worked Out for Quick Action.

Many Features Included in All Departments.

The general programme for the spring Olympic games to be held by the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. at the new Fiesta Park Stadium for one week beginning April 19, has been arranged by the committee in charge of the sports as follows:

Monday night—Basketball preliminaries, six or eight games.

Tuesday night—Pushball game between Y.M.C.A. teams; five-mile open distance run, amateurs.

Wednesday night—Second round basketball preliminaries; boxing preliminaries; wrestling preliminaries.

Thursday afternoon—Newsboys' athletic games.

Thursday night—California Y.M.C.A. indoor athletic championships; California Y.M.C.A. gymnastic championships; Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. track and field games, open to all amateurs.

Friday afternoon—Preliminaries in junior Y.M.C.A. track and field meet; preliminaries in junior open track and field meet.

Friday night—Basketball semi-finals and finals for Southern California championship and special trophy.

Saturday afternoon—Finals in junior Y.M.C.A. track and field meet; finals in junior open track and field meet.

Saturday night—Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. wrestling championships; Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. boxing championships; relay games, with contests for Y.M.C.A. teams, college teams, High School teams and open teams.

WORKINK ON DETAILS.

C. H. Price, physical director of the Y.M.C.A., who is chairman of the Arrangements Committee, says that all of the details will be completed before the end of this week. W. A. Reynolds of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A., George H. Swartout of Pasadena Y.M.C.A. and E. A. Merwin of Long Beach Y.M.C.A., composing the Y.M.C.A. Gymnastic Committee of California, held a meeting yesterday afternoon and made preliminary arrangements for the State gymnastic championships, and it is expected that these features, with the indoor championships, will give rise to the best competition ever held here in Y.M.C.A. sports.

Invitations have been sent to all the Y.M.C.A. chapters in Southern California, and from assurances, received by the management of the games, every chapter in the South will be represented either by full teams or individual performers. Suitable trophies are to be awarded in all of the events, and in addition to the regulation prizes, wealthy sportsmen, interested in the Y.M.C.A., are expected to donate special trophies.

The basketball championships, the semi-finals and finals of which will be held on Friday night of the week of sports, and the boxing, wrestling and relay contests to be held Saturday night, probably will be of more general interest than the gymnastic and indoor athletic events.

The Y.M.C.A. basketball quintettes in the south are among the best teams in the State, and the championship tournament, which will be participated in by about thirty teams, will undoubtedly give the devotees of the game an opportunity to witness the fastest playing ever held in the south. All the Y.M.C.A. branches have one or more teams, and as the tournament will include championship events in the lightweight, middleweight and heavyweight divisions, every team will have a chance to compete for honors. The preliminary contests will be run off on two nights prior to the finals, and the final matches should develop whirlwind playing.

BIG RELAY RACES.

The relay carnival on Saturday night will include the ten-mile relay Marathon race, which will require sixty runners on each team, and races over distances of one, two, three and five miles. The local colleges and high schools are to be invited to enter teams and it is expected that the best amateur athletes in the south will compete. Coach Noble of Los Angeles High says some of his athletes have signafied their intention of running in several events, and as the athletes of the other high schools and secondary institutions will still be in training for the interscholastic invitation meets, it is probable that they will enter men. The proposition will be put before the colleges this week, and as the collegians seldom have an opportunity to compete outside of the intercollegiate meets, it is expected that several men from Occidental, U.S.C., and Pomona will enter.

The wrestling and boxing championships on the last night of the carnival of sports will be participated in by the best Y.M.C.A. mat and square-ring artists in the south. On account of the large number of entries that are expected in these contests, preliminaries will be held on Wednesday night in order that the best men will be brought together on the final night of the week of sports.

Pushball teams have been organized at the Y.M.C.A. and they will begin practice this week for the matches that will be held on the second day of the carnival. The game has been successfully played in Pasadena, but has not yet been introduced in this city, and it is expected that it will meet with popular favor.

The afternoon attractions during the athletic carnival will consist of track and field events for grammar school and junior Y.M.C.A. members. On the fourth day a special field and track tournament will be held in which participation will be restricted to newsboys, and it is expected that several hundred "newsies" will take advantake of the opportunity to take an outing and display their athletic prowess.

The two junior field meets will include the Y.M.C.A. championships, and an open meet, in which any boy within the age limit may compete. Elimination competitions will be held early in the week, and the finals of both meets will be held Saturday afternoon.

In case the Stadium is not completed in time for the game to begin April 19, the opening date will be moved ahead one week in order that there will be no interference with the original plan of having six consecutive days of sports.

It is being planned to make the Olympic games an annual affair of the Y.M.C.A. The P.A.A. has been requested to sanction the games, and there is no doubt that they will be authorized as the sports will conform in every way to the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union.

William Van Der Priem, wrestler who is to meet Jack Baker this afternoon at Chutes Park.

WRESTLING MATCH TODAY.

Van Der Priem Is to Meet Baker at Chutes Park in the First Spring Contest.

Jack Baker, a 200-pound wrestler of Illinois, and William Van de Priem, the local light heavyweight, are to wrestle catch-as-catch-can style, two falls out of three at Chutes Park this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Baker has been wrestling for fifteen years, and is said to be just as clever as when he met Farmer Burns and MacLeod two years ago in the Middle West. He wrestled with Frank Gotch when the present champion was fighting his way to the top.

Van der Priem will be outweighed about forty pounds by Baker, but the local man believes that his strength and agility will enable him to fell his opponent. Van der Priem has engaged in many wrestling contests in this city, and is ranked among the best mat artists in the South. He has made weight concessions several times before, but nevertheless has earned a large number of decisions.

TENNIS FOR NORDHOFF.

Preparations Being Made for Big Tournament With Seven Courts Going at One.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VENTURA, March 20.—Arrangements are about complete for the coming tennis tournament at Nordhoff, which will be the fourteenth annual gathering of the kind held in the Ojai Valley. The tournament will take place April 1, 2 and 3.

The competition between the players of the north and south ends of the State is growing keener each year. Last year the North, for the second time, captured the trophies in singles and doubles for all comers. This season the South is going to make a special effort to have the cups kept in Southern California, and some crack playing is anticipated.

Among the big guns who have announced their intention of being present are Maurice McLaughlin, Melville Long and Carl Gardner of San Francisco, and Miss Hazel Hotchkiss. Pitted against these will be Bundy, Browne, Sinsabaugh, Bell and all the Southern California cracks, including the famed Sutton sisters.

A feature of the games is the interscholastic cup play, in which all the high schools of Southern California participate. The interscholastic championship is now held by the Los Angeles High School, in both singles and doubles.

In order to accommodate the increased number of players this year three additional courts have been built at Nordhoff, making seven in all.

Norfolk county, Virginia, has voted $200,000 to be used in the construction of county highways. Henry county of the same State is to vote on the appropriation of $300,000 to build 100 miles of new road to Richmond.

This car sold at $1,700.00 is the most advanced car on the market.

It is a very easy thing to make a good looking car, but it requires experience and time to build a mechanically perfect car.

The Chalmers-Detroit has many things which other cars lack, and competitors grasp these differences as an opportunity to "knock."

One of these stock cars has covered 27,000 miles. For 100 consecutive days it covered 208 miles each day, through mud and snow, back and forth between Detroit and Pontiac. No other car, at any price, ever stood such a test.

1500 cars have been delivered to users in 228 cities. This is more than all our rivals put together.

Tourist for 1909

This is the Type "H" 1909 Tourist

5 Reasons Why TOURISTS are the Logical Cars for Coast Buyers

1—Built for Coast Conditions — Conditions on the Pacific Coast are entirely different from conditions in the East, where Eastern cars are made. Tourists are made specifically for coast use—by men who know coast conditions.

2—Guaranteed by Home Factory — Every Tourist is covered by the broadest possible guarantee—by a factory right here at your home, within your personal reach.

3—New Parts Easily Secured — Any new Tourist part can be easily secured right here at the Tourist factory—without the inconvenient delay and expense of sending two or three thousand miles for it.

4—No National Advertising — Tourist's territory is compact. Tourists are made for this coast and this coast only—and therefore have no national advertising for which you pay your pro rata part when you buy an Eastern car.

5—Low Freight Rates — The freight rates we pay are on raw materials only—which are far less than Eastern makers must pay on their finished cars. You save the difference—a big difference—when you buy a Tourist.

THE TOURIST LINE FOR 1909.

OUR NEW MAYOR'S BUSY DAY

Things are so different at the City Hall.

WHAT quiet, secluded retreat is this, my children? Not the Mayor's office!

What fugitive persons are these "hiding out" and walking on tip-toe through the darkest alleys, looking fearfully over their shoulders as they go? Not the political bosses! Not the "friends" who used to hang around the Mayor's office!

You hear lots of people say how they enjoy stepping—"slipping in" is the correct term—into some dim cathedral to partake of its peace and quiet.

A cathedral! Why, sir, as a resting place, a cathedral is simply a tumultuous riot compared with the office of the new Mayor.

In the glad old days, the Mayor's office used to be a hang-out. It took a suite of three offices to hold them. There was a spot on the corner of the table where the heels of Nacio Bilderain's tootsies used to perch.

Joe Margolis used to come rushing up the stairs and vault the rug at the door in his eagerness to ask the Mayor for a new job he had invented overnight.

Doc Howton and the Manning boys and Greenewald, Sam Schenck and other dear familiar faces that used to be there are gone now. Gone, mayhap, forever.

The new Mayor has been in office for a week now. They selected him because he was strong in the bright face of danger.

He came in girded for trouble. Smiling, but cinched up.

But, oh, sweet dove of peace. He can hardly keep awake. For excitement, he has to close his eyes and think of one time when a sugar sack bursted down at the store.

THE PROGRAMME.

His week has been a rest cure. As the greatest indication of his quiet life, one only has to mention that the buttonhole of his coat lapel has not even begun to sag yet. After one morning of "consultations," it is said that a recall petition could easily have been thrust through the button hole of the former Mayor's lapel—and not touch the cloth on either side. Not a greasy finger mark on the new Mayor's coat. He can't be a regular one.

His programme for the week has been as follows:

Monday—Elected; received congratulations and felicitations by telegraph.

Tuesday—Opened telegrams of congratulation. Shook hands with people who called to congratulate. Council meeting; many Councilmen called to extend congratulations.

Wednesday—Telegrams of congratulation. Councilmen called. Purely social. Circus parade passed City Hall.

Thursday—Council day. Several Councilmen called to congratulate the new Mayor. Somebody got a new spot on office blotter. Secretary Desk Commission called with flowers from the parks.

Friday—Letters and other congratulations arrive by mail from divers parts.

Saturday—Engrossed resolutions of congratulation from divers parts.

All of his days have been just about alike—just about like Sunday at a rest-cure sanatorium. Up at the Courthouse, the grand jury volleys and thunders. Down on Fifth street, E. Tobias Earl twists himself into fits. Uncl George Alexander tears his goat tassel in heroic rage. But the new Mayor lives on in an atmosphere of gentle serenity.

Dream life at the City Hall.

Here is the story of a typical day.

Listen! It is morning. The wheels of industry have begun to spin. Out in a romantic cottage on Westlake, Thomas Lee Woolwine, the eminent novelist, who has been struggling all night with a plot, sees the mellifluous golden river of sunlight stream in at his window. With a sigh, he lays down his pen and becomes the rugged reformer of daytime hours once more.

Then some more morning. Then again. At last 9 o'clock a.m., third hour of morning.

A man with an agreeable face, unmarked by care, climbs the stairs of the City Hall, bearing an overcoat on his arm. He has so little to do that he carries an overcoat for exercise.

The new Mayor has arrived.

He peers into his outer office, where the Mayor's friends used to wait to grab the free prize-fight tickets before the Mayor saw them. Office empty. Not even the free prize-fight tickets. What prize-fight ticket could live in such an atmosphere?

The new Mayor peers into the office of his private secretary—a fair-haired young man, who never saw a prize-fight ticket in his whole life.

"Anything this morning?" asks the Mayor, hopefully, bracing himself for the shock of vicious attack, threats and trouble.

JUST A JOLLY.

"Just a letter of congratulation from the Purity League of somewhere or other," says the clerk, speaking in a perfectly discouraged voice.

"No trouble, nor anything?" suggests the Mayor, almost pleadingly.

"Not very much," says the clerk.

"Oh, there is some trouble, then?" This is more like being a Mayor.

"Yes, sir," says the clerk. "The postmaster has notified you that there is 1 cent postage due on a set of engrossed resolutions, sent from the Good Government League of Medicine Hat."

THE DAY'S WORK.

With this, the Mayor settles down to his new day's work.

Enter a little fussy man, who suggests somehow that he is buzzing around instead of walking.

"Is the Mayor in?" he asks the new clerk. The little buzzing person whispers his question with an air of potent and mysterious meaning.

The Mayor is in and he can be seen. He is anxious, even, to be seen. It's so blamed lonesome.

The buzzing little person hurries in and the door crashes shut. Affairs of state! Overturned governments! Tumult and cries!

Not exactly. Those who stand at the outer door of the Mayor's office listen for that which never happens. The little person presently buzzes out. It develops that he is a grocer somewhere in the rural ends of the city and used to buy groceries from Mr. Stephens. For the honor of the grocery business at large, he considers it to be his duty to extend felicitations.

This turned out to be the most thrilling event of the day.

A SPECTACLE.

In the middle of the morning the new Mayor was attracted to his front windows by a peculiarly chaste and refined sort of noise. He looked out upon the illustrious Prof. Billy Manning trundling past in a new electric auto—not a coarse gasoline car, but such a vehicle as ladies drive with kid gloves. The professor was having a fearful struggle with it, but was evidently resolved to show the new Mayor that he had changed his ways to be in tune with the new administration.

The refined thing!

Just to show how he felt about it, Billy held the steering gear daintily, with little finger raised, the way ladies once used to dally with teacups.

His brother, Johnny Manning, who is the real politician of the family, did not venture out at all—waiting to see how Prof. Billy got away with it.

Having recovered from this excitement, the new Mayor resumed his solitary vigil.

Comes a voice at the telephone; very hoarse, constrained voice. Is the new Mayor in? Yes, the voice is informed he is in. Thanks. Receiver hung up.

THE TICKET MOOCHERS.

Down at the corner is the other end of the voice. The old-time "bunch" have got as far as the cigar stand, but courage has failed. They are trying to persuade each other to go up and see if the prize-fight tickets didn't come to the Mayor's office as usual, and if there isn't "sumpun doin'."

"Go on up," they tell each other. "I bet he would just treat you fine."

These are the old ticket moochers, who never missed a prize fight in their lives before, and never paid for a ticket.

Apart from them stands Joe Margolis, who has thought up a new kind of inspector, but hasn't the nerve to try it on the new Mayor. He has started to the City Hall thirty times in the week; but turns back every time.

Comes at the Mayor's door a very, very slight scratching sound. Doc Howton has been passing and repass-

TWO FIREMEN BURNED.

Hands and Faces Scorched When Distillate Explodes on Roof of Bakery.

Two firemen were burned on the face and hands yesterday afternoon, when a tank of distillate exploded at the bakery of E. Pendleton at No. 715 East Ninth street. The injured men are A. C. Stammer of No. 808 East Fourteenth street and Mark McCormick of No. 739 Central avenue. They were cared for at the Receiving Hospital, and later taken to their homes.

Fire resulted from spattering grease. Pendleton was frying doughnuts for the Sunday trade. The grease set fire to the woodwork. The firemen soon had this blaze under control, but upon making an investigation, found that the flames had worked through the wall toward a tank of distillate on the roof. McCormick and Stammer hurried toward the tank, hoping to save it, but the oil exploded just as they reached the roof, and they were sprinkled with fire.

STATE HIGHWAY TO BAY CITY.

AUTOISTS WOULD EXTEND THE GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN.

Local Motor Car Man Tells of Sentiment in San Francisco Which Favors Building of Boulevard to Los Angeles—Something About Present Road Conditions.

An automobile highway from Los Angeles to San Francisco is one of the plans which the dealers may be asked to consider at their next meeting. Earle C. Anthony of the Western Motor Car Company, who has returned from San Francisco trip, is enthused over the prospect of hearty coöperation which was promised by the dealers in the Bay City.

"There is every reason to believe," said Mr. Anthony, "that the San Francisco dealers will do all in their power to encourage the sentiment in favor of good roads for the State. They have just completed some splendid highways about San Francisco, and as a result of their success are anxious to help the good work throughout the State.

"Their main idea is to secure a boulevard from San Francisco to Los Angeles. This, they believe, is possible if every autoist in the State will only work hard enough to create a sentiment which will result in a general boost for good roads. This will come, I

AFFECTS ALL ARCHITECTS.

State Board Wins Case in Superior Court.

All Who Practice in State Must Have Certificate.

Judge Willis Establishes Right to Prosecute.

Hereafter all architects in California must have certificates from the State Board of Architecture. This is the result of the decision rendered by Judge Willis in the Superior Court, sustaining the judgment of conviction of Otto H. Neher on the charge of practicing architecture without a certificate from the State Board of Architecture. The case was in the Police Court before Judge Rose on July 24, 1908, when a nominal fine was imposed.

During the progress of the trial before Judge Willis, Mr. Neher secured a certificate from the board, after taking the examination, and as a result sentence was not given. The decision however, conclusively establishes the right of the State board to prosecute all architects who do not hold the proper certificate and assures the constitutionality of the law.

In their objections, W. F. Haas and C. S. Burwell, attorneys for Neher, declared the act calling for the certificate unconstitutional, that it had no uniform operation and that it granted special privileges.

The punishment for violation of the law is so severe that a considerable number of architects, who watched the case with interest, took examinations and obtained their credentials. To practice unlawfully is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $50 or fifty days and not more than $500 or 500 days.

The law does not prevent any person from making his own plans or collecting data for his own building, or even for the buildings of other people, provided he does not advertise himself as an architect. Nor does it exclude architects of other States from practicing in California if they can furnish sufficient evidence of their competency.

LAW CONSTITUTIONAL.

The case against Neher was prosecuted by Willis J. Morrison, attorney for the State Board of Architecture, and

POULTRY MEN SORE ON ODD HATCHINGS.

I'M GOING TO RAISE A FINE LITTER OF BUFF ORPINGTONS
I DIDN'T ORDER 'EM SCRAMBLED!
GREAT EGGS-PECTATIONS AND—TEE! HEE!
I'M ASHAMED TO COME OUT!

THE RESULT! WOULDN'T IT EGGS-ASPERATE YOU?

What may come of a dozen of eggs.

AFTER buying eggs at fancy prices only to find that they hatched out mongrel chickens, poultry men in Los Angeles have complained to the police to protect them.

Frank Hillman of one of the large local chicken ranches, laid his case before Deputy District Attorney Alexander, yesterday. He stated that the amounts are not sufficient to warrant the issuance of a complaint, but he promised to write to the unscrupulous dealers and warn them.

Many of the cases cited are amusing. Hillman's is particularly so. He made the purchase from a supply station in this city. He wanted a certain grade of Buff Orpington chickens and he was willing to pay well for them. He was offered a setting of eggs at a fancy figure and decided to take them. Each egg was stamped but the purchaser neglected to get a guarantee.

He bought 100 of the eggs and filled his incubator. Then he waited for little buff balls of down to cheep their way out of the shells. Often at night, he left his warm bed to trot out to the incubator and see that the lamp was burning properly and the temperature right.

He nursed and petted those eggs as carefully as any mother hen would have done. But, alas, there came a day when the terrible truth dawned upon him. A shell began to crack, a little head worked its way out, and then the body appeared.

Hillman pounced upon the chick. He had been deceived! It was as black as the ace of spades. No Buff Orpington ever looked like that. Another and another chick appeared. Some were yellow, some were gray, and some were black. Each seemed to belong to a separate tribe, and some combined all the qualities of several breeds.

Hillman looked them over with a troubled eye. He made a bet on the last egg. Had it been an Orpington he would have taken his medicine. He watched it for several days, and then the shell cracked. It was not an Orpington. It was a duck.

That settled it. The angry poultryman went back to the place where he purchased the eggs and carried the chickens with him.

"What do you think of this?" he demanded, holding up a little ball of black down.

The salesman eyed it carefully and remarked that it was a fine chick.

"Are there any circumstances under which that thing might be considered a Buff Orpington?" said Hillman.

The salesman thought a few minutes and then asked if the poultryman used crude oil for heating his incubator. He replied in the affirmative.

"Well, that is why the chick is black. The black oil did the work. Had you used light oil, buff chicks would have resulted."

With rage in his heart Hillman sought others who had been "stung" and all told their troubles to the Deputy District Attorney. Many poultrymen are fearful lest their incubators hatch out dogs, alligators or even small coils of barbed wire.

BRINGING THE RIVER.

DIGGING FAST ON AQUEDUCT.

Chief Engineer Reports the Maximum Progress.

Three Thousand Men Work at High Tension.

Tunnels Going Through a Mile a Week.

William Mulholland, chief engineer of the Los Angeles aqueduct, has returned from Mojave, and reports the work on the great project approximating maximum rate all along the line. The progress is now at the rate of 840 feet daily, and of this 575 feet is open work. The remainder is tunnel driving in four divisions, and about a mile a week is now accomplished. This will be further accelerated soon, and increased to 1100 or 1200 feet daily. By this maximum the time lost will be made up. The contract work in the Antelope division is ready to make actual movement, as the preliminaries are about done.

"There are now about three thousand men at work," said Mr. Mulholland. "We are approaching the high tension that we wish to sustain in order to reach the schedule prepared for the project. We will have four new steam shovels at work soon. I am entirely satisfied with the rate we have attained. Of course our rate will be largely measured by the capacity of the cement mill to manufacture the article that is most needed.

"I find additional reason every day to repeat my promise that the water of Owens River will be turned into Los Angeles in the early spring of 1913, in time for the irrigating season."

W. B. Mathews, counsel of the aqueduct, says the issue of $7,772,000 bonds authorized by the Council is merely creating a class of bonds designated as "F," and which are to be issued during the remainder of this year and 1910. It does not mean that the money is to be received at once by delivery of the bonds, but merely anticipates the regular demands for this year and next.

CHARMING.

TO WIN JOY BY CONFERRING IT.

THIRTY LITTLE PEOPLE TO GIVE FAIRY FANTASIE.

"Princess Patience" Will Be Presented for Benefit of Brownson House Settlement—First Effort on Coast Along Lines of Children's Theater of New York City.

"Princess Patience," a fairy play, will be presented at the Mason Operahouse soon after Easter by thirty little people of the Brownson House Settlement.

This play will be the first effort on the Coast along the lines mapped out by the Children's Theater in New York City. It was written by Miss Willamene Wilkes, and the members of the cast have been trained by her.

Miss Willamene Wilkes,

who wrote the fairy play, "Princess Patience," and is training the children to produce it.

As the thirty children live in the dreary river district on Jackson street, the fairy fantasie brings great joy into their lives and they feel keenly the responsibility of presenting it to the public, and thereby earning money for their beloved settlement.

The "Princess Patience" is an adaptation of the familiar story of the "Wild Swans" of Hans Christian Andersen. All sorts of enchanting imaginary people will tread the boards. There will be a king and a queen, of course, and Prince Charming and court ladies, and the prettiest of dances, taught by Miss Hogan of Cumnock School. Miss Gertrude Workman is looking after the business end of the production.

The Dramatic Club, whose members will be the actors, furnishes one of the most attractive of the settlement features. The young people range in age from 8 to 15 years. The government of the club is entirely in the hands of the children, who choose their own officers and make their own rules.

Once a year the Brownson House Association gives an entertainment to secure money with which to carry on its good work, which touches the lives of so many.

Three hundred children attend the clubs and classes of the settlement. In the inclosed back yard is the playground. The apparatus for exercise is all of iron and cost $500. It has already paid for itself in giving joy and physical improvement. Hot and cold showers are to be had after play on certain days.

Musical Missionary Family.

Rev. George E. Foster, superintendent of the new Methodist mission, Mrs. Foster, Miss Hattie Foster and Emery Foster, as they appear in quartette, from top to bottom.

Among the various clubs is the St. Cecelia, composed of forty little girls; a boys' organization of ninety members, and the Wednesday Afternoon Sewing Club, comprising fifty Mexican girls. The settlement also maintains night classes for young people and for workingmen and women.

The Sunday-school conducted for the Catholic children of the neighborhood is the only activity of a denominational nature. There are eighteen classes, thirteen of them are taught in English, and five in Spanish. The school is so large that every bit of shed room in the back yard has to be utilized for the overflow.

An interesting feature of the settlement is the work of the Brownson House Woman's Club, which makes layettes for poor babies. Mrs. Ellen Beauchamp is the resident mother and superintendent.

Perhaps greatest of all in helpfulness is the day nursery on North Anderson street, of which Miss Hurley is matron. There mothers who must be breadwinners take their children before going to work. Upon arrival the children's clothes are changed for the jolly blue "rompers" supplied by the nursery and then all play in the sand pile.

One little fellow, who has never been known to smile, spends his time in a swing, watching the others, but never offering to join their play.

There is a pretty young girl assisting the matron at the nursery, who came from Whittier. Miss Hurley used to have a position at the State School in that city and she found a little family of children growing up in its doubtful atmosphere. They had committed no crime save that of being destitute. Permission was given her to take this girl and her little sister from the institution and bring them into the sweet, loving confines of the day nursery.

The officers of the Brownson House Association are Miss Mary Workman, president; Miss Marie Rose Mullen, vice-president; Miss Anne Troconiz, treasurer, and Miss Rose Bernard, secretary. There are forty-five workers, among them a number of prominent young women of the city.

SEEKS BIG GAME.

Prohibition Leader Sends Personal Challenge Direct to Superintendent Chapman.

Eugene W. Chafin, who is at present quartered at the Westminster Hotel, yesterday sent through the mails the following letter to Dr. E. S. Chapman, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Southern California:

"You are recognized throughout the nation as one of the most skillful leaders and most able platform exponents of the policies and purposes of the Anti-Saloon League. Having been the last candidate of the National Prohibition Party for President of the United States, I may modestly claim to be the recognized official leader of that party.

"I am informed that your organization caused to be introduced into the present Legislature of California a local option measure, with reference to the granting of saloon licenses. I declare such action to be a fearful mistake and inimical to the best interests of the people.

"In order that the citizens of California may be better able to judge intelligently as to the wisdom of this proposed measure, I hereby challenge you to a series of debates, from one to ten, covering such portions of the State, and under such detailed conditions as may be agreed upon by a joint committee of six men, each of us to select three. I submit the following proposition for discussion:

"Resolved, that local option, as applied to the liquor traffic, is wrong in principle, vicious in operation, powerless as a remedy and a hindrance to national prohibition.

"As this is the most important question now awaiting settlement at the hands of the American people, and as local option is in my judgment the last bulwark behind which the brewers and distillers of America are already taking refuge, I trust that nothing will prevent you from accepting this friendly challenge. As my time in this vicinity is quite limited I shall hope for a prompt and favorable response."

Dr. Chapman left early yesterday morning for Santa Paula, where he will lecture on Sunday, and will return to the city on Monday. He probably had not seen the letter of Mr. Chafin before he left.

NEW MAYOR.

ing up and down the corridor. At last, he timidly approaches and takes one timid look inside the door; but his nerve oozes out, and he scuttles away again, his great adventure failed.

But the most desperate mission of the week with the new Mayor was that of a small beery person with blood-shot eyes, a breath that would turn back the tide and a greasy vest. They all know him at the City Hall. He is the man who is always long on "benefit tickets." There are a whole tribe of them who used to be parasites on the old Mayor. This one was driven by desperation. Bold from hunger.

He sneaked up the City Hall steps, breathing hoarsely and smelling like a distillery on moving day. He advanced with great caution to the outer door, and took a long, scared look.

Presently he beckoned furiously to some one who sat inside, and whispered hoarsely: "I wanta see the secatary."

The polite young man-who-would-not-speak-to-a-prize-fight-ticket-on-the-street rose and crossed the room to speak to him.

"Gawd," snorted the ticket grafter, and fled, blowing like a grampus. It was not the same secretary whom he had expected to see.

When he had gone, there came another pause. Then a small pious person came in. His manner was very cold and severe. Oh, most cold! He came in, transacted his business and departed—all with an air of dignified disapproval. It was the City Forester—brother of the former Mayor.

AN EVENT.

Another pause; then an EVENT of the very first water. One of the great literary lights of the day stalked in with dignity to extend chivalrous congratulations.

The polite secretary took his card and announced him with eclat: "The author of 'The Valley of the Shadow.'"

Class, my boy, to that visit—class!

Came another long period, and at length the Mayor emerged for luncheon. Returning at 3 o'clock he found the same bustling vacancy awaiting him.

During the hours of the short afternoon he was called upon by the respectful and chastened clerk of the Park Commission, and the respectful and chastened clerk of the Police Commission, with momentous papers to sign.

One or two commissioners, with an air of not being on speaking terms with such low cattle as their former selves, dropped in, walking like a copy of the Des Moines Idea.

When the sun became dimmer and yet some little dimmer, the Mayor emerged once more, this time with his overcoat over his other arm to equalize the exercise. The day's work was done.

HE WONDERS.

History has always pictured the interregnum as a period of mad, dangerous strenuosity; and the regent as a person harassed to the point of insanity. Well, it will be necessary to fix up history a little. The regent really sits around with decorum and dignity and wonders how his predecessor ever got so many ink-spots on his blotter.

Moses Gets Promotion.

James Moses, city passenger agent of the Santa Fé in Los Angeles, has been promoted, and will leave the latter part of the month for San Francisco, where he succeeds F. W. Prince, late city ticket agent, who resigned to accept other service. Mr. Moses has been with the Santa Fé in this city for the past eight years, and is very popular wtih railroad men here, who are glad to see him move up. His successor has not been appointed, but will likely be shortly after the return of Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager Byrne from San Francisco.

Old Metropolitan Theater to Be Mission.

Methodists Have Two Years Lease on Building.

Services to Be Held Every Day in the Year.

For many years the Methodists of this city have been desirous of maintaining a mission of their own in the downtown district, where the gospel would be preached every day in the year, and they have at last reached the goal.

A year ago the annual conference indorsed the plan and appointed Rev. George E. Foster as city missionary to take up the work.

Since that time the denomination has been casting about for an available location and has finally secured it. A two years' lease has been taken on the old Metropolitan Theater building, at No. 255 East Fifth street.

The interior has been done over, and 300 chairs have been placed on the elevated floor, giving it the appearance of a neat and comfortable church. Special arrangements have been made for an orchestra, and music of a high order will be a feature of every service. Said Rev. Mr. Foster yesterday:

"This will be a Methodist mission, but we will act in full harmony with all other gospel missions of the city, and all have been invited to our opening service on Tuesday evening."

The assistant of Rev. Mr. Foster will be C. E. Sweet, an old railroad man, who was converted when the minister was pastor of Newman Methodist Church, and who is exceptionally successful with men.

In a general way, the work will be divided as follows: Noon meeting, in charge of Mr. Sweet; afternoon Bible meeting, Rev. Mr. Foster; evening street meeting, Mr. Sweet; night service, Rev. Mr. Foster. This will be the programme 365 days in the year.

Elaborate preparations are in progress for the opening. The first sermon will be preached by Rev. Dr. C. E. Locke, pastor of the First Methodist Church, and District Superintendent Adkinson will preside. On Wednesday night, Dr. Adkinson will preach; Thursday night, Dr. D. F. Howe, pastor of Westlake Methodist Church; Friday night, Rev. E. J. Inwood, pastor of University Methodist Church; Saturday night, J. W. Whittington will speak; Sunday night, Superintendent Foster will preach. Rev. Matt Hughes of Pasadena will preach in the new mission on Tuesday evening of next week.

Mr. Foster is himself an accomplished musician, and is blessed with a family equally talented, and wherever they have been, their musical performances have been a great attraction. At the new mission, they will undoubtedly reach many people in this way.

Mr. Foster, in recent years, became noted throughout Methodism for a system of Bible marking that he has invented, and in which he gives instruction to large classes. This will make one of the features of the afternoon meetings.

OLD VINTAGES RETURN HOME.

Taken Away in Illegal Raid on California Club, But Retsored by Court Order.

Three wagonloads of fine liquors, taken from the California Club in an illegal raid on that fashionable organization during September of last year, were returned yesterday.

When Tommy Woolwine was prosecuting Police Court cases and entered the club with a force of officers, raided the bar, the directors promptly started a legal war in the courts, and won. Yesterday, as the last chapter of the case, the dust-covered bottles containing rare old vintages, were removed from the cellars of the Police Station, where they had been carefully packed away and were taken back to the club.

The "Balkan war cloud" is slowly but surely assuming a fixed place as a standing joke.

One thing, at least, is clear, and that is that this country is not again to be Prof. Wilsonized.

What we have now to fear is that Congress will consume months in the debate to have no debate on the tariff.

With each passing day we have more reason than ever to believe that the tariff is strictly in the hands of its friends.

A RAILWAY-NEWS BUREAU.

When E. H. Harriman was in this vicinity a few days ago, he gave a very full and satisfactory interview to the newspaper reporters. It was clear, pointed, luminous and informing, and the subjects discussed had evidently been carefully considered before the railway man spoke.

In the course of the interview he made the remark that railway men do not talk enough—that is to say, they do not state their side of the case with readiness and frequency, thus leaving the public under misapprehension as to their knowledge of facts and their views. The reasons for this fact—and it is a fact—are obvious. Many leading railway men refrain from giving interviews through fear of being misquoted and misrepresented; others (subordinates) are loath to talk without the previous approval of their chiefs, lest they state things incorrectly and bring themselves within the criticism of their superiors of "talking too much." Thus it happens too frequently that railway officials are misunderstood and their attitudes misrepresented.

The remark of this foremost railway operator leads to the suggestion here made that some practical plan for the better gathering and dissemination of railway news might be formulated and put into effect, with the chief and important object of serving the great journals of the country, and thereby serving the public at large.

The plan suggested (which is ours and not the magnate's) might take the form of a central railway news clearinghouse which should gather and serve at first hand to the newspapers all the important railway news of the country, so far as the railroad companies themselves might be willing to make their affairs public. Of course there are many acts and doings on the part of railway companies which the heads do not wish to exploit, and cannot be expected to exploit against their own interests; but the scope of the subjects that might be exploited with the consent of the railroads themselves is large, important and informing, and when the statements are made at first hand by authorized officials of each railroad, they become railway news in the best sense, and would be eagerly sought for by enterprising newspapers seeking facts and the correct presentation thereof, even from the railroad standpoint. These facts would, of course, be subject to editorial challenge by the newspapers concerned; but, unless overthrown by other information secured direct by the journals themselves, the railway's statements or views would naturally be accepted:

This central railway news clearinghouse could and would take cognizance of such points as these, viz:

(1.) The building of new railway lines and the extension of old ones. It not infrequently happens that new lines are built on paper—by a slight turn of the wrist, so to speak. A rumor is started by somebody that a railroad is to be built from one town to another, the people being anxious for railway connection in that particular case, though no other foundation for the project is in sight. Immediately the local newspapers, each reaching out for a "beat," exploit the project, build the road, equip it and fill the cars with passengers—in their mind's eye. Column after column is printed exploiting the project, and after a while, when it is discovered to be an error pure and simple, a humiliating confession has to be made. This condition could be averted by the dissemination of correct news in the first instance.

(2.) The organization and reorganization of railway companies and the significance of the movement in each case.

(3.) Mergers, and the significance of the same.

(4.) Bond and stock issues, and the amounts of the same; in other words, the indebtedness of the roads, where obtainable.

(5.) Traffic agreements between different roads, and the nature of the same, as far as ascertainable.

(6.) Railway prosecutions, reasons therefor, the nature of the defense, and the outcome of the suit in each case.

(7.) Prosperous lines and non-paying lines respectively, and the reasons for the same.

(8.) The volume of freight and passenger traffic done by different roads during given periods of time.

(9.) Passenger and freight rates, and the reason for their establishment in given cases.

(10.) True statements of accidents to passengers and injuries to employés during given periods, and the correction of published misstatements relating thereto; in other words, the truth as nearly as it can be ascertained in every case. Railway men are themselves, frequently, serious offenders in this regard. When an accident occurs they shut up in a way that would make a clam take to the tall timber, refusing information which might often be published with advantage to the roads themselves, and leaving the reporters to guess at facts and thus commit violent assaults upon the truth.

(11.) Views of leading railway men in relation to their business and their attitude toward the public and the government, together with just complaints against the treatment of railway operations which many railway men feel that they have the right to make public for the information of the people and the government.

And a multitude of other facts and statements which properly appertain to the railway business, and which form the subject of proper exploitation in the daily newspapers of the country.

The idea in mind is that the railway companies themselves—perhaps nearly all of them throughout the country—would make and send to the central news bureau or clearinghouse such statements and views as they may be willing to have spread abroad through the general press, and that these statements would be compiled, classified and published daily in the suggested bulletin, and thus made promptly accessible to the press, including the Associated Press, special correspondents and reporters, who would be sure to use much of the matter, sending it out to their respective journals, either by telegraph or mail.

It is assumed, as already stated, that such news statements and views would go first hand to the central railway news bulletin, thus making it fresh, exclusive and authoritative, and that it would be then sent out from this central bureau to the press of the country. Each newspaper could follow up the matter in its own way, unearthing additional facts wherever possible, and it would be free to give its own version in cases of dispute as fully and freely as now.

The idea is worth thinking of, but would have to be treated as an experiment and worked up and worked out little by little until a system as nearly perfect and reliable as possible could be created. When so worked out the plan would be a great aid to the reliable journals of the country, which seek facts and prize truth above all else.

SAN FRANCISCO'S SPY SYSTEM.

The San Francisco situation seems to have come to a crisis in the case of Pierre E. Duchein, a well-known retired business man of that city, whose experiences at the hands of Heney seem to have at last roused that browbeaten, thoroughly bullied community to protest.

Duchein had the misfortune to be served with a summons to serve as a juror in the Calhoun case. As with every other juror served with subpoena in the case, Burns detectives were immediately set upon his trail.

Two came to his house. One spy represented himself as a magazine writer; the other as a citizen organizing a league to protest against the further operations of the graft prosecution. Both men succeeded in tricking Duchein into some expressions of opinion claimed to be in disapproval of the graft prosecution; particularly of the Bulletin, the special organ of the prosecution.

In due time, Mr. Duchein took his place in the jury box and faced his questioner, Special Prosecutor Heney. He had good reason for uneasiness. He knew of the experiences of other business men in like situation.

Having come into the Calhoun trial almost drunk with the glory of having been shot in the neck by a miserable creature whom his brutality had driven insane, Heney was astonished and amazed at the attitude of the business men summoned as jurors. Many of them stated frankly their prejudice against the graft prosecution.

This has so infuriated Heney that, latterly, he has made insulting assaults upon such business men. Some of the most prominent business men of that city have slunk from the jury box, humiliated and disgraced by frontier abuse from Heney for daring to express truthfully their own views.

This was what Pierre Duchein knew he had to face. Questioned by Heney, doubtless hesitating to face the storm, Duchein stated that he had no disqualifying prejudice against the graft prosecution.

Whereupon Heney called the two Burns detectives; the one being a cheap professional named Korngold, who coolly admitted his habit of "holding out" copies of all information furnished his employer; and who very significantly admitted having changed employment from Calhoun to Burns. The other was a spy named Schindler.

They told their shameless story of the espionage of Pierre Duchein and admitted that 2400 citizens, summoned as Calhoun jurors, had been similarly spied upon. One of them blithely stated that his report to Burns was that Duchein "is no good for us."

After an entire afternoon spent in examining these two wretched, odious rats, the court ordered Duchein "excused" from the panel.

But do not imagine this was the end of the matter.

The next day in the San Francisco Call, Heney issued the following statement in which Duchein was tried, convicted and sentenced as a perjurer by . . . Heney, the one-man Kuklux:

> "The crime committed by Mr. Duchein is even more dangerous to society than the one for which Mr. Calhoun is now on trial. . . . No one who listened to the testimony of the juror, Pierre E. Duchein, and the subsequent testimony of R. S. Schindler and Nicholas Korngold could fail to be convinced that the juror deliberately testified falsely for the purpose of getting on the jury, with the intention of voting to acquit Mr. Calhoun, regardless of any evidence which might be produced against him. . . . Perjury, however, is the most difficult crime in the calendar upon which to convict a man, and for that reason few men are ever prosecuted for it. . . . It is my intention to examine the testimony of Mr. Duchein very carefully, and if I conclude that the evidence in the possession of the District Attorney's office is sufficient to insure a conviction, I will either present the matter to the grand jury or cause a charge against him to be filed before a committing magistrate."

Whatever might have been the concrete purpose of the San Francisco graft prosecution, the opportunity for good was one that appealed to all good men. It might have been a crusade for decency that would have remained an inspiring example to all men for generations to come.

What a crying shame that it should have fallen into the hands of a ruffian who has made it unsafe to be anything other than a "rough neck" in San Francisco!

IMMIGRATION IN 1908.

There exists in this country an association known as the "Immigration Restriction League," having branches in various places throughout the country. Its purposes may be good or bad. Its effects are probably somewhat mixed. One of the branches of the league has given us a report comparing immigration for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, and 1908. The Commissioner-General of Immigration is responsible for the data, and so we can take them without question. There was a great falling off in immigration for the latter year compared with the former. The total figures show 1,285,349 for 1907, and 782,870 for 1908.

There has been a disposition to restrict undesirable immigrants much more severely in the last several months; and so, although the immigration for the last of the two years was only a little more than half that for the preceding one, the number debarred from entrance in 1908 is nearly as large as in 1907. In the latter year the percentage of those returned to their own countries was 1.1 and for the latter year 1.7.

For the year ended June 30, 1908, the emigration from the country numbered 395,073, leaving net immigration of 387,797. This is a very small result comparing the last fiscal year with preceding ones. Eliminating persons of foreign birth not immigrants and others, the net addition to our population of foreigners was only 68,142.

The pith of this report may be said to appear in the figures showing the number of illiterates over 14 years of age. In the year of large immigration ended June 30, 1907, there were of these persons 343,402 classed as illiterates. The percentage was almost 30. In the second year analyzed here the number of illiterates was not of quite so high percentage. The exact figures were 174,608 and the percentage 26.

Taking them by nationalities and races, this report is very instructive. In the first of the two years of Teutonic and Celtic races we got 347,704, or a little over 27 per cent. of the whole; and in the latter of the two years 264,681, or nearly 34 per cent. The Slavic and Iberic races from southern and Eastern Europe show in the first of the two years to the amount of 828,022, or over 64 per cent., and in the latter year 441,804, or 56 per cent. From Asia we got for 1907, 40,524, and for 1908, 28,365. The percentage differs but little, being in one case 3.2 and in the other 3.6. The immigrants of 1908 were a little better off, bringing $22.78 average money, while in the preceding year they brought $19.92.

Of the immigrants for 1908, only 8 per cent. had been in the United States before. Nearly 31 per cent. had no occupation, these including women and children. Farm laborers, and laborers and servants generally, numbered nearly 48 per cent. for the year 1908. Illinois, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania got nearly 62 per cent. of all the immigrants. East of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and the Ohio rivers got 80.5 per cent., and the Far West and Southern States 18 per cent.

The figures exclude "non-immigrant aliens" and "non-emigrant aliens." These numbered, respectively, 141,825 and 319,755—referring to tourists, merchants and other travelers not counted as immigrants coming to settle and seek a livelihood in the United States.

In 1900, foreign population (constituting 13.6 per cent. of our total population) furnished 134,094 persons, or nearly 22 per cent., of those in penal, reformatory, insane and charitable institutions, 15.6 per cent. of the criminals and 20.8 per cent. of the paupers, and 29.5 per cent. of the insane.

The pamphlet tabulates by races, not nations, the percentage of illiterates according to statistics published by these races themselves. Taking Northern and Western Europe, belonging chiefly to the Teutonic and Celtic races, for 1908, the lowest percentage of illiteracy was among the Scandinavians, 1.2 per cent., and the highest in Northern Italy, 8.6 per cent. The average of all that population was 4 per cent. The Irish stand well in the table, at 1.7 per cent. Turning to Southern and Eastern Europe, chiefly Slavic and Iberic, the percentage of the illiteracy ranges from 11.1 per cent. among the Magyars to 71.2 per cent. among the Turks. Along the Mediterranean peninsulas, from which we are getting a very heavy immigration at the present time, the illiteracy ranges from 14.8 per cent. among the Spanish people to 50.7 among the southern Italians. In illiteracy the Cubans stand well, at 2.5 per cent.; the Chinese 5.6 per cent.; the Japanese 30.5 per cent.

The whole subject of immigration is attracting very much attention at the present time. Some people have taken the matter up for study and agitation for the purpose of excluding immigrants of certain nationalities from entering the United States at all. More intelligent, conservative and patriotic classes of citizens of much larger number are interested in the subject from an entirely different point of view. They see the opportunity for those who cannot hope to earn a livelihood in their own lands to live well here. These people also see the desirable aid that industrious immigrants can afford us in developing the vast natural resources of our country. Illiteracy does not affect this efficiency very materially, but there is another point of view which is very important—that of citizenship. Our courts are exercising much greater discretion in admitting aliens to the privileges of citizens than heretofore and this is a proper thing to be encouraged in every way by popular sentiment. There is a tendency to amend the laws in regard to citizenship. We think that this movement is one that will grow. Illiterates should not be admitted to citizenship. Immigrants who manifest a vicious disposition, whose impulses are criminal, should not have this privilege. It is coming to be a question of considerable gravity whether we ought not generally to extend the period of probation. It is a complicated question. Well educated immigrants who speak our own language and who have come from under representative governments, constitutional governments, more or less of our own type, soon acquire the necessary intelligence to exercise the elective franchise properly. Those who speak other languages and require from three to five years to gain any material fluency in are less fit for citizenship. At the Jokes With the Labels on.

"People expect and want the unexpected," says a witty magazine writer in a recent number of one of the weeklies.

He really doesn't believe what he says, of course, but writes it, I suppose, because the public expects to be told that it expects the unexpected.

They want the good old safe and sane jokes—they always want plays to turn out the same way. In other words, they want what they are used to. It saves thinking.

The fact is, our boasted national sense of humor is largely a fake.

I very much fear most of our people want their humor cut in very thick slices and they want their jokes duly and firmly labeled—"This is a joke."

If you don't believe this, try a gently ironical remark upon the next magnate you encounter. Some of the most dismal scenes I have ever witnessed have been when reporters gathered to interview some "big man" and one of them perchance gayly attempted to open the conversation by some gay and ironical remark.

The way to tell a joke to some "big man" (or a little man) is to grasp him firmly by the collar and say, slowly and impressively, "I am now about to be funny. What I am going to say is not to be taken in earnest. I will give you a joggle when I get to the point."

English people often find fault with us because they say we make a joke of everything. Which indicates plainly that the English are not very well up on jokes.

It is true when two Americans meet in the street, it is a safe bet at 1000 to 1, that one or both of them will attempt to be jocose. But how often are they really funny?

The Englishman is wiser. I am inclined to believe that he has been much abused. It does not prove that he has no humor because he does not retail the cast-off jokes of George Ade.

Perhaps all these centuries, the Englishman has had in mind a joke so fearfully and wildly funny that he has too much respect for it to tell it.

But the thing that perplexes me, why is the American so continuously, but so solemnly funny. He does it as though it were a duty. He laughs as one cries from pealing onions. Not because he really wants to be funny. He feels that he has to.

You can tell this from the plays that he goes to.

"When I get through work," says the American, "I want to be amused. I like something like 'Charley's Aunt.'"

And, although "Charley's Aunt" is not in the faintest degree funny, but only silly and tiresome, after all there is certain grim, savage humor in the fact that any one should think it funny; so perhaps we have a queer twisted sense of humor after all.

THE MISSION INN.

One wandering day, with blue skies
o'er me,
Through vales aflower 'mong white peaks flung,
I trod the way they fared before me
In sandal shoon, when Time was young.

I trod the way the brown priests led me—
They that were dust before I came,
Yet spake with me on winds that sped
me
By fields of bloom and hills of flame.

They that are dust I followed after,
Till came the dream-day to its close,
And on the way, from roof to rafter,
The Mission hospice towers rose.

On dome and red roof softly clinging,
I saw the lingering sunset play,
And heard the bells of vesper ringing
Within the campanile gray.

Pater and Ave—night winds blowing—
I passed to peace and waiting shrine,
Where, in his niche, with soft lights glowing,
There smiled some well-loved saint of mine.

Roads of the world and every byway,
They sent us there at candle light
To hear, upon the old King's Highway,
A new Saint Francis speak "Goodnight."

AutoStrop Razors

No Continual Expense for New Blades.

The only razor having a self-contained stropping arrangement. This is automatic and it so conveniently sharpens, that anyone can readily restore the smooth, keen edge essential to a pleasant REAL shave.

Strops itself sharp in half the time it takes to place a new blade in any other razor. It is not unscrewed or taken apart for stropping or cleaning. Even the blade is not removed for either purpose.

Users of the old style straight razor will especially appreciate the automatic stropping, absolute safety, and fine barber's edge all combined in the AutoStrop.

Outfit complete, $5.00.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Board of Public Works is likely to ask for sprinkling bids for a new contract on the district basis, as well as on the whole city.

J. Marion Brooks and Judge James had a tilt over practices of the courts yesterday. The attorney was ordered into the custody of the Sheriff, but apologized and was released.

An adjournment was ordered in the Carlson case for two weeks, to give the acused an opportunity to summon J. Edward Larson, former assistant cashier of the Consolidated Bank, to testify.

James Hagg, convicted of participating in the hold-up of Matthew Hemming, was sentenced by Judge Willis to ten years at Folsom.

AT THE CITY HALL.

PLAN SPRINKLING BY DISTRICTS.

EFFORT TO ECONOMIZE IN ELIMINATION OF DUST.

Board of Public Works May Adopt Inspector Humphrey's Suggestion in the Specifications for a New Contract—Chance for the Small Contractors to Offer Bids.

Specifications for a new contract for street sprinkling are being prepared by the Board of Public Works and it is hoped to adopt them during the coming week. As the city spends about $125,000 annually for sprinkling and oiling streets the preparation of the specifications has been placed in charge of W. M. Humphreys, street inspector, and Mr. Humphreys expects some departures in the method now in use for the consideration of his colleagues.

At present the city hires its teams and wagons, paying $1.30 for each calendar day, whether work is performed or not. In addition the city furnishes the drivers, the purpose of this being to keep the discipline of the service under its control. About ninety teams are used daily on the average. The bill for sprinkling and oiling in 1908 was $126.468 and it is not expected to be less during this year unless better terms are made.

In an effort to reduce this expense Mr. Humphreys is considering specifications that will permit bidding for both the teams and labor for the whole city or by districts. It is his idea that several districts will permit bids from small contractors and enlarge competition so that in the aggregate the expense will be materially reduced. Just how many districts will be required for competitive purposes is not determined.

Still Hunt for Mules.

Still on a hunt for mules for the asueduct the Board of Public Works is considering employing Edward Smith, formerly assistant fire chief, to look for the 300 animals now needed. It is believed Smith could scour Southern California and get this number of acclimated mules within the price of $220 a head fixed by the Council. The purchase of animals in an eastern market might be dangerous, as the change of climate might prove expensive.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

ANGRY LAWYER IS ARRESTED.

JUDGE STERNLY REBUKES HIM FOR INSULTING SPEECH.

Brooks Later Released from Custody After Making Humble Apology, Disclaiming Intentional Contempt of Bench—Trouble Arises Over His Disregard for Court's Ruling.

J. Marion Brooks and Judge James had a "run-in," so to speak, in Department Four of the Superior Court yesterday, over the features of a divorce case, and when the incident was closed, the attorney had succeeded in making his peace with the court, although at the sacrifice of considerable self-possession and with rumpled feelings.

The trouble arose over a suit brought by Katerina Marengo for a decree of separation from Olympia Marengo, in default on account of the disappearance of Olympia, who, it is claimed, has hied himself to his dear old Italy. A receiver had been appointed for the property of the defendant, and about $1000 secured by its sale. There are some debts against the estate, and the point at issue was whether Brooks, as a creditor and attorney for Marengo, and after the latter had defaulted, could file an answer. The court said he could not, and intimated that Brooks, as an old practitioner at the bar in Los Angeles county, ought to know it.

The conversation waxed just a bit warm, when Brooks intimated that he would file an answer, in spite of the ruling of the court.

"If this is done, Col. Brooks, you will be in contempt. It will not be received," said the judge.

"I will try to file it, anyhow," angrily replied Brooks, "if I am disbarred for it."

"Take Col. Brooks into custody, Mr. Sheriff," quietly said Judge James, and a bailiff moved over quickly to the attorney and shoved him into a seat by his desk.

"Call the case of Wolfskey against Wolfskey, an action in divorce," said the court.

Meanwhile, Brooks, fretting and fuming, looked at the court in a pleading way, as if to see some signs of relenting in the judge's countenance.

The divorce case was begun when Brooks, in a tone that indicated his desire to "square" himself, arose and said:

"May it please the court, I hope I have not been in contempt in this matter. If I have offended, I humbly ask the pardon of the court, as I intended nothing of the sort. I have known the court for a long time, and meant nothing wrong. I think I have a right to present this motion, and will try to do so at the proper time, but I hope the court will overlook my remarks."

Judge James said severely: "Col. Brooks, this is not the first time you have been disrespectful to the court, but on account of your age and the warm personal feeling of friendship entertained for you, these lapses have been allowed to go. You have a very insulting way of speaking that you must curb in this court."

Then, after studying over the matter a moment, the judge continued: "You can go this time, but never let such an occasion be brought to my attention again."

SAMPLE FAMILY JARS.

STORIES OF HUMAN DERELICTS.

"There are times when a man, although he may desire to be honest, cannot be. With this remark to a friend in the summer of 1907, Louis Wolfskey, a prosperous hay-dealer of this city, left, and his wife has been unable to locate him since. Before shaking the dust off his feet, however, Wolfskey borrowed a lot of money from friends, and they are still waiting for him. Judge James heard the story of the abandonment and granted the decree. Just what the clever Wolfskey had in mind when he delivered his brief on honesty will probably never be known.

Minnie M. Riblet had the Gordian knot that bound her to Charles W. Riblet severed by the same court. The Riblets were Ohio people, and lived in Warren, Trumbull county. The husband was addicted to the drink and gaming habit, and consumed all of the substance accumulated by the wife in keeping boarders and roomers in the little town on the western reserve. One of the witnesses testified that he often had to assist Riblet home, even carrying him. Judge James thought that sufficient.

Extreme Cruelty was the charge Grace Frith made against Edward, her husband, a cook of this city. The little woman said that at one time, when his conduct had become unbearable, she left him but returned again after the parties had drawn up an agreement that they would forget the past and be happy ever after. The document signed by the pair, was in court. Edward was good but a few weeks, when he broke out again, and has allowed the parents of his wife to support her and their little child since 1907. The decree was granted and Mrs. Frith, not more than 20 years of age, and looking as if she deserves a good husband, swept out of the room, her joy mirrored in her face.

OUR JAIL A MODEL.

PRAISE BY IOWA VISITORS.

A party of officers, consisting of Capt. Mat Mier and Patrolmen E. W. Kaul and W. H. Black of Ottumwa, Iowa, visitors at the Los Angeles County Jail yesterday afternoon, were loud in their praise of conditions found there. "It is one of the neatest, best-ventilated and most sanitary jails I ever saw, and the people of Los Angeles are to be congratulated upon these facts," said Capt. Black. "The cells are neat and clean, and there is an air of comfort not always met with in similar places. We have a good jail at Ottumwa, but are not in the class with Los Angeles. We also visited the City Jail and found it in excellent condition."

The party left for San Francisco in the evening, en route home. They were summoned as witnesses in the Duden murder trial at San Diego, Mrs. Effie Duden, charged with the murder of Bruce Sheffler, being a former resident of Ottumwa, where her reputation was most unsavory.

A HOLD-UP SALTED.

HAWLEY CASE POSTPONED.

Henry Hagg, aged 33, found guilty by a jury in Judge Willis's court of participating in a hold-up, with Matthew Hemming as the victim, was sentenced to ten years in Folsom yesterday. The young wife of the prisoner, seemingly not more than 18, was present, and the baby on her knee cooed softly and poked its little fists into its mouth. The wife and mother wept as if her heart would break and clung to her husband as he was taken away by the officers.

Hagg, with two other men, whose identity has not been discovered, robbed Hemming of $28.40 on the night of December 14. It was in evidence that Hagg pretended to Hemming that he could get him a job that evening, but they had to go and see a certain contractor, whom Hagg did not name, to make the arrangements. Hemming was taken down an alley, when two men jumped out at him, and while one held a gun at his face, and the other pinioned his arms, Hagg went through his clothes and took the money. Hagg secured the hat worn by Hemming that night, and had it on when arrested.

A. A. Gerson, who pleaded guilty to forgery, was allowed to go free on a five-year term of probation.

F. R. Hawley, the pawnbroker, convicted of grand larceny in stealing a fine ring, the property of Isabella Williams of Chicago, was in court with his attorney, who gave notice that a motion for a new trial will be made. The matter was then allowed to go over for one week, when Hawley will be up for sentence.

A. H. Woodburn, burglary, and A. L. Calvert, forgery, both pleading guilty, will be sentenced next Saturday.

C. A. Hanson pleaded guilty to uttering a fictitious check, and an application was made for his release on probation.

George R. Miller, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, pleaded guilty to a simple assault, and will be sentenced Tuesday morning.

Frank Meagher, found guilty of burglary by a jury, was sentenced to five years in San Quentin. This will be Meagher's second term, he having been released from Folsom only a short time before he, with Ben Whitney, entered the room of Ella Leeper on Alvarado street, last January, and took a lot of wearing apparel.

CARLSON HEARING.

OVER FOR TWO WEEKS.

In the Carlson case before Justice Stephens yesterday, the defendant filed an affidavit that J. Edward Larson, assistant cashier of the Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles in December, 1907, is an important witness, whose presence is desirable, but who is now living in Minneapolis. It is intimated in the statement that if there is anything wrong with the affairs of the institution Larson was at fault. Carlson wants thirty days to produce Larson.

Deputy District Attorney Blair objected to the delay. The defendant Carlson jumped up and heatedly responded: "There is such a thing as persecution, jumping on a man when he is down. No one should accuse me of not making due diligence in this matter. This little case now going on referring to the prosecution for alleged fraud now before the court is going to hurt the depositors of the Consolidated Bank, and the assets may be sold at 10 cents on the dollar, if some consideration is not shown by the District Attorney's office."

Mr. Blair: "This is one of the tactics shown by the defense for the last six months; it is simply for delay. Larson will not help the defendant, and he knows it. There will be no effort made to get Larson. The affidavit is for delay and nothing else. We ask that this case be closed up at once."

Carlson pleaded for delay. He said the committee of Los Angeles bankers is now examining the assets of the Consolidated Bank, and it is necessary that he be with them. Then raising his voice to a concert pitch, Carlson shouted: "There is a man in this room trying to wreck the bank. He has taken particular pains to ruin it." As Carlson spoke he pointed his finger at Evan Lewis, custodian of the bank, who was sitting in the rear of the room.

"Gentlemen will preserve the proprieties in the courtroom," said Justice Stephens, but Lewis would not down, and his voice trembling with rage, so angry he could scarcely speak, managed to say: "Your Honor, I suppose that man——" but he was cut off by the vigorous rapping of the court.

Justice Stephens granted a continuance until April 5, for Carlson to produce either Larson or an affidavit from him. On Thursday morning in the same court the case charging Carlson with the embezzlement of $126 of the Consolidated Bank funds, will be up for hearing.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

INCORPORATIONS. The following incorporations were filed yesterday: The California Builders' Supply Company, capital stock $25,000, directors, B. H. Lewis, Charles H. Bushness and G. D. Chase; the Cliff Oil Company, capital stock $50,000, directors, W. F. Young, W. C. Price, W. D. Wilson and E. C. Price.

ASKS DAMAGES. Fred Rich brought an action against the Los Angeles Pacific Company yesterday, asking $4050 damages, by reason of a collision between a car and his team of mules and a truck, February 5, resulting in alleged severe injuries to the plaintiff.

TICHENOR CASE. R. W. Kemp addressed the jury for the defense in the case of George N. Tichenor, charged with embezzling funds of the Continental Building and Loan Association of San Francisco, in Judge Wilbur's court, yesterday. The hearing was then postponed until Monday, when a deputy district attorney will close for the people.

ALLEGED DISTURBERS. Judge Summerfield and a jury in Justice Pierce's court partially heard the case against Glen Ward, George Nevins and Harley Foster of Artesia, charged with disturbing the peace, the complainant being A. T. Hobbs.

SEEKS ANNULMENT. Minnie Morrison filed a petition in the Superior Court, asking for the annulment of her marriage to George Morrison. She alleges they were married in Los Angeles, May 17, 1907, and she had been divorced in Kansas City, April 26, 1907, from P. J. Tonges. Under the laws of Missouri six months are required from the date of a decree of divorce before either party to it is eligible to again marry. She alleges that she did not know of this provision of the statutes when she contracted her second marriage.

AT CATALINA. Judge Charles Monroe, with a party of friends, went to Catalina to spend the week end. Judge James disposed of two divorce cases in his courtroom, yesterday.

WEAKNESS OF RECALL SEEN IN LOS ANGELES.

[From the Argonaut, San Francisco.]

Doubtless the men who have engineered this first attempt to recall a Mayor of an American city have made themselves believe that they have done what was for the best—the so-called political reformers of that stamp generally are of the belief that they are doing the right thing at all times, regardless of what consequences may come from their efforts. But the evidences to date tend to show that they have made an ugly mess of it, and that the recall is a dangerous thing to play with. It would seem that it is not only dangerous, but doubly so, from the fact that it is so easily promoted. It is a weapon that invites a certain class of people to fool with it by its very nature. It may be loaded right up to the muzzle and not show any evidences of holding a charge at all.

And whatever else may be said against the recall proposition, as presented to the people of Los Angeles, this much is certain: It permits of political methods being used which would put to shame the leaders of the "old machine." It has demonstrated that fact in the short time it has been under way in Los Angeles. It does not protect the people from gag rule and machine methods, because these methods have been used to the very full and at its first trial. How much worse it will be, after it becomes thoroughly understood, it is hard to say.

There is another consideration: The advocates of the recall said that it was cheap; that it was well within the reach of any city of moderate means. But now it appears that its first application has plunged the city of Los Angeles into long litigation, and law is expensive; a luxury, in fact, which some cities cannot afford. And after working all around the thing we find ourselves again at the original proposition. Of what use is it? Could not the results that have been obtained in Los Angeles have been reached in a much more expeditious way, and more cheaply, than through the use of the recall? If the Mayor was grafting, or other officials were grafting, or some official was acting indiscreetly, and some citizen, or some organization, had information of the fact, could not the individual or organization have brought about the removal of the guilty party without the recall much more easily and much more cheaply?

It seems so now, and it also seems that by doing it in some other way there would not have been left the suspicion—if it is nothing stronger than that—that the party or parties behind the movement wished to see somebody else occupying the place of the official against whom the recall was directed.

SCHEMER EARL'S GAME.

[From Last Evening's Record.]

It is only necessary to allow the alleged "reformers," who are attempting to foist George Alexander on the people of Los Angeles as their Mayor, to prattle unrestrained, and they are certain to show their real designs.

Such has been the case ever since the recall movement was inaugurated by E. T. Earl, and that particular gentleman has been trapped with the goods on him on several occasions.

After vehemently denying that the principle of the recall was involved in the present political tangle, Mr. Earl now suddenly discovers that the "recall principle" can only be saved through the election of Alexander.

Mr. Earl likewise strenuously objects to the courts determining the exact legal status of the present tangle, though the protection of the interests of every taxpayer demands that the courts should solve the perplexing problem.

Eminent legal authorities have given it as their opinion that the resignation of Mayor Harper vitiated the recall election. If such is the case, Los Angeles is without a Mayor today, and the election of Mr. Stephens to serve until the election is held was entirely illegal. Other authorities hold otherwise. It is for the courts to finally decide the question, and to set the municipal government on a sound legal foundation.

But Mr. Earl persists in prattling about the "recall principle." Mr. Earl is interested in the "recall principle" to about the same soulful extent as the Sultan of Sulu is interested in the ten commandments.

The attitude assumed by Mr. Earl in having the courts finally adjudicate the dangerous problem confronting the city shows that he is likewise entirely unconcerned regarding the interests of the people of this city.

All Mr. Earl wants is the placing of George Alexander in the office of Mayor.

Mr. Earl knows that 75 per cent. of the taxpayers of Los Angeles do not want Alexander as Mayor. Yet he brazenly prattles about the "recall principle," "people's interests," etc., ad nauseam.

The Record entered the recall fight to save the "recall principle" from prostitution at the hands of Edwin T. Earl, Meyer Lissner et al. The placing of George Alexander in the Mayor's chair will imperil the "recall."

While a fluke election has brought an unusual situation before the people, yet if a man as unfitted for Mayor as George Alexander is should slip into office, the enemies of the "recall" will have a dangerously strong following in any effort they may make to have this safeguard of the people removed from the statute books.

If Mr. Earl was interested in saving the "recall," he would attempt to prevent George Alexander from becoming Mayor of Los Angeles.

As shown before, Mr. Earl has never played square with the people of Los Angeles since the recall movement was inaugurated.

He is not interested in the "recall principle," or the "interests of the people."

He is interested only in Edwin T. Earl. It is about time that he should arrive at the conclusion that the people of Los Angeles have long since discovered his game, and cease to inflict the hypocritical twaddle on a disgusted people.

IMPORTANT COMMISSION.

Dr. Lindley Goes to Europe as Representative of Charities Boards of Two States.

Dr. Walter Lindley left yesterday for New York, whence he will sail on April 1 for Europe. He goes with letters to leading surgeons in Paris, London and Edinburgh, and will investigate all that is new and desirable in hospital equipment in the Old World.

Dr. Lindley has been appointed by the Governor of California and the State Board of Charities to report on the methods of industrial schools and reformatories of Great Britain; he also goes as representative of the board of managers of the New York State Charities Aid Association, of which Joseph H. Choate is president, to secure information in regard to the care of dependent children.

Dr. and Mrs. Lindley will be in Stratford-on-Avon the week beginning April 19, which is designated as "Shakespeare's Birth-week," April 23 being his birthday. They will return to America in time for the doctor to read a paper before the National Conference of Charities and Correction, which meets in Buffalo, N. Y., June 12. His subject will be: "Educational Methods in the Industrial Schools of Great Britain."

Body Brussels Rugs
Combine Every Bedroom Essential

If you are thinking of a new rug for one of your bedrooms, the "California" believes that one of these Body Brussels is the most practical ru you can buy.

For real wear there are few rugs made to sur pass them. The fabric is short looped and does not hold the dust like heavy pile fabrics and is therefore more sanitary.

The beautiful harmonious coloring, and simple design in which these rugs come make them particularly restf and appropriate for bedroom use.

The "California" shows them in many artistic effects quiet monotones, light blues, pinks and greens, Colonial yel lows, small Dresden patterns, delft blue and white.

We select every rug in our whole stock with individu care and thought and with special consideration for th needs of our Southern California homes.

This extreme care in buying puts the "California's" rug colle tion in a class entirely above what is found in the ordinary stor And every rug in the whole collection is priced as low as its quali can possibly allow. "California" values are never excelled. O prices for room size rugs range from $20.00 to $55.00. Where s sired, we will make rugs to order in any special shape or size to any room.

We invite you to come and visit our Carpet and Rug Department—it is on ond floor—where the Wall Papers and Draperies are—so that all may be selec harmonize.

Some attractive designs in Body Brussels Rugs and Carpets suitable for use are shown in one of our windows this week.

GARNERING GOLD.

BY RICHARD W. REMY.

RICH as are the agricultural resources of the territory tributary to Los Angeles, they are far surpassed by the mineral wealth which modern transportation facilities have brought from once seemingly impossible distances almost to her very gates.

The production of minerals—including all the precious and useful metals and oil—constitutes the larger volume of business in industrial channels on the Pacific Coast and Los Angeles, by reason of her location and splendid shipping facilities to all parts of the world, now has a fair share of it. But there are greater opportunities knocking at her doors and within are men keen and farsighted enough not to let them slip by. Mining kings from the whole Pacific Slope—Alaska to Mexico—bring their wealth hither and have created here a great center of mining activity. But there are possibilities, rather we should say strong probabilities, that Los Angeles will also soon become a center of production. All that is needed is smelters. Ore is now carried from the mines of Mexico and South America past Los Angeles to the smelters at San Francisco. With the splendid harbor at San Pedro, which will be assured by consolidation, there is no reason why the ore-laden ships from the South should not stop here and discharge their cargoes for reduction in local smelters.

'FRISCO MADE BY MINING.

It is well known that San Francisco owes her greatest development to the Comstock and a few other mines in Northern California and Nevada. And, when we contrast the then limited with the tremendous area of rich mining country which has since been opened, it is easier to form a conception of what the mining industry is yet to do for Los Angeles.

According to statistics furnished by George N. Nolan, secretary of the Chamber of Mines, mineral production of California for 1908 approximated a valuation of $60,000,000. Of this amount $25,000,000 represents the production of oil, of which one-half is handled from Los Angeles.

Stretching out to the north and the south are the great mining regions. The Salt Lake, the Santa Fé and the Tonopah & Tidewater railroads have brought this city into close touch with that vast storehouse of mineral wealth in Nevada, the surface of which has hardly been scratched. Pioche, which now has the largest tonnage of any camp in Nevada, with the possible exception of Virginia City, lies on the Salt Lake route. And just over the line in Nevada near Pioche are great deposits of coal which have just been opened by operators from the State of West Virginia and which will give Los Angeles better and cheaper fuel than she has had heretofore.

Development in the great mineral empire of Arizona is also being stimulated by shorter routes of travel, notably the Parker cut-off to the new million-dollar bridge that spans the Colorado River and which, we are assured, will be completed to a connection with the Santa Fé at or near Bagdad, early in the coming fall. The Ray Consolidated mines of that State, which are being financed and managed from Los Angeles, are preparing to construct a plant that will cost $3,000,000. The Clara Consolidated near Bouse, Ariz., which has a new smelter now under way, is owned principally by a Los Angeles man.

Looking farther to the southward we find that the great mineral wealth of Mexico is the immediate inducement for the building of the railroad from Guaymas through the heart of a great mining region to Mazatlan on the coast, via Culiacan, capital of Sinaloa, and thence through Tepic territory to Guadalajara. The demands of the mining industry along this west coast have secured to Los Angeles within the last few months new steamship service, the Curacoa making San Pedro a port of call for traffic between that place and Guaymas. It is noted that this steamer stops at Mazatlan, which is on the new Harriman line, giving water and rail competition between Los Angeles and that city.

ALASKAN MINING MEN COME.

But Los Angeles is not a center of attraction for Nevada, Arizona and Mexico mining men exclusively. Miners and operators from Alaska who formerly stopped at Seattle or San Francisco are coming here to spend the winters when operations in the far north are closed by the rigor of the climate there. And in this connection it is worth while to mention that the largest dredge in Alaska is owned and operated by the Three Friends Company, composed wholly of Los Angeles men.

Surely with all the advantages which Los Angeles possesses by reason of its geographical location, its splendid shipping facilities, which are to be still further improved, and its climatic attractions, the city is destined to become the great mining center of the Pacific Slope. Millions of dollars made in mining have already been brought to Los Angeles and invested in business and residence structures and industrial enterprises and there are millions m[illegible] to come.

PALO VERDE VALLEY.

Reclamation Service to Be Asked to Take Hold of Work of Irrigation.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEIGHBORS, March 20.—The people in the Palo Verde Valley on the government side of the line are getting anxious for the reclamation service to take hold of the work of irrigating the 60,000 acres of valley land to the west of the Blythe ranch holdings. At a meeting at the schoolhouse last Saturday money was raised to employ legal talent and a committee of three, Messrs. Schellinger, Edwards and Clark, appointed to see "where we are at," as th[illegible] over said. A petition addressed to the Secretary of the Interior Department is being largely signed by the land owners on the west side of the valley. It asks that the Reclamation Service give the valley an adequate water service, and proceeds:

"We have waited for action on this matter for many years. We trust that when you get through with the Laguna project at Yuma you may take up the work of the Palo Verde improvement. We have little hope of help from any other source."

J. E. Neighbors has [illegible] a quarter-section of his homestead and will take gravity water from the Blythe system for eighty acres of the remainder of his holdings.

The Palo Verde Mutual Water Company has an extra force of teams at work on the big ditches in order to get water running to the large number of new ranches opening on the Blythe lands.

The Rannells Land Company has made arrangements for water service by the Blythe system to irrigate three sections in township eight, where the new town of Rannells is located.

A large party of "mesa" land seekers came into the valley on the 16th, including G. B. Goodrich, W. C. Hargraves, J. B. Wade, W. R. Stocker, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Edwards and Miss Ruth Edwards, all of Redlands; C. S. Goodrich and John Woy of Los Angeles, and W. H. L. Symington of Santa Monica. It was a strenuous day, as the sixty miles of desert from Glamis to Colorado City was covered in less than six hours. Teams were in waiting and the tired, dust-covered people were bundled into farm wagons and hurried some fifteen miles farther on to the scene of their desert claims. It was 10 o'clock p.m. when they returned. It took every extra bed in the young town to accommodate some of them and the others slept under the stars

WILL EXTEND TO UPLAND.

Gas Service to Be Installed by Those Who Are Laying the Ontario Mains.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UPLAND, March 20.—It is now assured that the gas service to be installed in Ontario will be extended to Upland, the necessary 200 consumers here having been secured. It is thought the service will begin about the first of June. Pasadena and Los Angeles capitalists are behind the enterprise.

Word has been received by friends here from James Birch, who was recently called to San Francisco, stating that Mrs. Birch is still very low, and that there is no possible chance of her recovery.

The Woman's Literary Club will entertain Tuesday the members of the various woman's clubs of the southern district. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock, after which Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, author and composer, will give original selections in poetry and song.

In the Superior Court at San Bernardino, May 11, will come up for hearing the case in which the city of Ontario seeks to have the Santa Fé Railroad vacate the site of its present depot here, in the opening of Second avenue. In this matter Upland has a vital interest, as the street sought to open is a southern outlet of the main business artery.

Friends here have received invitations to the wedding of Prof. F. Frank Palmer and Miss Grace Greenleaf, both well-known young people of Upland, who will be wed on the 27th inst. at the home of the parents of the bride, on San Antonio Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Reynolds were called to Covina today to attend the funeral of Mrs. Reynolds's uncle, Col. Frank M. Chapman.

Horace Little of this city has resigned the position of foreman of the Cucamonga Lemon Exchange packing-house, and he is succeeded by Frank Knight, formerly of Whittier.

DIES ON RUNAWAY TRAIN.

Sixteen Ore Cars Flash Down Steep Grade With Engineer Sounding Warning Note.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

COMO (Colo.) March 20.—An ore train of sixteen loaded cars on the Colorado and Southern Railway got beyond control on the steep grade from Boreas Pass on the crest of the continental divide, last night, and jumped the track at a sharp curve while going at the rate of ninety miles an hour. Engineer Bud Schwartz, who stuck to his engine in an heroic effort to stop the train, was instantly killed. The other members of the train crew jumped from the train when they realized it was beyond control, and escaped with minor bruises.

So great was the momentum of the train when it left the track that the cars and engine were piled in a heap of scrap fifty feet from the right of way. When Engineer Schwartz realized that his train was beyond control he grasped the whistle cord, and all the way down the seven miles of steep grade his engine kept giving out its shrill note of warning. Schwartz went to his death with the cord in his hand.

RICH STRIKE AT JEROME.

A rich body of ore has been uncovered on the Verde claim in the Jerome Verde copper mine at Jerome, Ariz., 1000 feet in a northerly direction from those proven continuous from the surface to the 450-foot level, and in an almost direct line from where the gold quartz was found a few weeks ago. A shaft is being sunk at a favorable point near the gold finds, a half mile north of the main shaft, and it is expected a complete ledge will be developed from north to south traversing practically the entire Jerome property.

It will be roofed with lumber resting on concrete piers and girders, which work will require 205,000 feet of lumber.

Water will be supplied through a twenty-four-inch gravity main, from the Solano avenue reservoir, which is supplied from the Elysian Park pumping station.

The entire cost of the reservoir will be about $29,000, and it will add greatly to the efficiency of the city's water supply.

During the past few years a number of fine residences have been built on the high ground surrounding this picturesque little valley, and their owners are not a little disturbed to find that their homes are about to be located on the rim of a board-covered reservoir. If it was not for the roof, they would be on the borders of a handsome little lake, which would not appear so objectionable, but the city has owned the site for many years, and that it would be set apart for its destined purpose was but a matter of time, and adjacent property owners have no just cause for complaint. There is no question, however, but that it will detract from the picturesqueness of the landscape, which hundreds of people have been wont to view almost every day, as they wandered about the neighborhood of the vine-clad Church of the Angels.

CAN GET GARFIELD PARK.

Opportunity Presents Itself to South Pasadena to Secure Land for the City.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SOUTH PASADENA, March 20.—A committee representing the East Side Improvement Association has asked the Trustees to coöperate in an effort to secure possession of Garfield Park for the city. The Southern Pacific Railroad, the owner, wishes to exchange it for some adjoining property. As these tracts are owned by private interests it will be necessary for the city to purchase the same. A hitch in negotiations has been caused by the owners fearing the Southern Pacific Company wishes to establish extensive yards and depot grounds. A committee composed of Messrs. Dodge, Hargraves and Boothe was appointed to take up the matter, and the City Clerk will notify interested property owners that the board will receive propositions for the sale of the desired tracts Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond B. Moore are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, of Hotel Capitola.

The exhibition under the auspices of the Rembrandt Art Club in the Masonic Hall opened with a reception and private view this evening, and will be free to the public all next week.

F. T. McCormick of Springfield, O., is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. Z. Gardner, No. 515 El Centro street.

Eugene V. Chafin will address a union meeting of the members of the South Pasadena churches in the First Methodist Church tomorrow evening.

An exhibit of school work from all grades of the grammar schools, as well as the High School, was shipped this morning to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle.

Mission street property owners are holding the matter of paving that throughfare in abeyance in the hope that some action regarding sewers will be taken in the near future. The idea is to get the mains and pipes in before the paving work is done.

MIRACLES OF RICHEST GOLD.

Spectacular Reception of Messenger.

Is Strike Second Goldfield or Mere Pocket?

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 19.—While wonderfully rich rock is coming from the new gold strike near Vicksburg, it hasn't been demonstrated thus far whether the find is a second Goldfield or merely a gold crevice such as have been found before this in the desert hills. Its location is in favor of the generally accepted idea that a real bonanza has been uncovered. Only about twenty miles to the southward is Harqua Hala, where for years was worked one of the most remarkable gold mines of the West. To the eastward lies the old Vulture, the greatest gold mine ever known in Arizona, where the surface float was hauled away in wagons, under guard, to the coast. Northeast lie the Congress and Octave gold mines and Rich Hill, where the Weaver party worked the first and greatest placer diggings of the Southwest. Southwest are Quartzsite and a half dozen other gold camps of undoubted permanence, with Kofa and the Mayhew strikes beyond. Within a week something much more definite will be known about the new find. At present even the men on the ground seem to be unable to tell whether they have a pocket or a mine.

A batch of the ore arrived in Phoenix, in charge of Dick Wick Hall of Salome, and he and the ore were escorted in somewhat spectacular fashion from the depot to the office of a local realty company, with a considerable part of the unattached population of the city following. Close inspection sustained the stories that had been wired concerning the richness of the ore. In very much oxidized iron the gold lay in flakes and wires, in some places as large in volume as the rock which it held together. Very plainly, it was from a weather-beaten outcropping, yet it is streaked with copper and, outside of the decomposed iron, probably would have to be concentrated. With it came four assays that had been made by a Salome assayer. Expanded from ounces to dollars, the certificates showed that the ore ran, to the ton, $238,500, $254,560, $117,334 and $179,440, each with a small percentage of copper.

This ore was dug out from under the great diorite and schist dyke, coming from a hole that was less than four feet across and less than that number of feet deep. The miners were not sure whether it was a real ledge or merely a sort of float pocket. But if the latter, the gold came from somewhere in the great dyke overhead, though all the "float" found has been below the discovery. It is told that more than twenty feet of quartz lies on either side of the dyke and that good values have been found in this quartz at many points.

The claims, known as the Great Northern group, three in number, are not entirely new, for the gold was found while location work was being done by the owners, Henry Barker, Hiram Griffin and Al Alger. Scores of prospects have been located and worked for years past in the near vicinity, both of copper and gold, and the fame of the richness of what is usually known as the Granite Wash Mountain district has been widely known. The Great Northern dyke is several miles long and is in no wise different in appearance from a score of great ledges that are being raked over in the near vicinity.

NOT EXAGGERATED.

According to J. W. Milnes of Prescott, who has just returned from the scene, previous reports of the find have not been exaggerated. He says: "Unquestionably it is the most sensational gold strike ever made in Arizona, and the district bids fair to be a second Cripple Creek. Gold, both in chunks and wire form, is embedded in hematite of iron, and in a formation of schist and shale and in brown spar, which itself forms a long string of free gold. A pan of loose dirt from the dump produced a teaspoonful of fine gold. Pieces of rock picked up in the gulch and tested with nitric acid reveal specimens that contain one-fourth gold. About every one who has visited the strike has picked up specimens running in value over $100,000 to the ton."

For the time being, work has been stopped on the discovery shaft and the hole has been filled up. Too much ore was being abstracted at night.

Over a mile distant from the original strike, Joe Fuller, Harry Amme and Dan Ewer found a very similar deposit of free gold in quartz gangue at the base of a big quartz blowout. Claims have been located for several miles around the original location, but one hill appears to be about as good as the next in bright possibility of carrying immense mineral wealth in its crevices. Every train since the report got out has been crowded with gold seekers, who have detrained for the new Golconda from Vicksburg, Salome and Bouse. Vicksburg is nearest, but Salome and Bouse have rather the better facilities for caring for the traveler. The last couple of miles must be made on foot or horseback.

A $300,000 bond is said to have been made by the owners of the original strike to some Los Angeles men interested in the Clara Consolidated, who are due to pay down $10,000 on Saturday, with the understanding that they are to have all the ore on the dump. The locators will be pleased to have this bond run out, and will probably refuse to sell for any reasonable figure if the $10,000 be not paid down on the nail. The Amme claims have been bonded for $100,000.

RAWHIDE DISCOVERER.

A report came today that very high-grade ore had been struck near the railroad, eight miles south of the Arizona Northern, by some prospectors whose names were not given.

C. B. Holman, the man who discovered the gold deposit at Rawhide, Nev., and who named that camp, is in the thick of the excitement of the new discovery. A couple of weeks ago he located some claims of his own in the vicinity, about ten miles south of Bouse. He has found a ledge of rhyolite and phenolite, from which assays have given him values running not less than $34 and up to $241 a ton. He says the ore is identical in character with that on Mascot Hill at Rawhide. Some of the rock shows free gold, but most of it is chalky stuff that would have little attraction to the average prospector, though it contains high values. The vein is from seven to twenty feet wide on the surface and free milling. Holman has located fourteen claims. He is negotiating for a property near by with a hundred-foot shaft sunk a number of years ago.

The Alvin Development Company of Houghton, Mich., is working the Ultimatum group of eighteen claims in the Harcuvar Mountains, ten miles north of Salome, under the management of A. Tennyson Pryor, president of the corporation. Mr. Pryor is sinking for water with a churn drill, and when it is secured will start development. On a number of the claims are fine prospects of copper in a great iron blowout. The district is remarkable in that sulphide ores are found almost on the very surface.

OKLAHOMA MONEY.

A company headed by Dr. F. J. DeGiers of New York, but mainly capitalized in Oklahoma City, has been organized under the name of the Stanton Rich Hill Gold Mining Company and has acquired nearly all of the famous Rich Hill, near Stanton, where the Pauline Weaver party discovered phenomenal gold placers back in 1864. An old mill is being operated to its daily capacity of fifteen tons, a forty-stamper of the highest grade has been ordered and will be finished in about nine months. Forty men are employed on the mine, under the superintendence of George B. Upton, formerly of the Oro Grande. The corporation is a dividend payer, even with its present limited equipment.

DREDGE BUSY.

A large dredge has arrived at Glendale and is being freighted out to the placer ground of the Flour Gold Mining Company on Humbug Creek, under the superintendence of W. A. Bondurant of Los Angeles, president and manager. The company is operating a hydraulic plant at the present time, washing about 2000 cubic yards of gravel a day. The dredge has capacity for handling two yards of dirt a minute and will work in places where the hydraulic outfit is not available and with a very much smaller consumption of water.

Litigation has started at Prescott within the Unida Gold Mining Company, in which two factions of directors have been elected. It is claimed that the secretary, George Falda of Cleveland, O., sold 500,000 shares of the capital stock of the company at one-half cent a share, the opposition maintaining that a proper price would have been 25 cents a share. It is even stated that the sale was not for cash but that notes were taken and that the sole object was to secure enough stock to control a late stockholders' meeting held in Phoenix. The company has a group of eleven claims twelve miles northeast of Wickenburg.

VARIOUS PROPERTIES.

A couple of Lane mills are to be added to the equipment of the Arizona Copper-Gold Mines Company, in Cherry Creek district and the company's ten-stamp mill moved to a better location on one of the mines.

At Jerome, the Verde Copper has resumed work on its 375-foot shaft, which will be sunk to the 1000-foot level.

An air compressor, capable of supplying eighteen drills, has been received at the Tom Reed mine in Mohave county.

A strike of high-grade copper ore was made during the week in the April Fool shaft of the Calumet and Arizona Company at Courtland, 1200 feet northwest of the company's Germania mine. The Calumet and Arizona has options on a group of twelve additional claims at Courtland from Morgan & Snyder, the price to be $150,000.

Ore running from $50 up to $600 a ton has been struck in a winze on the 700-foot level in the Boom shaft of the Tombstone Mines Company. A new high-grade body has also been found in a drift from the company's Toughnut shaft.

Work is to be started Sunday at Bisbee sinking the main shaft of the Denn-Arizona from the 1200-foot level to 1300 feet of depth.

CANANEA DOINGS.

General Manager Ricketts of the Greene-Cananea Company states that the report that his company is about to build a new million-dollar concentrator is little short of foolish. Its only basis is the fact that he has decided to add eighty vanners to the present concentrating equipment, which includes two mills with daily capacity for 2400 tons. The addition will not increase the mill's capacity but will add to its efficiency. Last month the product at the Cananea mines was 3,850,000 pounds, with 80,000 ounces of silver. Something more than this is expected for March. It is claimed that the gross cost, including transportation, was 10½ cents per pound. About 2700 men are employed, all but 700 of them Mexicans, and the greatest economy is manifested in all the departments, a very radical change in the old-time administration.

STOCKHOLDERS SOLD.

The same selling agents in Kansas City who handled the Two Queens Company's stock handled also the stock of the Mansfield Company, which has mines near Patagonia in Santa Cruz county. Frank H. Horn, one of the principals of this agent company, during a late visit to Phoenix, stated that he and his firm are now entirely out of the Mansfield, which has been reorganized and will be in operation again within a few months. He claimed that the only trouble was that a number of the stockholders became busy selling their own holdings in competition of the treasury stock, thus depriving the company of the income necessary for development and improvement.

A new main shaft is to be sunk on the Twin Buttes property below Tucson, owing to the fact that the ore body in the main levels is pitching away from the main shaft which has a depth of 400 feet.

RAY CENTRAL BUYS.

Today, according to a telegram from New York, $2,000,000 was deposited in that city by Ray Central Mining Company, in payment for the property of the Kelvin-Calumet Company at Ray, Pinal county, consisting of twelve claims and a small concentrating mill. These will be added to the Ray Central holdings, now about as extensive as those of the original Ray company. It is told that the Lewisohns of New York furnished funds for the purchase.

An Ideal Home for the Summer.

GOLDFIELD.

CONSOLIDATED BONANZA FIND.

CAMP STIRRED TO DEPTHS BY BIG STRIKE.

High-Grade Found That Compares With the Famous Hays-Monnette's Glory Holes—Location Is Close to That Lease—Florence Mill Is Running at Last.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) March 19.—After a stagnation lasting over a year the camp was startled with another story of high grade that sent the blood leaping impetuously through the veins of every man in the district who is interested in a foot of ground. This was the story of the bonanza find on the Combination No. 1 owned by the Goldfield Consolidated. In the absence of other comparisons it is likened to the glory holes of the Hays-Monnette lease, which netted the leasers four millions in six months and produced a carload of high grade that shattered all records for values. From the 600 to the 400 level. The immense deposit was followed and at this time after two weeks of exploration the end of the shoot has not been discovered. The chief value is that it opens what is practically a new territory and will furnish probably 700 feet of high grade extending from the point of discovery to the Mohawk close to the old workings of the Hays-Monnette lease. Another singular fact is that the quartz is very similar to that of the Hays-Monnette ledge which has never been duplicated in the camp. Not a foot of ground has been stoped but in exploiting the discovery the miners went through a solid body of ore and took out rock valued at $331,000 in prosecuting their work, Manager MacKenzie estimates that there is already blocked $4,000,000 with as much more probably in the adjacent territory that has not been opened.

The story of the Consolidated mill is a repetition of the former reports as the plant is working smoothly and without a single drawback to the perfect operation of the 100 stamps. Yesterday a shipment of $45,000 in bullion was made on the regular semi-weekly consignment to the mint.

The effect of the strike on the Combination has been to stimulate development and many companies that had shut down awaiting an easier money market for the sale of treasury stock are besieged by men with funds urging them to resume sinking or exploration. Before another month the influence of this strike will be felt in all sections of the camp as indicated by the sudden activity in stocks representing adjacent territory.

BULLION TAXES.

James F. Haley, the bullion tax collector, is making his quarterly examination of the producers in Southern Nevada and he confirms the story of the million-dollar a month output of the Consolidated which means a handsome addition to the revenue of Goldfield as the levy this year is $3.75 per $100. Mr. Haley says that the State is in full swing as a producer and he would not be surprised to see the gold production reach, if not exceed, $25,000,000.

RED TOP LEASE.

An extension of six months has been granted the Consolidated Red Top lease on the Red Top. The lease has paid $40,000 in dividends and is an able illustration of good management. The shaft is down 300 feet and considerable lateral work has been done. Twenty-five tons a day are being hoisted and a car sample taken yesterday averaged $85.

FLORENCE MILL RUNS.

The Florence mill is now running in excellent shape with thirty-five stamps dropping constantly. The mill is fed direct from the mine through the main shaft that is located at the side of the mill so as to permit the huge buckets of rock to be dropped directly into the ore chute that leads to the stamps. The remaining five stamps will go into commission tomorrow. This will materially increase the output of the mine for the weekly statement as the grade of ore is also advancing. The mine itself is in direct charge of President Thomas Lockhart, who is devoting his entire time to the connecting of the underground workings so as to provide ready and easy access to all sections of the mine from the company shaft.

The Yellow Tiger is rapidly approaching the zone where rich values are expected and the men may come into shipping ore at any time. The ground is becoming softer and easier to work with sulphides in abundance indicating proximity to the values.

BIG DEAL AT ELY.

Al. D. Myers of Los Angeles has been busy for the past two weeks since coming back to camp from the Johnnie mine in catching up with the fag ends of business. He and his manager, John K. Turner, have been closeted closely arranging the details of a deal at Ely that, if it goes through, calls for the payment of $500,000. This is the sale of the Ely Calumet copper property which is coveted by the Guggenheims. A Salt Lake company has the proposition in hand and the sale is likely to be consummated any day.

Al. Myers, who is known as the father of Goldfield, is also the daddy of Ely, as he was one of the first to venture into that country when the copper values began to be known. With Tex Rickard he still owns some of the valuable acreage of that camp, but he is not anxious to unload as he is fully aware of the values that the ground holds. He reports the mill at the Johnnie to be running in excellent shape and shows an express receipt for a bar of bullion that went out last week valued at $10,000.

PLACERS AND OTHERS.

The Midas Placer Mines Company operating at Ione, Nev., has been delayed in starting placering by the failure of the pipe to arrive from Los Angeles. The engines are on the ground and as soon as the pipe is put in place the company expects to begin washing 150 yards a day which, it is estimated, will run $1 to $1.25 per cubic yard. The company is a close corporation controlled by E. R. Collins and Thomas D. Murphy, former partner of Al. Myers.

The Florence State developed a new shipper on the lease known as the Penn Florence, owned by the Begole syndicate. This property was formerly called the Zinn lease and was abandoned after the leasers failed to get values in any quantity. Capt. Hooper took hold and after six months made his first smelter shipment of thirty tons that will run at the rate of $65. This is one of the few leases that remain on Florence ground as the company has canceled all as fast as the time expired and it is its intention to mill every pound of ore remaining on that rich estate that has yielded more fortunes than any similar area in the State, with the one exception of the Consolidated.

D. Mackenzie, who came up yesterday from Los Angeles to file a half million-dollar damage suit, says he is going to press development on the Jupiter placer ground and expects to have the giants working by the first of the month. His company has been ditching and preparing for an earnest campaign and all that he is waiting for is the coming of warm weather and the adjustment of a right of way for his pipe line across some neighboring property.

The town of Mina, the northern railroad center of this county, was stirred by the throes of an incipient boom caused by the discovery of a gold ledge a few miles from that town. There was a rush to make locations, but subsequent investigations did not furnish any pretext for the excitement. The first ledge opened carried good values, but the Goldfield miners who went to the scene say that they are badly scattered and deceptive.

One of the principal deals of the week was the sale of several claims at Manhattan to a company represented by Lorenzo B. Adams of New York, who declares that his associates will begin the construction of a small mill as soon as they get possession of the property. This mill will start with one unit of five stamps and if that treats the ore with economy it will be enlarged and possibly become a custom works.

The most significant transaction of the week was the merger of the Hibernia and Conqueror companies, owned by Nixon and Wingfield. The claims are on the western slope of Columbia Mountain in the heart of the proven district and close to the big mill of the Consolidated, but have not been worked for some time. In the hands of a powerful company it is more than likely that a vigorous campaign of development will be inaugurated and that another rich producer will be added to the camp. The company is incorporated under the laws of South Dakota and is controlled absolutely by Senator Nixon and George Wingfield.

That Brunswick is to have an independent smelter for the northern copper producers is a foregone conclusion, according to Col. James Yerington, who says that the proposition has been financed and that construction for a capacity of 1500 tons a day will be rushed to completion. The smelter will take the ores of a large copper district and also enter the market as a bidder for the silver-lead ores that have been recently opened in enormous quantities near Hawthorne, the old seat of Esmeralda county.

SEVEN TROUGHS.

TWELVE WILL GET SHIPPING.

SEVEN ARE SENDING ROCK FOR TREATMENT.

Three Mills Are Actually Crushing Ore and a Fourth Is Nearly Ready to Begin—Kindergarten, Wihuja and the Reagan Lease on the Wild Bull.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MAZUMA (Seven Troughs District, Nev.) March 18.—Within the next month Seven Troughs will boast of twelve shipping properties; there are now seven, viz.: the Seven Troughs Mining Company (Fairview,) Seven Troughs Coalition (Kindergarten,) Mazuma Hills Company, Wihuja lease, Harris lease, Reagan lease, and the Badger Hill, or English George lease. By the time that the big mill for the London syndicate is completed, the following will be ready to ship, some in fact, being prepared to do so at a day's notice: The Signal Peak Company, Hero Nevada Mines Company, Snowsquall, Cleghorn lease and the new Reagan lease on the Wild Bull in Wild Horse Cañon.

This is a pretty good showing for any district, more especially when it is taken into consideration that the mills are here for the ore, not on paper, nor in prospect. There are three running and the fourth, that of the English syndicate, will be ready in a month at the latest. Seven Troughs is a high-grade camp, but there are, besides the picture ore, great bodies of milling ore, rock of a grade which would naturally be shipped in any other camp where the facilities for crushing are not to be had at home.

The Kindergarten shaft of the Seven Troughs Coalition Company is down 290 feet, and it is expected to cut the celebrated Kindergarten vein at the 300, or before reaching that depth. The vein would have been cut before, but for the fact that it has straightened up for the past several feet. This vein has been pretty thoroughly explored by tunneling and drifting, and once it is cut by the main working shaft there are going to be developments in the Kindergarten worth while. Connections have been made with the air compressor of the Wihuja, and there is nothing to interrupt the carrying out of the work. From the Kindergarten have come the same rich bunches which have characterized the upper and lower levels of the Fairview, and which are now being hoisted out of the Wihuja lease.

WIHUJA SHIPPING.

The Wihuja is getting ready another shipment for the Kindergarten mill, and one will be made as soon as the clean-up of the Harris lease takes places early next week. The Wihuja is hoisting ore from the 375-foot level, and it is believed that the next clean-up will be the richest of them all. Not two weeks ago there was cleaned up sixty-one tons, which netted approximately $7500, an average of $123, and what is now coming from the mine promises even better returns. At the 375 they are stoping on one shoot and drifting on another, one being the Kindergarten vein and the other the Wihuja lead. It is expected, and with good reason, that these two veins will come together at the next level, in which event the Wihuja must be reckoned as one of the greatest mines of Nevada.

The strike which has been made on the new Reagan lease on the Wild Bull is one of the most important occurrences. It is not only a good thing for that one property, but it is the best illustration that we have had of the extension of the vein system to the north. The vein on which Mr. Reagan has opened his rich shoot is the Badger Hill vein, from which Mr. Preston is operating his mill to such advantage on the English-Goerge lease.

The vein crosses the gulch from the Badger Hill, and has been opened on the Gold Chain, where some very good values have been obtained. Then the vein is found again a mile to the north on the Silver Pick group, and it is found further along in Wild horse Cañon on the Morrison-Molter lease on the Golden Horseshoe, where are values as high as $492 a ton. Sinking on the Morrison-Molter is at a depth of 250 feet. From this holding the vein has been picked up by Mr. Reagan on the Wild Bull, and some of the coarsest gold that was ever found in the district has been developed in the pannings. In the shoot opened by Mr. Reagan there are fully three feet which will average between $50 and $60, and in this there is a 10-inch streak better than $100 a ton. And besides this there is a seam running from half an inch to three inches in width that carries very high grade rock, ore that will go into the thousands of dollars in values.

The same vein has been found on the J and B group still further to the north, and there is no doubt that development here will produce just as rich shoots as have been opened on the Badger Hill, on the Morrison Molter and the Reagan. The findings give at least a two-mile length to the remarkable vein.

TONOPAH.

TIDEWATER MAY BUY RAILROAD.

TONOPAH AND GOLDFIELD MAY BE SOLD SOON.

Tonopah Mining Company Built It. It Has Already More Than Paid for Itself and Miners Do Not Like Transportation Line—Link for the Santa Fe?

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) March 19.—The big Tonopah mine continues to be the subject of much speculation, especially in view of the fact that with a silver base the property continues one of the strongest in the market. Various rumors have tried to offer an explanation of this contradictory condition, but the best authenticated report comes from Philadelphia, to the effect that the company which owns the Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad is negotiating for the sale of that road and retiring from the transportation business.

The railroad was built to connect with the Southern Pacific at Mina, and with the development of Goldfield the rails were extended to that point. The extension proved a splendid investment, as it more than paid for itself in the first year, when the stockholders divided something in excess of 100 per cent. Its principal use now is to haul the ores of the Tonopah to the huge reduction plant that the same company owns at Millers. The eastern advices say that the Tonopah and Tidewater is about to take over the line as part of a plan of the Santa Fé, gradually to extend its system across the Sierras, and get the benefit of a cut-off for its business to San Francisco without taking the longer route now pursued. The price is said to be in the vicinity of $2,000,000, which is considered reasonable enough for any company that can utilize the line as part of a through system. The Tidewater is entrenching itself strongly in Southern Nevada, and, with the construction of the Ely and Goldfield line, will be one of the most important factors in the commercial development of the State.

Work on the latter road was begun this week, when engineers took the field from both extremes of the proposed line. Superintendent Ryan of Ludlow says that the road will be in operation by the first of next January. This has given an impetus to the development of the numerous camps northeast of Goldfield, and it is safe to say that with the opening of traffic the southern country will take on new life.

The sale of the Tonopah and Goldfield would swell the treasury of the Tonopah mine to the extent of $2,000,000, as the company is credited with having a cool million in the reserve. Of course this implies the cutting of a very juicy melon, and the wise stockholders are clinging to their shares so as to be in at the killing.

Yesterday was pay day, and the Tonopah Mining Company, Montana, Belmont Tonopah Extension, MacNamara and West End mines, together with the Tonopah and Goldfield, paid out a trifle over $200,000 to their employés. This money goes into local circulation, and is an indication of the activity of the camp.

MINE DEVELOPMENT.

The work of sending the three-compartment shaft of the Tonopah down to the 1500-foot level has begun, after a long season of preparation, and the first round of holes was drilled last Thursday. For the past three months the work of cutting a station at the 1200-foot level for the big pump, the placing of the water column to the surface, and the cutting of a sump has been in progress. Sinking is going on in earnest, and the big shaft will be sent down with three shifts a day until the desired depth is attained. It is expected that progress at the rate of twenty feet a day will be made, and that the 1500-foot level will be reached in three months. The new pump is working perfectly, raising 200 gallons a minute. Rumor had it that ore had been encountered in the shaft, but there is not the slightest foundation for this, as the present dacite formation continues for 100 feet, as proven by the diamond drill which was sent down to the 1360 point some time ago.

On the Jim Butler work will be started next week in the Wandering Boy shaft, where the company is making the necessary repairs to put the shaft into condition for use. It is planned to begin development from this shaft on the different levels, and as soon as possible thoroughly open the ground. Before work was suspended in this section, some promising bodies of ore were partially developed, and a considerable tonnage of ore extracted. It is proposed to extend this development work, and prospect the ground to its fullest capacity.

All the stamps in the Montana mill were kept dropping during the past week crushing 1038 tons of ore, or pretty close to the actual capacity of the plant. Regular development was continued in the mine, and while the different faces of ore are very satisfactory there was nothing out of the ordinary reported.

The MacNamara is showing some very good ore in the 200-foot level west, where the new upraise is showing a fine grade body over four feet wide.

The mill report of the Tonopah for the week shows that an average of ninety stamps was kept dropping out of the total of 100, crushing 3110 tons, average value of $23. The bullion shipments consisted of ninety-four bars, valued at $800 each, and twenty-four tons of concentrates, worth $375 per ton, making the total bullion shipments amount to $83,075. An average extraction of 97 per cent. was recorded.

The Broken Hills mine of Helena sent out today 40,000 pounds that will run at the least possible enumeration $150 per ton. Owing to the long wagon haul and the cost of getting the ore out of camp, which is figured at the rate of 1 cent a pound, the company has been saving every pound of stuff for the establishing of a mill. Only the highest values are sent out, and they go as a matter of precaution, for, owing to the number of high-graders in camp it is not safe to leave a pound of ore out overnight except under vigilant guard. This shipment will tax the freighting capacity of thirty horses or mules, and will be sent to the sampling works at Millers. The prospect of having more than a score of shippers among the leasers within the next thirty days is said to be very promising.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Cement Rock.

CORONA (N. M.) Feb. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Kindly tell me in your "In the Earth" columns what this mineral is. It comes from Lincoln county, New Mexico. What I am desirous of learning is this: What value has it? Does it contain gypsum? Some claim it is lime, chalk, or magnesia.

Yours truly, C. H. O.

ANSWER: The sample is impure carbonate of lime, with silica and iron oxides. It represents fairly good cement rock.

Talc.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would you kindly determine the inclosed substance which comes from San Bernardino county, and has been called magnesium silicate? Would you also tell me if it has any practical use. It occurs in a large body from 20 feet wide to 400 feet long and is all as pure as sample. Thanking you in advance for your kindness, I am, Respectfully, E. R. K.

ANSWER: The sample is of value, but it requires an effort to find a market for it, for the reason that great bodies of the same material are scattered here and there in Southern California and on the desert in parts of Nevada.

While your statement that the sample, in fact, represents the entire deposit is taken as true, it is open, seriously, to question.

It would require an exhaustive series of chemical analysis to arrive at working results.

Qualitatively, while magnesium silicate is one of the bases it is also mixed with varying percentages of lime-borate, soda, aluminum silicate and borate of magnesimu. We regret that a quantitative analysis cannot be given you.

Calciferous Formation.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I herewith hand you some rock from a vicinity in Wyoming. Will you please tell me what the formation is and if it carries any petroleum, and what class of petroleum it might be?

Thanking you in advance, I remain,

H. E. H.

ANSWER: Sample (very sparingly) reacts for asphaltum.

Crystallized Calcite.

RIVERSIDE, Feb. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed find a sample of what I take to be white opal. It is in place within eighteen miles of this town.

Would be glad to have your "In the Earth" editor state just what the mineral is—if not opal.

Galenite and Copper Froth.

ATOLIA, Feb. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I enclose samples from three new discoveries. Will you kindly inform me through your valuable "In the Earth" column what you make of them? No. 1 (steel silver?) together with small nugget of tungsten ore float; found in placer diggings in the Rand mining district. No leads of that nature have been found in place. The nuggets have been found up to 3 pounds weight. Nos. 2 and 3 from base of Fremont Peak, perhaps molybdenite. Nos. 3 and 3 copper sulphide, gold boaring, free milling? same district.

Yours very truly, J. I. E. P.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is impure galenite (lead sulphide) and carries silver values. No. 2—one sample—is calciferous, carrying low values in copper, lead and zinc. Garnet is also present. The supposed molybdenite in this sample is micaceous iron. The other sample is chiefly calcite with traces of graphite. No. 3—one sample—is not copper sulphide; it is copper-froth (tyrolite,) calciferous, with malachite, iron oxides and lead traces. Second No. 3 carries chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore) sparingly; garnet abundantly; with malachite and azurite, low percentages. Graphite present.

No.

MERCED, Feb. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Does this sample of Merced River concentrates carry platinum? B. T. L.

Halotrichite.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed is sample of mineral found in large quantities in Northern California. Please classify and state of what value, if any, in your "In the Earth" column.

Yours respectfully, F. P. M.

ANSWER: The native "iron alum" submitted by you, is, in reality a low-grade native iron sulphate (copperas.) It can be leached in water and the solution evaporated will yield a salt of low commercial value, too impure for manufacture of aluminum.

Baryte.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Feb. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you a mineral from thirty-five miles southwest of Tucson. I take it to be scheelite. Please test it for me and state results in The Times.

Yours truly, E. D.

Marekanite and Utahlite.

WINSLOW (Ariz.) Feb. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you three samples of mineral from three localities in which I am interested. No. 1 occurs near Talkial, Ariz. I believe it to be the gem peridot. What is the variety of the rock (matrix) in which the gems are imbeded? No. 2 is a variety of obsidian from Mexico. What variety? No. 3 is, probably, variscite. What is the rock accompanying?

Thanking you in advance for a reply in your "In the Earth" columns, I am

Yours very truly, H. C. Y.

ANSWER: No. 1 is, probably, from Peridot Cañon, Ariz., for the reason, that, the locality stated by you yields discovery that these men are actually netting from the production of the mine noth less than $4000 per day. It is withhout any reasonable question the most remarkable strike of high-grade that has ever been recorded. The owners are rushing development as fast as possible to determine the exact position and extent. Three shifts are already at work breaking down and sacking ore, which is, of course, taken down on canvas sheets. This lease is situated on the Balloon claim, just one block east from the main street in the heart of Rawhide.

MARIGOLD'S STIR.

Even with the phenomenal strike on the Grutt Balloon Hill, the Marigold lease on block 10 of the Wild West claim on Coalition estate stirred the entire community again this afternoon, when it was found that it had opened two feet of the gold-silver ore that created the great sensation last week. The fissure is widening and the shoot continues to widen with it, and is at its present width still widening at the bottom of the eleven-foot winze at the 130-foot level. A rich streak lies on the hanging wall side of the shoot and extends the full length of the bottom of the workings on the hanging wall, showing an average of two and one-half inches of gold suartz that will average about $30,000. The two feet outside of the rich shoot assay from $900 to $1100. The drift at this point has been sent north thirty feet, where a four-foot face gives screenings $127 per ton.

The Marigold is proving faster than any other mine in the entire district. If the richness continues as it has done in the past forty-eight hours in the developing winze it will prove one of the most sensational properties in the mining world. A ten-ton shipment of the high-grade that the owners say should net them not less than $1200 per ton goes forward to the Hazen sampler Wednesday next.

BETHANIA'S SHOWING.

The next most-talked-of property on the streets is Bethania Mines. The true fissure on the Queen Bethania Mining Company's lease on block 6 on Bell Hill shows a width of five feet that samples $25.60 for its entire width between the perfectly defined walls. The hanging-wall is porphyry, the foot wall an andesite. Rich stringers cutting across the face of the drift show free-gold distributed plentifully through the oxidized quartz. As a high-grade milling proposition this is by far the biggest and most permanent ore body in the camp.

At the present time there are five sets of leasers breaking down a good milling grade on this estate. They are the Gold Reef, Little Four, Rawhide Queen Bethania, Daniels and Bridges, Stevens, Shelton and Van Pelt. The Gold Reef is a Los Angeles company. A machine hoist will be installed and in operation on April 10 under contract with the Bethania Mines Company under a long extension and reduced royalty. The Little Four lease is still sinking on the big shoot at the mouth of the adit tunnel and are hoisting five tons of a good milling grade daily.

MILLS OVERCROWDED.

The rich shoot that was the sensation for so many weeks on Kearn's No. 2 has been picked up after careful prospecting by General Manager John H. Barrett of the Queen company, at the 100-foot level. He states that the ore is of the same richness as the shoot goes farther.

Kearn's No. 1 of the Queen estate has sixty tons awaiting teams. This ore samples better than $100 and the shipment will go forward as soon as transportation can be secured as there is not an earthly chance of having the ore treated in camp on account of the tonnage at the mills waiting treatment. The facilities are inadequate to take care of even a part of that already on the dumps although running night and day to their fullest capacity. Even with the 100-ton mill building by King-Heisner the production will be more than double the supply the mills can care for.

Leases that suspended operations for a short time have started work. There are over 100 in active operation producing ore of a grade that will mill in the district. The crying need of the camp today is more mills and more teams for transportation. It is wonderful the strides taken in the past ten days. The outside money stringency or hard times has absolutely no depressing influence in the district at this time. The camp is making good beyond the expectations of the most optimist.

PIONEER.

RICHES STILL BROUGHT OUT.

LATERALS FAIL TO FIND END OF ORE SHOOT.

Pioneer Lease Excites Interest of All by the Great Wealth It Has Uncovered—Mayflower Ships Bullion—Ore Goes from Rhyolite to Salt Lake and Needles.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

RHYOLITE (Nev.) March 19.—The Pioneer lease continues to be the center of interest. With a width of thirty-two solid feet of ore exposed and the face of the crosscut in better ore than anything previously encountered on the 210 level, the property remains a mine of marvel and mystery. From the foot-wall side of the big shoot laterals run diagonally in the ore body fail to define it in any direction, although a line drawn at right angles through the glory hole shows thirty-two feet in that direction with about forty-five feet between the extreme points along the strike of the ore. According to conditions that prevailed on the upper levels the richest portion of the shoot has not yet been reached on the 210 level, the best ore being on the extreme hanging wall side which may be several feet ahead. The direct crosscut, carrying a twelve-foot face with three miners working abreast, samples close to $100 at this time; while the entire width of thirty-two feet exposed is said to have yielded shipping ore throughout, which statement is corroborated by the shipping returns of the Western Ore Purchasing Company at Goldfield. The ore has been encountered in the raise above the 210 level at a point forty feet above the same and the roof of the raise is said to sample close to $100. Three carloads were shipped last week and two went out this week. The new hoisting plant and compressor have arrived at Springdale and will be installed as soon as the foundations are completed and will treble the output.

The plates at the Bullfrog Mayflower mill are saving from $300 a day up from an average of eleven tons, which quantity the battery of five stamps handles nicely. There is a very generous amount of this character of ore in sight and the north raise, which is the richest spot as yet uncovered in the mine, samples $100, if not more, across the entire roof. It is at this point that the picture rock is present. A second shift was added early in the week to push the raise to the 200 level so that better air may be provided. The raises are opening pay ore all the way. The cyanide end of the mill was placed in commission this week and the rich clean-up of the plates melted into bullion. All of the estate of the Mayflower Consolidated has been surveyed for leases and some of the biggest operators in Nevada will soon start work.

W. N. Culver is loading ore this week for the Salt Lake smelter from his lease on the Diamond Queen. It is the usual high grade that will run $100 to $125 per ton and the shipment will not fall short of fifty tons. A new strike is reported in the upper levels of the Queen that is said to run up to the high grade values two or three feet wide and all of shipping quality. As it looks now he will have a shipment in about two weeks.

Machinery for the Bullfrog Crystal Company's milling plant at South Bullfrog, four miles east of Rhyolite, is putting in an appearance. The equipment includes a five-stamp battery from a San Francisco foundry, the same as that now in operation at the Mayflower and the process of extraction will combine amalgamation, concentrated and cyanide. A sampling plant will be installed so that the company may test ores and purchase upon delivery.

Leasers on the Tramps have combined and are sending periodical shipments to the Needles smelter. The first carload will go today, and if the returns are anything like the expectations of the leasers, it may cause a revival of interest in the Bonanza Mountain district.

A. K. Ishmael returned from Los Angeles this week with the information that he had secured a lease on the entire Keane Springs Mining Company's five claims situated in the South Bullfrog district, about four miles northerly from the Keane Wonder mine. The lease runs for two and a half years. Mr. Ishmael has interested Frank P. Randall, a wealthy timber man of Saginaw, Mich., who will provide funds for the operation of the lease and for the construction of a milling plant which Mr. Ishmael declares will be erected on the property as soon as he can take out ore enough to justify it.

GET FAT FREE

No Longer Need Men Be Skinny or Women Scrawny

50c Box Mailed Free to Any Thin Person

The Gay Happy Successful World Turns Its Back on Thin Folks

Thinness can be called a disease, just as much as rheumatism, fever or cancer. And in many cases it is dangerous to life, for the thin, emaciated, skinny frame is not as capable of resisting many diseases as the fat, well developed man or woman. Consumption, for example, finds its greatest number of victims among those who are under weight.

Fortunately, science has at last found what may well be called the fat-making principle, Sargol.

At any rate, those who use Sargol, soon find themselves gaining in weight, filling out their clothes in good, solid flesh, and gaining the flesh and development that takes them out of the class of skinny men and scrawny, unattractive women.

Do not think from its name that Sargol is an oil or greasy preparation that is disagreeable to take, like cod liver oil and other remedies prescribed for thinness. Far from it. In dainty tablet form, it can be taken like candy, and is so pure and healthful that it may be given to delicate children or those infirm with years.

To spread as quickly as possible the knowledge of this simple treatment, that without special diet or exercise will put flesh on the thin and scrawny, a 50-cent package will be mailed free to anyone who wishes to weigh more, desires a better development, or who feels the need of greater vigor and strength. All that is necessary is to write the Sargol company, 64-C Herald Building, Binghampton, N. Y.

Cut out this coupon and pin it to your letter. Please enclose ten cents to help pay distribution expenses.

COUPON.

This certificate and ten cents to help pay distribution expenses entitles the holder to one 50-cent package of Sargol, the home treatment which makes thin folks plump and attractive.

Pioneer Rubber Sanded ROOFING

Rubber Sanded Roofing is suitable for pitched or flat roofs—residences, hotels, business blocks, outhouses, anywhere that a sun-proof, rain-proof roof is required.

The next best roofing to Rubber Sanded that we know of is our "Rubber Flaxine." The latter is made of the same material and in exactly the same manner as Rubber Sanded, except that the latter has a smooth surface—not sanded—both brands are absolutely backed up by the Company's unconditional guarantee.

Pioneer Rubber Sanded ROOFING

Our reason for repeating the name "Rubber Sanded" in this advertisement, is because we want to impress it upon the minds of people who contemplate building, or who have an old roof which needs replacing with a new one.

Rubber Sanded Roofing is unquestionably the most dependable, the most economical roofing in the long run, that can be used; needs no paint or repairs.

Pioneer Rubber Sanded ROOFING

There are cheaper Asphalt Roofings than Rubber Sanded, but they're not so serviceable—they won't wear as well. We say "Asphalt Roofing," because other kinds of roofings shouldn't be considered in the same class with Rubber Sanded. They're not in the same class, in any sense. Write for booklet and samples.

THE "Y" OF LIFE.

wonderful philosophy of the early Greeks pictured life as a "y" where the footsteps of each individual were always at the dividing lines, the point moving forward.

Sundays ago a preacher from his pulpit in Los pictured life as a daily hell, in which the bodies and souls of men were burning themselves up their own acts.

even the Greek picture of the "y" lies the puzzle of good and evil which has baffled the thinkers of all ages to account for the fact should exist at all. Not one has even found answer to the problem. It is as much a mystery to us as to those who lived 5000 years

The fact is indisputable, and that is the practical thing consider. The origin of evil is not for us to fathom. has ever made an analysis of what we call the It is not important that we should have the of evil too nicely defined. No sane person will that evil is with us at all times. We can all the idea in the Greek conception, and realize that along a path which at each step branches to and hell, that if we plant our footsteps in the branch of the road it means not merely that we the way to heaven, but that our feet are planted in heaven, while if we step to the other not just on the way to hell, we are there.

That is one endowment which the author of human has given us. We are spiritual automatons. We for ourselves whether we shall follow the right of the "y" or the wrong one. Every step we is on our own decision. The choice may mean It has meant life or death to many of us. But is no coercion. If we will pay the price we may our choice. In fact, we must choose, and we must pay the price in any case. No human laws will ever be devised which will make men good. Human laws may be wrong, and then to obey them is an immoral act. These laws may be right, but morally they may cover indifferent things.

This is what makes a man. Free will is manhood. The inability to comprehend what is absolutely right is the condition of the brute creation. The endowment which raises man nearest to the divine is the power of will, the capacity to choose. To choose the right necessarily involves the power to choose the wrong. The Almighty Maker of all men gives each man the power—the right, so to speak—to go to hell if he so chooses. To rob him of that right would be to make him less than a man. One may go to the wrong branch of the "y," but it is better that he should go that way than to lose the power of choice. The greatest of all reformers came to supersede the Law with the Gospel, which said to man, "The kingdom of God is within you." That Gospel in every word that brings its message to man distinctly recognizes the fact that we walk along the "y" of life and may go either way we please. The personal liberty of the individual is acknowledged, and he is appealed to as a matter of choice to prefer heaven to hell, to go in the right path and eschew the wrong.

Not that there are not moral laws. All the universe is founded on law. Morals are not important because the Father of mankind has written the formula which expresses them. He has written the formula because morals are right, and their righteousness cannot be changed. Follow one branch of the "y" and we walk in the paths fixed by the moral laws of the universe. Follow the other branch and we are violating these moral laws by every act. No soul can violate these laws and live any more than the physical being may defy the laws of gravitation and survive. The person who jumps from the top of El Capitan in the Yosemite will be dashed to pieces. So "the soul that sinneth it shall die." Each act of life is as much a matter of choice as is the leap of the person who deliberately should take the plunge from the top of the great rock.

We would rather take the other branch of the "y" than that so eloquently described by the preacher on a recent Sunday. Every human being may if he will live, move and have his being in a perpetual heaven. It is not hard to do. It is as simple as breathing. Nancy Hanks Lincoln lay dying in a poor frontier cabin in the depths of the primeval forest of America, nearly 100 years ago. She was untutored. The good influences of her life had all been homely, those of the family circle. No stately temples had echoed to her amens to prayer. No eloquent teachers had impressed moral laws on her mind. She was a plain, simple woman. But she knew what way to walk to keep her footsteps in heaven all the time. Two small children stood at her bedside. She took their hands in hers and said: "Abraham, be kind to your sister Sarah." That was all. There was no pinnacle of glory here. No crowds were at hand to applaud the heroic act. No wonderful achievement was demanded. "Abraham, be kind to your sister." The injunction was so homely. The duty was so commonplace. They were simply a pair of poor backwoods pioneer children, and all they could do for each other was to be kind. No others were in their sphere of influence. Just two poor, ignorant, hard-working children, and likely to remain so forever. "Be kind!" There is the fulfilling of the law for them. There they stood with their small, toddling steps in the midst of the wilderness. "Be kind." There lay the parting of the ways. So long as kind deeds marked the conduct of these little children one to the other, so long they were in paradise, and their dead mother was there, too. Let an unkind act be done by either to the other, and that moment their souls were plunged into an abyss of unhappiness, of pain and hell.

That is all there is of life. As Nancy Lincoln said to her son, so life says to all of us. "Be kind." That fills up the measure of duty. That includes all the relations of life. Be kind to all you deal with and your feet are in the right branch of the "y" and you are in heaven. Be unkind to any one with whom you deal and you are on the wrong side of the parting ways, and hell is your portion.

TO A GOLD-OF-OPHIR ROSE.

You come one only time
Into the heart of each young, singing year,
Like Love florescent, radiantly dear,
Tinged with the glory of some golden clime.

Your loose-hung petals glow
Like bits of sunset clustered on a stem;
Such splendrous light streams from the heart of them
Would warm the paleness from a flower of snow.

My eager glances seek
Your color, as sick lips a cordial rare—
Clear, flame-soft yellow of a goddess' hair
Commingled with the carmine of her cheek.

Your strange, brief stay
Is madd'ning sweet—so sweet my senses ache
Those frail, bright blooms within my hands to take
And crush them—tear them—blot them from the day!

Gone, rose?—so swiftly gone!
Spring loiters yet and mocks with careless grace—
Ay me! So Youth still lingers; but Love's face,
Like to the fair, flushed flower, has been withdrawn.
—[Neeta Marquis, in Out West.

Sermons in Song..

The Wisdom of the Great

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

I will get me unto the great men; and will speak unto them —[Jeremiah.

Ho, all you mighty ones of old,
Who lived your little day,
Who dressed in purple and fine gold
And proudly held your sway—
Aye, Saul unwise, and David bold,
Hear what our great ones say!

Wake, Syrians and men of Tyre,
Call to the land of Uz
Where Job was driven to inquire
From whence and what he was;
Where Bildad sang the vain desire
In all man dreams or does!

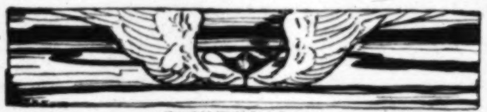
Rise, Joseph, you who knew the truth
That sleep may bring and show,
Who stood with confidence of youth
To teach the Pharaoh,
And call that king, for now in sooth
Our great men say they know.

Come, Sheba's queen in jeweled crown
And raiment like the dawn,
Who on your tablets noted down
The words of Solomon,
And marveled at his puzzled frown
When life you talked upon.

Belshazzar, King of Babel, come,
And mighty secrets learn—
The reading of the mystic sum
That you saw fiercely burn,
When sickened, frightened, stricken dumb,
You saw your fortunes turn.

Come all you mighty ones of old
And wondrous knowledge win.
Our great men will the book unfold
Of what is and has been.
What pity that you did not hold
The truth of good and sin!

What answer you? That you did know
This wisdom in your day;
That blindly you must come and go
Upon your lotted way,
And crowns and robes must crumble so
Upon your trodden clay!



(Copyright, [illegible], by W. G. Chapman.)

IN THE FLICKER OF THE FIRELIGHT

I love the morning tender,
The day's full wakened splendor,
The stretches where the sunset glories fall:
But, oh, for my delight,
Give the comfort of the night
With the flicker of the firelight on the wall;

With the books I long have known,
And the dear ones, nearer grown,
As we sit invisioned silence, dreaming all;
With our memories of the past,
With our future fortunes cast
In the flicker of the firelight on the wall.

When the veil of silence, rent,
Gives the sound, in memory blent,
Of the old familiar voices as they call;
And the yearned-for household faces
Take once more accustomed places
In the flicker of the firelight on the wall.
—[Grace Adele Pierce, in Good Housekeeping.

According to Hoyle.

"See here, Mister Casey," said Pat to the tax assessor, "shore and ye know the goat isn't worth $8."

"Oi'm sorry," responded Casey, "but that is the law." Producing a book, he read the following passage: "All property abutting in Front street should be taxed at the rate of $2 per foot."—[Success Magazine.

Our Own Model

Formosa in 1909. By Frank G. Carpenter.

A TALK WITH EX-GOV. GOTO.

HE TELLS HOW JAPAN IS HANDLING HER NEW COLONY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TOKIO, 1909.—I want to tell you what the Japanese are doing in Formosa. Uncle Sam is much interested in that island; and the Secretary of War recently sent a commission of the War Department to go through it and report to him with a view to improvements in our policy in managing the Philippines. Japan got Formosa at the close of its war with China, just about five years before the Philippines came to us. The island was then in the throes of rebellion, and it was looked upon as about the poorest piece of property in the far east. It had practically been offered to France and Great Britain and refused. Its inhabitants were thought to be only pirates and savage head hunters, mixed with the lowest-grade opium-smoking Chinese, and it was turbulent to an extreme. It was, if anything, in a worse condition than the Philippines when we took hold of them. After the island was ceded to the Japanese they had to fight their way from one end of it to the other to conquer it, and they kept a military establishment there for five or six years.

Formosa in 1909.

At the same time they began to make improvements and to reorganize the country. The island was put under a civil administration within less than two years after its acquirement, and now at the end of thirteen years it is a fixed part of the Japanese empire, paying its own financial expenses and rapidly improving along the lines of modern civilization. In these letters of mine on the awakening of Asia it is thus fitting that at least one should be written on the awakening of Formosa.

In order to tell you how this nation of savages and semi-barbarians has been quickened into modern life, I called this morning on Baron Shimpel Goto at his official residence near the Shinbashi railroad station here in Tokio. Baron Goto is now one of the Cabinet of the Emperor. He is the Minister of Communications; and as such has charge of the railways, telegraphs, shipping and other transportation problems of Japan. It is now over ten years since he was made the civil governor of Formosa, and it was largely due to him that that island has been so rapidly and efficiently reorganized and rejuvenated. He was for almost ten years in charge of its development, and no one can speak better as to its present situation and its future.

The Province of Taiwan.

During our conversation, Baron Goto brought out a relief map of the island and laid it on the table before us. This was of papier maché. It was, I judge, about four inches high, ten inches wide and two feet long. It accurately represented all the chief features of the country, including its cities, railways and roads. Baron Goto pointed to the places as he talked so that it was really like taking a trip through Formosa. Said he:

"We call the island Taiwan. You see it is not far from the Philippines, and we are a close neighbor of yours. The island is about 300 miles long, and it has an area a little larger than Denmark. This half, facing the east, is very mountainous. Many of the ranges are steep and some of the mountains are higher than any in Japan. Mt. Niitakayama, which you see here, is higher than Fuji. It is about equal to Pike's Peak, and there are other peaks of 12,000 feet and more.

"These mountainous regions are the homes of the savage aborigines. It is here that the people known as the head hunters live. The western part of the island, composing a little more than one-third of it, consists of low alluvial plains. These are inhabited by the descendants of people who came over from China. They constitute the civilized parts of the island and contain the great bulk of the population. It is among them that the most of our work is being done. We have to protect these people from the savages, and we have a line of guarding the mountain slopes from one end of island to the other. They are aided by wire fen yond which the savages are not allowed to go. T are guard houses every half mile or so, and thousand guards are always on duty. They have and they patrol the line between the guard hous lenging all savages who come anywhere near. I do not stop, they are shot."

to do with opium patients prior to and I knew that it was a physical prohibit the opium smoking had been addicted to the habit for is almost impossible to stop the use of the drug even when the man himself is anxious to do so. The only way to handle the situation, it seemed to me, was to have a registered list of those addicted to the practice and to have a certain amount of opium sold through the government to them by licensed officials. It is a crime to sell opium to those who are not so registered, and against the law for any one to import or manufacture it. All this business is a government monopoly and infringements of the law subject one to a fine not exceeding 5000 yen, or to imprisonment with hard labor up to five years. The government grants special licenses to habitual smokers, and any one who smokes without a license is liable to be imprisoned for as long as three years or fined up to 3000 yen. As it is now, the government imports and manufactures all the opium used. The list of smokers is gradually decreasing by deaths, and in time we hope to entirely abolish the evil."

"Do you think that China can abolish its opium evil by its recent prohibitory laws?"

"No. It is an impossibility. You can have no idea of the extent to which opium is used in some parts of China. When we took possession of Formosa there were eighty-nine native and foreign firms engaged in importing the drug. There were sixty or seventy different medicines containing opium which the people bought when the drug ran short and opium was used by all classes. At first the officials favored the policy of prohibition, but I objected to that on the grounds that it would be injurious to the people to suddenly stop the smoking and that such a prohibition could not be enforced. The result was our present policy."

The Chinese of Formosa.

"Give me some idea of the Chinese of Formosa. What kind of people are they; and how big a proportion of the population?"

"They form the most of the inhabitants. There are something like 3,000,000 of them and only a few thousand savages. The Chinese own all the cultivated lands. They populate both town and country, and they are the real working part of the island. They are mostly farmers, over 2,000,000 of them being engaged in agriculture. There are about 200,000 merchants and 90,000 fishermen. The laborers number something like 300,000, and those engaged in manufacture about 90,000."

"Have you many Japanese?"

"We have 50,000 or so."

The New Schools.

"What are you doing to educate the people?"

"We are establishing schools and trying to make the use of the Japanese language prevalent throughout the island. We have a central language school at Taipeh in order to teach Japanese to the natives and the native languages to the Japanese. This school has a normal branch which is training Japanese teachers for the native primary schools. It has a language branch where students are trained for the civil service. We have railway and telegraph sections. We have also some schools for Japanese children and some for native girls. We have established primary schools for native children all over the island, and they are largely attended."

What Formosa Costs Japan.

"Is Japan spending much money on Formosa?"

"Not now," replied Baron Goto. "The island is self-supporting. It is not only paying all of its running expenses, but it has a surplus every year which we can devote to public improvement. We intend to develop the island as much as we can and to spend in Formosa the taxes collected there. In addition to what I have mentioned, we have already established a system of lighthouses about the coasts, we have improved the principal harbors, have dug sewers and canals in the chief cities and have established eleven hospitals and schools for training native physicians. The dredging of the Kelung Harbor alone cost $1,000,000, and we have other works under way and in contemplation which require large expenditures. Altogether the island is materially improving under our management."

Controlling the Head Hunters.

As I close this interview, I see a statement in the Taiyo, a Japanese newspaper, made by Mr. Imai, one of the chief Formosan officials, concerning the head hunters. He says that the aborigines have about half the land and that they number 100,000. There are nine tribes of them, divided up into thousands of clans or families, each of which is independent. The most vicious of the tribes is the Atayai. Its tribe still practices head hunting. Its members sally forth upon the people of the lowlands whenever they can break through the lines, and bring back a head or so.

Mr. Imai says that they use the human head as a sacrificial offering at the time of sowing millet, and that in marriage the would-be bride seeks the man who has taken the most heads. Indeed, the possession of human heads means influence, wealth and authority for the owner. This man says that the savages do not like the Chinese, and that the head-hunting custom originated largely because the Chinese have overrun the island and taken the best lands. The savages were glad to see the Japanese come in, and some of the tribes are quite docile. Schools have been established among them and men from certain tribes have visited Japan.

Altogether, it is doubtful whether Japan has lost more men in handling her savages than we have lost with ours at the Philippines. Since 1896 there have been fourteen big fights and several thousand skirmishes. In these 282 Japanese and about 3000 friendly Formosans have been killed, while about $2,000,000 has been spent in defending the boundary line. This line runs along the third mountain range, and there are five or six men in each guard house. The houses were formerly roofed with thatch, but the savages set them on fire with burning arrows, and they are now covered with sod. The aborigines have firearms and are excellent shots. They are becoming more and more quiet, and it is believed that they will eventually be civilized.

Continents to Let.

NO-MAN'S-LANDS YOU CAN HAVE IF YOU WANT THEM.

From London Answers.

IT is odd that so much fuss is made about the north and south poles, as if they were the only places on this globe that man cannot reach. There is still enough unexplored land in the world to make a new continent, if lumped together.

For instance, within ten days' journey from London, by modern express routes, there is a tract of country the size of Germany, France, and Holland combined, and as unknown as the mountains of the moon. It occupies nearly the whole of Central Southern Arabia.

This pleasing district is known as the Dahkna, or the "Dwelling of the Void," and consists of what Lord Salisbury once politely referred to as "chiefly light soil," when he was speaking of the French possessions in Africa. It is a mighty waste of sand, with not a single river—as far as can be judged—in over 400,000 square miles.

Compared with this country, the Sahara is a pleasant and fruitful tract. It defies even the Arab and the camel It is unlikely that the whole 400,000 square miles is worth a ten-pound note. However, a plucky Englishman—Mr. Bury—is preparing to make an attempt to penetrate into the interior this year.

Another wholly unknown tract of country—one that is likely to show its future explorers more profit than the last mentioned—is to be found in Thibet, along the Lower Brahmaputra, and is about the size of the United Kingdom. Of course, Central Thibet, Lhassa, and so forth are mere "tripper" districts now, since the British expedition to the Secret City. But the southeastern part of the country has yet to see a white man's face. According to the newspapers, however, "an adventurous Englishman, carrying his life in his hands," is now starting to try his luck in the district.

It seems quaint that any part of the British empire should remain untraversed by white men. Indeed, it is necessary to rush the next item into print, in order to include it; for, although unexplored at present, it will not be so much longer. No less than three expeditions are starting to penetrate the unknown parts of New Guinea, but up till now nothing can be recorded about the district, except by guesswork, and any surprise may await the explorers.

The coast is comparatively civilized, and the British portion is administered by the Crown. Certain parts of the hinterland, too, are well known—so much so that the birds of paradise which once swarmed in one or two tracts have been nearly exterminated by skin collectors employed by Paris and London millinery firms.

Large portions of the interior, however, are still jealously preserved by families who dine, for choice, upon each other. In spite of this, the whole island is divided between the British, German, and Dutch nations.

Perhaps, on the whole, the finest place to get absolutely lost in is the interior of South America, where 300,000 square miles or so are still waiting for the first white man's foot to intrude on any of them. Most of this lies around the watershed of the Upper Amazon and its tributaries. Many of the names politely ascribed by the atlas to the rivers and mountains here are efforts of imagination. Only a small number have really been reached or surveyed.

As two-thirds of the whole region is impenetrable forest, it is not a place to take casual strolls in; and over a dozen expeditions have either failed, been lost completely, or wiped out by accidents of travel, in the past forty years.

The principal joys that await forthcoming expeditions are fever of a very malignant sort, armies of ants that can decimate a baggage train, and even overwhelm and eat its proprietors, impassible cypress swamps, and snake bite. The latter commodity cannot be equaled anywhere else—there is no place on the globe where deadly snakes swarm to such an extent, and hardly any of them permit the least hope of life after a bite.

The fer-de-lance, water moccasin, and a dozen others are particularly plentiful; and, by way of variety, the anaconda, champion of the world in the constricting and bone-smashing line, is abundant in the forests. Even the natives—mainly harmless forest Indians—have no notion of the way about, but all places are alike to them. They have been known to bring gold dust down from places which they cannot, or do not want to, describe.

It is curious to think that in the Himalayas themselves, on the doorstep of India, and no very great way from Simla, there is a district across the border that is still unexplored, though as large as any three English counties, and nothing is known of the hill tribes that inhabit it except by rumor.

According to native accounts, it is a country of suffragettes, for the hill women rule entirely, and each lady with the property qualification has at least four or five husbands, who do all the house and farm work, and have no voice in affairs. This is not uncommon among Himalayan hill men, but no regular tribe has yet been found that makes a regular rule of it. It should be a good country to keep away from; but Dr. Longstaff, the well-known explorer, does not think so, for he is moving in that direction.

Finally, if you have the exploring instinct that has made our empire what it is, there is still plenty of ground for you, according to choice. If death by thirst attracts you, the Dahkna is the best place for it. Should you prefer torture, try the Brahmaputra. For a good chance of being broiled and eaten, you cannot beat Papua; and for snakebite or fever there is no place like New Guinea. If you survive these, the Royal Geographical Society will probably give you a decoration, and a dinner at the Hotel Cecil.

TARIFF MEASURE THAT NOW ENTERS THE LIMELIGHT.

Senator Daniel.

THAT to begin Monday will be the fourteenth extraordinary session of Congress and the second call for tariff tinkering. It will meet, to the day, on the twelfth anniversary of the only other extra tariff session, that called by President McKinley on March 15, 1897. That session, which passed the Dingley Bill, wrangled until July 24. This year's special tariff session is not expected to sit as long, since the Republicans will not have to rip to pieces a Democratic tariff law, as they did the Wilson law, twelve years ago. They will simply have to tinker the Dingley law, made by their own party. It is predicted that they will pack up their soldering irons and get back home before the summer sun has commenced to soften the asphalt of the Capitol plaza—unless Senator La Follette and his "insurgents" get to filibustering in the Senate.

It will be the Payne Bill this time, just as before it has been the Dingley Bill, Wilson Bill, Mills Bill, etc. The constitution declares that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives." In that house tariff bills are always reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, and for brevity the newspapers give them the name of the chairman of that committee, who, in the sixty-first, as in the sixtieth Congress, will be Representative Sereno E. Payne of New York. It is taken for granted that Uncle Joe Cannon will be reëlected Speaker of the House, and that he will reappoint Mr. Payne chairman of this now all-important committee, although he will have the right to arbitrarily select an obscure new member from Podunk should he wish to intrust him with the task of steering the new tariff bill through the House.

It will be a hot fight. Tariff battles in Congress are always hot. The line-up in the house will be 219 Republicans against 172 Democrats, a Republican majority of forty-seven, eight less than in the previous House. But in both houses the Republicans are separated into factions varying from the confirmed "standpatters" to "Iowa idea" revisionists, while the Democrats vary in stripe from out-and-out free traders to "protectionists." The same shades of difference will be found in the Senate, where the line-up will be sixty Republicans to thirty-two Democrats.

The Declaration of War.

What these two armies will fight for—supposedly—is laid down in the platforms of the national conventions of last summer. The Republicans then declared "for the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries." They also declared themselves for a law fixing maximum rates of duty to be imposed by the President against countries discriminating against our goods and for other countries minimum rates, representing a "normal measure" of protection against our goods. They declared also for free trade with the Philippines, except in sugar and tobacco. The Democrats, on the other hand, declared for a free list for "trust-controlled products," material reductions upon the necessities of life and upon articles which we sell cheaper abroad than at home, and graduated reductions elsewhere to "restore the tariff to a revenue basis." Such were the declarations of war on the tariff under which the voters fought in November. But the men who voted these declarations at the conventions are not the same bodies who will line up for the tariff fight in Congress, and we shall soon hear Republicans and Democrats reminding one another of "party pledges."

The battle will begin with the organization of the new Committee on Ways and Means. Besides Chairman Payne, the Speaker is expected to reappoint those Republican members of the former committee as have been reëlected.

The Democrats of the House will meet in caucus, and, although having no hope of electing him, will choose their candidate for Speaker. This candidate will become "minority leader," and the Speaker will appoint him the ranking Democratic member of the Committee on Ways and Means. It is supposed that Champ Clark of Missouri, John Sharp Williams's successor as "minority leader" in the last Congress, will again receive this honor.

The Generals.

So the opposing generals on the floor of the House will be Payne and Clark. Both are lawyers. Payne is 65, Clark 59. Payne was born in New York, and Clark in Kentucky. So it will be another case of Yankee Doodle against Dixie. Payne is of medium stature and very stout, while Clark stands six feet one and weighs but 175. The rungs of the ladder by which Payne climbed to Congress were City Clerk and District Attorney. Clark has been a farm hand, country store clerk, country editor and prosecuting attorney. The northerner has been in Congress since 1883, the southerner since 1893. Payne has been on the Committee on Ways and Means since before the days of the McKinley bill, was active in framing that measure and was [illegible] first lieutenant when his bill was constructed. [illegible] man of the Committee on Ways and Means he has conducted the legislative business on the floor of the [illegible] since he succeeded Mr. Dingley. Clark has divided [illegible] John Sharp Williams the honor of being the wit [illegible] House, and was a close friend of Tom Reed.

He is an eloquent orator and a great drawing [illegible] the lecture platform. During the tariff debate he often set the House to roaring with laughter at [illegible] ries told at the expense of his rivals in debate.

All Lawyers But Two.

The other hold-over members of the Ways and [illegible] Committee will be: Republicans—Dalzell, Pennsylva[illegible] nia; McCall, Massachusetts; Hill, Connecticut; [illegible] Illinois; Needham, California; Calderhead, [illegible] Fordney, Michigan; Gaines, West Virginia; [illegible] Ohio, Mr. Roosevelt's son-in-law; Crumpacker, [illegible] Democrats—Underwood, Alabama; Griggs, [illegible] Pou, North Carolina, and Randell, Texas. All [illegible] men are lawyers save Hill, who is president [illegible] company, and Fordney, who is a lumber [illegible] full committee will consist of nineteen [illegible] publicans and seven Democrats. The Speaker [illegible] power to remove any of the above named and [illegible] others. He will have to fill at least three [illegible] caused by the retirement of Bonygne, Rep[illegible] rado; Cockran, Democrat, New York, and [illegible] ocrat, Rhode Island. Appointments to these [illegible] will be eagerly sought of the Speaker. No [illegible] can be conferred upon a new member than [illegible] signment.

That on Ways and Means was the second [illegible] committee appointed by the Speaker of the [illegible] gress, in 1789. A committee on elections [illegible] April 13, and that on ways and means July [illegible] makes it 120 years old. It was first composed [illegible] representative from each State, but even then [illegible] bership was smaller than it is today. It was [illegible] limited to seven, and then to nine members [illegible] leading revenue-producing States being [illegible] Pennsylvania sometimes had two, and even [illegible] bers. But as the country developed and [illegible] were admitted, its membership was gradually [illegible] uted and increased to the present figure. [illegible] noted chairmen have been John Sherman, [illegible] vens, Justin Morrill, William R. Morrison and [illegible] McKinley.

[illegible] hearings having been concluded—representative [illegible] of our large industries having told their [illegible] and having been examined by the Republi[illegible] cross-examined by the Democratic members—[illegible] will report the Payne Bill to the House, [illegible] it will be haggled over and patched up with all [illegible] amendments.

[illegible] to Allow no Delays.

[illegible] Mr. Payne will be the Republican general [illegible] floor of the House, Speaker Cannon will be the [illegible] commander-in-chief there. He will have sole [illegible] recognize members who wish to speak, and he [illegible] heed to members who are trying to attract [illegible] "I have caught the measles, whooping [illegible] and influenza, but never yet the Speaker's eye," [illegible] a Tennesseean who had been in the House six [illegible]. Yet no member will be able to talk without Mr. [illegible] permission. Before each sesssion a list of [illegible] by previous agreement are to be recognized [illegible] placed upon his desk. His Committee on Rules, [illegible] he will be chairman and which he will ap[illegible] will limit the debate on the tariff bill to so much [illegible] both sides, and the Speaker will see that when [illegible] is up a vote is taken.

[illegible] in the Senate will be different. There the [illegible] be referred to the Finance Committee. Its [illegible] Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island, [illegible] the Dingley Bill twelve years ago, will [illegible] the general-in-chief of the Republicans of that [illegible]. He is now 67 years old, with white hair and [illegible]. He is a wealthy merchant—so wealthy that [illegible] was accepted by John D. Rockefeller a [illegible] for the latter's son. He has been in the [illegible] for twenty-eight years, and, being a born leader, [illegible] to be a power superior to all of its [illegible]. He is better acquainted with the intrica[illegible] legislation than any other Senator. So, [illegible] will steer the Payne Bill through the [illegible] will pilot it through the Senate.

[illegible] will do the first tinkering with the [illegible] after it reaches the Senate. These members [illegible] Finance Committee, with Chairman Aldrich, will [illegible], Michigan; Penrose, Pennsylvania; Hale, [illegible] Hopkins, Illinois, and three other Republicans [illegible] Platt, New York; Hansborough, North Da[illegible] Allison, Iowa; also Daniel, Virginia; Money, [illegible] Bailey, Texas; Taliaferro, Florida, and one [illegible] to succeed Teller of Colorado. Thus [illegible] eight Republicans and five Democrats on [illegible] all lawyers, thus far, except Aldrich, [illegible] Taliaferro. The four vacancies will be filled [illegible] "committee on committees," and not by [illegible] officer, as in the House. The commander [illegible] forces in the Senate will be the rank[illegible] member, Mr. Daniel, the eloquent Vir[illegible] closely resembles Mr. Bryan.

[illegible] Aldrich will not encounter such smooth pi[illegible] tariff bill in the Senate as the chairman [illegible] the House. After the bill has been re[illegible] Senate, Vice-President Sherman will have [illegible] any member addressing him, and there will [illegible] limit debate. Any Democratic Senator can [illegible] as long as his breath holds out. It has [illegible] that the Republicans sit with the Dem[illegible] Senate, but sit on the Democrats in the [illegible] Senators can talk the measure to [illegible] has always been so. In the upper house [illegible] been possible to frame a rule [illegible] proper time comes will require Senators [illegible] and vote. In his filibuster against the [illegible] report on the currency bill last sum[illegible] spoke eighteen hours and forty-three [illegible] Allen of Nebraska was on his feet fourteen [illegible] memorable fight against the repeal of the [illegible] of the Sherman law.

[illegible] Aldrich's tactics will doubtless be the same as [illegible] piloting the Dingley Bill through the Sen[illegible] years ago. By preconcerted plan he and his [illegible] saved time by letting the Democrats do all [illegible]. Thus a Democratic Senator will com[illegible] "You haven't lowered the duty on this item one [illegible]," Mr. Aldrich will reply, nonchalantly, with[illegible] explanation. Nothing that the minority Sena[illegible] Mr. Tillman—may say will excite any ex[illegible] response from him or his lieutenants. Senator [illegible] will smile and say nothing. Senators Penrose [illegible] will not appear the least perturbed. As soon [illegible] minority is tired of talking the vote on the para[illegible] discussion will be taken and the majority [illegible] its way. All of the Republican tariff eloquence [illegible] the House side. Senator Aldrich, in adopting [illegible] profited by the error of his opponents, [illegible] in charge of the Wilson Bill, took the time [illegible] all criticisms and defend themselves against [illegible]. The result was that they kept Congress [illegible] until the end of August, or twice as long as [illegible] of the Dingley Bill. And with all of this [illegible] both their free list and dutiable list [illegible]. To which schedule this esteemed drug [illegible] had to afterward be determined by the [illegible]

Getting What You Want.

THE HOTEL CLERK GROWS SLIGHTLY PEEVISH THIS WEEK.

By a Special Contributor.

"JOHN, my boy," said the Hotel Clerk of the St. Reckless to the Head Wine Clerk, "I think I'll take a little vichy and milk. I feel very fragile and transient, this morning."

"I'll tell you what you want," said the Head Wine Clerk vivaciously, "what you want is a nice dry cocktail. Just lemme throw you together a little something accordin' to a formula of my own," and he reached for the shaker and the ingredients.

"Stay, minion, stay thy ruthless hand," broke in the Hotel Clerk. "Do I know what I want or do I not? I come in, craving something that I could get 5 cents cheaper at any dairy lunch, but because I like the fixtures and the furniture better here, I call on you. And you repay the favor by seeking to hand me out one of those venomous mixtures of yours that only needs a red label and a fireproofing guarantee wrapped around it, to be roofing paint."

"I didn't mean no offense," said John. "You looked kinder peekish, that was all, and I was just suggestin'."

"I know, I know," said the Hotel Clerk bitterly. "It's all the fault of the false commercial system under which we live. Everybody is in a conspiracy to hand everybody else something they don't want. If I was in charge of the currency of this country I'd go a step farther than the party who wanted to print 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth,' on the clearing-house certificates. On a silver dollar, where it now says: 'In God We Trust,' I'd put 'Accept No Substitutes.'

"But I did cherish the fond hope that a shop like this would be comparatively free from the blight. I thought if there was one place where the hired help were willing to let the customer make up his own mind, it was a life-saving station such as this. And it used to be that way. What happened if I came into a recuperatory and asked for a Scotch highball? Did the gent in the white kalsominer's clothes behind the bar recommend a green creme de menthe because it would give me a breath like a moth ball and make people think I'd been putting away my wife's $3000 sealskin opera coat in camphor? Did he suggest that a seltzer lemonade would last longer if inhaled slowly through a stopped-up straw? Nothing of the sort. He merely reached for the bottle containing the imported dye stuffs, chipped off a small chunk of pure lake ice, made in a factory, produced a bottle of carbonic with the customary impediment in its speech, placed these various articles upon the counter in front of me, remarked that it was a pleasant day, watched me out of the tail of his eye to see that I didn't pour too big a hooter out of the Hoot Mon flagon, collected the customary amount, and, turning to his favorite musical instrument, the cash register, pulled out some of its stops and performed a short solo on it by means of which he did not cheat himself out of anything of value. Which was emphatically all there was to the transaction, unless I felt compelled to respond to an encore, in which event the performance would be repeated practically as heretofore stated.

"If the alcohol went to a customer's head, a porter or somebody might turn him upside down so as to let it run back to the proper place, but otherwise there'd be no concert, or after show, introducing the full strength of the entire company. Absolutely nothing was said about the advisability of his taking a balancing pole so's he could stay on the same sidewalk with himself, or a pair of blue goggles to keep off the glare from his own face. A gent merely asked for a Scotch highball. He got it. 'Pleasant day? Yes, no—raining outside? Don't say? All right. Unpleasant day, then. Fifteen cents, please. Thank you. Brush. Next gent.'

"And that was why the ordinary man would rather buy a great gross of Scotch highballs than one pair of socks. A man is driven by necessity and the fact that his toe nails are gnawing the inside off of the toe caps on his shoes, into a haberdashery. He knows exactly what he wants. To wit, socks. A pair of black socks with the toes in front and the heels at the back and the soles underneath. Just plain North American socks, that will acquire an open work or porous-like appearance fore and aft, when he's worn 'em once, the same as all other socks. There's nothing else in the world that he wants except socks. He's Mr. Socrates S. Sockins, from Soxville Center, Hose county, Socksylvania, and he used to play socker football on the same teams with Sockalexis the Injun. Sockless Jerry Simpson wasn't even related to him by marriage. Thus satisfied in his own mind, he enters a place where socks are purveyed to the sock-using public and states his wants, namely socks, to a beautiful floor walker who has the same haughty grace and indolent manner seen in a show girl that has a drag with the manager. The floor walker unbends sufficiently to pass him along to a youth wearing his front hair in an antler effect and a vest with dine-room pictures embroidered on it. To this impressive youth he repeats his modest desires.

"'Really now, you don't want no black socks,' answers Algernon with the flowing locks. 'What you want is some of these here salmon pink half-hose with a chased design of southern smilax twining around the ankles and hollyhocks running up the legs.'

"'You astonish me,' says our hero. 'And I thought all along I wanted black socks. Anyhow, won't you please humor me?'

"'Them salmon pinks would be awful winsome and becoming to a gentleman complected the way you are,' says Algy. 'All our best dressers is wearin' 'em this spring. I don't mind tellin' you in confidence I wear 'em myself.'

"'Nevertheless and to the contrary notwithstanding, I shall stand pat in insisting on black socks,' says the man, beginning to speak in a fret-edged voice.

"'Oh, very well,' says Algy wittily, 'oh, very well. What else today?'

"'Nothing else today, just socks.'

"'Needing undergarments, ain't you? We have some lovely undergarments, with——'

"'Nope, socks.'

"'Neckwear?'

"'Socks.'

"'Any vestings? We have some perfectly grand vestings. Any pantings? Any collars, cuffs, embroidered suspenders? Any undergarments—no, I asked you about your undergarments, didn't I? Any——'

"'Young man,' says the unfortunate Mr. Sockins, or at least he says it if he happens to be me, 'I don't want any collars nor suspenders, nor a folding bed, nor some singing mice from Japan, nor a recipe for removing warts, nor a pound of fudge, nor a chance in a turkey raffle nor a collection of postage stamps in a red album. I want a pair of socks.'

"'Quite so,' says Algernon, just like that, 'quite so. Any handkerchiefs?'

"I ask you, is it any wonder that an ordinary man would rather wear his last remaining pair of human socks until they look like a set of riding leggins? And as it is with sock stores, so also with eating places. The conspiracy to make me take something I don't want is a widespread one. I go into a restaurant intent on a frugal repast, to cost not exceeding 40 cents. I'm not so very hungry, anyway. But the waiter looks me over with the baleful eye of a crabbed rattlesnake, and I become seized with the horrid fear that unless I plunge heavily he'll go home and speak slightingly of me to his family. So I become what is known in the financial district as a reckless investor. I let him unload an entrée on me that gives me all the sensations of having swallowed an iron hitching post with a horse still attached to it, and one of those French artichokes that you tear apart leaf by leaf, saying as you do so: 'She loves me, she loves me not!' and eat by going through the motions of licking a sheet of postage stamps, one stamp at a time, only it tastes worse than any stamp ever dared to taste, and a whole lot of other highly unpleasant and expensive dishes. And when he brings me the check I take a look at the total and realize that the owners of the place are taking prompt steps to lift the mortgage.

"Everywhere else it's just as bad. They will insist in passing off a substitute on me. Take the vaudeville stage now. Personally I'm pining with a long-leaf, North Carolina, yellow pine, free from knots, windshakes and woodpecker holes, for one of those dear, lovable old-style, non-improved variety shows where the olio is opened by the classy musician, with the union barber's mustache and the hair slicked down flat, who comes down holding his gold cornet by its hind leg, as the curtain goes up, and says: 'I putter advertisement in th' paper callin' fer er smart boy to help around ther studio. I wonder why he ain't come,' the word 'come' being the cue for the black-face comedy party who plays all the instruments, to open the door, trip on the door mat and do a face-fall down stage. I also long for the refined sketch team, Him in velvet knickerbockers and Her in black velvet skirts, with her yellow hair freely frizzed in tempting ringlets around her neck, that started off with a walking clog and thus worked naturally into a sentimental ballad, dealing with a mother and her wayward son, every verse ending in 'These loving words she then did speak to him as follows,' and at the last line of the concluding refrain—'And he left poor mother lying there dead,' did a neat cross-step and an exit at the side.

"That was a real evening's entertainment for you. You knew just what was coming and how it would come, but now they fuss up the programme with Salome dancers and troupes of performing earwigs and choruses of lady boiler-makers, singing the ringing glees and roundelays of their calling. It's no real fun any more to a lover of true art."

"Did you say you wanted vichy and milk?" put in the Head Wine Clerk.

"No, on second thought I think I'll take that cocktail you were speaking of," said the Hotel Clerk. "Being surrounded on all sides, I might just as well surrender unconditionally."

Stone Eaters.

Sir James Ross, in the course of his travels, noted a curious fact with regard to the penguin, namely, the habit of swallowing stones. In one specimen he found ten pounds' weight of quartz, granite, and trap. Other animals, reptiles, fishes, and mammals, exhibit the same strange fancy. In a paper contributed to the proceedings of the Bristol Naturalists' Society W. H. Wicks has collected a number of facts connected with such stomach stones. The fact noted by Mr. Wicks that the pebbles are usually white quartz is interesting, but does not appear to throw any light on the strange habit.—[London Globe.

White House Perquisites.

THINGS MR. TAFT WILL GET WITHOUT PAYING FOR THEM.

By a Special Contributor.

SURELY nobody ought to begrudge a salary of $100,000 a year to Mr. Taft, in view of the dignity and greatness of his position, but to urge that such an income is necessary for the comfortable maintenance of the President is absurd; for it should be considered that his pay is only a fraction of what the nation actually allows for his support.

What are Mr. Taft's expenses? The answer is that he is scarcely permitted to have any. The nation pays nearly all of them outside of his salary. For instance, there is the item of rent, which to the ordinary citizen is the most important single tax on income. Mr. Taft lives rent-free in a beautiful house, furnished and provided by the government with everything that can possibly be wanted for housekeeping purposes, even to the silver, chinaware, and linen.

The ordinary citizen has to pay quite a sum every year for fuel and light. There is, furthermore, a continual wearing-out of carpets, upholstery, and other articles of furniture which must be replaced—not to mention breakage of chinaware and new things to be bought for the kitchen. Mr. Taft has none of these expenses. The government pays $25,000 a year for the upkeep of his dwelling, and meets annual bills of $4000 for lights and $6000 for fuel.

All of the above-mentioned $25,000 is a contribution to the President's own pocket-book. He and his wife spend it just as they may happen to see fit. If Mrs. Taft wants anything new for housekeeping purposes she sends for the official major-domo, who is an engineer officer of the army, and tells him to get it for her. No law governs the matter except her own wishes. It must surely be very pleasant to have an allowance of $25,000 a year to spend on the mere upkeep of one's house—in which respect the mistress of the executive mansion is certainly one of the luckiest women in the world.

But this is by no means all. Every three years Congress gives an additional $15,000 for "extra repairs," this sum being expended by the President's wife in a general renewal of hangings, upholsteries, rugs, etc. Part of the money goes to re-cover the sofas and chairs in the blue room with the delicate and expensive velours used for upholstering purposes, as well as for the hangings in that historic apartment.

Then there is the matter of servants. The White House has a butler who gets $1800 a year; but the government, not Mr. Taft, pays him. His salary comes out of the aforementioned $25,000 a year, as does likewise the pay of a housekeeper, a valet for the President, and a maid for Mrs. Taft. The housekeeper is a sort of upper chambermaid. all responsible duties relating to the care of the establishment being under control of the butler, who is called the steward.

The steward gives a bond of $20,000, his position being one of no little responsibility. Great quantities of gold and silver tableware, precious china, and cut glass are placed in his charge, for no plated ware is used in the White House except in the kitchen, all of the spoons, forks, and metal dishes on the President's table being of pure silver or gold. Six dozen gold forks, and a like number of gold spoons, handed down from the Van Buren administrations, are kept for special occasions. The solid silver service was bought by Mr. Monroe—every piece of it marked with the American eagle and the inscription, "President's House." It was Mrs. Benjamin Harrison who imported from France the cut glass, 496 pieces, at a cost of $1973.

There are a few additional servants, required for minor duties, who are paid by Mr. Taft himself. In the kitchen are three women—a cook, an assistant cook, and a scullion—who act as helpers to a French chef during the social season. For the rest of the year the chef is dispensed with. There are two more women in the laundry, and upstairs are four men, who do the work ordinarily done by chambermaids and parlor maids. These latter assist the steward in the dining-room and pantry. Thus it appears that the "help" employed in the White House comprises eleven persons, in addition to the chef, housekeeper, and butler.

The butler, or steward, of the White House is quite an important personage, controlling a considerable patronage. Not only does he employ and discharge on occasion the under servants, but he buys all the food supplies for the establishment, as well as the wines, liquors, and cigars. Accordingly, as may well be supposed, his favor is much sought by tradesmen in these lines. But an express condition on which it is bestowed is that the White House custom shall not be utilized in any way for advertising purposes. If a butcher or grocer were to make it generally known that he supplied the executive mansion, he would promptly lose its trade.

Apart from servants' wages, almost the only expense the occupant of the White House is obliged to meet (if clothes be excepted) is for food. This item, however, is very large. A good deal of entertaining is necessarily done, and, though no refreshments of any kind are offered to guests at the public receptions, as much is spent for a single state dinner as the average American family pays out for a whole year's living. There are four of these formal banquets—very dull affairs, as a rule—every winter, with an additional one now and then on some special occasion ,and the bills for them run up to about $1000 apiece.

In these days it would never do for a President to exhibit an economical spirit in his entertaining. If he did so, he would be ridiculed as parsimonious. Times have changed since, on a certain historic occasion, an appetizing fish was placed before George Washington, in early March during his administration.

"What fish is that?" cried the immortal George, as the savory odor rose to his nostrils.

"A shad, sir," replied the steward gleefully. "The only one in the market—the first of the season."

"But the price?" Washington's face grew stern.

"Three dollars, sir," said the steward.

"Take it away!" commanded the President. "It shall never be said that I set such an example of gance."

As a result of which self-denial on his part, the ants ate the shad.

At dinners and receptions and other occasions of tivity at the White House beautiful music is by one of the most famous orchestras in the world, Marine Band. Any ordinary millionaire would to pay a big price for it, but it does not cost the dent one cent. The band in question, by an law, is his own band, and he is at liberty to use it pleases. If he wished to do so, he could employ play lullabies every night on the lawn behind the ace, to put him to sleep.

In this instance, again, the government pays meets the bills for all the floral and other provided at entertainments in the White House

The Making of a Man.

THE MAIN THING IS TO LET THE BOY ALONE, SAYS COL. SNEED.

By a Special Contributor.

COL. SNEED watched with sparkling eyes and swelling chest the efforts of his infant grandson to swallow a very small but very chubby foot.

"There is no use a-talkin', honey," he observed to his daughter, Mrs. William Rollins, "there's no use a-talkin', but that's a remarkable child, a most remarkable child. He knows what he wants and he's goin' to get it or break his neck a-tryin'. Just notice how he hangs onto that foot. He's got a grip like a country politician, and he's as dead set as Jim Robinson's old mule. Did I ever tell you about that mule, honey?"

"No, Papa, but all babies suck their toes if they're given a chance."

"Huh! Maybe they do, maybe they do; but they don't all do it the same way. Every human walks on two legs, yet it's easy to tell a man from a mollycoddle by the way he steps. When it comes to readin' character there ain't many can get ahead of your old daddy, and I don't need a telescope to see that this youngun is an extraordinary child. He's got the makin' of a man in him, and he'll make one, too, if you don't let tomfoolishness head him off."

"Why, Papa; what on earth do you mean?"

"Just what I say, honey. There's a whole lot o' people in trousers loafin' around this town who'd 'a' been real men perhaps if their mothers had let 'em alone. The main point in raisin' boys is in knowin' where to stop. There's too many mothers—and they're good mothers, too; I ain't sayin' anything against their intentions; but there's too many of them that's got the idea that they ain't doin' their whole duty unless they make little angels out of their boys. Some of them succeed, too, but the product don't stay on earth very long. Little angels are all right in heaven, no doubt, but they don't seem to fit into the plan of things down here. As old Bill Swift's always sayin', they're kinda de trop. What we need in this vale of tears is men, just plain men, and the sooner you get that fixed in your noggin', honey, the better it'll be for William Matrimitoe, there. Just look at the little booger kick. Honest, I never saw such an extraordinary child. Honest, I never did.

"But, as I was sayin', honey, the main thing in raisin' boys is knowin' when to let 'em alone. And boys, I want to tell you, can stand a whole lot o' lettin' alone and be all the better for it. If you let that youngster get the notion that he's boss of the shop—and I see signs of it already; if you jump and run every time he hollers, and fetch and carry whenever he commands; if, when he gets old enough to understand, you talk about how sweet he is and how smart he is right before his face; if you pet him and coddle him all the time, and feed him things he's got no business to eat just because he wants them, he's pretty certain to turn out a prig that'll have as many friends as a sheep-stealin' cur, and be about as much use to society. Maybe you've wondered why the woods are full of just such people. Well, that's the reason. If I had a chance to be born again, and was given my choice between that kind of a mother and no mother at all, I'd say, give me an orphan asylum. Yet some of the sweetest and best women God ever made make that very mistake, and the funny part about it is that they don't know it, and their boys don't know it. But everybody else does.

"There's another way of not lettin' 'em alone, and that's hoppin' around all the time, like a hen on a hot griddle, hollerin' 'Don't.' That's the mother with the overheated conscience who's got a stern duty to perform and raises her boys with a plumb line and a hammer. She believes like the poet, in hewin' to the line no matter where the chips fall, but the trouble is that most of the chips hit the boy. She's got her eagle eye fixed on him every minute of the day, and every time he turns around there's a 'don't' shot at him until he's afraid to do anything at all. And the chances are that he never will do anything worth mentionin', for if the habit once gets fixed it's pretty apt to stay through life. I know lots of men who don't amount to a row of pins because they're afraid of makin' a mistake, and I'll bet a whole lot that most of them owe their dispositions to the way their mothers trained them.

"No, little girl, if you want to make a man of that boy, give him a fightin' chance to develop accordin' to nature's plans and specifications. You've heard the old sayin' that the Lord takes care of drunken men and little children. I have my doubts about the drunken men; I think it's another party that looks after them. But there's no mistake about the children, and if I was goin' to write a prescription for the makin' of a man I'd put down twenty parts good example, ten parts good advice, twenty parts love, and fifty parts trust in Providence. If you're ridin' a thoroughbred horse you don't want to use spurs or whip and you don't need to touch the rein except to guide him. It's the same way with that youngster there. He's got good blood in him, and all you've got to do is to keep him in the middle of the road, and nature'll do the rest. You and William have got first to set the right kind of an example. You can't be much of a guide unless you know the route. You can't expect him to be truthful if you tell fibs; you can't expect him to be honest if you look out the car window when the conductor comes by; you can't expect him to be honorable unless you are honorable, not only in your dealin's with him, but with others. It takes a mighty little preachin' but a whole lot of practicin' to raise a boy right.

"You'll have to remember, honey, that the boy don't know the road. Once in a while you'll have to give the rein a little pull to the right or the left to keep him from strayin' off at the forks, and now and then you'll need to check him up from goin' into mud holes, or stumblin' on rocks, but that's about all. You're his guide, you must understand, not his driver. About every so often he'll come to a fork where the left-hand road'll look to him lots more attractive than the right-hand one, and then you'll have to explain the difference. You'll have to show him that the main thing to know about a road is where it's goin' to wind up. Put it up to his intelligence and he'll go the right way nine times out of ten, but if you try to club him into goin' that way, it's ten chances to one that he jumps the track and cuts across the fields.

"That's about the long and short of it, little girl. It's an easy matter to make a man of a boy if you'll just keep him headed the right way and let him develop as the good Lord wills. Look at him now, will you? Makin' goo-goo eyes at his granddaddy. Most remarkable child I ever saw."

Home on the Rio Grande.

The Mexican Indian huts in the villages and upon the ranches of the lower Rio Grande border region of Texas have a style of architecture and construction that is distinctly their own. This type of primitive buildings is rapidly passing out of existence. Modern structures are taking their places. At many places on the border families of Mexicans have abandoned their jacals and moved into more pretentious homes.

One thing that recommend the old style of residence to the poorer Mexicans was its cheapness of construction. No money outlay is necessary in erecting the picturesque structures; neither is a knowledge of carpentry needed. A double row of upright poles firmly set or driven into the ground forms the framework for the walls. Between these two rows of poles are placed other poles or sticks of shorter length, forming a thick and compact wall. At each of the four corners of the building posts are set, reaching to a height of about eight feet. Roughly-hewn stringers are laid from one post to another and to these stringers are tied the other poles that form the framework of the walls. The strong fiber from the maguey plant or strips of buckskin are used to tie the poles into position. The rafters are tied to the ridgepole and stringers in the same manner. At one end of the building is built the opening through which the smoke of the inside fire may ascend. Stoves are unknown among these Mexicans and the cooking is all done upon the ground.

When the rafters are in position, the thatched roof is put on. Palm leaves form the most satisfactory roof, both as to durability and effectiveness in shedding the rain, but owing to the scarcity of this material on the Texas side of the international boundary stream, grasses and the leaves of plants are used for the purpose. The roofing material is tied to the rafters in layers. Some of the Mexican house builders exercise great ingenuity in putting on the thatched roofs.

The only opening in most of these Mexican jacals is the door which extends from the ground to the roof. The floor is the bare earth. The ventilation is obtained through the crude chimney opening. The door itself is seldom closed. The Mexican Indian is usually a man of large family. A one-room house accommodates all. Perhaps several dogs and a pig or two may share the comforts of the room with them on cool or disagreeable nights.—[Kansas City Star.

What Is Your Temperature?

What is a person's normal temperature?—is a question often asked of every physician.

When the answer 98.6 degrees F. is given to the query, very few people understand the physiological significance of this fact, or how a degree of systemic heat is maintained during health, within such narrow limits, that their bodies have an even temperature the coldest day in winter or the hottest day in summer, with an exactness of adjustment that is not obtainable in warming or cooling their homes with the most up-to-date heating and refrigerating apparatus.

Now, in accepting the statement that the body temperature is 98.6 degrees F., it must be borne in mind that to some extent this is a relative figure, for the warmth of the exterior varies markedly from that of the interior. The surface temperature of the head, hands or abdomen may differ from 96 degrees F. down to 93 degrees F. or lower, while that of the internal regions may extend up to 102.2 degrees F., the average of blood circulating in organs like the liver, pancreas and kidneys. For practical purposes some gauge must be accepted whereby normal temperature may be measured and compared. Therefore, on account of convenience and practicality, the temperature taken carefully under the tongue by a clinical thermometer has been selected as a common standard throughout medical circles. It is sometimes recorded in the axilla or groin instead of in the mouth when for any reason a sublingual test is not advantageous. The temperature of these localities differs slightly from the mouth, being 5 degrees F. less.—[Technical World.

When a Maine Town Is Snowed In.

Snowdrifts fifteen feet high are not often seen on the main street of a Maine village, but that is the condition that existed in Phillips Friday. There is five feet of snow on the level, where the hurricane of Thursday did not blow it away into the solid drifts that have made traveling by any method well-nigh impossible.

The only way to get around with any degree of ease or comfort is on snowshoes, and as many people in Phillips own these articles, so necessary on a day like this, they are in pretty general use by those who are obliged to be out.—[Bangor Commercial.

Empress of All Russias.

DECLARED TO BE MOST UNHAPPY WOMAN ON EARTH.

By a Special Contributor.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 2.—Empress Alexandra of Russia, the Czar's wife, is the unhappiest woman under the sun. Her life is nothing more than prolonged misery, and she prays fervently for death to relieve her from the crushing burdens of her pitiable existence at the imperial court of Russia. Her fate may well excite the deep sympathy of the civilized world, for although she is a victim of that unholy system of government that still prevails in her husband's dominions, she is an innocent sufferer for the terrible wrongs perpetrated by others.

The Empress Alexandra is a high-souled, liberal-minded, generous and loving woman. She is a woman of the most refined tastes and generous instincts; she loves the common people, and their sorrows appeal to her with tremendous force. She is in deep sympathy with the progressive movement in Russia, and she abhors the crimes that have been committed during her husband's reign and are still being perpetrated in Russia day by day. Yet far from being able to terminate them, she herself has been struck down and her happiness destroyed by that very system which she would gladly abolish in the interest of others. Both her mental and her physical condition are truly pitiable. She is suffering from the most extreme form of nervous depression and exhaustion. She cannot sleep, and she cannot eat. The prolonged loss of appetite and systematic lack of nourishment have reduced her to a condition of physical prostration.

After the long summer cruise in the Baltic Sea, undertaken, primarily, in the hope of restoring her health, the Czarina was so weak that she could not walk ashore, but had to be carried in an arm chair. Now she rarely ventures outside the palace, but is generally wheeled about the private grounds in a bath chair. She is only 36 years of age, but she is a complete wreck. Much of her time is spent in fits of depression, during which she lies motionless in apathetic despair. Sometimes the terrible calm of her profound melancholy is varied by passionate fits of weeping which horrify and alarm the members of her family and the ladies of her suite. At nights she cannot sleep, but sees awful visions of the thousands of unhappy men and women who during her husband's reign and by virtue of the death warrants signed by his hand, have died on the gallows simply because they held political opinions which were considered objectionable by the recognized and accredited representatives of law and order as these terms are understood in Russia. When she falls into fitful slumbers, her sleep, such as it is, is disturbed by grewsome dreams and nightmares; dreams of blood and hellish horrors, visions of an inferno created not by the imagination of a great horror, but by the revolting realities of the predominant political system in Russia.

Day and night she broods over the condition of Russia and over the unhappy isolation of the imperial family. Often she starts up from her gloomy reveries in a sudden gust of fear that assassins who have so often chosen the rulers of Russia as the victims of their cruel murders may be close at hand intent on terminating with one decisive blow that system of oppression which is incorporated in the Czar's imperial person. At other times she storms into the nursery to make sure that her beloved children are all alive, having imagined in mental agony that they had already been killed by the dagger of a terrorist or destroyed by the fragments of a revolutionary bomb. She realizes with an awful ness of comprehension that death hovers over her husband and her family, so that every morning she know whether she will be able to clasp them in her arms in the evening, and every evening she fears they may be torn from her side before the again.

No words can adequately describe the profundity of the unhappiness of this imperial woman. No conceived in the imagination of poets is so tragic as the fate of the Czarina Alexandra.

Her life at the Russian court which has now lasted for a period of fourteen years has been one long

How Loving's Industry Brought Him a Wife.

By a Special Contributor.

"I GUESS you're lost, ain't you?" inquired a shrill voice.

The man had not heard the boy's soft, barefoot approach, but he betrayed no surprise at this greeting, barely raising his head from the blurred half-circle his hat had made in the yielding sand, as he lay, full length, by the dune.

"Yes, lost in thought," he assented, indifferently.

"Uh." The boy had evidently missed the sarcasm in the remark. "Hot, ain't it?" he ventured, snapping the perspiration from his forehead as he had seen his father do.

"Um, yes. Too bad they don't furnish shade along with the other specialties of this—er—very attractive beach."

"Why, th' ain't any shade this time of day," the boy informed him, pitying his ignorance. He turned his pail over and sat down on it, cautiously at first, then with more confidence, and prepared to enter into explanations. "Y' see," he began, "when it's noon the sun's pretty near up on top of your head, and so most all the shadder's underneath."

"Oh." Loring did not even raise his chin from the little hollow of its own making in the sand.

"If y' don't believe me, jus' look." He raised one strong bare foot, its toes curling absurdly like a baby's, and showed Loring the sand beneath discolored by an oval, greenish shadow. "See?"

"Um. Not very accommodating of the sun, is it? But as I'm on the east side of the dune, I suppose I'm in direct line of succession to the afternoon shade."

The bottom of the pail sprung as the boy stood up. "Huh!" He looked up with pitying scorn in his short-lashed grey eyes. "An' you're a-goin' t' lay 'round an' let it come t' you, huh?" He picked up the pail. "Well, so long, I've got t' work."

"Wait." Loring found suddenly that he did not want to get back to his thoughts, particularly as the boy's words were uncomfortably like those which "the dearest girl in the world" had spoken last night when she gave him back his ring. There had been that same look in her eyes when she had taxed him with spending an idle summer, and had hinted that he was content to live on and wait for his father's money. She had ended with the words: "You can come back when you have really earned something with your own hands." And he had been too proud and angry to tell her that all the time he had been representing himself as "jollying the cash box," accepting the position of "Lord High Spender of the Dough," as he said with a college boy's slang, he had in reality been rejoicing his father's heart by learning "the business." Indeed, he had spent most of his vacation filling the place of warehouse man while that faithful employé took the two months' rest that his broken-down condition demanded. Loring's reticence about the work was merely the college boy's backwardness about confessing to "digging." And so he had been silent, the night before, and this morning instead of stopping at her cottage he had crunched off down the beach to think it out.

The boy, intent on swinging his empty pail around and around over his head, waited for Loring to raise his leisurely six-foot-one to erectness.

"Suppose you take me as an apprentice," suggested the young man. "No wages, you know; I'll work for nothing for the sake of learning the trade. What line of business are you in?"

The boy could not make up his mind whether he were being "joshed" or not, but he certainly found it hard to connect this leisurely young man with the strenuous business of clam-digging, so thought it best to discourage him.

"You'd get your han's dirty," he said, apparently absorbed in seeing how much of a hole one bare toe could make in the loose-lying sand.

Loring bit his lip. Lillian, last night, had said something about "afraid of soiling your hands."

"Never you mind about that. You go ahead and boss the job," he answered.

The boy, Bartholomew by baptism, "Pickles" to his friends, had run down to the water's edge. "You'd have to take off your shoes," he stated, discouragingly.

But Loring was not daunted. "All right, Boss."

"An' roll up your pants." Pickles was surprised at the instant obedience of his new hand.

"All ready, Boss."

"Well—say, I bet you ain't had no dinner," Pickles began doubtfully.

Loring disregarded the objection. He glanced down at the corrugated stretch of little striped clam shells left exposed by the tide. "We'll have to go down further to get the big ones, won't we?" he asked.

"Yeah." Pickles was favorably impressed by this bit of intelligence displayed by his apprentice. "These here little fellers" (pointing with an unsteady toe) "ain't very good to sell. Fac' is," he confided, "they're really heaps tenderer, "y' know, but th' big uns looks nicer, an' so folks think they taste nicer."

Loring nodded his appreciation of the shortsightedness of people in general, then squatting down at the edge of the ocean, he dug both hands into the yielding ooze and brought them up full of wet sand, but no clams.

"Guess that ain't a very good place," remarked the boy, who was digging them with one hand, changing them to the other for a quick wash in the little breakers, and then flinging them with precision into the pail between him and Loring. "Here, you come th' other side of me an' try. Y' strike places like that sometimes." He dragged the bucket over as he spoke. "Find 'em?" he asked presently.

"Sure," answered Loring, enthusiastically, throwing a very sandy clam into the pail.

"Say," drawled Pickles, "they got t' have a bath first."

Loring accepted the suggestion. "How much do you get for them?" he asked.

"Twenty-five cents a bucketful, 15 cents fer half a bucket," recited Pickles. "Y' see, I've got my reg'lar customers," he added proudly. "Miss Lillian's one of them. Say," encouragingly, as Loring sent three clams in rapid succession into the bucket, "you're hitting her up great, now. We've got the bucket half-full already."

"Um."

Pickles straightened up and drew out of the sand a foot which the swashing water had buried deep. "Say, there's a feller an' a girl coming."

"An' they look like they was awful struck on each other," giggled Pickles. "Think they need a tonic. I'm a-going to let fly a clam at the feller as soon as they get clost enough."

"Um."

"Why, it's Miss Lillian," exclaimed Pickles. But the clam had left his hand and was well aimed. Loring, glancing up, met the eyes of "the dearest girl in the world."

"Why—why——" he heard her say, but he had bent over and was a clam digger in earnest. Then she said something to her companion, whom Loring recognized as Bob Carter, and then the pair laughed in a thoroughly chummy way and ran down the beach swinging their clasped hands like school children. Loring, standing up to relieve his cramped legs, wished for an ugly minute that the clam he held were a far more deadly weapon.

"Say, honest," drawled Pickles, "if I'd 'a' knowed that was Miss Lillian, I wouldn't 'a' throwed that clam."

"Um."

"'Cause you see she's a mighty nice girl," the unconscious Pickles went on, with pride. "She's a friend of mine."

"You needn't rub it in," muttered Loring, under his breath. Then, aloud: "Say, kid, isn't that bucket about full?"

Pickles, still thinking about Miss Lillian, flung another clam on the heap above the rim. "I'm a-goin' to marry her some day if she'll have me. Say, d'you think she will?"

"Have you? Of course she will. You're just her kind—plodding along, working all the time—and talking about it," he added.

"Why, o' course I got to work, 'cause my customers depends on me," began Pickles.

"Oh, you'll do, all right. Come on, let's tote the clams in."

"Why, it's full, ain't it?" exclaimed Pickles. "Golly! I didn't know that." He swashed his way through the sandy water until he came to Loring's shoes. One sock was heel-marked with sand. "Gee! see where that guy with Miss Lillian walked on it." He held it up for inspection and thoughtfully rubbed it clean. "Say," he said at last, "you don't suppose that guy's a-goin' to marry her, do you?"

"Bob Carter?" inquired Loring, quickly.

"Oh, you know him?" asked Pickles. "Well, she was talking the other day to her mother about a feller that was coming down to see her. Ma said she guessed he was Miss Lillian's 'fong-say.' Does that mean beau? Reckon Ma got that word out of the fashion notes; she's always a-reading them. I never heard of a 'fong-say' before, did you?"

"Oh, yes," said Loring, absently. He seemed to have absorbed the boy's frankness, for he said, carelessly enough: "I've been one, my boy."

"Go on!" said Pickles, wonderingly; "who to?"

"Say, you ain't Miss Lillian's, are you?" asked Pickles in a sudden burst of light. Loring's face convicted him. "Then why"—began Pickles. He stooped to lift the pail.

"Oh, I'm too lazy to suit her," said the man, carelessly. "Here, let me carry the bucket."

"She wants somebody that works, you said," went on Pickles to himself. "Well," he drawled, turning to Loring, "I thought you was kind of shif'less myself when I first seen you. But say," with a burst of generosity, "if it'll do any good I'll tell Miss Lillian you're a first-rate clam digger."

"Much obliged," said Loring, soberly. They had reached Miss Lillian's cottage, so he handed the bucket to Pickles and lowered his voice. "But what about you, my man? I thought you were going to marry her yourself."

"Well, I'd like to, all right," Pickles confessed, casting a pebble far out toward the rolling breakers. "But maybe I'm too young."

"Quite so," said a voice that made them both jump. "People who live in beach houses often hear what's said outside," the young lady misquoted. She stood at the open window, twisting the strings of her white sunbonnet and smiling down at them.

Loring turned to go. He felt as tongue-tied as Pickles. "Oh, wait Jerry," she called, using the old pet name. "Come up on the porch; I want to talk to you." He came back slowly, and, it must be admitted, a little sulkily. Her hands fluttered nervously as she began: "The—the—wasn't it the warehouse man's place you took? Mr. Carter told me. Well, anyway, I think it was grand of you."

Loring looked uncomfortable. "Oh, that!" he said, helplessly.

"And what I said last night, Jerry, I take all back now. I was awfully silly to jump at conclusions."

"What did you jump at?" asked Pickles from around the corner of the house.

"Never you mind, Boss," Loring answered. Then looking at the pail, still half-full: "Didn't you say you had another customer down the beach?"

"Yep, I'm goin' now," and Pickles scuffed forlornly away down the smooth stretch of sand. B. E. J.

Organizing Congress.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OPENING AN EXTRAORDINAY SESSION.

By a Special Contributor.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT convened the Senate in extraordinary session at noon, on March 4, under authority of Article II, Section 3, of the Constitution, which provides that the President "may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them." Therefore the proper term for such a session is "extraordinary," and not "extra session."

On the advent of each Presidential administration the Senate is thus convened, for the purpose of considering nominations for filling the Cabinet and other most important official positions. The Senate alone has the constitutional power to confirm or to reject those nominations. Therefore, the House is not convened on such occasions.

Under the same constitutional authority both houses of the Congress have been convened in extraordinary session; because the condition of the treasury, the condition of our revenue laws, and the consequent alleged need of tariff legislation, seem to constitute, in the opinion of President Taft, an "extraordinary occasion," within the meaning of the Constitution.

The right of the Senate to legislate, under such conditions, has been questioned. And now the right of the House and of the Congress to legislate on other than tariff matters is being questioned. But, there is no constitutional ground for such questionings. The Senate is supreme, within its own sphere. The House is supreme within its own sphere. The two houses, when in joint session, are supreme in matters of legislation. They may legislate as they please, regardless of what the President may recommend or desire. The President may convene the Congress, or either branch of the Congress, but the Constitution gives him no authority over the representatives of the people, nor over the Senators who represent the sovereign States. Under the Constitution, the President may "recommend" certain lines of legislation. But, in the management of legislation, the President must absolutely keep hands off.

This simple statement of fact, which is only a plain statement of well-defined constitutional law, may surprise some readers. During recent years strenuous and persistent efforts have been made to convince the people that the President has legislative power. The Constitution gives the President no such power; does not permit him to make laws, nor to compel legislation. The Constitution only gives the President power to execute the laws. Nor can the President nullify nor break any law without violating his solemn oath to "support and defend the Constitution." Such a violation of his oath by the President is an overt act, the definition of which is made clear also in the Constitution.

Whenever the Congress convenes, as provided by the Constitution, "on the first Monday of December," or when it is convened in extraordinary session, as now, the House of Representatives proceeds to organize, as a new body, by the election of a Speaker and the other executive officials. It is not generally known, however, that the Senate is always organized, and ready to do business.

This condition is provided for by the Constitution, which ordains that the terms of one-third of the Senators shall expire every two years. Under that provision, two-thirds of the Senate is always organized. This provision of the Constitution, whereby two-thirds of the Senators are always ready for duty: their terms of service overlapping the term of the President, makes the Senate peculiarly free from the influence of the President, an influence which, in the hands of an unworthy professional politician, has sometimes been exerted with unworthy purpose over the House of Representatives.

Mark this: The Constitution provides that the terms of all of the Representatives shall expire every two years. Therefore the terms of all of the Representatives in the present Congress began at noon, on March 4, 1909. Moreover, all Representatives are on a par, regardless of whether they have served in previous Congresses or not. They are all new members of the sixty-first Congress.

Although the Vice-President is "heir apparent to the throne," and occupies a position from which he might step into the Presidency, yet he is officially without voice, vote or influence in any direction, or in any particular way. The Constitution makes him the presiding officer of the Senate, but he is not a member of that body. He is never taken into the counsels or councils of that body. He has no right to engage in debate, nor to introduce a bill, nor to advocate any measure before a committee: no right to do anything except preside. But, if there should be a tie in the Senate he may cast the deciding vote. That is an important function, but the Vice-President has not been required to exercise that function more than half a score of times during the existence of our government.

Every two years, when one-third of the Senators begin new terms, it becomes necessary that they shall be assigned to positions on the standing committees of the Senate. It is of the utmost importance that those assignments shall be made wisely and equitably. There were thirty-one Senators sworn in at noon, on March 4, for terms of six years each. Two years hence, thirty-one Senators will begin terms of six years each. Thus, two-thirds of the Senators will have terms overlapping the term of the President, and they are fearless of his opposition to them individually. This is an exceedingly important fact to remember. It makes the Senate the bulwark of popular liberty, in the event of the country having a "Big Stick" President.

The assignments of Senators to committee positions are made by a committee known as the "Committee on Committees." Please note that the Senators themselves thus assign committee positions. In the House of Representatives this tremendous power has been lodged in the hands of the Speaker, a dangerous and autocratic power. There is a row now on over that condition of affairs. No Speaker will surrender that power without a struggle. But in the Senate the presiding officer has absolutely nothing to do with committee assignments.

When President Cleveland convened the Congress in extraordinary session to enact anti-silver legislation, the press galleries at Washington enjoyed thrills and screams of merriment and laughter, for a New York newspaper(?) blatantly announced that it would have the best news service ever given, because it was sending a "special ambassador" (naming him) to furnish its reports. The veteran correspondents had never been "ambassadors;" only plain news getters. They awaited the coming of this great man, all of them anxious to see when, how often, and in how many different ways, he would make an ass of himself. They looked for him and longed for him, just as veteran Senators are now anxiously looking for the coming into their midst of a man from New York, with whom they will have plenty of amusement, while he swaggers himself into folly and ridicule.

Well, the "ambassador" arrived, and he looked "right smart and peart" in his fine toggery. His first break was to telegraph a severe criticism of Vice-President Adlai E. Stevenson, "for appointing such a rank free-silver man as Senator Voorhees as chairman of the Committee on Finance."

The Vice-President of course had nothing to do with that assignment. It had been made by the "Committee on Committees."

Vice-President Stevenson, one of the most lovable and capable of public men, smiled and said to the writer: "I hope he will not now censure me for appointing Mr. Crisp Speaker of the House of Representatives."

That afternoon, the writer seriously told the "ambassador" that Speaker Crisp was as rank a free-silver advocate as Senator Voorhees had ever been. And, bless your heart! that "ambassador" actually telegraphed a criticism of the Vice-President for appointing Mr. Crisp as Speaker. He worked himself into a fine frenzy against the Vice-President, all of it ridiculous nonsense. He lasted less than two weeks, and was succeeded by a plain, ordinary newspaper man, one who had never been an "ambassador," but who knew things, rationally.

During the organization of the present Congress, it will be well to remember the fact that the Senate is always organized, and that it has never been reorganized.

The rules of the Senate are as immutable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. They are never changed. Strenuous emergencies sometimes arise and the rules are denounced, but they are not changed.

Before you join with any superficial, vapid, self-seeking politician in criticising or decrying your Senate please bear well in mind that great men and wise men have sustained those rules. Senators Allison, Blaine, Clay, Calhoun, Conkling, Davis, Logan, Morgan, Quay, Gorman, Spooner, Webster, Cullom, Hampton, Ingalls, Beck, Thurman, Voorhees, Gordon, Lamar, Bright, Benton, Vest, all of them men of superior ability, and all of them with opportunity to study the Senate and its rules at close range, as others cannot, all of them respected statesmen and many of them still venerated, looked upon the Senate rules as models of excellence. They have stood for more than 100 years, and not without reason.

Surely no one man, whether he be a manufacturer of new issues, an optimistic agitator enamored of his own voice, or a persistent seeker after the Presidency, should command respect on that topic as against the unanimous judgment of Senators from the foundation of our government. Thus, under the Constitution, the Senate is "a continuing body," with changeless rules. But, the House of Representatives is a brand-new body every two years.

After a man in high public place, who had never served in the House of Representatives, had continuously, mayhap venomously, endeavored to discredit the House of Representatives before the people, indirectly challenging the intelligence of the people who elected those Representatives, it is exceedingly significant that Vice-President Sherman, who had served in the House continuously for twenty years, recently authorized the publication of an interview in which he said:

"There is no more loyal, true, honest and unselfish body in the world than the national House of Representatives."

That is a message to the people, which they should take to heart and ponder well. The people can always trust their Representatives, regardless of every detractor; no matter how high a position he may temporarily hold.

The Congress always convenes at noon. An electric flash from the Naval Observatory signals the hour, and the Vice-President lightly taps his desk with a small ivory gavel, which has been in use almost a century. The tap is heard throughout the Senate chamber, and the Vice-President says: "The Senate will be in order. The chaplain will offer prayer."

Senators and employés all arise and stand in their places, while the venerable Rev. Edward Everett Hale, gowned in black and standing near the Vice-President, makes invocation. On Monday, the secretary of the Senate will then read the proclamation of President Taft convening the Congress. Senator Hale of Maine will then address the chair, saying:

"Mr. President, I move that a committee of two Senators be appointed, to act with a like committee from the House of Representatives, to inform the President that the Congress is in session, and ready to receive any communication which he may desire to make."

This motion will prevail, and Senator Hale, the majority leader, and Senator Culberson of Texas, the minority leader, will be appointed. The Senate will then take a recess for an hour to await the organization of the House and the appointment of a similar

"It appears that more than a quorum of the is present to do business. Nominations for Speaker now in order."

Everything is now "cut and dried." On afternoon and evening there were caucuses of cans and Democrats, and candidates for Speaker other officers were chosen. The chairmen of each those party caucuses will address the clerk and nate the choice of his party for Speaker. The candidate, of course, will receive a majority. will announce the result of the vote. Then he ignate the chairman of the Republican caucus chairman of the Democratic caucus, or the chair the Republican caucus and some other well-kno eran of that party, as a committee to notify the one and escort him to the hall of the House. arrival, the Speaker is always given an ovation by his party associates. He ascends the platform up the gavel, and announces:

"The House will be in order. The chaplain prayer."

When this shall have been done, the new Speaker deliver a short address, thanking the House honor conferred. He will then state that the officers of the House will be in order. Both party men will then nominate their party candidates offices of clerk, sergeant-at-arms, doorkeeper, and chaplain. The candidates of the majority will be elected.

The minority candidates seek those nomina merely for the empty honor of being voted for, the expectation that they will be advantaged event of their own party success two years minority candidate for Speaker is made "lead minority."

The election of a Speaker and of the chief the body constitutes what is known as a "the organization of the House." When that been accomplished on Monday, the Hon. Sereno of New York, who has been recognized as leader of the majority" in several recent will assume leadership, unless there shall be which is not likely, and he will address the making a motion identical with that which made and adopted by the Senate, for the appoint a committee to join with the committee of the to notify the President that the Congress is and ready to receive any communication be pleased to make. The motion will be out division, and the Speaker will appoint New York and Mr. Clark of Missouri. Thus set, the Speaker will officially recognize as the floor leaders of the majority and in the House.

When this shall have been done either Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania, one of the leaders of recent Houses, will move that the a recess of an hour, and that motion will be

The members will then "break ranks," leave their seats and mingle freely with somewhat like a bunch of 400 college boys at ning of a college year. The older men will old acquaintances, while the newcomers wonderingly, or else become busily engaged the acquaintances of the veterans and leaders well known to them by reputation, the old can do them the most good in the immediate "steer them right."

While all of these things have been going on known messengers of the Senate will have been and carrying word to the Senate concerning ures. When information reaches Senator Hale House organization has been completed, Senator Culberson, and the gentlemen appointed House will join them. BEAUTIFUL AND IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY SEEN AT GIBRALTAR.

By a Special Contributor.

It was a bright warm day as a little group of us from one of our battleships slowly sauntered along Waterport street in Gibraltar. We had been invited by the commanding officer of the fortress to be his guests at the presentation of colors to the South Staffordshire Regiment, then on duty at the Rock. This ceremony, which has no counterpart in the army of the United States, proved to be most interesting and impressive.

When we reached the parade grounds, we found the regiment already there and in position. In the form of a hollow square it surrounded the bishop and his clergy, for the Church of England never misses an opportunity to take its part in that vast and powerful machine, the British empire.

It made my heart beat fast when I looked into the faces of red-coated veterans before me, for the very men who stood there were fighters most valiant, fighters of Indian foes, and fighters of nature in her hardest moods, and they were conquerors.

We have in this country as yet nothing which in a military way corresponds to the proud history of the South Staffordshire Regiment of England. Some day in the far future we shall have, without doubt, but it takes time to create such a record as is the history of this organization. It was first recruited in the days of Queen Anne, and immediately went into service under the Duke of Marlborough, but was sent to our western hemisphere. After four years' service in Canada it went to the West Indies, where it remained sixty years, losses by all casualties being immediately supplied so that its ranks were always kept up to the full standard. Then they came home to England, served in the war for the independence of the colonies. They crossed the sea again, and I could but feel the respect which was due a brave enemy when I knew that this very regiment had fought my forefathers at Bunker Hill. During that war it was stationed at New York, and was the last armed force to leave our shores at the time of the evacuation. They went from New York to Halifax, where they did garrison duty for several years.

Then followed for it a full hundred years of glory, a long part of the time in the West Indies again, then at the Cape of Good Hope, then coming back across the Atlantic to Montevideo, Uruguay, where in bloody battle it distinguished itself at the storming and capture of that place. Then they went back to Europe, to be part and parcel of the maelstrom of war which raged up and down the continent under that scourge, Napoleon Bonaparte.

They were with Sir John Moore at Corunna. They followed Wellington up and down through Spain, and with Sir Thomas Graham they stormed over the ramparts of San Sebastian.

The years 1813-14 saw them part of the army that invaded the south of France, and when Napoleon went into exile at Elba the South Staffordshire Regiment came home for a breathing spell.

When that French meteor again flashed across the troubled sky of Europe, this regiment was after him, on the continent again, and after the battle of Waterloo, marched into Paris with all the pride of a conqueror.

Napoleon disposed of, Europe had peace, but there was no rest for this redoubtable body of English soldiers, and in 1819 they found themselves in South Africa fighting Kaffirs. That job done with, and well done, we next hear of them in India, then in Burmah, and I want all American readers to take particular notice of what follows, that in the years 1824-26 they poured out their blood like water for the rescue from a heathen jailor of an American missionary, Adoniram Judson. Think of it! for this one citizen of the United States this British regiment fought two years and lost eleven officers and more than 500 men, and they had their man freed.

Filling their ranks again to the full, they had eleven years of peaceful garrison duty in Bengal, then they sailed home, but they only got as far as the Ionian Isles of Greece, whence they were sent across the Atlantic to Honduras and up to Nova Scotia again.

The first Turko-Russian war hurried them to the Crimea, where they inscribed on their banner in bloody letters the names of Alma and Inkerman. Through the long siege of Sebastapol they fought the enemy and braved worse death in the trenches and hospitals, and never once did they quail or turn their backs to the Early in 1855 the mutterings of the coming storm called them to service again in India, and when the revolt there threatened the loss of the Indian empire the South Staffordshire Regiment did mighty and gallant service at the siege of Cawnpore, and at the storming of Delhi it suffered frightful loss. But they avenged their cause in both actions, and in the final stamping out of the mutiny they took such savage vengeance that the name of the South Staffordshire Regiment is held in horror by the natives to this day.

Afterward it tried, but failed, to rescue Chinese Gordon, besieged at Khartoum in upper Africa, but it kept up its record for fierce fighting and heroic suffering.

Such is a story which but thinly covers a period of [illegible] years. In an existence of over 225 years it has spent [illegible] in foreign service. It has fought in thirty-[illegible] battles and left the bones of its honored dead in every quarter of the globe. There never was a Roman legion that could show so glorious a record of war.

Here at Gibraltar they had been at rest for nearly ten years when I saw them that day. There they stood, a full thousand strong, their red coats and glistening bayonets gleaming like a challenge across the yellow sands of the neutral ground to Spain and her impotent soldiery.

Their old battle flags, worn and rent and scarred by shot and shell, they had brought with them to this historic spot. This day they were going to surrender them to the only power whom Great Britain acknowledges superior to her own, the power of the Lord God Almighty.

The Governor of Gibraltar rode into the square, and with his staff took the position which was his in the ceremony; following him came the bishop and the clergy all arrayed in the robes of their holy office. The band struck up and played "God Save the King," and the troops wheeling into column and then into battalion front, swept past with the thunderous melody of might and the beauty of military power.

Forming into a hollow square of three sides, with arms at parade rest, the ceremonies began by a choir of about 100 men stepping to the front and forming into two lines; then each one drew from under his red tunic a little hymn-book, and a hymn was started.

There was something grandly pathetic in this battle hymn, sung by real soldiers, strong, manly, rugged fellows, who had known what war was at its worst. No instruments accompanied them, and the effect was indescribably thrilling.

"When Israel's chief in days of yore
  Thy banner, Lord, flung out,
Old Kishon's tide ran red with gore,
  Dire was the Pagan's rout.

"And later, when the Roman's eye
  Turned upward in despair,
The cross that flickered in the sky
  Made answer to his prayer.

"So, Lord, to us Thy suppliants now,
  Bend Thou a gracious ear,
And mark and register the vow
  We make before Thee here.

"Through fire and steel, 'mid weal or woe,
  Unwavering and in faith,
Where'er these sacred banners go,
  We'll follow to the death.

"We'll follow, strengthened by the might
  That comes of trust in Thee,
And if we conquer in the fight
  Thine shall the glory be.

"Or, if Thy wisdom wing the ball,
  And life or limb be riven,
The cross we gaze on as we fall
  Shall point the way to heaven."

Match that if you can, for devout military hymnology!

With a quavering tremolo the song faded into silence, and stepping forward, the bishop laid his hands on the new colors, and all uncovering, he made the following prayer:

"Almighty and most merciful Father, without whom nothing is strong, nothing is holy, we come before Thee with a deep sense of Thine exceeding majesty, and our own unworthiness, praying Thee to shed upon us the light of Thy countenance, and to hallow and sanctify the work in which we are this day engaged. We beseech Thee to forward with Thy blessing the presentation to this regiment of the colors which are henceforth to be carried in its ranks, and with all lowliness and humility of spirit we presume to consecrate the same in Thy Great Name to the cause of peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety. We humbly pray that the time may come when the sound of war shall cease to be heard in the world; but for as much to our mortal vision that blessed consummation seems still far distant, we beseech Thee to so order the course of events that these colors shall be unfurled in the face of an enemy only for a righteous cause. And in that dark hour may stain and disgrace fall on them never; but being borne aloft as emblems of loyalty and truth, may the brave who gather round them go forward conquering for the right, and maintaining, as becomes them, the honor of the British crown, the purity of our most holy faith, the majesty of our laws, and the influence of our free and happy constitution. Finally we pray that Thy servants here present, not forgetful of Thine exceeding mercies vouchsafed to their regiment in times gone by, and that all the forces of our sovereign the King, wherever stationed and however employed, may labor through Thy grace to maintain a conscience void of offense toward Thee and toward man, always remembering that of soldier and of civilian the same account shall be taken, and that he is best prepared to do his duty, and to meet death, let it come in what form it may, who in the integrity of a pure heart is able to look to Thee as a God reconciled to him through the blood of the atonement. Grant this, O Lord, for Thine only son Jesus Christ's sake. Amen."

The bishop then stood to one side, and the Governor of Gibraltar took his place. Two young officers of the regiment advanced and handed him the old flags, then dropping to one knee they received from his hands the new colors; then they rose from their knees, and stepping back to the ranks, the Governor mounted his horse and from the saddle made the regiment a magnificent address, full of patriotism and loyalty, counseling fidelity, obedience and zeal in the performance of duty. At its close, he galloped back to his headquarters and the regiment saluting the new colors, "trooping the colors," it is called, with them at their head marched to their barracks.

Turning away, I could but think how hard is the fate of a soldier, almost an exile from the land of his birth, one who may be ordered to any part of the world, serving in many lands, yet after all a homeless wanderer, his final fate to sleep in an unknown, an unmarked and soon a forgotten grave. Such is war, and such will be the fate of many a dear one of ours these days of imperial expansion. Who knows but—

"Few shall part where many meet
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulcher."

THOUGHT TRANSMITTED AS A TELEGRAM OVER A WIRE.

From Chicago Inter Ocean.

THOUGHT will be transmitted just as a telegram is. "Thought energy can be carried along a conductor and into the earth much in the same way as a lightning rod conducts lightning.

"It is more than possible that thought can be conducted and make itself visible in writing."

These remarkable conclusions concerning thought transmissions are reached by Prof. Kotik, of Moscow, a psychologist with a European reputation. He publishes them in a pamphlet, entitled "The Invisible Thought Photography." It is attracting as great attention in Germany as it is in Russia.

Kotik made the experiments on which his conclusions are based on a girl 14 years old, daughter of a professional thought reader, and her father. He chose them because their minds are trained. Kotik's audience was composed of the members of the "inner clinic" of Moscow University, who may be regarded as experts in psychology. The girl's eyes were carefully bandaged, her ears were stuffed with paraffin and cotton; literally, she was was blind and deaf for the time.

In the first experiment her father stood on a bare wood floor, he holding her hand. She "read" quickly and accurately all the words and short sentences her father presented to her while he held her hand. The words and sentences were written by persons in the audience, and most were in languages which neither father nor daughter understood. A physician wrote in Greek. The girl, her eyes bound still, reproduced the Greek characters in chalk on a blackboard.

Of course, scoffers will say her father conveyed to her the letters forming the words by pressure of his hand, a code she understands. Let them read on.

Father and daughter were placed on either side of a closed door so that they could not clasp hands. The test words written were all Russian. It is difficult to reproduce the result of this experiment satisfactorily to English-speaking readers. The Russian word "stol" (table) was given to the father. The girl read "stuk," which means "piece." The word "parschod" (steamer) was written; the girl made it "purked," which means nothing. Several other complete words were given, but with only one exception they were all maimed and mutilated by the girl; but not so much as to be devoid of all resemblance to the test word presented by the father.

More extraordinary results were to be achieved. The wrists of father and daughter were connected by a fine copper wire bound around them. The girl was still blind and deaf, but even when they were separated by the length of the great hall of the clinic she read with the greatest ease the written words given to her father.

Next they were separated by a locked door. She was successful at every attempt.

Two rooms and three locked doors were placed between them, the wire being slipped under the door or through the keyhole. The result was equally successful.

The wire was then fastened in various places to the wall to prevent vibration or pulling or other mechanical telegraphy. About the results there Prof. Kotik is somewhat contradictory in his statements. He admits there was considerable hesitancy in the girl's responses, but insists that which was achieved proves beyond a shadow of doubt that it is possible to transmit thought telegraphically.

As a climax to his experiments, Prof. Kotik placed father and daughter in the same room, their wrists bound by the same delicate copper wire. Really as far as thought transmission is concerned, they were far separated, for yards of wire were coiled between them. But without hesitancy the girl read the words placed in her father's mind.

A dispatch from Moscow just received states that this girl has been subjected to another test, and stood it most successfully. At a seance a doctor wrote a letter and placed it, folded, in an envelope. The girl's father was not in the room and knew nothing of the contents, neither did Prof. Kotik. The letter was handed to the girl, who, after some moments' reflection and without opening it, read aloud its contents.

Considering that the girl was surrounded by cold-blooded, skeptical scientists, this story is so remarkable that before believing it ordinary students of psychology will await further details. Indeed, it is strange that a man of Kotik's great reputation should unhesitatingly pin his faith to the idea of thought transmission by these means.

In Germany, men like Prof. Benedikt and Profs. Moll and Dessor hesitate to give their sanction to the new doctrine until more careful experiments, eliminating all possibility of mistake, have been tried.

THE LOVE OF ARTURO FOR THE YANKEE SCHOOLMA'AM.

By a Special Contributor.

THE schoolhouse at Uno Gato was plain and substantial, built for service and the years to come. Its doors and quartette of windows pierced the massive walls embrasure-like, and gave the squat structure a bellicose and warlike aspect greatly at variance with the peaceful object of its mission.

On three sides ranged low, brick floored galleries framed from the gnarled cedars of the New Mexican mountainsides, and roofed with gray and lichen-stained tiles brought "burro back" over the mountains from some long-forgotten potters beside the Rio Grande.

These shady galleries looked out upon a waste of riotous weeds, a gaunt cottonwood flagpole from which depended a tattered and dejected specimen of the "flag of the free;" and a narrow and dust-carpeted road on either hand of which clustered the sun-blistered "adobes" of the pueblo. Back, front and upon every hand towered the majestic barriers of the Ortiz peaks, brushing the soft blue of the turquoise sky with the velvet pennons of their towering pines.

The school session for the day was at an end. Among the heavy benches some thirty dusky children, bare of foot and picturesquely ragged as to clothes, stood silent and watchful awaiting the word of dismissal. A solemn hush, a portent of unusual events, was in the air. "Tell them to go—and be good, Ysidro."

The teacher turned to her small coadjutor, a black-eyed lad of twelve years, who acted as interpreter between the fair-haired maestra and those of her small charges to whom the Anglo-Saxon tongue was still a mystery. The teacher stood softly drumming with her finger-tips on her massive desk while the muchachos silently took their departure. She was on the border line of womanhood; slender, graceful; with a wealth of shimmering hair which spoke of silver in the high lights, a rich golden bronze in its deeper recesses; a far different person than one would think to find presiding over a school in a western mining hamlet.

"I have at my disposal," her uncle had written, "a small school in a Mexican district. It does not pay anything remarkable, nor does Uno Gato boast of much in a social way. Still, the country is fine, the climate magnificent, and the change will do you good both mentally and physically. You will also discover that there is something 'worth while' outside your little York State hamlet and the campus of Bryn Mawr."

Although she did not regard with particular relish the idea of residence in a Mexican mining hamlet, Uncle Henry's ideas as to her shallow, artificial nature must be rebuked and his faith in the practicality of the Roberts family restored. Therefore, although Spanish was not one of her linguistic accomplishments, she gritted her small, regular teeth; drew her mouth into as grim and determined an aspect as its soft lines would admit, and engaged her sleeping-car accommodations. In consequence the following school year found the name of Jessica Roberts on the school records of Galisteo county.

It was now far into the joyous mountain springtime, and already she had begun to feel quite at home and to look upon her life and the quaint adobe schoolhouse as if she had known them always. Also her education had progressed to the point where she could call half of her little charges correctly by name and even converse with them in a queer little sing-song manner reminiscent of a little volume entitled "Spanish at a Glance."

The last of the children had passed out into the sunlight to gravitate slowly homeward after the leisurely manner of their race, and the long, low-ceiled room was silent save for the frequent passage to and from the open window of a colony of wasps who had preempted one corner of the apartment for their own and plastered their adobe cells to a rough ceiling beam. The afternoon sunlight, streaming through the western windows, drew golden parallelograms upon the earthen floor, and in them the dust motes danced lazily.

Ysidro, adviser, interpreter and chief worshiper at the maestra's throne, stood silent and contemplative before the object of his adoration. His small hands, showing conspicuous "tide marks" about the slender wrists, were folded demurely before him, and his eyes rested upon the hem of the teacher's fresh lawn dress and—the dainty russet oxford peeping from beneath. Presently the teacher looked up from her desk and examined the little figure before her. In her soft brown eyes was an expression in which pity, amusement, and perhaps even a little wonder were blended. Ysidro shuffled his bare feet noisily. It was evident that he had remained by request and that the outcome of the impending interview disturbed him.

The maestra slowly held up for his inspection a delicate necklace, matrix turquoise set in a dainty golden filigree, somewhat dirty, but of great beauty and value. "Do you know how this came in my desk, Ysidro?" she asked. A faintly audible sigh of relief heaved the dirty, once white camisa under its one denim suspender, and a smile displayed Ysidro's expanse of perfect teeth.

"Si, señorita, I poot eet there, yass 'm," and the smile broadened. The answer did not surprise Miss Roberts. In fact, she had suspected as much. The gracious lines about her lips slowly gave way to the Portia-like air of sternness with which she was accustomed to humble small malefactors. While her tender sympathies were wholly on the side of the small supposed culprit before her, still the possession of this exquisite piece of jewelry could point but one conclusion. Ysidro saw, half-comprehendingly, the signs of threatened displeasure, and his smile faded like the cañon mists before the rising sun.

"Ysidro," the tone of the teacher's voice was one of shocked remonstrance, "Ysidro, don't you know what happens to little boys, and to men, who take what is not theirs? Have you ever heard of a prison, Ysidro?" Ysidro's face showed a measure of pained comprehension. "Oooh, oo-h, maestra!" he protested, "I no steal eet! I geeve eet you. 'Tis to keep al-ways."

The teacher's face relaxed at Ysidro's correction and a ghost of a smile twitched the parted lips, "red, just like ripe prickly pear," as Ysidro was wont to describe them. Her voice was soft, caressing as she went on. "Yes, I know, sweetheart, but where did you get it? Who gave it to you, honey? Muchachos don't make their teachers presents of jeweled necklaces."

Ysidro ran his slender hands through his tangled black mane and pondered this undisputed fact deeply. There was clearly no way out of his perplexity save the straight and narrow path. The truth must "out" even if he forego the teacher's gratitude gained though it be by proxy. Ysidro heaved another sigh and laid bare his secret. "It from my hermano," he explained grudgingly. "He say I geeve it you to keep from long time. He say he-a like you," Ysidro paused uncertainly; "he say he loo-af you!"

"Ysidro!" Miss Roberts's natural roses became several shades deeper as she gasped at this candid statement. The small, grave figure before her calmly inspected the earthen floor stoically indifferent to the effect he had produced. Then the humor of the thing overcame the maestra, and she laughed long and helplessly.

It was now Ysidro's turn to wonder, and he regarded the teacher with grave disapproval. At last the maestra subdued her hysterical tendencies and, somewhat shocked at her unseemly conduct in the face of so grave a situation, returned to the examination.

"But, Ysidro," she faltered, "I do not know your brother. I have never even seen him. I cannot take presents from gentlemen whom I do not know, deary. You must take this back to your brother and tell him that I thank him very much for his kindness, but that I cannot keep it."

Once more Ysidro pondered deeply. To him the objections offered by the maestra seemed trivial in the extreme. The mere matter of personal acquaintanceship was nothing on which to refuse the offer of a costly present. "Mas, maestra, my brotheer has see you manee time," he explained eagerly, "at postoffeece, at hacienda o' Señor Burke, ever'w'ere. He know you mucho, an'—an' he looaf you!" he concluded with finality.

Miss Roberts bit her lips, and once more her color deepened. "Ysidro, never say that silly thing again," she said sternly, but with the slightest suggestion of a quaver in her voice. "You must take this present back to your brother and tell him that I cannot keep it. Love me! Why, you silly little boy! I do not even know his name!" This final objection struck Ysidro as being equally inconsequential, but he would humor it. "His name Arturo," he announced with all the formality of an introduction.

The maestra showing no signs of relenting, Ysidro plunged into further details of his brother's personality.

"He gran' caballero," he declaimed proudly, "he ranchero, an' he live 'way, 'way," he waved his small, naked arm toward the purpling mountains seen dimly through the open door, "he live alli, there, miles an' miles. He own land, mucho; an'—an'—an' t'ousand cattle an'—an' t'ousand shee-ip! He reech!"

The teacher gasped at this florid recital. Through her many kindnesses to the small members of her flock she was familiar with the squalid poverty of the Sanchez family; the half-dozen dirty children of whom Ysidro was the eldest, and the wretched existence eked out by the father as a laborer in the smelters at Dolores. And in it all she could find no place for the rich son and brother who owned a thousand cattle and a thousand sheep.

It all appeared a highly-colored figment of Ysidro's imagination. Ysidro stood broadly smiling, enjoying the astonishment his statement had called forth.

"Does this rich brother ever give you anything?" pursued the maestra. "Why does he not help your mother with food and clothes, dear?" Ysidro promptly set about to disabuse the teacher's mind as to his brother's parsimonious nature. "He do geeve t'ings," he asserted stoutly: "si, señorita, he geeve me t'ings, lots! He geeve me dees an' dees." Ysidro drew from the depths of his shapeless trousers a cheap bone-handled knife with badly shattered blades and a harmonica upon which he would have performed had it not been that in its tenancy of his leaky pocket it had become so filled with sand and grit that even sound was impossible.

These exhibits did not confirm Ysidro's tale of wealth. The teacher was nonplussed. Long and thorough cross-examination failed to shake Ysidro's story, except, perhaps, to augment the strength of his brother's bucolic possessions, the size and quality of his herds.

The maestra slowly put away her books and closed the rude drawers of her desk. Ysidro stood with downcast face watching her preparations for departure. He felt the crushing burden of her displeasure, but his small mind could not comprehend it. Still, though his goddess smiled or frowned upon him, he could not forget the duties of his sweet bondage. With shuffling feet and downcast eyes he went to the corral behind the schoolhouse to saddle the pony which she rode daily from the Burke rancho a half-dozen miles away.

The maestra followed the diminutive figure and stood outside the rough alder-poled inclosure while he lifted the dainty pigskin saddle and adjusted the horsehair cinchas. The sweet aromatic fragrance of the button sage and grease brush, which encroached upon the small clearing, threatening to convert it once more to a state of wildness, sent fresh energy bounding [illegible] her veins—the joy of life shared by all living [illegible] under the glorious New Mexican sun. All, [illegible] save one—Ysidro. His universe was bounded by [illegible] of yellow hair, two kind brown eyes and a voice [illegible] as a chime of mission bells sounding from [illegible] peaceful sunset fields. And when these eyes [illegible] sadly down upon him the light went out of his [illegible] and the brightest sunshine fell pale and cold upon [illegible]

As she gained the trail high upon the arroyo [illegible] the maestra turned in the saddle and thoughtfully [illegible]veyed the weed-grown school yard, the tawny [illegible] mustard lying like a flame upon the hillside [illegible] and lastly the tiny white figure standing motionless [illegible] the corral bars looking wistfully upward, still [illegible] for the flutter of a dainty gauntlet with which [illegible] was wont to reward him. "Poor benighted [illegible] cherub!" she said softly, and with the suspicion [illegible] catch in her voice, "why punish him for a fault [illegible] had its birth in love?" and Ysidro was rewarded.

Several weeks went by, and still the matrix [illegible] lay in the little orangewood box in one corner [illegible] teacher's desk. All interviews with Ysidro [illegible] futile as the first one, and finally she gave it up, [illegible]ing with rather a guilty conscience this votive [illegible]ing of Cupid. Several times, indeed, she was [illegible] point of laying the matter before Mr. Burke, her [illegible] but fear of ridicule restrained her. Then, too, [illegible] Burke was alcalde and the fount of justice in the [illegible] Gato Valley, and to confide in him would be to [illegible] merciless mills of justice grinding.

One morning, when the pearly crispness of spring [illegible] merging into the dry, hazy atmosphere of summer [illegible] Roberts rode down the spice-scented trail a little [illegible] than was her custom. The great door of the [illegible] house stood open, rather to her surprise, and [illegible] the witch-hazel copse that swallowed the valley [illegible] below the clearing a faint cloud of dust hung [illegible] still morning air as if a horseman had just [illegible] The teacher removed her pony's trappings and [illegible] briskly into the cool depths of the adobe house, [illegible] sun of early June was warm, even at that early [illegible] Ysidro was already there, busy with the [illegible] broom sweeping up invisible dust from the worn [illegible] floor. As she looked at the little averted face, [illegible] monition crowded the maestra's mind, and going [illegible] desk, she opened it.

The matrix necklace was in its accustomed [illegible] but beside it lay a bulky object wrapped in a [illegible] torn lace handkerchief. As she raised it, the [illegible] lacework fell away and she saw a golden [illegible] richly-carven and massive, glinting dully in the [illegible]dued light.

"Ysidro!" she advanced upon the small culprit [illegible]fully, "what do you mean by putting such things [illegible] desk? Where did you steal this golden [illegible] Ysidro retreated behind the nearest bench and [illegible] defiantly. "I no poot eet in desk!" he shouted [illegible] "an'—an' I no steal eet, either!" The teacher [illegible] helplessly, holding the beautiful image before [illegible]

Tears of vexation sprang into her eyes, and [illegible] the image down, she took Ysidro by the shoulder [illegible] forced him into a seat beside her. "Now [illegible] Ysidro," she said, gently but firmly, "you must [illegible] this to me or I must punish you. Did your [illegible] bring this, and if so, where can I find him? [illegible] take these things back immediately. Why, [illegible]strous!" she concluded wildly, and, woman-like, [illegible] into tears.

Ysidro looked on, wondered and pitied, but [illegible] had passed from his puny hands and the [illegible] laid his tribute on the altar of his affections [illegible]

At last Miss Roberts dried her tears and [illegible] lips firmly gathered up the crucifix and placed [illegible] its fellow in the corner of her desk. Riding [illegible] she would lay the matter before Mr. Burke and [illegible] outrageous one-sided courtship stopped.

All day she turned the matter in her mind [illegible] resolution was still strong as she rode up the [illegible] slope of the Santa Lucia range which [illegible] valley of the Uno Gato from the Jamul [illegible] lay the rancho of Señor Burke.

Upon the uphill hand the slope rose abrupt[illegible] and precipitous. Great barriers of [illegible] gashed the mountainside, while in between [illegible] slides of shale great spruce and jack pine [illegible] gnarled roots and hung swaying on the [illegible] The pony thrust his muzzle impatiently [illegible] bit as he topped the rise, and curvetted on the [illegible] carpeted track. But the maestra was deep [illegible] and did not give the animal the freedom that [illegible] Up and still up the road wound, bending [illegible] ledges of overhanging rock or threading [illegible] some great slide, and always under the [illegible] branches of the nodding pines. The pony [illegible] the road passed through the "notch" and [illegible]ward on the farther side. A fresh wind, [illegible] the breath of leagues of untrammeled space, [illegible] maestra's cheek and tugged at the trailing [illegible] her hat.

Sensible of some strange presence, she raised [illegible] from the ground. Coming toward her around [illegible] in the road was a horseman dressed in a [illegible] bespangled costume of a Spanish caballero.

He turned backward in his saddle, looking [illegible] had come, and as she looked he took off his [illegible]ver-laced sombrero and waved it tauntingly [illegible] one far below. As he did so, he laughed a [illegible] laugh. A puff of white drifted upward from the [illegible]ral on the lower mountainside, and something [illegible] through the branches overhead causing the [illegible] horse to start violently.

The laugh died away, and with a lightning [illegible]ment the horseman wheeled his mount, which [illegible] in the space that one might cover with [illegible] His sinewy hand sought a long, slim [illegible] boot beneath the velvet leg, and a leaden [illegible] ripping downward through the gently-swaying [illegible]

There are notes of invitation to concerts, the programmes of some of which I also found with marginal remarks on the numbers I most enjoyed; notes which came with flowers; birthday congratulations, graduation cards, engagement announcements, wedding invitations, post-nuptial raptures—everything in the epistolary line, in fact—with one exception. And such a catholicity of pursuits as my correspondents represent! There were (I speak in the past tense, for letter writing is a luxury I permit myself in only a limited measure these busy days) some half-dozen assorted clergymen, Baptist, Unitarian, Presbyterian, etc., besides one Romanist lay brother. The last named tried so hard to proselyte me that I was forced in self-defense to let the correspondence die an untimely death. The Calvanistic brethren predominated as a matter of course, as a sort of foreordination of affinities. When I was young and very exacting I proclaimed that the not impossible he who should command my heart and me would have to come up to just seven requirements, to wit: he must be a Presbyterian, an intellectual giant (preferably college-bred,) musically educated, with a good bass singing voice; tall and picturesquely dark-complexioned; very fond of German poetry (the adverb in italics;) named John; and apparently 35 years of age or over. This last requirement, being on a sliding scale, has of course extended its limit to keep pace with my own advance, but I find that the other items figure with very slight prominence now, only that I still hope he will love Deutsch. My goodness! how time does take the kinks out of a person. There are letters from soldiers, written between battles on foreign fields, and from the dreary camps of waiting at home, from university profs. in the pride of their youth and beardlessness, from lawyers, teachers, globe trotters, plain men and women, boys and girls, all of them kind, sociable, and to an unusual degree interesting. A lot of life is reflected in just this one collection. It makes me think that as a scientist can reconstruct the skeleton of a prehistoric animal from one bone, so a sociologist some time hence could gain a fair idea of our present-day life from a synthetic arrangement of even my comparatively unsignificant epistolary relics. And they are so full of simple human interest! I regret ever to destroy such letters.

But the one exception to which I alluded above is love letters. I never have written that kind. I never expect to more than once. I never have received them in the strict sense in which I use the term. Of course there have been letters hovering on the border of sentiment, others clinging desperately to the ragged edge of sentimentality, but in such instances almost without exception the man in the case has long since taken unto himself another and, it is to be presumed, more responsive girl. In looking over some of those today I had to smile to myself over the perversity of human nature. I have heard many a charming girl who was possessed of a saving sense of humor confess that no matter how Platonic may be her attitude toward a man who has in any way, Platonic or—or Cupidic (isn't that fetching?) devoted himself to her, or how sincerely she may desire his highest happiness, it gives her just a bit of a neglected feeling when she finds him in love with another girl, who reciprocates. I suppose a woman is always prone to that feeling, because she realizes that a man once married and pledged by all the rites of Benedicthood is henceforth and forever lost to her as an individual friend. She can never know him again as a comrade or confidant or tentative lover, but only as the husband of another woman.

Here and there among the old things packed away with the letters—festive paper napkins scrawled over with the autographs of callow youth, place cards, dance programmes, valentines—oh, it is to laugh to see those boxes of lace-paper valentines, original near-poems, true lovers' knots and the like, and to think of the way I thrilled over them once—la, la!—I found, carefully preserved, a bunch of dried roses, a cluster of violets pressed and brown, a tiny spray of dead honeysuckle; and, tragic to relate, it required a most violent effort to recall the immortal occasion each was poetically supposed to commemorate! I must indeed be well on my way toward those years which bring the philosophic mind—and the prosaic double chin.

But I have not told you the object of all this disturbing of the ashes of the past. I was in search of certain editorial communications which from time to time like palmy oases have punctuated the arid stretch of my effort toward successful authorship. These have become more frequent of recent times, and it was with the thought of combining them all in a scrap-book, with illuminating notes as to the particular poem rejected and yet complimented or (most rarely!) bought and paid for, that I hunted up several which marked my very early struggles toward public notice. These busy editors of the topnotch magazines who refuse your immature work and yet concern themselves to tell you of the elements of strength and promises of ultimate value it may contain—how kind they are! If one must be knocked down, how nice to have it done with a padded club.

I shall not call my book an "Anthology of Regrets," as one disconsolate genius proposes in his own case, but a sort of New Pilgrim's Progress. The analogy to the ancient classic is not quite a perfect one, for Sloughs of Despond seem to be scattered over the whole length of my toiling way instead of accommodatingly grouped at the starting point, but these good editors who have gone out of their way to hand me a little bouquet of encouragement now and then have certainly been Helps and Interpreters and Greathearts to this pilgrim.

Mirabile visu—a ray of sunshine has fallen across my page! The clouds seem to have spent themselves with the last violent shower, and now they are parting and rolling back into great banks, gray beneath and snowy white above, to show the stranger sky what kind of an earth we have down here. Oh, that sky—the himmel blau of it! Himmel blau means a great deal more than heavenly blue. What a happy, happy knack the Germans have of combining simple words to make tremendously effective, wondderschoen ones. Do you blame me for wanting the not impossible but apparently improbable to understand?

I wrote a new sonnet last week. In fact, I have been fairly exuding sonnets of late. It is a fascinating verse form to use when once you get the swing of it. Have you ever noticed how few people can read a sonnet aloud properly? But you ought to see the first one I ever tried to write. I used feminine endings and completed each line as painstakingly as if they all had been neatly chopped off with a feed knife. Queer how much work it takes to write poetry. The popular supposition that it is purely a matter of inspiration is one of the most benighted fallacies to which mankind persists in clinging. I have been four years trying to get this poem written. Which I meanttersay, to quote poor old Joe Gargery, it came to me in point of its general thought four years ago, but eluded all my efforts to cajole it into language until the other day. Of course it is not planed down and polished yet, but the joining is all done, and it is a relief to have it in some sort of definite shape at last. Shall I tell you what it is about? The sky when little light scudding clouds give it the effect of a sandy shore which the waves have just rippled over. That is, I have made a sky picture in marine figures. Sabe?

And now my walls, my desk, my paper, and my very hands have suddenly become stained with the most ineffably soft and rosy radiance. It is a reflection from the pink, pink clouds of evening which have turned the whole sky into a glory. This means that it is time for me to lay aside my pen and scamper down to the corner where I can watch the sunset clear of roofs and chimneys. Wouldn't it be lovely if all rainy days could have such a splendid ending? A mocking-bird that has just tuned up in the eucalyptus tree says he thinks so. And yet, the sun always does shine again if we only wait long enough.

Ever your friend,
ELLEN HOLMAN.

P. S.—I am just back from viewing the sunset, and my very soul is steeped in splendor. It is as if I had been listening to a symphony. It was a symphony—great crashing major harmonies of gold and crimson modulating into tender semi-tones of rose and saffron and dying away in minor violets. I can no more talk while watching those marvelous changing chords of color than when listening with all my being to master music. I believe I would have made a pretty good Greek if I had happened to live a few ages earlier.

By the way, even if you had mislaid those gray gloves of mine, it was scarcely necessary for you to send two new pairs in their place. They are lovely, though, and just the right size—a fact which plainly differentiates you from the bulk of blundering mankind.

And now once more, good-by.

Monkeys Tested With Color.

The graduate department of biology at the Johns Hopkins University is now, the proud possessor of four monkeys, three of them almost grown and the fourth a youngster. The monkeys are the especial pets of Prof. John D. Watson, former professor of experimental psychology at the University of Chicago, and now head of that department at Johns Hopkins. These creatures regard Prof. Watson as their best friend and clamber all over him when he lets them out of their cage each day.

Dr. Watson is preparing to make light and color experiments with the monkeys, testing the power of a high form of animal to distinguish between colors and different degrees of light. The monkey is tempted to make this distinction through the medium of a malaga grape, one of the chief of monkey delicacies, placed first behind a red electric light and then behind a green one.

Prof. Watson is a firm believer in the intelligence of the monkey species, and has high hopes of making experiments of importance in the realm of experimental psychology.

These experiments are harmless and the monkey rather seems to enjoy them, especially when he is so fortunate as to make the proper distinction and secure as a reward a malaga grape and a pat on the back from the hand of his master.—[Baltimore Correspondence New York Press.

"OH, I HAVE A WONDERFUL PICTURE.'

Oh, I have a wonderful picture:
It hangs on the wall near my head,
I sleep with my face to it always,
I watch it while lying in bed.

Sometimes it is tinted in azure,
With soft little fleckings of white
That lie on the blue of the background
In delicate spangles of light.

Sometimes it is crimson and orange,
Again it is silvery gray;
It pictures the dawn and the sunset,
The birth and the death of the day.

It shows me pale beauties of twilight,
Or flashes the splendor of noon,
It gleams in the dusk like rich velvet
Embroidered with stars and a moon.

My wonderful, wonderful picture—
Its colors are never the same;
The sky and the stars are its subject,
The glass of my window, its frame.

The Stratford Mop.

AN ANNUAL AUTUMN FESTIVAL IN SHAKESPEARE'S TOWN.

By a Special Contributor.

IN the May number of the Century for 1904 there appeared an article upon Sir Benjamin Stone's exhaustive study of the ancient customs of England, showing his painstaking research as to the meaning of the recurring celebrations and their origin. His remarkable collection of 300 photographs, which illustrate these events, taken in great part by himself, was exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition. Among the English fairs Sir Benjamin mentions the Stratford Mop, but gives no clew to its origin.

Upon going up to Stratford-on-Avon one fall after the tourist season, we stumbled upon this old-time custom, the Mop of Warwickshire. For many, many years upon the 12th of October has been held a statute fair, at which time, and then only, could be bought many things necessary for the housewife and for the farm. These things were offered for sale in the open marketplace of the town. At the same time servants stood in the square ready to be hired for a year and a day to work upon the farms. Each one carried or wore some badge to indicate his or her line of service; the shepherd his crook, the carter his whip or some whipcord in his button hole; the plowman a wisp of horse hair and the maid her mop. "It was a great 'iring fair," as a Yorkshire woman described it, "and the boys and girls were let to have a 'igh 'oliday for three days and then fetched to their new 'omes."

The derivation of the term Mop, as applied to this fair, has often been asked and the antiquarians of Stratford have tried to ascertain it, but with no satisfactory ult. It is surmised that the maid was the last to y her badge of service, the mop. It became the custom to speak of hiring a mop; the word became synonymous with hiring, and then it was fastened upon the fair as a whole.

The fair is of great antiquity; no one knows how long ago it was first held. Many years before Shakespeare's day it is known to have been in existence, and we can fancy that gifted lad observing every detail of his county Mop as yearly it was held in his native town.

The name of Mop is given to fairs in several of the Midland counties, but the one held in Warwickshire is the largest and best known survivor of these ancient gala days.

The Runaway Mop is a second fair held one week from the Friday following the first. In the old days a chance was given for those dissatisfied with their hiring to make a change, and to the servants objecting to their masters and mistresses, to run away and be hired again. The "'iring" feature is nearly done away with now, and it is a grand "'oliday."

As the 12th of October came upon the Monday preparations had to be made on Saturday. Going that noon to the Square, where our countryman, George W. Childs, has erected a fountain to the Bard of Stratford, we came upon the active beginnings of the Great Mop. During the few days previous, tales had been rife of the variety of the entertainments and the roasting of animals in the open air, and of the feasts to come, but nothing had indicated the air of expectancy and promise which the Square afforded when it burst upon our view. Sympathy with the small boy in his excitement when the circus comes to town at once was awakened, and the desire to slip about with him and his mates from one wagon to another to solve their mysteries.

From the towns round about came the professional showmen, and spaces had been assigned them, marked off with chalk upon the ground.

As we arrived, the brightly-painted and gaily-gilded wagons were promptly taking their places, drawn, backed, cramped and backed again by large, powerful horses, one for each wagon, and reeking after the morning's journey. The horses, shod with thin flat shoes with no corks, were given their freedom with bags of oats tied to their noses. Later, each with a halter on and the halter tied to a neighbor's tail, they were noticed moving in contented circles, and in time, when thoroughly cooled, all were sent in a drove to the fountain to have, as is written there:

"Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire."

The horses reminded us of Rosa Bonheur's, as they went eagerly to the water with outstretched heads; one or two having been struck on the nose for drinking too much, shook their manes, gave playful kicks, backed out from the crowd and loped off, following the leader.

Several of the wagons were small houses on wheels, in which the showmen and their families lived. A board in front formed the doorstep, and when the horse was not attached, the ground was reached by a short ladder let down. Glass handles mounted in brass on either side of the door, assisted the ascent. A bright brass lamp hung beside the door, lighting the entrance at night with its flaring flame, while within was caught a glimpse of another of more modern style and greater safety. Besides there was seen a milk can of bright brass, household utensils, small pictures on the walls, tiny windows with lace curtains and Venetian blinds; all on the smallest scale possible, but very neat. A strange mixture of the gipsy spirit and the tidy thrift of the English people seemed to be found in these families, pursuing this nomadic life.

The large wagons contained the paraphernalia for the many shows, the claptrap of the usual fair. Nearest the fountain stood the engine for the switchback railroad, cleverly concealed by its astonishing outfit of decorations of glass, of gorgeous gilding and by its colored canopy. The English people love gold trappings, from the King's processions, the Lord Mayor's Show, the High Sheriff's State Coach, down to the Stratford Mops. The engine did duty for the railroad, for the organ with its music known only to circuses and fairs, and so seductive to the country ear; for spinning entrancing little gilt mannikins on the top of the organ, and also furnished the electric lights for the entire show.

Near by, "Switchman & Sons, ladies' and gentlemen's racing tandem bicycle track, the latest novelty of the twentieth century, no scorching allowed," was growing under its American flags, rather the worse for wear and weather.

We noticed nearly all "the latest novelties" were from America. Many of our products are admired by the English, from the housemaid's Bissell carpet sweeper and her "corn broom," which she keeps for the best carpet, to the fifteen harnesses of American make a gentleman showed us in the stables at his manor.

In the Square an electrograph rose magically with its pieces fitted together like a playhouse, and the finishing touch was given when gold figures, resembling those on ships' prows, were hastily clapped into position. Many booths were arranged for the sale of small articles and for games of all kinds, at the cost of a penny: cocoanut shies, boxing booths, testing weight and strength machines, also shooting galleries.

D. Dingley from Coventry advertised his steeplechase horses, suspended by gold poles, "able to attend Grand Juvenile Circus fetes and galas on the shortest notice." There were several funny attempts at elegance. On the ground ready to be put in place we saw a huge fac simile of the Prince of Wales's crown, with the three plumes and "Ich dien," slightly tipsy and faded, as if it might have been one he had sent to the old-clothes man.

The preparations for the Mop went gaily on with a few interpolations. One or two belated tourists strolled by with amused and interested faces; a load of gay flowers was pushed across the square; a two-wheeled cart drawn by one horse and containing five grown persons, three children, a barrel and a large basket went merrily by, soon to be overtaken by a swift motor car.

One of the most entertaining features of it all was the contrast presented by this modern activity and its ancient background. About the Square there are old houses and shops of much individuality with their sloping and sometimes thickly-thatched roofs, their windows of many panes and their stone floors within the thresholds. Taverns also with signs like "Swan of Avon," "White Swan Hotel," "Ye Old Oak Bar," "Red Horse Inn" and "Golden Lion" add to the old-time air of the place. These signs are remarkable in their artistic attempts and challenge the attention with the realism of the swan, horse and lion, and the suggestiveness of the grapes introduced into the composition as a rule. Beneath them stood in groups or slowly moved on, some of the old people of the town, claiming their own after the flight of the tourist, and when the normal sleepy air had returned to the quaint little town on the Avon.

Washington Irving looked out on scenes such as these from the "Red Horse Inn," and the to tell of his having resided there, and occupied by him, which is called by his "Sketch Book," so largely written in that have found "copy" that day of the Mop. woman was wonderfully in harmony with her ground in her peculiar costume of light her white twill apron, her print bonnet with white lace gathered inside the rim in bunches ear, and with an old-time basket on her arm. three old ruddy-faced, pleasant-looking men air of fixtures of the town, in white corduroy vests, and coats of still another color and had a cap, one a round hat and the third a

The landmarks of the place as pertaining speare were only a background to the Mop, for there was no hint that we could recognition of the features in the town, it a mecca for the summer pilgrim. Early Monday the greatest event of the Mop began, roasting of animals in the open air. A large fireplace about three feet high was made of bricks, having long rods from side to side, forming a huge grate the burning wood and coals. In front of this fire, a newly-prepared pole, which went through the length of the animal, was impaled an ox. Its horns were left on, and in one case were decorated with ribbons. Irons passed through the body and the pole, holding all securely in place, while the animal slowly revolved before the blaze. On one end of the pole was a cart wheel which a man managed like a at his task of guiding his ship. Men with long white aprons and white coats attended the roasting, watching the animal as it solemnly went around and cutting juicy slices as the meat proved to be done. It proved to be tender and appetizing as well, for some was sent to the house that we might taste of England's roast beef cooked at a Warwickshire Mop.

Two oxen and several pigs were roasted in front of the Inn. The meat was cut and handed inside, when served with boiled potatoes, bread and coffee at cost of a shilling a plate. One roasting was before the old Garrick Inn, built 37 years before Shakespeare was born. Visitors catered for in the historic dining-room. Dinners, teas, etc. Brakes and traps to hire, stabling." Just above the Inn stands Mistress Quickly's old Tudor house somewhat restored, but with original beams showing on the outer walls.

The Harvard House, or "Ancient," as it is frequently called, stands just below the Inn. It is richly carved with fruits and vines, and is most attractive with its time-stained wood. The builder's daughter married John Harvard, the ancestor of the founder of the famous university.

Opposite Shakespeare's house occurred the roasting of a pig. The illustration shows the proud proprietor of the oven with his son standing at the wheel, his wife in white with knife in hand, "Mother," with one of the twins in her arms, and "Daughter" with the other. While the photograph was being taken, small boys were ordered to stand "stock still," the word was given, the cap was off, then replaced and the photographer had thanked the crowd. The pleasant English "thank you for accepting anything, and you are thanked for asking a question.

During the afternoon, char-a-bancs drawn by six horses and carrying some thirty people, having a bugler and a man playing an accordion, came gaily into town. Families passed; father in the advance walking sturdily up the street, as if accustomed to the fields he found the sidewalks too confining; mother and the children following like clansmen behind their chief. Young people, arm in arm, took in the wonders, he buying her to her heart's content. Fond mothers, who had not met since last Mop day, blocked the sidewalks, discussing the children's ages and diseases.

All went merrily until a clap of thunder, a flash of lightning and a deluge of rain sent all scattering for a time. Like an April shower it was soon past and all trudged up and down the muddy road, supremely oblivious of the condition of shoes and dress skirts. The men wore heavy boots and in some instances leggings; women wore low shoes and knew not the tidiness of American "goloshes."

In the evening, under the flare of the lights the pictures were constantly changing. The people to the accompaniment of the wheezy organ sought the different amusements or pressed in crowds up and down the street, jostling and pushing good-naturedly, switching colored tissue paper mops and throwing confetti. The merry-go-round had its full patronage. The ruddy-faced girls with their rural swains beamed as they flew around with that dizzy, seasick motion. At last came the closing, and each and all must tear themselves from the delights, which come but once a year.

Down the long street by moonlight in their brakes and vehicles of all descriptions disappeared the last of the merry-makers, playing "Should auld acquaintance be forgot," and with the night passed another Mop into history.

Boulder Forms Bridge Over Gorge.

One of the most remarkable freaks of wind and erosion known in the West is to be found in one of the smaller side cañons of the Grand Cañon of the Colorado River in Arizona.

In a narrow gorge, carved through centuries of flow of water and wind-driven sand down the little valley, there lies a huge boulder, as big as the average house-moving van seen on a city street. It is held up solely by friction on the sides of the gorge and is entirely free from any solid connection with the sides of the sandstone walls.

From the sandy bed of the little gorge to the rock is fully seventy-five feet. The Indians who once roamed the Grand Cañon country have, of course, legends to account for the location of the big round rock, but as a matter of fact, it is believed to have rolled off the side of a rocky and precipitous mountain about five miles distant from the cañon and to have been picked up in the path of some cloudburst of years ago and carried to its present resting-place.

The stone hangs only by a small projection on each side, but it is so solid that it forms a convenient footbridge across the gorge over which the pedestrian may make his way.—[Kansas City Journal.

Dogs Have Had Their Day.

WHAT TO DO WITH THEM IS THE PROBLEM IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

From London Graphic.

WITHIN a short time the new Turkish government will have to decide definitely the unusual question—"What is to be done with the dogs if we provide other and adequate means of scavenging and cleansing the capital?" Hundreds of thousands of homeless beasts for generations have scavenged the streets, and have been almost absolute monarchs of the night, enjoying a freedom which was denied to man. Since man, however, has freed himself from the tyranny of spies the tide of civilization is gradually advancing, and with the advance the extermination of the canine population is threatened. But the difficulty is how to get rid of these dogs. A Christian in mercy kills a maimed, suffering animal; a Moslem takes food to it, believing that misfortune will befall him if he destroys that to which Allah has given life. So the great uneducated mass of Turks—Mohammedans all—will resist the killing of the dogs—which crime was formerly punishable by several days' imprisonment.

It is said that the governor of a certain seaport town once gave orders that all dogs should be shipped off to an island in the Marmora. His orders were executed, but the island was not far enough away. The beasts starved, and many in desperation attempted to swim ashore. This so frightened the inhabitants that they went out in boats and brought the remainder back to the mainland, believing that Allah in his wrath would destroy their city if the dogs perished. So the dogs were reinstated, and continued to scavenge the town—from which the wicked governor shortly disappeared.

During the old régime an American glove manufacturer conceived the idea of utilizing the dogs of Constantinople in his business, and offered to take the whole canine community off the hands of the government at 1s. a head. Though by this means the city would have been rid of its pests and the government coffers made richer by some thousands of pounds, Mohammedan prejudice was too strong.

Turkish newspapers have now taken up the question, and the following typically Mohammedan proposition recently appeared in one—that the males and females shall be shipped off to different islands, where, with an attendant or two to feed them, they shall be allowed to die natural deaths. If it is attempted to carry out this "old-age" pension scheme the dogs themselves will probably have a voice in the matter, and decide which shall live longest, since for many generations the scavengers of one street have looked upon those of another as their sworn enemies, and as such to be fought and conquered.

Each street or portion of it is patrolled by a band of from ten to twenty dogs, which, like a trained army, realizes that union is strength. None of a neighboring band with safety trespasses his boundary line in search of food. The invaded territory may appear peaceful with its guardians wrapped in slumber; but the invader knows he must act with caution, for it is the sleep of one eye only. In a moment the signal is given, and the whole band is at attention. One dog, with upper lip drawn tightly back, displaying formidably strong white teeth, advances upon the intruder with stately stride, emitting a warning growl, while his comrades support him with short barks. Sometimes the enemy withdraws—backing hastily—to his own territory, where his united band awaits him; at other times the intruder, if caught in the act of stealing a morsel, decides to fight for his prize; but he always retires with a limp and sorrowful air.

These creatures, which exhibit so savage a hatred of dogs from another street, are never vicious with human beings; the most staid old veteran among them fawns and plays around you like a puppy at the slightest word of kindness. Standing upon his hind legs, and rubbing his wet nozzle into your hand, he gently pushes the younger ones aside, as much as to say: "I am the boss." And there is no doubt about the fact, there are bosses. Strength is everything; it is the strongest who is the largest, simply because he has always succeeded in getting the best pieces from the dirt pile.

A few of these miserable beasts, who have not enough vitality to resist the cold and snow of winter, lie for days shivering against walls; then, stupefied and numbed, they die. Young ones lie curled up on the pavements on top of one another to keep warm, while the snow falls on and around them; older and stronger fellows, apparently unconscious of climatic conditions, sleep in the road unconcernedly.

If the city were well paved the dogs would lose their beds, for they lie in the deep holes of the broken pavements or take their siesta on a rifled dirt pile; and when the streets lack a footway, doorsteps and basement window sills are utilized.

For the mother with her litter of pups, other beds are found; and she is always made more or less comfortable. An inhabitant in one street puts out an old piece of matting under the shelter of a broken step, another rigs up a kennel in the gutter way, another throws her out a box, or some straw; and here the poor bag of bones, with a beseeching look, brings up her fat, pushing, thriving, fighting youngsters, who when only a few weeks old display the instinct of their elders and the habits of "free-born" city dogs.

A glorious time of feasting and gluttony—a day of days for these wolfish, pig-like dogs—comes when a useless beast of burden, limping, worn out, and suffering, is led by its owner outside the city walls to the boneyard, where it is slaughtered. Scenting the debauch, a hundred or more dogs follow at a distance, clamoring and voicing their delight. As the goal is reached, the victim stands still a moment gazing around wonderingly at the expectant, upturned faces of the eager, straining pack which gradually but surely closes in upon it. The pause is brief; in an instant, before the breath is out of the poor, starved body, the dogs are upon it, tearing it to pieces.

But it is at sunset each day that the dogs' real struggle for life commences, for it is then that householders throw out their refuse, and dirt piles assume interesting proportions. The beasts, however, are not the only searchers in the dirt piles; they have a common enemy upon whom they wage eternal warfare—the rag picker and ramasseur of dirt. This man sets out on his rounds at night equipped with a huge basket strapped on his back, a pointed stick with which to pick up his booty, and a lantern. As the streets are dark except for the light of an occasional lamp fixed to a wall, the rag picker's lantern is seen afar, and its appearance is the signal for the scavengers to take up arms. They bark themselves hoarse with rage.

Yet another nightly enemy to the dogs is the beckji—or night watchman—who taps the pavement incessantly to let householders know that he is about. If a dog happens to be in his path the beckji playfully knocks it over with the heavy club he carries, and the beast, having been touched perhaps on some raw and tender wound, sets up a prolonged wail of agony, in which other members of his band hasten to join. In the vicinity other howls are heard; the sound swells and swells until the glorious mystery and peace of night is made hideous with unearthly din.

Remarkable Experiment.

A wonderful medical experiment is reported to have been successfully carried out by a London doctor in treating a Devonshire girl, aged 23, who "never grew up."

Up to October last, the girl had required constant nursing and protection, but she is now in fair way to becoming an ordinary human being. The doctor who treated the case described his method to a medical correspondent of the Daily Mail yesterday.

"The young woman, when treatment began," said the doctor, "was to all intents and purposes a dull and backward child of 5. Thirty-three inches in height, with lanky, dry hair, bulging forehead, broad, fat nose, and pale complexion, she sat all day, even in summer, shivering before an open fire.

"The anterior fontanelle, or 'soft spot' on the head, which in the baby becomes closed in the first few months of life, could still be felt.

"Treatment was begun two months ago, twelve and a half grains of thyroid extract (the thyroid gland is in the lower part of the neck) being taken each night.

"Her condition now, after two months' treatment, is as follows: In height she has increased over two and a half inches; the skin, which was harsh and dry, is now moist, warm, and natural.

"The hair, which was scanty and dry, is growing fast, and has a more natural appearance.

"The most wonderful change, however, is in her mental condition. She has acquired a most extraordinary loquacity. It seems as if she had been listening and storing up words from babyhood. She could not have learned her present vast vocabulary in the last few weeks; she evidently knew the words before, but was unable to reproduce them until the thyroid extract stimulated into activity and development the hitherto latent powers of speech.

"If the ordinary individual takes extract of thyroid he rapidly loses weight, since the slightest excess of this peculiar substance causes a rapid breaking down of the fatty tissues of the body. Here, however, the twelve and a half grains taken daily did not make an excess, but barely supplied the amount which nature had been craving for years."—[London Daily Mirror.

Taxicabs Nothing New.

Even the taxicab is nothing new.

Dr. Giles, professor of Chinese at Cambridge, has recently discovered in the dynastic histories of China a complete specification of the mechanism of a Chinese taxicab. They are first mentioned under the Chin dynasty, A. D. 265-419. From that time down to the middle of the fourteenth century frequent allusions to such vehicles, known as the "measure mile drum chariots," are to be found.

Under the year 1027 A. D. and again under the year 1107 A. D. full particulars are given as to their construction, the number of wheels, their positions, the number of cogs on each wheel, etc., being all definitely stated.

On completing a translation of the specification Prof. Giles placed it in the hands of Prof. Hopkinson of the engineering laboratory with the satisfactory result that from a specification recorded by the Chinese some 900 years ago Prof. Hopkinson has constructed a model of a wheeled vehicle which accurately registers the distances traversed.

At each li, or Chinese mile, which is about one-third of an English mile, a drum is struck, while at every tenth li a bell is run.—[London Correspondence New York Sun.

A well-fed horse drove into town, behind a span of ancient men, whose knees were sore from falling down and striving to get up again; their poor old ribs were bare of meat, and they had sores upon their necks; there wasn't, on the village street, a tougher looking pair of wrecks. And so they shambled up the street, a specter harnessed with a ghost; the horse descended from his seat, and left them standing by a post. And there they stood through half the night, and shook and shivered in the tugs, the while their master, in delight, was shaking dice with other plugs. And there they died of grief and cold—no more they'll haul the heavy plow; their master said, when he was told: "They cost blamed little, anyhow."—[Salt Lake Herald.

Mayburton's Kill.

THE NOBLE HUNTER WHO SHOT A DEER BY PROXY.

By a Special Contributor.

"NO, I guess not. This is a drug store. I guess I won't go into the jewelry business just yet," decided Franklin, the proprietor of the only apothecary establishment in Taos, as he finished looking over the glittering layout of samples before him on the showcase.

The drummer glanced about him quizzically at the promiscuous assortment of stock on display; drugs, to be sure, but also toilet articles, light hardware, Indian curios, school books, newspapers and magazines, trunks and valises, cigars and tobacco, stationery, confectionery, toys, camera supplies and general notions.

"There's a fat profit in a nice line of cheap jewelry," persisted the salesman, enticingly.

"No, I don't care to invest. This is a drug store," maintained Franklin, "but I'll tell you what you might do—sell the Captain over there a watch."

"Sell me a watch?" exclaimed Capt. Darby, as he turned in his chair near the stove. "Young man, come here!" Thereupon he pulled from his pocket a large, gold, hunting-case watch and proudly placed it into the drummer's hand.

"It certainly is a fine piece of work," admitted the recipient; "it certainly is."

"I guess so," boasted the Captain. "Your junk may do all right for the ignorant heathen, but there's a timepiece fit for a white man."

Opening the case, the drummer read the following inscription engraved on the inside:

Presented to my friend
CAPTAIN DARBY
By
Sir Willard Mayburton.
"DEER."

"What's the significance of the word 'deer,' may I ask?" he questioned, curiously.

Capt. Darby returned the watch to his pocket and smiled. It was not often that he opened up to strangers, but, as it happened, this was his first day out after a spell of sciatica, and he needed vocal exercise, so he began the story:

"I was commissioned by the Cimarron Land Grant Company—that was back in '78—to show off a tract of land to a party of English dudes who represented some big London syndicate. It was a big deal, and millions in it if it went through, and I was instructed to give the swells the time of their life and spare no expense. I did my best, let me tell you. I got together one of the finest outfits that was ever packed over a trail in the West; I bought fifteen of the best saddle horses I could find, besides thirty-five pack animals; tents that would suit a militia general, and all kinds of portable bric-a-brac such as you read about in the sporting-goods catalogue. And provisions! There wasn't anything fancy that came in cans or bottles that we didn't have. It took four horses to pack the assortment of booze alone! I carried a regular hotel-bar variety: brandies, wines, whiskies, champagne even, and every brand of lady's drink I could corral. Then I hired a good cook at a hundred a month, and half a dozen Mexicans to act as guides, protectors and valets to their lordships.

"I tell you we had a beautiful collection of paraphernalia for a roughing-it trip through the mountains. I wasn't any too easy how I was going to put up with all them jimcracks, but the order was to spare no expense, so I had to account for the money somehow. What worried me most was the bath tubs. Orders were to carry a tin bathing outfit for each lord, as they all had been raised to expect their tub every morning. I'd have lugged along a whole water-works system, with a steam-heating plant in the bargain, if they'd said so. As it was, the Mexicans almost stampeded when they saw them tubs. They thought they were some new-fangled canoes. They raised a small-sized row and swore they didn't enlist to go to sea, but I didn't explain—if I had, they would have quit their jobs on the spot. The cook, who was a conceited billy goat, cock-sure of everything, helped me out by explaining that the tubs were meant for trying out bear fat, and the blame fool believed it, too, until he saw the machines in operation.

"The London party consisted of an elderly gentleman named Bainbridge—'solicitor,' they called him, two young civil engineers, Howard and Maxworth, and three others who seemed to be stockholders in the syndicate. I forget the names of the last, except one, Sir Williard Mayburton. I couldn't forget him if I lived to be as old as a whale. This Mayburton was looked up to by the others—on account of the tag in front of his name, I suppose—and I think he owned a big wad of stock. Anyway, he was a sort of leader to the others, and I liked him from the start, for he made himself very agreeable to me.

"Each one of the aristocrats had his 'luggage' with him; a dozen nighties apiece, half a dozen changes of hats, boots and all that, besides their firearms. I will say this for them, they did have some splendid rifles—Express rifles, I think they were called. They were the neatest specimens in the way of shooting machinery I had ever seen. Their pistols and shotguns, too, were the best they could buy in England. We carried over 400 pounds of ammunition for all this artillery, and then we run short before the campaign was ended. It used to make me sick at the stomach the way they wasted good powder, for I couldn't help thinking how it used to be worth almost its weight in gold out in this country. Scarce powder makes sharpshooters, but powder wasn't scarce with us that trip.

"Oh, they were a 'jolly set, don't you know;' they laughed and guffawed 'most extraordinary,' and were out for a 'really fine lark, I dare say.' Up to that time my experience had been mostly with Indians; I understood the Apache, for I had trailed him all over New Mexico and Arizony, and studied his character with the aid of my rifle, but the Britisher was an entirely new proposition to me. Their tactics kept me guessing a good part of the time, but I reckon they didn't mean no harm by their high handshakes and lofty manners, insulting as such things were to an old soldier like me. You see I had to learn them from the beginning, but I soon saw they were good-hearted fellows even if they hadn't no notion of doing in Rome what the Romans did. No, sir! They did in Rome what they did in dear old England, and be damned to the customs of a foreign country.

"We didn't lose much time getting started, for two hours after we met the Englishmen we had the animals packed and the whole circus hit the trail. The plan was to ride completely around the tract, verifying surveys and such matters, to show that the property was just as represented on paper. To see us start out, anybody might have supposed we were outfitted to discover the north pole instead of just for hiking on a few hundred miles excursion, inspecting mineral and timber land. The Britishers were tickled with the outfit; they imagined they were roughing it, and that our present equipment was the usual thing for such a trip. 'I'll be bound, Captain,' remarked Mayburton the first night we camped, 'it's not half-bad the way you ruffians live out here. Ba Jove! it isn't half-bad, I say.'

"Every night after supper their highnesses would rally in Mayburton's tent and hold a powwow while smoking their British mixtures and drinking toddies. Along at first I used to have my tent pitched next to Sir Williard's, but later I camped far enough off so's I wouldn't get my morals corrupted. They would sit up half the night chinning about what a 'deuced fine time' they had had at Lady Soapsuds's lawn party; what a 'beastly bore' that Earl of Shantytown was; what a 'ripping old jaybird' the Duke of Muttonchops was; what a 'devilish rake' Lord Ladykiller was; what 'extraordinary hair' the Princess Warpaint had—'beastly shame it wasn't her own, really!' and a whole lot of twaddle like that. Still, as I say, they were an honest, good-natured pack of dandies, and I knew they meant no damage by all their foolish talk about Lady Toothpowder this and Lord Stomachache that. It was the fault of their bringing-up, and I suppose they actually enjoyed gaffing about royal receptions, tennis jamborees, cricket massacres, 'jolly larks at the club,' and that brand of excitement. It was easy to guess that every living son-of-a-gun of them expected to mate up with a queen some day—except the old solicitor. He was already hitched up to a dowager.

"At the time I'm speaking of, there wasn't a game warden in the whole territory, and I don't think there was even a game law of any kind, so you can imagine what kind of hunting we had in that wild country. The lords certainly enjoyed the shooting, and we never lacked for venison, wild fowl or bear meat, but one evening Mayburton came to me and said:

"'Captain, I'm disappointed. Really, I am very much disappointed. Very, very much so.'

"'Mayburton,' I said—I never called him Sir Williard as his comrades did—'if there's anything you want, or anything I can do to make you more comfortable, just tell me what it is, and I'll see what can be done.'

"'Oh, no, captain, you mistake me utterly. Oh, everything is highly satisfactory as to the camping arrangements. Oh, indeed, I assure you they are. Really, I have not a syllable of complaint to make as to that. 'Pon my word, the excursion is most wonderfully conducted, considering the obstacles of the wilderness, the remoteness from civilization, don't you know. I say, Captain, I don't believe one of our own colonial generals could manage a campaign with greater skill.'

"'Then why are you disappointed?'

"'Ah, you don't understand, Captain. Conditions in London are quite different. No, it will never do, never. You don't know how everlastingly they rub a fellow over there.'

"'Mayburton,' I said, 'you'll have to excuse me, but mind-reading wasn't taught where I went to school.'

"'It's just this,' he finally explained, 'I haven't killed a damned deer. All the others have made their kills, but I haven't shot one of the beautiful creatures. Don't you comprehend that I can't go back to London without the record of a kill. Really, it is deuced annoying, and you can't realize what an unmerciful rubbing they would give me at the club.'

"'So that's the trouble,' I said. 'Well, Mayburton, of course you are in no way to blame for this condition of affairs, but it seems strange that you haven't seen any deer——'

"'Oh, now, Captain,' he chipped in, 'I did not say I hadn't seen any. Lord, no. But I haven't killed any. I've shot at many of them, but what I mean to say is, I have had such beastly bad luck.'

"'You must have had poor luck,' I answered; 'with so much game around, it's a miracle that you haven't killed something by accident; however, if you are determined to kill a deer, I'll see that you have the chance.'

"'I simply must,' he said.

"'All right. Do as I say, and you'll probably get your animal, but you can't stay abed till 10 o'clock every morning and expect to do it. Get up tomorrow at sun-up; make an early start, and I think you'll have a different story to tell when you get back.'

"Sir Williard looked at me in surprise for a moment or two, and then, with the air of one about to sacrifice his life for his country, he exclaimed: 'Ba Jove! I'll go you.'

"The next morning at dawn I roused His Highness out of a sound sleep, and he reluctantly got up. He took his usual cold-water tub, but even that didn't brighten him up, for he was sleepy and yawning when he sat down to the early breakfast I had ordered the cook to prepare. He didn't have anything to say for some minutes, but I noticed that he kept looking up now and then in a mysterious manner all during the actions got me going some—I couldn't sabe him, laid it up to his nationality. Everything I didn't stand with that outfit I got in the habit of the British peculiarity of character. Suddenly burton jumped to his feet and yelled out: 'Great Isn't that beautiful?'

"I was taken off my guard; I jerked my head to see what so affected His Lordship, and what guess it was? The sunrise! The sun was just ning to appear above the horizon, and the whole ens in the east had burst into a glow of color. was a beautiful sky all right, but no more as I could see—than a hundred other sunrises Mexico for that year. But Mayburton stood bound, watching the phenomenon. Then he began ing his lips and muttering exclamations of wonder to himself; he shook his head in amazement—well, way, he was certainly woke up at last.

"'Captain,' Mayburton said, after he had watched sun till its brightness absorbed all the colors, 'you not believe it, but upon my honor, I am 27 years old, this is the first sunrise I have ever seen.'

"The man was dead in earnest, and I believe he speaking the truth.

"'What a lot I have missed!' he kept saying; a lot I have missed in my life! Captain, this is perience I have to thank you for, and it is one I never forget. When I return home, the most thing I shall have to tell my friends is of this splendent sunrise in America.'

"Mayburton and his guide went off up a side to hunt, and later, at the usual time for striking the rest of us moved on. I knew the guide would care of Sir Williard and conduct him to us no how far ahead we got.

"It was about 1 o'clock and we had just stopped bite of lunch when I heard hoofs galloping upon the rear. I looked and saw Mayburton coming trail at full tilt. Thinking something serious had pened, I jumped on my cayuse and rode down to him. As I drew near, he jerked up his horse, which covered with lather and almost played out, and 'The thief! the treacherous rascal! the hound!'

"'What's the rumpus?' I asked. Then I saw the come into view some twenty rods behind.

"'Captain,' sputtered His Lordship, 'I want that put in irons! I won't have that man about me! dirty trickster! Ba George! I ought to shoot the skull! Drive him out of camp. I won't sleep in same camp with a fool like that.'

"'I see you got the deer, and it's a beauty,' I marked, as the Mexican came up with a fine point black-tail buck slung across his horse.

"'Ba gad! Captain,' shrieked Sir Williard, 'that killed it! Of all the splendid shots—the most shot in the world, sir! And that presumptuous skull had the effrontery to kill it under my very mind you. Of all the outrageous insults—I to kill deer, not to watch an idiotic Mexican marksmanship. Actually, I was aiming my Express the quarry, when this insolent fellow steps up and away with his old blunderbuss before I could Robinson.'

"Mayburton was purple in the face. I never saw a man so comically angry. 'Hold on,' I me hear what the guide has to say.'

"I spoke to the man in Spanish, and he replied Sir Williard was so long taking aim that the deer surely have escaped if he had not shot it at the moment as it was disappearing in the chaparral amining the carcass, I noted, from the nature wound, that the animal had been shot on the bullet having entered a trifle below the base of the and come out at one side of the mouth. It was a shot as any one might wish to see, and I compli the Mex on his work. The situation was embar for Sir Williard, and I knew something had to at once to restore his peace of mind, so I tried macy.

"'Mayburton,' I said, without cracking a smile, with a puzzled expression on my face, 'how The guide swears by all the saints in heaven killed the deer.'

"'I killed it? He swears that I killed damned lying cur! The preposterous——'

"'That's what he says,' I interrupted; 'he never witnessed a finer shot, either!'

"The light began to sift through the English cranium. His eyes opened wide and he gaped ishment; then a sweet smile curled on his lips said softly: 'Give the man a pound for me— it two pounds—if you think he can be depended to hold his tongue.'

"'I'll vouch for that,' I answered.

"It has seldom been my privilege to see a man as tickled as Mayburton was at this turn in his affairs. His whole attitude stantly; he became like a schoolboy in spirits, scarcely wait till we reached camp before boast of his kill. As a matter of fact, the the largest that had been shot on the trip, and far the best head and horns. At camp the gathered about the carcass, admiring it and questions. Mayburton had a ready answer for enthusiasm enough to quell any suspicion. He close call, however, when old Bainbridge, who amining the holes in the buck's head, remarked Sir Williard, isn't this a rather small wound for press bullet?'

Mayburton was equal to the occasion, and he further distrust by explaining, in a very ion, the peculiar action and effect of a revolving upon striking an object such as a creature of blood while in the act of rapid flight.

"Of course Sir Williard had the head and 'kill' prepared for mounting, and without doubt has the animal set up in a prominent hunting lodge back in old England. I'll bet telling how he slaughtered it in the wilds of

WHAT HAPPENED AT THE MINGLING AT JANNISH'S.

By a Special Contributor.

"JIMMIE," called the young woman under the apple tree, "are you getting along better with your cooking?"

"Yes, Marion, dear," replied the young man on the other side of the green lawn. "But how many spoonfuls——"

"Hush! here they come; I'll tell you during the hour for mingling," and silence fell upon the green lawn.

A tall hedge, behind which showed the tops of three white tents, was on the woman's side of the greensward, and on the other were two more tents sheltered by trees. At the top of a gentle slope a fine old country house stood; and there the lawn began, ending a few rods beyond the tents at a barrier of trees. Surrounding this inclosed bit of green were fields, an orchard, a sheepfold, and other attachments to a large country place.

A man and a woman were coming from the house and walking toward the tents. The woman was plump, and the man tall and angular. As they drew near the space between the tents, two women emerged from an opening in the hedge and stood before it, and two men came from the tents on the other side and took up positions. When the couple from the house came up the men and women exclaimed:

"Good-morning to you, Brother and Sister Jannish!"

"A day of Independence to you, dear Children of Light," replied the pair. Then the man cleared his throat, and announced triumphantly:

"Dear children, I have a new member for our fraternity. Stand forth, Ebenezer Spinshingel!"

A little old man hobbled out from behind the hedge and took his stand beside Jannish.

"Welcome, thrice welcome!" cried the leader of the Children of Light, with his hand on the old man's shoulder. "For some time you have lived among us here as a worldling, and as a representative of the owners of this estate. For them you have labored unceasingly, taking care that they received their full meed of all that the land and our labor produced."

"Only teh the extent of the contract between yeh and them, Mister Jannish," put in the old man. "Besides, I never seen yeh doing any of the farm work yehrself."

"You have now declared the independence of your soul," Jannish hurried on, "and you have elected to come with us. When you have secured a tent, you may place it on the right of this common, with the others there, and soon you will learn to concentrate and expand. Like us, you will prepare your own food, which you will earn, as we do, by labor on this farm; in short, you will become an Independent Child of Light. Brother Ebenezer, look to the left; the woman first in line is Sister Elizabeth—you have known her as Miss Newsome. The other is Sister Marion Wharton. On the right——"

"Is Mister Goodbridge. I've known him a long time."

"He is now Brother Lester, the Blissful Prophet. Brother James Wharton, who stands next to him, may be especially helpful to you, as he is, like you, a married man; he and Sister Marion, his wife, have both successfully striven for independence. Now the hour for mingling has arrived; go and greet your fellow-freedmen."

Jannish and his wife took up their solemn progress back to the house as Spinshingel turned to the Children of Light and demanded:

"Felleh citizens, can any of yeh tell me how teh make apple dumplin's?"

"Farewell to my dreams of a consulting chef!" laughed Brother James. "Granddad is as badly off as the rest of us."

"Hush!" said the Blissful Prophet; "he may have his ideals, and be as much in earnest in coming here as any of us."

"Probably he's as much in earnest as I am," retorted Brother James, "and I'm here because this sort of thing seems to please my wife, poor dear."

"Can't a person have what he wants teh eat?" spluttered old Spinshingel. "That's why I joined yeh. Mis' Spinshingel wouldn't have dumplin's only every so often; so this morning I told her I'd find a place where I could be independent."

"Our dear leaders," said Sister Elizabeth, "teach that true independence comes only through personal exertion."

"Apple dumplings come the same way here, Granddad, "said Brother James.

"By heck!" ejaculated Spinshingel, "that's something Jannish never told me."

Sister Marion and Elizabeth began to cross the lawn, and Brother James whispered: "Granddad, don't say anything against the Jannishes when my wife is near. She takes great comfort in her ideas, poor child, and I don't want them shattered." Then, as the women came up: "I'll leave this neophyte in the keeping of Brother Lester, and you, Sister Elizabeth. Come, Marion, let us walk awhile on the lawn."

"Oh, yes," cried Sister Marion. "The hour for mingling is so short; we must not lose a moment of it."

"The hour for mingling," repeated Spinshingel. "So yeh mingle every hour, eh?"

"Oh, no, we do not!" cried Sister Elizabeth. "One hour in the morning is set apart for social meeting; and then we go about our several tasks and see no more of each other until the next day."

"Jannish never told me that, either," growled Spinshingel.

"I sometimes think," began Sister Elizabeth timidly, "that the social period should be lengthened a little," and she glanced at Brother Lester as though expecting a rebuke for her heresy.

The Blissful Prophet opened his mouth to speak, but checked himself and emitted a deep sigh. The sister echoed it; and then the two stood with rapt expressions on their faces, gazing at the landscape, until Spinshingel burst out:

"Folks, I don't want teh interrupt yeh, but I think Jannish got me teh join under false pretenses. I'm going teh speak teh Mister Goodbridge about it."

"Brother James is a dear fellow," said the Blissful Prophet, "but I fear he is hardly in earnest in the life here."

"And Sister Marion is such a sweet soul," said Sister Elizabeth, "although I sometimes believe she is holding the thought that she would be happier in another environment. She says that her husband is so taken up with the teachings of our dear leaders that she will stay here for his sake. I continually vibrate for her; but I fear—I really fear—that I am too deeply in sympathy with her to come to her aid."

"I feel the same way in concentrating for Brother James," confessed the Blissful Prophet.

"Heh, heh, heh!" cackled Brother Ebenezer. "I'll bet there ain't many real Children of Independent Light on the place."

"Brother Lester," said Sister Elizabeth, "explain our ideals to him."

"Yeh can't," declared Brother Ebenezer bumptiously. "Yeh just listen teh an old fellah that's got more sense—and more independence, and more light—than the whole passel of yeh!"

"Sister," said the Blissful Prophet, "let us mentally repeat that affirmation beginning: 'I am Self-control; I am All-respect; I Know it all.' "

"Now," cried the old man, "I'm going teh vibrate a little. I've been here longer than any of yeh—I was rented along with the place, 'cause the owners wouldn't let Jannish have it unless he took me, too, teh look after their interests. I've been a little mite suspicious from the first that this Independent Light business was only a scheme for the Jannishes teh live without work. Now that I've joined, I'm sure of it. Yeh two never ought teh have joined, but yeh didn't know what yeh wanted. It's different with me; as I told Mis' Spinshingel this morning, I know just what I want and just how teh get it. Yeh think it's the Jannishes' ideals that yeh need, but that ain't what ails yeh at all—yeh are slick and clean in love with each other!"

"How dare you!" cried Sister Elizabeth, turning scarlet.

"Sister," murmured the Blissful Prophet, "help me to silence this old worldling by repeating aloud that affirmation beginning, 'My affections are bestowed equally upon all Humanity.' "

"Brother Lester," answered Sister Elizabeth, "I shan't do it!" And she began to sob bitterly.

Then Brother Lester forgot that he was the Blissful Prophet of the Children of Light, and he sprang to Sister Elizabeth and took her in his arms. He did not heed the approach of Brother James and Sister Marion, nor a cry from Brother Ebenezer, who hastened to meet a toddling child who had suddenly appeared through an opening in the hedge.

He was aroused by Brother James saying to Sister Marion: "Wouldn't that make you vibrate? By Jove! I'm as much surprised as I was a few moments ago, when you told me that you were only staying here on my account. Let's go away right now, Marion, dear."

"Wait!" cried the Blissful Prophet, and this time his looks did not belie the title, "and we'll go with you!"

"So'll we!" cried old Spinshingel, from the hedge. "This youngster's my gran'son. His folks must be down teh my house for a visit, and I'm going home teh see 'em—if I never have another apple dumplin'."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN NAPHEYS.

Identify Pig by Sausage.

Jersey justice has been confronted with many difficult legal problems, and it has solved them in its own peculiar way. Never before, perhaps, has it been called upon to decide whether a pig that has been killed, dressed, cut up, and distributed is the identical pig that was stolen.

That is the puzzle, however, before Judge Scott in the Passaic-county court in the trial of Mathias Adanski, who is accused of having stolen a pig from Mrs. Fredericks of Passaic, and other miscellaneous knicknacks, such as several ducks and pieces of jewelry, from different persons who live in that city. The defense admits that parts of a dismembered pig were found in the home of Adanski. Some of them were in the form of sausage. It is denied, however, that the pork found there is from the pig that was stolen from the Fredericks pen. The lawyers for Adanski feel so sure of their ground that they challenge the prosecution to prove that the pork found in the home of their client ever formed part of the Fredericks pig. They also deny the allegation of the prosecution that the pieces of pork show that the pig was not killed by a regular butcher, but slaughtered, dressed, and cut up by bunglers at such work.—[New York Press.

"But the fresh country look was already fading from it, and in the course of a few weeks it fell in with some loose eggs that lay in a corner of the basket. And in the end, as its mother had feared, the egg became bad.

"The moral is plain—New York is no place for fresh eggs."

On Saving.

"THE late James Molloy," said a music publisher, "wrote humorous songs now and then, but it is as the author of 'Love's Old Sweet Song' that he will be remembered.

"Yet his humor was good, too—bright, clean and pure. He liked to make fun of people who lived in the country. I once heard him say in London to a Devon man:

"'Why do you live in the country, anyhow?'

"'So as to save money,' was the reply.

"'Are vegetables and milk and meat cheaper?'

"'They are, on the contrary, slightly dearer.'

"'How do you save, then?'

"'No Salomé opera, $50 a year. No restaurant dinners, $100 a year. No theater, $100 a year. No taxicab fares, $50 a year. No distractions of any kind, $75 a year.'

"'Look here,' said Mr. Molloy, 'couldn't you save money if you died?'"

A Chance to Repent.

ELIHU ROOT, at a dinner in Albany, praised an Albany lawyer who had recently retired.

"He has retired very young," a doctor said. "It's a characteristic of your lawyers. Why do you all retire so young?"

"We want to avoid all risk," said Mr. Root, "of dying lawyers."

Rather a Fan.

DR. MADISON C. PETERS, the eloquent Baptist minister, in New York was discussing the question, "Will the coming man marry?" which he has so ably handled in his book.

Dr. Peters instanced a certain type of bachelor.

"This man," he said, "is a hypocrite. He uses his religion as a cloak."

"And what will he do in the next world, eh?" said the reporter.

"Oh," said Dr. Peters, "he won't need any cloak there."

"The Easiest Way."

PROF. ALFRED E. STEARNS, principal of the Phillips Andover Academy, said at the recent alumni dinner in New York:

"The easiest way, in raising funds, as in other things, is the wrong way. I remember an Orange man and his easy spelling rule.

"In Orange, in my childhood, I once complained of the difficulties of spelling. I said that 'ei' and 'ie,' in in such words as 'believe' and 'receive,' always stumped me.

"Then this Orange man patted me on the head, and smiled, and said:

"'My boy, I will give you an infallible rule for 'ei' and 'ie'—a rule that in forty-seven years has never failed me.'

"I expressed my delight and waited. The man resumed:

"'The rule is simply this: Write your 'i' and 'e' exactly alike, and put your dot exactly between them.'"

The Selfish Hoskins.

PROF. CHARLES ZUEBLIN of the University of Chicago, was discussing his recent lectures, "The Family," wherein he advocated a compulsory six months' interval between marriage license and marriage.

"Marriage is entered on too hastily," he said. "The six months' interval should be an interval of thought. Thought would cure many of the ills of marriage. Unselfishness would perhaps cure more.

"Selfishness in marriage is on the man's side. Too many men look at every question from one point of view, the selfish one, only.

"It is like Hoskins of the Lake Shore Drive.

"'You are willing,' said Mrs. Hoskins, 'to lay out $1000 a month on your wine and cigar bill; but you grumble like a bear when I want a few hundred for a dinner gown.'

"'Well,' snarled Hoskins, 'can I smoke or drink a dinner gown?'"

The London Theater-goer.

"NO wonder the musical comedy succeeds better than anything else in London," said a Detroit Socialist. "At the labor conference in Portsmouth George Bernard Shaw explained it all to me.

"Mr. Shaw said that the typical Londoner, the night he is going to the theater, takes a light dinner at a fashionable restaurant, and drinks a small bottle of champagne, and a liqueur with his coffee. He isn't then, of course, in the mood for anything serious—for an Ibsen sermon or a Sudermann polemic. He wants something light and gay to hold him till the curtain falls, when he can get a good stiff whisky and soda—something light and gay, with a whisky and soda at every curtain; and, to conclude the night, supper at the Savoy, more champagne, and a final liqueur.

"In short, the Londoner's idea of going to the theater is really more a refined and decorous jag than anything else, and the play enters into it only incidentally.

"Mr. Shaw told me how, the first night of his last failure, 'Getting Married,' a friend said to him:

"'Well, how was your comedy received?'

"Mr. Shaw, smiling cynically, replied:

"'There wasn't a dry throat in the house.'"

Small Scale Love.

DR. PIERCE UNDERHILL, whose book on divorce and marriage is to appear next month in Indianapolis, delivered a lecture on divorce recently in a fashionable Indianapolis church.

"Extravagance," he began, "is one of the big causes of divorce. My cousin, a bank clerk, married a pretty girl and took her home to a nice little flat. But she frowned and bit her lip.

"'Oh, Jack,' she said, 'I can't live in a tiny flat like this!'

"'You don't love me when you say that, darling,' said my cousin.

"'Oh, yes, I do,' said she; 'but not on such a small scale.'"

The Boy and the Girls.

RABBI JOSEPH KRAUSKOPF, our eloquent preacher," said a Philadelphian, "sees good rather than evil in the frequency of American divorce. He sees in it a sign that American wives will not endure the treatment that European wives put up with. He sees in it a promise that the married men of the future will live better.

"Discussing the divorce question the other day, he told me that they who perceived only evil in it reminded him, in their illogical and confused viewpoint, of a little boy with whom he once took a stroll.

"As they strolled, they passed the young girls of a neighboring boarding-school out on their daily walk. The girls moved in military formation, two by two. In front were the youngest, in skirts to their knees. Next came the older ones, in the order of their ages, their skirts lengthening with their years. And in the rear came the oldest of all, the young ladies, whose skirts hid even their boots.

"The little boy looked at the girls. Then he frowned and said:

"'Why is it that their legs grow shorter as they grow bigger?'"

The Bishop's Reception.

MELBA, describing Australia in an interview, said: "My fellow-countrymen are like your westerners of the '70s. They have a delicious humor and a mocking skepticism.

"The Bishop of Ballarat rode one night into a little township of his diocese that he had never visited before. It was late and rainy. The only building with a light in it was the office of the local paper, and the bishop knocked on the door with his crop stick.

"'Hello below!' cried a voice, and a head popped out of the window above.

"'I am the Bishop of Ballarat,' said the prelate mildly. 'Will you be so good as to direct me to a hotel?'

"From the roomful of compositors came a loud burst of laughter, and another man stuck out his head and said to the bishop in a tone of kindly reproof.

"'Look here, old man, you've had about enough hotel for one night! Go on home and go to bed, or you'll get run in as sure as shootin'.'"

Wise William.

WHEN Justice Buffum opened court in a small town in Southern Georgia, one morning last week, he called loudly: "Jones against Johnson!"

A dignified gentleman came to bar and said: "I am Dr. Jones, Your Honor, the complaining witness. My chickens were stolen and found in the possession of——"

"One moment, Doctor," the Judge interrupted. "We must have the defendant at the bar. Jones against Johnson! Jones against Johnson! Is the defendant present? Is William Johnson in court?"

A tall and shambling negro shuffled to the bar, ducked his head, pulled his woolly forelock in token of respect, and grinned a propitiatory grin.

"Ah's Willyum Johns'n, please suh, Jedge," he said. "Ah doan' know nuffin 'bout no 'fendant, suh. Ah'm jes' de man wot took de chick'ns."

"Don't talk like that," the court warned William. "You ought to have a lawyer to speak for you. Where's your lawyer?"

"Ah ain' got no lawyer, Jedge——"

"Very well, then," said His Honor. "I'll assign a lawyer to defend you."

"Oh no, suh; no, suh! Ple-e-ase don' do dat!" William begged.

"Why not?" asked the judge. "It won't cost you anything. Why don't you want a lawyer?"

"Well, Ah'll tell yo', suh," said William, waving his tattered old hat confidentially. "Hit's jes' dis-a-way—Ah wan' tuh enjoy dem chick'ns mase'f."—[Harper's Weekly.

Lots of Room Needed.

IT is a curious fact that the invariable first thought of a British jack tar when landing from a cruise is to get on a horse. For purposes of economy one animal frequently serves for two or three grinning sailor boys.

Recently a sailor from the fleet of British warships that accompanied the Prince of Wales to Quebec approached the keeper of a downtown livery stable and asked for a horse.

"For riding or driving?" asked the liveryman.

"We'll be goin' aboard of 'im," responded the sailor.

"What kind of a horse do you want," continued the liveryman—"black, white, chestnut, sorrel—lively, or gentle?"

"Stow all that," said the sailor; "what I'm after is a good long one. There's eight of us a-goin' on 'im."—[Success.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

HYBRIDS AND CROSSES.

CONFUSION AS TO MEANING OF TERMS CLEARED UP.

By Ernest Braunton.

MANY inquiries from time to time come to this department as to the differences, if any, between hybrids and crosses. It should be remembered that hybrids are the offspring of species and rank the highest, while crosses are sometimes (in animal life especially) called mongrels, for they are the offspring of varieties of the same or different species and therefore of far lesser rank. It requires but a little change to make the word hybrid over into "high bred," and by this it may be called to mind that the word is used to designate the highest class of plant offspring.

The various degrees of difference of the forms crossed in highly-specialized plants make it impossible to divide the results into two or even many classes, so that both words (hybrid and cross) have been used to cover many grades of plant offspring. Often a hybrid of two species will be crossed with a third species; it then becomes a trispecific hybrid; but in many cases the relationship becomes so complicated as to be impossible of correct designation. Some of our best garden roses are the result of so many crosses that the parentage can only be traced by the experienced rosarian through resemblance to certain well-known types. For instance, the parentage of La France, the first of its class, is known to a certainty, but La France has been crossed with the result of several crosses, and if La France proves the most potent parent we say the result belongs to the La France type." Hybrids are also designated by such names as bigeneric hybrid, racial hybrid, etc., while lesser ranks are called crosses, cross-fertilized, or cross-bred, and all names are often used for the results of the same process; none of them, however, are hybrids, as these latter are the result of a union of plants differing in race, genera, or species, etc.

Rare Mexican Cactus.

In years agone, when the cactus craze was upon us, a favored few possessed a cactus first sent out as Mammillaria McDowelli, but afterward proven to be an Echinocactus. It is a small plant about four inches in diameter when full size, and is covered with bright, shiny, silver-gray spines and is an unusually attractive plant. It was found in Southern Mexico by J. Albert McDowell, a well-known collector of plants, and named in his honor.

Germination of Seeds.

Complaints are many that seeds bought from certain seed houses are "no good," when the facts are that the purchaser is "no good" from a garden standpoint. Last fall the writer gave away to at least half a dozen persons seeds of one kind of flower grown in his garden. Two of these persons failed to grow a single seed while the other had such abundant success that she seemed to have a greater number of plants than she was given seeds. Such instances go far toward proving that in a very large per cent. of cases the fault lies with the purchaser of seeds, not with the dealer.

Seeds fail to germinate or to grow into plants after germination for a variety of causes. Seeds are not always sown at the proper time; some are sown too early, others too late. Excessive cold and moisture are needed by some and the later dry, warm heat by others. Sometimes the soil is not in proper physical condition. Seedbed soil can never be pulverized too fine. It is often a waste of seed to sow it in lumpy, unworked soil. When soil is fined, it should be firmed after seeding, especially if it be in pot, box, or pan. It often occurs that outdoor-sown seeds are planted too deep, especially early in the season; a dark, damp soil will quickly rot seeds which need light and warmth.

Propagation by Grafting.

There are several good reasons why grafting is resorted to as a means of propagating certain species and varieties in preference to other methods. In growing seedling plants of a permanent nature, as trees, shrubs and vines, it usually requires several years' growth to determine results, a large per cent. of which are certain to prove unsatisfactory.

When one of these has proven of unquestioned value recourse is had to grafting when there is plenty of wood old enough for scions. In this way it is possible to quickly furnish the horticultural world with a sufficient stock of the one sort. Only in this way may one perpetuate and disseminate stock having certain valuable characteristics and which cannot be grown by seeds or cuttings. Again the stock may be much stronger than the scion or benefit the latter in one or more other ways. More plants may also be grown by budding or grafting, from a given amount of wood, than from any other method of propagation. There are many methods of grafting, some simple and some quite complicated, but the simplest ways are usually the best.

Influence of Flowers.

Taste in gardening marks the progress of civilization and the love and cultivation of flowers shows a heart filled with true and pure sentiments. Those who show no taste for plant life nor care about the adornment of their premises seldom have good taste about anything, and are not desirable as neighbors or residents in a community. Refinement and good taste go hand in hand, and the cultivation of flowers shows good taste and is refining and ennobling.

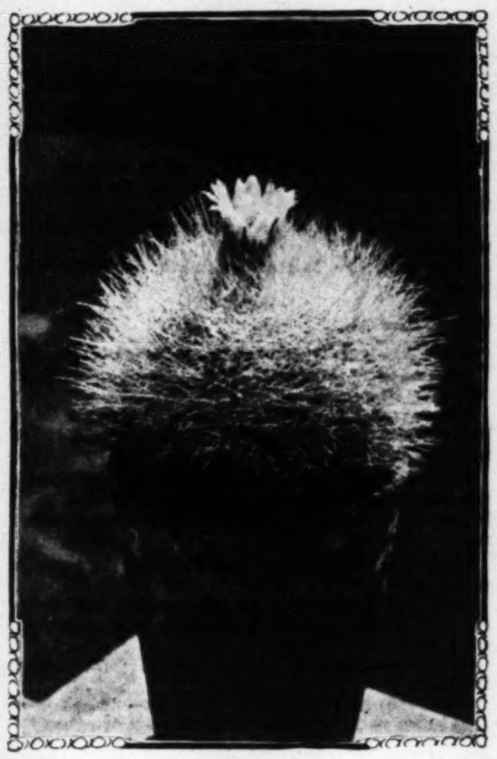
One's surroundings, especially during childhood, have much to do with the formation of character. For this reason, if for no other, we should make the home surroundings attractive. It costs but little to simply have flowers—it is not necessary to purchase high-priced novelties or rarities. All are flowers, and nature is lavish in her distribution—a great variety may be obtained by the purchase of cheap flower seeds. If nature is allowed her own sweet way, she soon mantles the ground with a carpet of green dotted o'er with brilliant gems. Our magnificent cultivated flowers are but evidences of a high standard of civilization.

The Annual Clean-up.

Spring is the best time for that annual clean-up which is such an important factor in the creation of the garden beautiful. In some communities it becomes almost epidemic. The spring air, which awakes all plants and animals that hibernate, seems to exhilarate mankind and womankind and move them to greater and better things, and one of the best things is to make all neat and tidy. We must delve in the soil, turn it over to make all bright and new, and we must cultivate all above to better form and greater vigor.

Garden Now.

Just at present should be the season of greatest activity in the garden. There is much of pruning, spading, raking and weeding to be done; also much of seed sowing and planting. The value of such work done a month later will be much less than that done now.



ECHINOCACTUS McDOWELLII.

Nearly all seeds and plants may now safely be put out—strictly tropical plants being the only exception. The latter class of plants should not be planted until April.

Improvement in Flowers.

Let no one think that the world of horticulture is standing still; constant improvement is being made in the most common flowers. Should any one think no progress has been made with the old-time garden favorites, let him buy seeds or plants of them now—the best obtainable—and note the difference between these and the ones of his childhood days.

Never was competition in the production of flowers keener than at present, and even the slightest improvement sets a heavy premium on any plant. Not men alone, but women, too, many of them Californians, have made an enviable reputation in the production of new or better flowers. Few States can equal our own in the production of the new and rare plant life. It is most fascinating work, and many amateurs possess gardens filled with their own productions, entirely different in kind from any others. One of the most notable achievements coming under the writer's notice of late is a truly magnificent strain of perennial larkspurs.

Wendland's Solanum.

Among our more tender climbers none is deservedly more popular than the large, robust lilac-flowering vine known as Solanum Wendlandii. Its native home, Costa Rica, embraces much variation of climate and temperature from mountain snows to tropic swamps, and this plant comes from the temperate upland districts. Like most vigorous climbers, to see it at its best it must have plenty of room and a rich, light soil with copious waterings during the period of active growth. Under such conditions, it blooms magnificently, surpassing all other vines in the number and size of flower heads. It seems peculiarly at home in those parts of California nearly free from frosts and when in good health, under best condition, it is the most showy and satisfying of any climber grown in this State.

PARK PROGRESS.

MANY OBSTACLES STILL IN THE WAY OF IMPROVEMENT.

A FEW generations ago it was a very hard matter to obtain parks of any description, for the obstacles were many. Popular indifference was very general, and to make matters worse, a large part of our citizens were so sordid that no good could be seen by them in setting aside even a beautiful natural landscape in order to protect its chief charms. The same shameless, impractical horde is now opposing the preservation of Niagara Falls and its control by the Federal government. It is a strange fact that Secretary Taft was considered a strong friend of Niagara Falls and Senator Knox of Pennsylvania one of its greatest and most energetic enemies. It now remains to be seen what moves they will make as President and Secretary of State.

The park promoters of a quarter century ago had indeed a hard time and deserve great credit. Later a wave of reform swept over the country and park building took on a new life and interest and the movement for the acquisition and extension of parks became national in its scope. It was, and still is, hard work to convince the people that the best move lies in the acquisition of sites possessing great natural beauty and in the preservation of what we have rather than in building caricatures of nature. In Southern California we have park sites from which all native trees have been removed, and our people as a whole are beginning to realize that these should be preserved rather than exhaust our energies and funds in planting bare [illegible]

Washington's Street Trees.

In the city of Washington there are more than 100,000 [illegible] trees planted at an average distance of thirty feet, making nearly 600 miles of street trees. These are under a superintendent of parking, who has a competent force of employés, and every street tree in the city is properly cared for throughout the year.

Park Commission Law.

Every State should pass a law similar to the one introduced in the Ohio Legislature through the efforts of the Columbus Park Commission, whereby any city in the State may have a park commission should the people vote for it in majority. The duty of such commission will be to purchase and lay out parks, playgrounds and boulevards, levy taxes and dispose of bonds, but another vote of the people will be necessary to permit of the issuance of such bonds. It will become the sole duty of five men selected in each city to give special attention to this important question and to study the problems for present and future needs and systematize each municipality's holdings. By this legal method it would be possible for a park commission to handle in its entirety any park or playground proposition without interference by the City Councils, the whole matter resting with the people.

The Obnoxious Billboard.

Were the billboard companies content with covering fences, dead walls, etc., with posters or even use vacant lots so as not to obscure views of private property, the thing would no doubt be tolerated by the people, but when they cover our fine hills, the cities' crowning glory, and mar our most attractive and prominent beauty spots in suburban districts, it is time to call a halt. Those of us who reside here take little note of these obstructions for the reason that but one at a time is erected and we grow accustomed to the sight, but visitors take due note, and many criticisms are made because of these eyesores. There is no doubt that these bizarre blots affect both city and country adversely. Visitors who come here to view our scenery, which is famous the world over, do not expect it to be marred or partially obscured by billboards. Such a famous resort for tourists should quickly condemn anything that detracts from the attractiveness of the country.

Billboards Abroad.

Great Britain has a law allowing municipalities to control, or forbid billboards being erected, and in many sections all have been removed. Metropolitan London allows no "sky signs," and has many regulations touching billboards and posters that are sufficient to keep this class of advertising from becoming a public nuisance.

In Paris there are some queer laws in force. Only a government poster or announcement may be printed on white paper; all others must be on colored papers. Every poster or advertisement of like nature must pay, within the city, an annual tax of 30 cents per square meter. Before any public display all posters must be submitted to a city office and a permit is issued and a duplicate poster filed there and the proper taxes paid or revenue stamps attached. Altogether their system is very rigid. Billboards as known in the United States are absolutely prohibited in Berlin and many other European cities.

JAPANESE GARDEN, GOLDEN GATE PARK.

Live Oaks of the South.

California is not alone in the possession of fine evergreen oaks. In the Southern States there are some that vie in beauty with any oaks in the world. In Audubon Park, New Orleans, there are growing some most unusually fine specimens. The two oldest and largest are known as George Washington and Martha Washington, and far exceed in girth and spread of limb any trees in that part of the country. These trees, like our own live oaks, are considered the most beautiful in the South.

Care of Street Trees.

In the West Side district in Chicago the street trees are provided with devices for furnishing both air and water. Around each tree is a grating five feet square and each tree is also provided with a four-inch tile through which water is conveyed to the roots throughout the summer. Through these pipes the trees are fed liquid manure. All of the parkway save the five feet about each tree, is covered solidly with concrete of material similar to the sidewalks.

Gas Injury to Street Trees.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota holds that a gas company is responsible for death or injury to street trees through escaping gas. Even where leaks were caused by frost and not discovered by the company until June, it is held that due care was not exercised to safeguard public and private property. The gas companies must exercise due care or care commensurate with the danger.

Landscape Surgery.

In park development it often becomes necessary to remove large trees, and this subject has always been a bone of contention between citizens and park superintendent or park commission. It often appears a sacrilege to cut down a large, healthy tree, and it is a natural, but often misguided sentiment that inspires criticism. No one places a higher value on trees than a trained and appreciative landscape gardener which every park superintendent is supposed to be. Our sympathies are all with the latter; the people as a rule need protection from themselves.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

POULTRY NOT A "HUMBUG."

CLOSE OF AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION ON THE SUBJECT.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

NO discussion that has been inspired by this department has awakened so wide an interest as Mr. Whittaker's letter in which he asserted that poultry culture under a Southern California sun was a humbug. For the most part, we have already given space to a number of correspondents taking the opposite view; to give place to all of them would mean to devote nearly the entire magazine section of The Times to the discussion. It is a matter of regret that writers agreeing with Mr. Whittaker have for the most part rested their case upon the mere assertion that it is a failure, giving no reasons why, nor explaining environment and conditions under which failure resulted. People who have been more fortunate with fowl have also been more free in telling us how they managed their poultry to bring about success. The writer's desk at present is cluttered up with letters on the subject, many of which repeat arguments already exploited in this department, but there are those which give positive results which go to show that poultry properly managed is anything but a failure, that we make room for a few more, which must close the discussion.

R. A. Paulson of Compton calls attention to the variation in prices of feeds as between Northern California and Southern California, and argues that this of itself affords economic conditions hard to overcome. He says that the difference is something like 30 per cent. on an average. He has for a number of years been growing poultry in the Sacramento Valley, where he averaged about $1 per hen on 400 head, which he finds impossible here on account of higher prices for grain. It will be observed that he has no fault to find about the laying qualities of his hens.

A real lover of poultry well known to the writer sends in the following pertinent note from Long Beach, under his pen name of X. Y. Z.:

"I have read with much interest the 'Whittaker' articles in The Times, and herewith send you my experience. Being so situated that I could keep a few hens, I decided to purchase a few to supply eggs for family use. Accordingly, the latter part of November, 1908, I purchased a few hens in Los Angeles and had them shipped to Long Beach. It took them a few days to get used to their new quarters, but my record shows that commencing with December 9 and including today, 78 days, I have received 469 eggs, or a trifle over six eggs per day from eleven hens—six White Plymouth Rocks and five White Wyandottes." No "humbug" here.

James Ewing of Studebaker, Cal., sends in the following terse statement covering two years' operation of a poultry plant:

1907—4690 doz. eggs sold	$1366.20
Feed	574.55
Profit	$791.65
1908—4673 doz. eggs, sold for	$1341.65
Profit	$739.08

Does not feed any fancy poultry foods. Simply wheat, bran and milk, and corn when cold and stormy. Green food, principally Swiss chard. Says he is perfectly satisfied with his experience. His time is occupied by necessary work with his fowls. Result, eats and sleeps well.

In the light of this experience, poultry culture is anything but a humbug in California.

Under date of February 21 Mr. Paul Scheile writes as follows:

"I have been reading with interest the discussion on Whittaker's Barred Rocks and also his assertion that poultry is a humbug in California. As all varieties of Plymouth Rocks are much alike except in color of plumage, I will give my experience with a flock of White Rocks. On February 1, 1907, I put thirty-two hens in a pen and kept an accurate account of all feed consumed, number of eggs laid, and the money returns for all eggs sold. The following is the result of a year's business by months:

1908.	Eggs laid.	Am't. rec'd.
February	298	$5.94
March	525	7.48
April	455	6.57
May	451	7.52
June	517	9.61
July	482	8.82
August	525	13.12
September	442	12.60
October	298	9.93
November	336	12.60
December	351	11.70
January	366	10.67
Total	5045	$116.56

"Feed consumed consisted of 2800 pounds of wheat and Kaffir corn, $46.35; bran and greens, $7.50; making a total of $53.85. Subtracting this sum from $116.56, the amount received for my hen fruit, leaves me a margin of $62.71 on thirty-two laying hens, or a net return of $1.93 per head. Dividing 32 into 5045, the total number of eggs laid, gives an average of 158 eggs per hen. The birds were confined in a yard or pen 20x22 feet. By observing cleanliness, I have had no sickness. This, it seems to me, proves that poultry in Southern California is not a humbug—at least not with me."

Can We Control Egg Production?

Egg laying is a natural function of the hen, and environment and conditions being right, she will "shell out" more or less. In spite of this fact, however, the experienced breeder knows that environment and a contented condition have much to do with Biddy's proclivities in that direction. If barred from her usual place of laying, she will wait for hours to gain access—which is plainly deterring her from doing business at the old stand. To enlarge on this idea, suppose we take a flock of birds and move them suddenly to new quarters; they may lay the next day or so—expelling the fully-formed egg—but after that it is liable to be several days before they will again assume their normal laying capacity. Especially is this true of the more active breeds like the Leghorns and Minorcas. To secure maximum laying capacity hens should be kept as quiet as their natures will allow, and those attending them should not only be gentle and undemonstrative, but in garb and general demeanor modest and gentle. Nothing checks the reproductive functions more than fright; nothing is so inimical to good egg production as an agitation of the atmosphere by loud talking and gesticulation while in the chicken yard. Give your birds bodily comforts, keep them busy, in a happy and contented condition, and you will to just that extent augment the output of hen fruit.

THE KANSAS EGG IN THE LOS ANGELES MARKET.

Things Our Breeders Want to Know.

A. F. K., Los Angeles, writes as follows: "As an interested follower of your writings on poultry in the Times Magazine would like to ask your opinion as to poultry raising on a hill. Would chickens travel over a hill if used as a run, or would they be apt to remain at the bottom? I am considering which would be best hill or level land. About how steep a hill could be used if any?"

Poultry do well on ordinary rolling land, and will naturally roam in the immediate vicinity of their roosting place. In Petaluma the hillsides are dotted with poultry-houses, where the colony plan prevails quite generally. As to birds going "over a hill," all depends. If the land is slightly hilly or rolling, they will roam out of sight of their roosting-places, but would not travel over an extended hill or mountain. Nor one that is inclined to be perpendicular. If the situation is "up and down," we would give the level land the preference, especiallly if it was a sandy loam soil.

V. S. R., Santa Barbara, writes complaining that his birds are laying soft-shelled, or nearly shell-less eggs, and asks a remedy.

Shell-less eggs are usually the result of overfat birds, or else they are suffering for the want of shell-forming foods, such as oyster shell, grit and old mortar or plaster, which supplies lime. Shut off soft foods and feed grain, principally oats. Add a little lime to their drinking water, and see that they have plenty of exercise.

W. H. S., Fresno.— Some of my fowl are guilty of egg-eating; is there a remedy?

Yes, wring the necks of all guilty ones; it is a sure cure. If this "goes against the grain," try a china egg in nest or runs, which will be barren of results if attacked; or try darkening the quarters of the laying hens. It's an aggravating vice, and in our estimation its punishment should be the ax and block.

Is It "Damphoolishness"?

So reliable an authority as the Petaluma Poultry Journal (printed where only white-shelled eggs are White Leghorn hens) says that "tinted eggs are Or, rather, discrimination against eggs of any color, is ,in the language of Artemus Ward, ishness.' The idea that color of the shell make difference in the contents of the egg is the kind of folly."

From a food value there is no virtue in color though it is quite generally conceded that a is a trifle stronger than a white. It is on the of easier candling or "testing out," that the white are more economic. In the large packing-houses eggs are candled in quantity, they claim that the shelled egg can be handled in half the time it test out the browns. That's one reason why shelled eggs command the markets; the other is a matter of fashion, which calls for the white in San Francisco and Los Angeles. In the same the Journal a correspondent complains: "Here aluma) we producers quite frequently are docked 15c per dozen on our tinted eggs." Evidently the have the floor.

MADELINE.

Airy, fairy, maiden mine,

World-old wonder in her eyes,
Gayest mirth and quick surprise,
Where you are the world's divine,
Airy, fairy, Madeline.

Violet scent on billowed hair—
Gold aërial lurking there—
O'er those tempting coral lips,
Red as bloom the striped bee sips;
Madeline—beyond compare—
Much I'd give with thee to fare!

As the honeyed alchemist
Moulds the dew pearl in his fist
Till the wax and sugar blent
Make a royal treasure pent—
So the pinks and lilies kist,
Wedded in a passioned tryst.

Make her cheeks a garden close
Breathed about with thyme and rose;
So was wrought my Madeline,
Airy, fairy, half-divine,
Fair as sun tints on the snows,
Fair as fairest flow'r that blows.

When you're with me, maiden mine,
Flaming bows on cloud banks shine,
Merry elves about me trip,
Chaliced nectar then I sip;
But when gone, I pensive pine
For my rose-cheeked Madeline.

report echoed from the heavy ceiling, and tinkled upon the floor. The man stood in the broad side aisle, a smoking rifle in hard smile on his dark, handsome face.

He raised the rifle again and once more glass fragments flew about the floor.

The maestra gave a startled cry. "Arturo! Why don't you save yourself while you can? Go, now, while you can!" Her voice caught on a sob. "Go—for my sake!"

The lithe form of the young Mexican stiffened, and he sent another shot through the shattered window before he answered. "For your sake I go, but you come with me! I come for you! My horse carry two. Come, señorita, you will! I loaf you!"

The maestra shrank back against the adobe wall. "No, Arturo, I can't go with you—not yet. You must wait—wait!"

Once more a shot rang out, and as the biting blue vapor drifted up, he turned upon her, a bitter sneer upon his face.

"Wait, wait!" he snarled. "Wait till you marry Señor Burke, hey?" He tore open his crimson jacket and, thrusting his hand into his shirt, he brought out a bunch of yellow handbills printed in huge letters of flaming red. "Here my respecks to Señor Burke! He hunt me down, ha? He make a price upon my head! Diablo! I speet upon him!" With a wild gesture, he tore the bills in two and scattered the fragments on the floor. "Yes, I will get him, and this for you!" He whirled around and leveled his smoking Winchester at her. She could not move. The room spun around and the whitewashed walls seemed drenched with blood where the level rays of the setting sun touched them.

For a moment the beady eyes glittered along the leveled piece. Then, slowly, it sunk to Arturo's side, and with a bitter laugh and an "Adios!" he turned and was gone.

Outside, there was a sputter of shots, a defiant laugh sounding high above the clatter of hoofs, and all was still.

The maestra sat upon the earthen floor and gazed dully at the scattered handbills that exemplified Arturo's scorn of Señor Burke. As she looked, a small, white figure stole out from among the heavy benches. He picked up two of the paper fragments and crept softly to the teacher's side. A wan smile spread over her face at the sight of the wide, serious eyes under the thatch of midnight hair. "Why, honey, how did you come here?" she crooned, as she took the paper fragments from his eager hands.

A dark, finely-chiseled face looked out at her from the handbill, a face with a smile upon the lips, a smile of conscious vanity. And then, with swimming eyes, she followed down the sheet, and in the huge type of sensation she read a criminal's doom.

Two Kinds of Lions.

There is a distinction in Africa between ordinary lions and "maneaters." The ordinary lion does not wilfully attack man. The presence of lions roaming at night on the veldt is not disturbing to any native nor to whites who have come to understand the beasts. Persons returning to their camps after nightfall do not notice the roaring of lions, or the cries of leopards and hyenas. It is seldom that people bent upon domestic errands carry weapons in the darkness, although at night the veldt of British East Africa is alive with roaming beasts, which may be heard from the verandas of the houses. Lions give the passing man a wide berth, day or night, when it is apparent that he means no mischief. An ordinary lion, even when wounded, will try flight before fight. When its escape is disputed, it will, especially if wounded, try to maul its enemy with teeth and claws. A lion hunt is usually a chase in which the hunters goad the game into combat. Once a lion has tasted human blood, however, it is no more afraid of man, but learns that he is the weakest of animals and the choicest of meat. Such a lion is known as a maneater because now he hunts man.—[McClure's Magazine.

Wireless Telegraphy.

MANY WAYS IN WHICH IT IS OF GREAT VALUE.

From Brooklyn Eagle.

THE "C. Q. D." call of the wireless, on board the ill-fated White Star steamship Republic, by which half a dozen leviathans of the deep were summoned to the rescue of 700 human beings, has turned the attention of every one to the possibilities of this uncanny form of intercommunication.

The first thorough test of wireless telegraphy made in the United States was on April 14, 1899—nearly ten years ago. This test was made under the supervision of Col. James Allen and Col. George O. Squier of the United States Signal Corps. Communication was established between the State, War and Navy Departments Building and the Naval Observatory. The distance traveled by the waves was more than a mile.

Today, without any especial attuning of instruments, a wireless may be sent around the world. Indeed, many messages were received from the United States battleships at distances ranging from 3000 to 4000 miles during the progress of their world-encircling voyage.

Already a regular service of wireless transmission has been established across the Atlantic. On October 17, 1907, the first wireless press dispatch was flashed across the ocean, signalizing the opening of the Marconi service to the public. Another line is in progress of formation, to be established between the Eiffel Tower, in Paris, and the Metropolitan Tower, in New York.

If wireless is fast becoming vital to commercial interests it has already demonstrated its indispensability to the government in the direction of its navy and Weather Bureau service. Bids were recently opened at Washington for the erection of a central wireless plant capable at all seasons of transmitting messages to a radius of 3000 miles in any navigable direction from Washington, D. C. An especial feature of the system required for this station is its immunity from interruption by atmospheric disturbances or intentional or unintentional interference from neighboring stations. In other words, the proposed station must be capable of transmitting and receiving messages with entire secrecy.

From this central station it is proposed to direct the movements of the United States naval vessels in all parts of the world instantaneously, and to send out warnings to ships of every character of the approach of storms.

Moreover, wireless telegraphy has become such an integral part of the United States Navy that the government has established a number of schools where the theory and mechanism of wireless are taught to those who have enlisted in the service as electricians.

Every day in the week instruction is imparted in wireless and in other mechanical and electrical subjects to large classes of eager sailors.

But the use of wireless is not restricted to the high seas. While it is true that at the present stage of development it seems easier to transmit messages across the water, yet this means of communication is fast being adapted to overland uses. In the control of running trains wireless seems to be fraught with possibilities. For this purpose it is already being used on the Union Pacific Railroad. Our existing system of railway signaling is complicated, expensive, and, judging from the prestige we have attained in the matter of collisions, ineffective. The block system does not block in practice, and wire signals and wire telegraphy are the prey of ice, storms and accidents. Wireless knows no such limitations as is imposed upon wire telegraphy by the elements.

The system of wireless which has been adapted to the control of running trains was first developed in Bavaria. It consists of the installation of a wireless receiver on the roof of one of the cars with aërial transmitters on the poles beside the road, so that messages may be sent to the conductor not merely from the nearest signal tower or station, but thus making it possible to arrest a train at any point, to give immediate instruction as to its switching, passing, detaining or sectionizing, to convey information of spread rails, landslides, fires, unsafe bridges and broken locomotives—in fact, to convey information of impending danger by taking advantage of which train crews may save the lives not only of themselves, but of the many passengers intrusted to their care.

An evidence of the varied use to which a wireless may be put is its employment by the Department of Agriculture in the great forest reserves under the control of the government. Here it serves as a fire alarm. The force of guards or "rangers," as they are called, within the borders of the great forest reserves was admittedly too small to do efficient work in preventing conflagration or in controlling those that made headway before an alarm was given. Under the automatic wireless system the smallest blaze in any part of a forest reserve will turn in an alarm itself, and enable everybody within call to reach the scene of the conflagration before it has gained much headway.

This is the most important innovation that has ever been made in the control of forest reserves, for the control of fires has always been the greatest problem with which the Department of Agriculture has been called upon to deal in its policy of forest preservation.

In fine, wireless may be regarded not only as a means of communication, but also as a safety appliance. No life can become so isolated or so distant from all other lives that its cry of distress in times of danger cannot be heard. This feature of wireless was more forcibly demonstrated than any other in the recent collision between the Republic and the Florida, and it is not inconceivable that Marconi, the inventor of wireless, shall soon be awarded a Carnegie medal as the life saver par excellence.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Search the State.

I HAD a telegram from Chicago not long ago asking asking me to locate 5000 apricot trees of the Blenheim variety. The sender of the message lives in Chicago and farms in California. His manager had searched all the nurseries of the State that he knew of, and could not find the trees he wanted. I gave him the names of several nurserymen, but I fear the stock he seeks will not be secured. Of course our tree growers cannot foresee a sudden demand for a particular kind of tree, and an order of this size often goes without filling. But the Blenheim is a popular variety, especially with the canners, and it seems strange that the number cannot be found in the State. The Blenheim succeeds well in all sections of California where this fruit can be grown, and our nurserymen should be prepared for a heavy demand.

Government Whitewash.

AT least once a year I am asked to republish the government recipe for the whitewash used in the United States lighthouse service. It is by far the best mixture of this sort in use. Here is the formula:

Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it and add a peck of salt, dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste; half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting and a pound of clear glue; dissolve in warm water; mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used, put it on as hot as possible, with painters' or whitewash brushes.

Poorly-Paid Officials.

I HAVE a letter from a county horticultural commissioner who is devoting all his time and energies to the work of quarantining his county against insect pests and to the control of the harmful insect already introduced. His salary since his appointment has averaged $70.10 a month, and of this he has spent about $10 a month for transportation. Here is the case of a faithful and efficient officer who is worth a thousand times his salary every year to the fruit interests involved, and who is grudgingly paid a mere living wage by the Supervisors. He has equipped himself for the duties of his office, spent about $100 for books, microscope and apparatus. His is one of the best fruit counties in the State, with a very large acreage of trees assessed by special constitutional provision at perhaps $75 to $100 an acre for bearing trees, and the fruit growers should have a part of the tax money derived therefrom for the protection of their orchards. They do not get very much protection by reason of the parsimonious instincts of their Supervisors.

In a large majority of the counties of the State the same spirit is in evidence. Of the fifty-six counties forty-one have horticultural commissions. In perhaps three-fourths of the counties the Supervisors do not support the commissions with enthusiasm, although new counties are coming under the commissioner law every year. In a majority of counties the Supervisors have in more or less degree, in some of them completely, nullified a most excellent law, designed for controlling insect pests and approved by a long line of court decisions. The amended county horticultural law will be a great improvement over the present law.

Farmers' Organizations.

THE spectacle of 3000 farmers, meeting in a hall at Fresno on February 3, assembled for the purpose of joining the Farmers' Educational and Coöperative Union is enough to make the whole State take notice. Two thousand of these joined the organization at the afternoon session. The society has pass words, signs and grips, but its leaders explain that the organization is secret only to the extent necessary for keeping the affairs of the union from being published broadcast, and to make it possible to keep out those not desired among its membership. Viewed from the standpoint of farm economics, this movement which has broken out with such violence at Fresno will be of peculiar interest at this time.

Space will not permit giving the programme of the Farmers' Union as outlined for California. There is to be a board of produce control, a line of warehouses and a scheme of inspection wherein each package of fruit or lot of grain must be passed upon and guaranteed to the eastern negotiator. Goods or produce that merits a bank guarantee as to quality and grade will find ready sale, so the promoters say, and the Union proposes to advance three-fourths of the value of the goods warehoused, upon delivery, the balance to be paid to the producer when the goods are sold. No member of the board of control gets his hands on any of the grower's money, for all funds are handled through the banks. The great central idea of the union is to eliminate the middle man—the speculator. From the producer to the consumer is the slogan.

There is a field for an organization of this kind in California, without question. But I do not see what function this union can assume in the handling of fruits, vegetables and other perishable products. From the avidity with which a large number of fruit growers have seized upon the new idea it would seem that one fundamental proposition had escaped attention, namely, that buyers of our perishables always either directly or indirectly make their purchases in the East—directly by waiting till the goods are sent to them for examination, or, indirectly by buying them here subject to delivery conditions and some unnamed conditions. This fact alone would necessitate the producers' organizing their own selling agencies in the East, where the real act of changing ownership of the goods is consummated. How the union's warehousing plan meets that paramount requirement is not stated, and in fact is not attempted, and thus the movement at Fresno fails of value to the fruit grower.

Another vital problem is not met by the programme of the union's. It is that the proper distribution of fruit products, including Fresno raisins, is the keystone of success. I know that the growers elsewhere are giving broad attention to the fact that without a comprehensive plan of market exploitation and prevention of congestion in the fruit-consuming centers of the country, California is already facing a surplussage of prunes, raisins, table grapes, peaches and possibly other fruits. As an example, I am told by a large Tokay grape grower that this variety alone will furnish 16,000 carloads of fruit within the next four or five years. There will be enormous losses if the machinery for properly distributing this product is not organized in the East at once. The Farmers' Union plan, which is getting under such headway at Fresno, takes no account of these real difficulties. Nor are we sure that a movement not content to be a growth based upon sound commercial principles will be of lasting tenure or of benefit at all. The citrus exchange was a growth and not a mere accretion.

New Horticultural Law.

One year ago last December the State Fruit Growers' Convention in session at Marysville authorized the appointment of a committee of five fruit growers for the purpose of revising the county horticultural commission law. Last April the State Commissioner of Horticulture named Judge P. J. Shields, Arthur R. Briggs, D. G. Overall, James Mills and A. G. Kendall as members of the committee, and these gentlemen met twice last summer at Sacramento to consider the amendment of the law, and finally presented a report to the Legislature last January in the form of a bill for enactment. The bill was introduced in the lower house by Assemblyman Collier, of Corona, and into the other house by Senator Miller of Visalia. After some necessary amendments from the fruit growers' representatives the bill was finally put upon its way, and at this writing is nearly ready for the growers' consideration. As the new law will touch the fruit industries of the State closer than any other act of the Legislature, and but few of the growers will have the opportunity of reading the measure in full, a synopsis of the amended sections follows:

The bill provides for the appointment of one horticultural commissioner in each county instead of three. The term of office is four years, instead of at the pleasure of the Supervisors, and no appointee can be dismissed except upon a hearing before the Supervisors and for cause sustained in the hearing. No one is eligible until his qualifications have been passed upon favorably by a State Board of Horticultural Examiners which is created by the act. Instead of $4 per day each for three men the law provides $6 per day for the one man. Any county so desiring, with the consent of the Supervisors, may have two deputy commissioners to be appointed by the commissioner, with the approval of the Supervisors, from the list of eligibles certified by the board of examiners.

The amendment provides for the appointment by the Governor of a board of examiners consisting of three fruit growers or men versed in practical horticulture. The term of office is four years, and the members of the board are to serve without pay. The horticultural commissioner must be a resident of the county and the examiners are required to hold the examinations at a convenient place in each county. A fee of $5 is to be charged each candidate for examination to help pay the traveling expenses of the board chosen by the Governor. In case no candidates offer for examination in a county the board of examiners shall present the names of five fruit growers and residents of the county to the Supervisors, from which the selection of a commissioner must be made. The commissioner may appoint his inspectors without consulting the Supervisors, the law not being changed in this respect. The inspectors receive $3.50 per day when actually engaged in the work.

The reading of the law has been clarified in several places, especially in the requirements for serving notices upon owners of infected property; but the most helpful change lines in the rewriting of section one as above sketched, in that it will now do much to prevent the Supervisors from nullifying the law altogether as they are doing in a score of the smaller counties. As soon as the act is approved by Gov. Gillett, we may hope to have copies sent in large numbers to all portions of the State. It is emphatically the fruit growers' law.

[illegible] 1. Section 2322 of the Political Code of the [illegible] California is hereby amended to read as follows:

[illegible] a petition is presented to the Board of [illegible] of any county, and signed by twenty-five persons each of whom is a resident freeholder [illegible] of an orchard, stating that certain or all [illegible] nurseries, or trees or plants of any variety [illegible] with any serious infectious diseases, or [illegible] of any kind injurious to fruit, fruit trees, or other plants or vegetables, or that there is therein the Russian thistle or saltwort (Salsoli [illegible] tragus,) Johnson grass (Sorgum helepense) [illegible] noxious weeds, codling moth or other insects destructive to trees; and praying that a commissioner be appointed by them whose duty it shall be [illegible] the destruction of said scale insects, diseases [illegible] thistle or saltwort (Johnson grass,) or other [illegible] weeds as herein provided, the Board of Supervisors shall, within twenty days thereafter, appoint a [illegible] horticultural commissioner whose term of office [illegible] four years and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified and who shall give a bond in the [illegible] conditioned for the faithful performance [illegible]. In any case where such petition has already been presented or submitted, or is on file at the [illegible] of the passage of this act, as the basis for the [illegible] of a board of horticultural commissioners [illegible] chapter as heretofore existing, such petition [illegible] in full force and effect and the Board of [illegible] of any county with which any such petition [illegible] filed, or in which any board of horticultural [illegible] has heretofore existed, must appoint a horticultural commissioner. The person appointed to such position must be specially qualified for [illegible] and must be chosen and appointed by the [illegible] Supervisors from a list of resident citizens of [illegible] which has been recommended and nominated [illegible] as hereinafter provided, such appointment [illegible] within twenty days after receipt of said list [illegible] Board of Supervisors. A State board of horticultural examiners is hereby created consisting of three [illegible] shall be owners of orchard or vineyard [illegible] actively engaged in horticultural or viti[illegible], or educated and trained in horti[illegible] viticultural science, who shall serve without [illegible] board shall provide convenient means [illegible] of candidates for appointment as [illegible] commissioner. Said board of examiners [illegible] by the Governor and shall hold office [illegible] of four years and until their successors are [illegible] qualified. Vacancies in said board of ex[illegible] shall be filled by appointment by the Governor, [illegible] to hold for the remainder of the unexpired [illegible] board shall appoint one of their number [illegible] who shall receive all money collected by or [illegible] and disburse the same only in payment of [illegible] necessary expenses of said board for travel[illegible], postage, and other incidental matters. [illegible] shall biennially report to the Governor a [illegible] of their receipts and disbursements. [illegible] before the date of the examination of can[illegible] for the said appointments, the State board of [illegible] examiners shall publish, or post notices of [illegible] and place at which such examination shall be [illegible] forth the conditions and subjects of said [illegible], such publication or posting to be for such [illegible] manner in the county for which such [illegible] is to be had, as the State board of horti[illegible] examiners in their judgment may deem advis[illegible] the time and place stated and agreed upon [illegible] shall be held. Said examination shall [illegible], and the board of horticultural examin[illegible] one of their own number, or some [illegible] and competent person to supervise the [illegible] examination in each county and forward [illegible] of each applicant to the board for considera[illegible] applicant for examination shall before tak[illegible] be required to pay a fee of $5 there[illegible] shall be delivered to the person supervising [illegible] and by him transmitted to the treas[illegible] board. Within twenty days after the ex[illegible] is held, said examiners shall certify to the [illegible] Supervisors of the county for which the exam[illegible] the names of such of the persons exam[illegible] they deem competent and qualified for such [illegible] from the list of names so certified the super[illegible] a horticultural commissioner. As [illegible] the board of horticultural examiners [illegible] resident fruit growers of the county in determining the responsibility and moral qualifications of candidates for appointment as commissioners and whose names they certify to the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties. If no persons present themselves for examination before said State board of horticultural examiners or if after such examination no persons are found qualified, the State board of horticultural examiners shall name five residents of the county who shall be practical fruit growers, and certify them to the Board of Supervisors, and from these names the Board of Supervisors shall appoint a county horticultural commissioner. In case of a vacancy in the office of horticultural commissioner, the vacancy shall be filled from the list of eligibles certified to the Board of Supervisors under the provision of this act. Whenever from any cause the number of persons eligible and certified to any Board of Supervisors, from which to select and appoint a county horticultural commissioner, is or becomes less than five, the State board of horticultural examiners shall proceed to certify or recommend the names of additional persons as hereinabove provided. Whenever elsewhere in the laws of this State reference is made to a county board of horticulture, such reference must be understood to mean and relate to the county horticultural commissioner herein provided for and said county board of horticulture and the members thereof shall cease to exist as such; provided, that all county boards of horticulture existing at the time of the passage of this act shall continue in office, with full power as heretofore existing until the election or appointment to succeed them, of a county horticultural commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Section 3. Section 2322b of the Political Code of the State of California is hereby amended to read as follows:

Said county horticultural commissioner shall have the power to divide the county into districts, and to appoint a local inspector, to hold office at the pleasure of the commissioner, for each of said districts, and may with the consent and approval of the Board of Supervisors, appoint two deputy horticultural commissioners from the list of names certified to the Board of Supervisors by the State board of horticultural examiners.

Section 5. Section 2322d of the Political Code of the State of California is hereby amended to read as follows:

The salary of all inspectors working under the county horticultural commissioner is $3.50 per day. The deputy commissioners shall receive $5 per day each, during the time actually employed as such officers. In the case of the commissioner himself, his compensation shall be $6 per day, when actually engaged in the performance of his duties, and necessary traveling expenses incurred in the discharge of his regular duties as prescribed in this chapter.

Propagation by Cuttings.

FOR purposes of propagation, a cutting has been defined as the entirely detached portion of a plant, usually a shoot or a part of a shoot, furnished with buds and leaves. This cutting, when selected at the right season, and from the proper wood, and then placed in favorable surroundings, will produce a new plant. The first process in this direction is the formation of a callus, or a hardening of the cut end of the wood, a covering of the wound made by the knife. From this callus in a short time tiny rootlets will start out and, as these harden, the new plant becomes ready for setting out. The best manner of starting cuttings is in clean, sharp river sand. The cutting itself contains all the root potentialities. It will start roots if given moisture and warmth. It needs no soil food, and when set in soil is likely to spoil by the rotting of its tender thread-like rootlets when they first appear. The sand holds the cutting firm, and it must not be disturbed or the young roots will be broken off; it is also a medium for the retention of the necessary moisture, and is much warmer than garden soil.

Cuttings of the hardwood plants—deciduous plants which shed their leaves for the winter—should be made while they are dormant, after the leaves have fallen and before the sap starts in the spring. When the sap starts in motion in the spring the calluses form more readily than at any other time. The worst time to make cuttings of the plants described, is when the sap is in full flow in the early spring. As a rule, the cuttings should be made when the plants are dormant or when they have made a new shoot and this is so far advanced as to be hardening into a woody form.

Gooseberries, currants and some other bushes throw out roots along their sides as well as around the callus. In all of these the buds which are on the underground part of the cutting, must be rubbed off or they will develop into annoying suckers. Cuttings of these may be made as soon as the fruit has ripened. These, planted in moist warm soil at this time, will form roots before winter sets in and be a season ahead of cuttings made in the spring.—[Town and Country Journal.

Before the Baby Is Born.

A GREAT majority of civilized women entertain the idea that to suffer great pain at childbirth is unavoidable, and that when a woman escapes labor pains it is something extraordinary. This is far from the truth. Here is an extract from the "Diagnosis from the Eye" by Henry Edward Lane, M. D.:

"It will become obvious to the intelligent reader that all the various pains of parturition, which are commonly regarded as unavoidable, are but the result of continuous violations of nature's laws, and we will shortly point out the most common mistakes that are made in this respect. The aversion to cold fresh air and the sleeping in ill-ventilated rooms give a wholly inadequate supply of oxygen to the blood of mother and child. If the pregnant mother would take a little care, she would soon notice that the foetus always becomes restless when she remains in bad air. Further, the corruption of the blood and lymph by meat and other irritating food is often aggravated by the excessive consumption of liquids, like wine, beer, soups, milk, etc. That the corset is one of the greatest injuries to the female body is such a well-known fact that we hardly need to mention it. It lessens and often ruins the digestive power; it restricts the development of the lungs to almost half of the normal size; it destroys absolutely the normal power of breathing; it prevents the return of the venous blood from parts below the waist line. In short, it is one of the principal causes of marital misery; but also the infant has much to suffer, and many ailments of childhood are due to this folly of fashion.

"Difficult and painful parturition can never be caused by such a mistake of nature as a too narrow pelvis would be; and right here we want to correct one of the most significant and fatal errors of the old schools. Not the pelvis is too narrow, but the circumference of the head and body of the child are too large! The average measurements of normal new-born infants are: Length of the body, 50 cm.; circumference of the head, 34 cm.; weight, 3000 grams; yet at present we find in the majority of births, by the same length of the body, a circumference of the head of 35 cm. and a weight of 3500 grams. This abnormal enlargement is caused by an excess of water in the cavities of the body, and the weight will increase the more the vitality of the mother is weakened and the more serious dietetic mistakes are made during pregnancy, so that the weight of the new-born can even reach 4500 grams (16 pounds) and more. We must add here the fact that the accumulation of fat in the body of the new-born as well as of the adult, is by no means a sign of health, but a process of fatty degeneration, the consequence of watery and insufficiently oxydized blood, i. e., imperfectly-assimilated albumen. All advanced physiologists acknowledge the fact that modern man takes about five times as much albumen in his food as he really needs. A daily ration of 20-40 grams of protein is sufficient for the average man.

"The oversupply of nitrogenous elements, especially through excessive meat eating, will nev.- increase health and strength. How often do we see a person who, according to his own opinion and that of his physician, lives well and upon 'strengthening foods and drinks,' yet who, with wan and pale face and bloated abdomen, goes shivering and groaning through life!

"Overfeeding and lack of proper exercise are always the cause of the abnormal size of the new born. The latter and a too large quantity of amniotic fluid (the liquid on which the foetus is suspended) expand the muscles of the uterus and the abdomen far too much, thus weakening their elasticity. The consequences which then appear are often dangerous, like bursting of the womb, expulsion of the after birth before the fetus (placenta praevia,) rupture of the uterus. Sometimes they are molesting, like preponderation of the venter.

"There is but one way to insure painless parturition, and that is by living strictly in accordance with nature. Even if the mother first begins during pregnancy to adopt a natural diet, consisting principally of fruits, nuts, and broken whole wheat, she will have an easy delivery. It will be a still more surprising fact to many that such a diet will bring forth an abundant flow of healthy milk from the lacteal glands within twenty-four hours, even in such cases where the latter had been completely dried up."

Again, in his book, "What the White Race may Learn from the Indian," reviewed here last year, George Wharton James says:

"Normal births with Indian women are practically painless and entirely free from danger. I have known a woman to deliver herself of her child, sever the umbilicus, and then walk half a mile to the creek, walk into it with the baby, and give herself and the child a good washing, then return to her camp, suckle the little one, and proceed to attend to her duties as if nothing had happened. At another time I saw a woman, less than half an hour after her child was born, start off for a heavy load of food. Their freedom from constricting waist bands, their absolute freedom of body, their nasal and deep breathing, their muscular exercise through life, their open-air sleeping and living, all have much to do with these easy births."

Here is an extract from an article on prenatal dietetics by Dr. H. Lindlahr in the Nature Cure Magazine:

"The biblical saying, 'In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children' has led many to believe that woman's dreadful suffering is a necessity, but is not man's ignorance to blame rather than the cruelty of an avenging God?

"This latter view is confirmed by the fact that other mammalia literally cast their young, without pain or difficulty, and that the labor pains of primitive mothers are insignificant; indeed their delivery presents little more difficulty than that of the lower animals.

"A squaw on the western plains stops a few hours by the wayside to deliver her papoose and then resumes her journey as though nothing had happened. Women among the German peasantry, living on black bread and vegetable food, to the last day of pregnancy do a great deal of hard work in the house and field, have their babies without help of midwife or physician and resume their usual routine of work within a day or two afterward.

"Thousands of mothers who have adopted natural ways of living, of dressing, breathing and exercising have learned to dispense with anesthetics and the surgeon's instruments; they now bring forth their offspring without pain.

"It is significant that the offspring of the lower animals, at birth, consist of little more than skin and bones, while the new-born human is often abnormally large and fat. This is especially true of the babies born of weak and anemic mothers. The excessive size and weight of the new born is not a matter for congratulation, but a pathological condition. It indicates fatty degeneration of the foetus, due to the anemic or rather watery condition of the blood of the mother, and the cause of this hydraemia of mother and child lies in the faulty dietetic habits of the former."

"Suggestions to an Expectant Mother" is a little book of ninety-three pages by Dr. Mary J. Kraft, M.D., D.O., of Whittier, Los Angeles county. In sending the book for review, Dr. Kraft writes as follows:

"As to the advice to expectant mothers, I know those who follow such advice need not fear labor. I have done obstetric work for sixteen years, and have had excellent results whenever I could have charge of the case a few months previous to confinement."

In her preface the author truthfully declares that instruments would need to be used less frequently and less injuries would befall women during confinement if they knew how to prepare themselves for the ordeal before their time came. Among other things she properly refers to the importance of the woman's person being respected by her husband while she is pregnant.

In regard to diet the author says:

"The fault of diet in general is that our foods contain too much mineral matter and too much of the starchy products. The excess of mineral matter in the food hardens the tissues—the bones and muscles and cartilages, especially—while excess of starches burden the digestive and eliminative organs."

This is only partially true. The fact is that in the ordinary diet we get altogether too little of the minerals that are found in the body, and consequently our nerves are starved. These minerals are changed or removed in cooking, and in the bolting of white flour. It is true that we may get too much mineral of a certain kind, but our food may be deficient in other minerals, which abound in green leaves and fruits.

The ordinary idea is that pregnant women should avoid cereals of all kinds, including bread, because the lime they contain tends to harden the embryo of the child. It is a fact, however, that vegetable foods, such as cabbage, contain much more lime than cereals. The main thing is not to eat too much of any kind of food. On this subject Dr. Rabagliati of England wrote as follows in one of his books, reviewed here several years ago:

"As a newly-born babe weighs from five to seven or nine pounds, and the placenta two or three pounds there are, say, about nine pounds of tissue to be made up in, say, nine months. This comes to about one-half ounce daily; and even if the baby and placenta were of giant size and weighed even eighteen pounds, which they do very rarely, there would only require to be made up about two pounds a month, or, say, one ounce a day during the period of pregnancy. To make up this amount the expectant mother takes perhaps one-half pound or more of extra food three times a day. What wonder if she has a bad labor, fevers, and takes pneumonia, or becomes septic, or has frightful laceration of the perineum at her confinement, the tissues being so loaded with effete material as to become easily lacerable?"

Again, Dr. Joel Shew declares in his book, "Water Cure in Pregnancy and Childbirth," that less food is required at this time than any other period.

Dr. M. L. Holbrook has declared that the morning sickness experienced by so many women when they are pregnant is caused by the ingestion of a surplus of food.

To return to Dr. Kraft's book. She correctly recommends that the mother should eat largely of fresh fruits and green vegetables. This is most important. In addition to other beneficial effects of this diet, it tends to regulate the bowels and kidneys. She advises the use of rice, sago, tapioca, the young meats if any, egg and fowl for variety, and nuts instead of much meat. She further advises the use of distilled water. Polished rice, sago, and tapioca are poor foods, consisting almost en-

We have abolished virtue, and for it substi[illegible]. Not the hero—he was too full of faults—[illegible] valet; not the man who does any good, [illegible] who has not been found out in any evil, is [illegible] ideal. The most virtuous thing in nature, according to this new theory, should be the oyster. He is always at home, and always sober. He is not noisy. He gives no trouble to the police. I cannot think of a single one of the Ten Commandments that he ever breaks. He never enjoys himself; and he never, so long as he lives, gives a moment's pleasure to any other living thing.

"I can imagine the oyster lecturing a lion on the subject of morality.

" 'You never hear me,' the oyster might say, 'howling round camps and villages, making night hideous, frightening quiet folk out of their lives. Why don't you go to bed early, as I do? I never prowl round the oyster bed, fighting other gentlemen oysters, making love to lady oysters already married. I never kill antelopes or missionaries. Why can't you live as I do on salt water and germs, or whatever it is that I do live on? Why don't you try to be more like me?'

"An oyster has no evil passions, therefore we say he is a virtuous fish. We never ask ourselves: 'Has he any good passions?' A lion's behavior is often such as no just man could condone. Has he not his good points also?

"Will the fat, sleeky, 'virtuous' man be as welcome at the gate of heaven as he supposes?

" 'Well,' St. Peter may say to him, opening the door a little way and looking him up and down, 'what is it now?'

" 'It's me,' the virtuous man will reply, with an oily, self-satisfied smile; 'I should say, I—I've come.'

" 'Yes, I see you have come; but what is your claim to admittance? What have you done with your three-score years and ten?'

" 'Done!' the virtuous man will answer; 'I have done nothing, I assure you.'

" 'Nothing!'

" 'Nothing; that is my strong point; that is why I am here. I have never done any wrong.'

" 'And what good have you done?'

" 'What good!'

" 'Aye, what good? Do not you even know the meaning of the word? What human creature is the better for your having eaten and drunk and slept these years? You have done no harm—no harm to yourself. Perhaps if you had you might have done some good with it; the two are generally to be found together down below, I remember. What good have you done that you should enter here? This is no mummy chamber; this is the place of men and women who have lived; who have wrought good—and evil also, alas!—for the sinners who fight for the right, not the righteous who run with their souls from the fight.' "

Self-Murderers.

A COUPLE of weeks ago a Los Angeles boy deliberately committed suicide, because of some little difference with his school teacher. A few days later a 16-year-old schoolboy in San Francisco killed himself.

In Germany suicides of school children have become so common as to lead to a government investigation of the subject. There the severity of the discipline may, to some extent, explain these conditions, although, on the other hand, the severity of discipline is no greater today than it was twenty years ago.

In America, statistics show that suicide is increasing at an alarming rate. How many cases of suicide do you suppose there were in this country last year? Ten thousand, eight hundred and fifty-two. A ghastly record, truly.

And the cause? Well, there are of course, many causes, but among the leading causes will be found, firstly, a wrong method of life, and secondly, living too fast. The penalty for these mistakes is nervous prostration, paresis, insanity, premature death, or suicide, as the case may be.

Recognition of the Nature Cure.

JUDGE WILBUR recently acquitted Dr. Carl Schultz of the charge of practicing medicine without a license. The accused was arrested in November, 1907, and tried by a jury in the Police Court, found guilty and fined $100. An appeal was taken, the judgment of the lower court was reversed, and a new trial ordered.

For several weeks Dr. Schultz and his good wife have been in Sacramento, working hard for the bill to license Naturopathy in California. This bill passed the Assembly on February 25 by a vote of 47 to 10. On March 5 a substitute bill, satisfactory to Dr. Schultz, was passed by the Senate. It would then go back to the lower house for approval, and receiving that, await the Governor's signature.

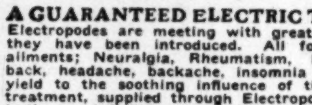
ELECTROPODES



Cure Where Drugs Fail

A GUARANTEED ELECTRIC TREATMENT

Electropodes are meeting with great favor wherever they have been introduced. All forms of nervous ailments; Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, weak back, headache, backache, insomnia and indigestion, yield to the soothing influence of this new electric treatment, supplied through Electropodes. Electricity is the one infallible corrector of pain and disease, and the only permanent cure for Rheumatism in its various forms.

ELECTROPODES

Electropodes are metal insoles worn in the shoes. One is of copper, the other of zinc, forming the two poles of a Galvanic Battery, the nerves of the body becoming the connecting wires, over which a gentle flow of electricity courses throughout the entire day.

THE CONTRACT

The price of Electropodes is $1.00 a pair, and your druggist gives you a written contract that if they prove unsatisfactory or a cure is not effected, to refund the purchase price in full. Only a meritorious article could be sold on this basis.

Buy Electropodes of your druggist—and if he cannot supply you, have him order a pair from fee. Dinner—Boiled beef and horse radish, potatoes, greens, oleomargarine, bread, coffee. Supper—Stewed fruit, ginger bread, wheat bread, oleomargarine, tea.

Friday: Breakfast—Beef hash, oleomargarine, bread, coffee. Dinner—Pea soup, baked yellowtail, beets, pickles, bread, coffee. Supper—Apple blanc mange pudding, wheat bread, tea.

Saturday: Breakfast—Boston baked beans, potatoes, oleomargarine, bread, coffee. Dinner—Ragout of mutton, German dumplings, potatoes, onions green, bread, coffee. Supper—Fruit cake and milk, oleomargarine, bread, tea.

The editor of the Care of the Body thinks that this is a mighty poor menu—too much, too rich, too concentrated, too lacking in fresh green stuff. In quantity, such a diet is sufficient for a man doing the hardest kind of work, and is altogether out of place for veterans who sit around idle most of the time. Such a diet, especially when eaten by people who are not doing hard physical work, is certain to produce constipation, ill-temper, ill-feeling, discomfort and a craving for stimulants. It is greatly lacking in the highly necessary organic salts, which are radically changed or removed in the ordinary methods of cooking vegetables. There is no mention of raw fresh fruit or salad, one or the other of which should be furnished at every meal. There is no excuse for this at the Santa Monica home, for they have several hundred acres of fertile soil, with water. The health and chance of life of the old boys would be increased several hundred per cent. by cutting down the amount of food by half, and furnishing at each meal either fresh fruit or salads, substituting lemon juice for vinegar.

Dangerous Literary "Dope."

IT is to be regretted that an otherwise excellent journal like the Saturday Evening Post, not content with publishing Woods Hutchinson's dietetic heresies—advising mothers to give their children more candy and people to eat more white flour, etc.—should run from week to week, a series of articles in which is printed detailed information by a swindler as to how money may be extracted from the unwary in gambling rooms and at circuses.

A few days ago, at Fort Worth, Tex., a negro was sentenced to serve thirteen months in the Federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., for swindling bankers and financiers out of $200,000. He declared he received his tips and inspiration from reading the financial deals of "J. Rufus Wallingford," a series of articles that preceded the one above referred to in the same publication.

Nice sort of literature to place before young people. We condemn moving-picture shows, in which information is given as to how to counterfeit coin or rob a train. Such stuff as this is quite as bad. It is enough to make the ghost of Ben Franklin squirm.

An Outrage on Womanhood.

THE following dispatch from Columbus, O., was recently published in The Times:

"By decision of the Ohio Supreme Court this evening, affirming the judgment of the Hamilton County Circuit Court, the divorce decree granted Prof. George W. Burns, a teacher in a Cincinnati public school, from Carrie O. Burns, is affirmed.

"They had ten children, and the husband brought suit for divorce because of the refusal of the wife to discharge her conjugal duties. The decision of the highest tribunal is that this refusal on her part to have more children in obedience to the often expressed desire of the husband, is sufficient grounds for legal separation. This is the second time the case has reached the Supreme Court."

It is difficult to decide whether this law—if correctly interpreted—or this husband is the more deserving of condemnation and contempt.

A monstrous law! An infamous law! It is not surprising that there is a demand on part of the women for the right to be heard in lawmaking—or at least to vote for people who make the laws. A woman correspondent writes as follows:

"Please tell your readers your view of a judge who would condemn a woman who had already borne ten children to her husband. I am a wife and a mother, and as I look at the facts in this particular case I am constrained to say that animalism and sensuality were the predominating characteristics in a man who would divorce his wife after he had been made father ten times through her endurance of the pangs of maternity. Any one worthy the name of man would have been willing to crucify the flesh (in himself) for a few years."

More will be said in the near future on this subject, which is of such vast importance, not only to the women of the country, but to generations yet unborn.

Acid Dyspepsia.

IN "Good Health" Dr. J. H. Kellogg shows that the reason why, when some people give up meat they are troubled with acid dyspepsia is not the fault of their new food, but is the result of the effect of long meat eating on the digestive organs, which causes excessive production of gastric juices. Acid dyspepsia, he declares, is a meat eaters' disease. The continued disuse of flesh foods will, after a time, restore the stomach to a normal condition and so effect a cure.

Milk for Children.

IN his book "Death Defeated" Dr. J. M. Peebles, M.D., correctly writes as follows:

"Next to breast milk, cow's milk is the best for the infant—cow's milk rightly prepared. It should not be cooked or boiled, because boiled milk produces constipation. The child should be fed on one healthy cow's milk because of its uniform quality; and milk from country farms is better than that from city-fed cows. Condensed milk is utterly unfit for children, inasmuch as its composition is seriously changed by the process of condensation, and, besides, the sweetening is cane sugar and very liable to fermentation."

Men and Hogs.

A PHYSICIAN, writing in the Medical Brief on the subject "What Shall We Eat?" says: "Man is omnivorous. The creator made him that way."

Guess again.

The hog is omnivorous. Man made him that way. The hog in a state of nature is not omnivorous. It is a cleanly feeder.

Don't blame the Creator when you make a hog of yourself—and suffer the consequences. The hog, the man and the fowl are about the only living things of much importance that are omnivorous—that is to say, in what we called "civilization." Also, note this: There are no other living things more subject to disease. The eating of a number of different things together is one of the main causes of disease.

Later on, in the same article, this medical writer says: "The greater the variety of foods we ingest, the more is it made possible for us to run a wider mental gamut and become more versatile in our attainments."

Oh, fudge!

According to this, the hog and the chicken should have "wider mental gamuts" and be more versatile than any other living things, except man. They should, in other words, be the brainiest creatures on earth next to the Lords of Creation. Are they?

Man is not naturally omnivorous. He is frugivorous, and the further he strays away from this law of his being, the more he suffers from disease, lack of efficiency, and shortened life.

Pulse Foods.

IT is strange to note what peculiar ideas some people have in regard to foods. For instance, here is a communication:

"I've always understood that the pulses meant green peas and green beans, while the dry pea beans and lentils are called legumes. In a recent 'Care of the Body' I get a different impression—perhaps it was in a quotation from Dr. Tilden. It seems as necessary—to me—to get this straight as to pronounce quinine correctly."

The pulse family consists of peas, beans, and lentils. The peanut is a sort of half-brother to the pulse family, partaking of the nature of the pulses or legumes and the nuts. A pulse is a legume, and a legume is a pulse, whether it is green or dry.

The correspondent might as well have intimated that a green plum is a vegetable and a ripe plum a fruit, or that a boy is a fish and a man an animal.

Give Us a Rest.

IN the Southern California Practitioner for February, a writer says: "It is well known among medical men that rest, simple rest in bed, will cure a great many cases of influenza."

Perfectly true. So, also, will it cure many other ailments, if you give the stomach a rest at the same time, and open the windows wide.

What, then, do you suppose this writer recommends, in his article? That people should simply rest in bed, when they have influenza? Oh, no. That would be altogether too easy. He recommends that when people have influenza they should take (1) quinine, (2) two antikamnia tablets every two or three hours, (3) a codeine tablet every two or three hours.

Well, well!

Voltaire on "Eugenics."

IF as much care were taken to perpetuate a race of fine men as is done to prevent the mixture of ignoble blood in horses and dogs, the genealogy of every one would be written on his face and displayed in his manners.—[Voltaire.

Consumption and Climate.

IT cannot too frequently be insisted upon that there is no climate in the world that is a specific for consumption. If you bring your bad habits with you—if you close your windows, and overeat, or eat wrong food—neither California nor any other climate in the world will heal your weak lungs.

Too little air and too much food is the trouble with most consumptives. The only advantage of the Southwest climate is that it makes life in the open air easy all the year round.

Modern Superstition.

WHEN we note the superstitious belief of the people in poisonous drugs and injections of animal matter, and the "contagiousness" of certain diseases, we are not justified in pointing the finger of scorn at "savages" who believe in witchery, and incantations and things of that sort.

Lydstonisms.

FOLLOWING are some epigrams, selected from the text of the book, "Diseases of Society," by Dr. G. Frank Lydston, reviewed here:

"The faculty of discovering things which, as Josh Billings said, 'ain't so,' is becoming epidemic in medicine. It is one of the fruits of a desire for notoriety in original research that is strangling medical philosophy. It will last until a Voltaire arises above the muck of

"A photograph of the original snake, were such procurable, would quite likely bear a strong likeness to Adam himself."

"Underlying much of man's immorality is the fact that nature designed him as a polygamous animal."

"The persistence of sensual desire in woman after the menopause is artificial, and due to long cultivation by response to man's desires in monogamous relations."

"The instinctive tendency of the male toward polygamy is one of the conditions against which normal men, who would be moral, have to fight."

"The wild-oats theory was probably invented by a fake social philosopher who had sins of his own to apologize for and no diseases acquired by early indiscretions to modify his opinions."

"In most cases of marital infelicity it is safe to say that the husband is at fault. There is a very cogent reason for this. He has usually a physical standard in mind based upon previous experience. While the glamour of early life lasts, he is satisfied with the situation. The inexperience of the wife is a decided novelty. When satiety arrives, as it usually does sooner or later, he begins to recall memories of past experience, in the light of which the physical charms of the wife begin to pale."

"If more attention were paid to quality of both parentage and children and less fretting done as to the possible disasters to the nation incidental to small numbers of children, it would be better for the race."

"Being born is often a disaster, social or individual, or both; never having been born may be a blessing, but it never can be a disaster to the individual."

"Love at first sight often leads to divorce at second sight."

"When matrimony is shorn of its theologic bias, and resolved into its true status as the sheet anchor of society, stirpiculture may have its day."

"Mere moral and religious training, while well enough so far as they go, are often ineffective as repressants of female immorality, simply because young girls observe that the standard of virtue and morality is largely a matter of opinion."

"Despite the beauty of his verse, the world might have struggled on without the neuropathic Byron and his peculiar moral bent, which inculcated the doctrine of hating your neighbor and loving your neighbor's wife."

"Genius is mysterious only to the extent that mind is mysterious. If mind has a physical basis, as is now generally believed, a physical basis must also be assigned to genius."

"The typical criminal and the genius are alike in that thay are born, not made."

"The genius, solitary and alone in the desert from birth, would build no locomotives, paint no grand pictures, write no poems, nor construct systems of philosophy."

"Whatever the state of the mind may be during the interim, it is doubtful if any poetry worthy of lasting fame, or any romance of high class, was ever written while the author was in a normal state of brain."

"There must, of necessity, exist a loss of balance in the direction of the emotional centers at the time of production."

"Sexuality in the genius presents irritability, rather than strength."

"The morality of a criminal act is never questioned by the true criminal. His moral centers have either never developed or have ceased to functionate, leaving him in a condition of moral atrophy—or better, perhaps moral anesthesia."

"That society will eventually, for its own protection, adopt some method of regulation and restriction of matrimony I believe to be inevitable."

"The most woeful feature of all educational institutions, both public and private, is the lack of individual discrimination and selective instruction."

"Capital punishment is a system from which there is no appeal. No court is wise enough to correct its own errors, once its victim is executed. This is one of the most powerful arguments against it. There should be no system of punishment the mistakes of which cannot be rectified."

"Criminals by heredity are usually hopeless—they are rarely caught young enough. Criminals who have committed one, or at most a few crimes under the stress of impulse, necessity, or temptation and example, yet have no criminal ancestry, who have not been brought up in the slums, and have a fair physique, are always reformable."

A Doctrine of Despair.

THERE have been received numbers one and two, for January and February, of the "Agnostic Index," a little four-page sheet published by the Los Angeles Liberal Club, which was incorporated a few years ago under the State laws. The purpose of the club is declared to be "to distribute truth, enlighten ignorance, and dissipate superstition."

These are good objects. The weak point about this free-thought school, in the opinion of the editor of the Care of the Body, is that most of its energy appears to be devoted to the tiresome task of proving that death ends all. Now this may be or it may not be. The free-thought people may know just as much and just as little about it as the greatest religious bigot that ever lived. While the old orthodox doctrine of damnation and everlasting torment may be termed a doctrine of gloom, on the other hand, the Free Thought doctrine may fitly be described as a doctrine of Despair.

It is all right to fight against tyranny, and on behalf of free thought, but why take from the people their faith in a hereafter? Do you think you are doing good to your fellow-man when you take from that old gray-haired woman her sweet belief that she will, in the hereafter, meet her beloved boy, who laid down his life for the country, and died before his time? Don't you think it is rather cruel to rob her of this harmless faith —which may, you know, be true, for, as stated, you know just as little about it as any one else—and give her nothing in its place?

All human beings, in every age, have had some kind of a belief in a life beyond the grave. To many it must seem that life here would be almost unendurable but for the hope of better things to come. The main work of the Free Thinkers appears to be devoted to the taking away of this hope.

There are some things that are even worse than superstition.

Food Preservatives.

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF PURITY IN FOOD PRODUCTS recently held a convention in New York. The aim of the association is the protection of the public by the abolition of chemical preservatives in foods. A platform wa adopted declaring that chemicals are absolutely unnecessary in the preparation of any food products, that the only excuse for their use is to adulterate foods and conceal inferiority in raw products and inadequacy of the process of manufacture; that chemically-preserved foods are injurious to health and that the legitimate element of the trade does not care to bear the stigma of putting out chemically-treated foods, even though some of those men intrusted with the inforcement of the law should be able to interpret the law as to allow the use of chemicals.

This is true. Remember, also, that the use of sulphur on dried fruits must necessarily come within the range of this platform.

happened to be in one of his close roll humors. There happened to be another New York salesman in the house who had gone all to pieces from having embarked upon a large San Francisco toot.

This salesman's Chicago firm had been frantically wiring him several times a day for a week to give some account of himself, but the salesman was too busy with his toot to pay any attention. Finally, sobering up, he was confronted with the necessity of settling a petty hefty at the Baldwin.

He couldn't settle anything. He didn't have anything to settle with, and he knew, too, that he had lost his job. He was down and out and needed most of all to lope back to Chicago to attempt to square himself.

This salesman had been almost on crony terms with Baldwin. He's been a guest at Lucky's banquets during the old man's high-spending periods, had taken in the races with him, gambled and caroused with him. Often Baldwin had accommodated him with all the money he asked for and he'd always promptly pay the old man back.

So in his trouble he went to the old man and asked that he be allowed to settle his bill later, and in addition put over a touch for $150 to enable him to get back home.

TURNED HIS BACK.

Lucky, with his wad deep sunk, gave the salesman an immediate view of his back. He never so much as replied to the man. He was in the parsimonious mood. A bunch of traveling men, hearing of the salesman's plight, got together and shipped him home.

Exaggerated stories often are written of the big money wagers of famous gamblers, but nobody ever had much of a chance to overstate the size of Lucky Baldwin's plunges when the old man had his plunging clothes on.

Nearly thirty years ago he won a $200,000 parcel of Kearney-street real estate on the turn of a card. It was the building in which Fred McGregor, a noted Slope gambler in his day, then was running the leading sky limit faro bank of San Francisco.

Baldwin had got virtually all of the chips in McGregor's rack one night and McGregor went nervous, or reckless, or something. Perhaps the persistency with which Lucky had been playing the ace to win for five or six hours and beating it nearly all the time had something to do with McGregor's state of mind. Baldwin was between $60,000 and $70,000 winner and about ready to cash when McGregor said to him:

"Lucky, you're a kiftynitch bank whanger all right, but it isn't figures that you can do it all the time. That winning ace thing of yours has got me on the raw, and I'm admitting it. I'll stand a tap that the ace doesn't win again."

"What's the tap?" inquired Lucky carelessly.

"My building here," replied McGregor. "Set a figure on it and I'll deal a fresh box for you myself. If the ace wins first out it's your building. If the ace loses I'm in the price that you appraise my building at."

"Reckon this building and ground ought to be worth a couple hundred thousand?" said Baldwin.

"Let it go at that," said McGregor.

"You're on," said Baldwin. "Rattle 'em."

McGregor took the dealers' chair shuffled the box pack and began to ease the cards out. Baldwin leaned back in his chair with his hands in his trousers pocket, the frazzled butt of a cigar in a corner of his mouth.

THE ACE.

No ace showed up until more than half the deck had been slipped out. Then the ace of diamonds came out on the winning side.

"Building's yours," said McGregor, his hand shaking a bit at that.

Baldwin got up and yawned and stretched his arms.

"Here, cash these chips and keep your piece of property, Fred," said Baldwin to McGregor. "I don't want it. Don't need it. Don't want to trim you that way. Forget that turn."

McGregor wouldn't have it that way. In the first place he wasn't built that way, and in the second, even had he been built that way he couldn't afford on the Slope in those days to permit himself to be pointed out as having done the baby act. He transferred the building to Baldwin on the next day, against Lucky's protest. Then McGregor, cleaned, went to the City of Mexico, where he obtained a gambling concession that made him a millionaire before he died.

There are men now in New York who remember how one afternoon at the Ingleside track about sixteen years ago Lucky Baldwin made so high flying a gambler as the late Charlie Fair—killed in France in an automobile accident some years ago—draw in his horns.

Baldwin and Fair both had horses entered in a stake race to be run off at Ingleside that afternoon. There was a sort of chaffing rivalry as to their horses between Baldwin and Fair. Lucky liked the young man, who at that time was the main high roller of the sons of Senator Fair, which is saying a good deal.

Neither Baldwin nor Fair expected his horse to win in the stake race because there was a horse entered for the event that seemed to outclass the field, but Baldwin was dead sure that his horse would beat young Fair's horse, while the latter was equally confident that his nag would beat Baldwin's.

CHARLIE FAIR.

Baldwin was mooching around on the lawn half an hour before the race, when Charlie Fair, grinning, walked over to him.

"I'm not going to win, I think, but I sure am going to show that skate of yours up," said Fair to Lucky.

Baldwin grinned in his saturnine way and bit into an unlighted cigar.

"Not a chance, young fellow," he said, to Fair. "I'll tell you what I'll do, Charlie, I'll bet you $500,000 my horse beats yours."

A lot of high notch betting folks were standing around. Young Fair's jaw dropped and his smile faded.

"Bet you half a million, son, that my nag beats yours," repeated Baldwin, munching his smoke.

"Oh, behave that, pop," said young Fair, and he walked away. Baldwin had topped even his limit.

Charlie Fair must have been—the sorest man from Juneau to Calico a few minutes after that. He had swallowed a bolus in front of folks. He had quit for the first time in anybody's knowledge. He had permitted the old man to chase him to the chaparral.

Young Fair's horse not only beat Baldwin's, but won the race by ten lengths, pulled to a trudge.

BOTH SIDES SEEK WOMEN.

Testimony Wanted of Sisters Who Were in Auto That Ran Down and Killed Man.

Charles Holmes, a brother of two important witnesses in the trial of J. B. Dudley, charged with involuntary manslaughter, was the chief witness yesterday at the preliminary examination in Justice Chambers's court.

Holmes is a barber at the Hotel Green and was brought to Los Angeles to tell the court the whereabouts of his sisters, Bertha J. and Jessamund, but he denied having knowledge of them.

Deputy District Attorney Keetch, who is conducting the prosecution, states that he wants the young women as witnesses. Attorneys Davis and Morrow, representing the defense, are also doing everything in their power to locate these young women, who were in the Dudley automobile on the night that Woodman J. Thomas was run down and killed at Fifth street and Broadway.

Holmes, on the witness stand, stated that he had been called to Long Beach by his sisters, two days after the accident. They seemed very much worried at that time and were afraid they would be arrested in connection with the case. They told him they were going away but refused to name their destination.

The witness was instructed to learn his sisters' whereabouts, if possible, and notify the court at the next hearing of the case, which will be on March 29. The attorneys said that they know of no charges on which the women can be arrested and told Holmes that they were simply wanted as witnesses.

Miss Jennie E. Smith, a telephone operator, was an important witness for the prosecution yesterday. She said that she was at work on a switchboard in the Examiner office at the time of the tragedy; that she heard a scream and the thud of a falling body. She raised the window and looked out. The automobile was just passing the office. She said it was going very fast and that the speed was maintained until it reached Seventh street.

BRUTAL HIGHWAYMEN.

Knock Man Down, Take His Purse and Then Repeatedly Kick Him Before Hurrying Away.

J. G. Brown of No. 828 East Fifth street was robbed and brutally beaten by two highwaymen at Twentieth street and Long Beach avenue early yesterday morning.

The two men suddenly jumped from cover and one held a revolver at Brown's head. As he was slow in putting up his hands, the man with the gun struck him and knocked him down.

The victim's purse, containing $193, and his gold watch were taken and then the footpads repeatedly kicked him before hurrying away.

Talks On Teeth

BY

The Rex Dental Company

(Incorporated)

Alveolar Teeth, and Enunciation

The partial plate, which people used to wear before the Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth was discovered, interfered greatly with enunciation. The very fact of a foreign substance being introduced into the roof of the mouth made it necessary for people to learn to talk all over again. A great many never succeeded.

There is an unmistakable impediment in the speech of any one whose mouth is encumbered with a partial plate. The partial plate also makes it unpleasant when one is dining. It takes away in large measure the sense of taste, as it covers up the palate. The Alveolar Method emancipates people from the many disagreeable features of the partial plate, but, best of all, it enables one to use the Alveolar teeth with the same degree of satisfaction that they would use Nature's teeth.

No one will pretend to say that teeth fastened to a partial plate are any more than a makeshift. They simply fill up the gap in the mouth where the teeth have been lost. The Alveolar teeth fill up the gap, and they also allow one to chew with them with entire satisfaction.

We have numerous testimonials from public speakers, singers and those to whom good teeth are absolutely essential, for looks, for clean-cut enunciation, as well as for the other uses to which teeth are put.

If you are a rank skeptic we are going to ask you if you won't be fair enough to give us a chance to prove that the Alveolar teeth are all that we claim for them. If you are wearing a partial plate or a bridge, so-called, that is gradually destroying the teeth to which it is anchored, we want you to come and allow us to make an examination of your mouth and tell you what we can do for you. We won't charge anything for the service, and you will be under no obligations to have any dealing with us whatever, unless entirely satisfied that we can make good on our claims for the Alveolar Method.

We are prepared to submit the strongest kind of proof in the shape of letters from patients, and in addition, will refer you to people in the same cities in which our offices are, who will gladly tell you all you will want to know about their Alveolar teeth. In the face of such indisputable evidence, you can no longer be a skeptic.

We have published a book entitled, "Alveolar Dentistry," an illustrated treatise on the teeth, which we will gladly send you if you do not live close enough to come to one of our offices at this time. This book is one of the most valuable ever written on the subject of teeth. All the technicalities are left out and the subject is treated in clear, forceful language, easily understood. Send for that book today, and read it carefully.

The Alveolar Method is a painless piece of work from start to finish, and is not expensive.

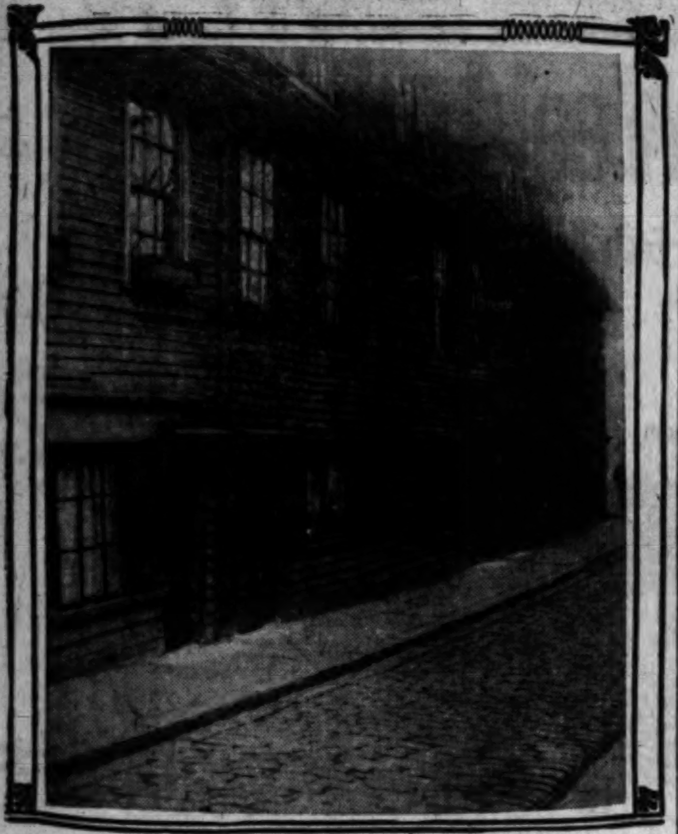
DOWN GO LONDON'S LAST FRAME HOUSES.



London's Only Wooden Buildings.

This row of old "frame" structures was built during the American War of Independence. The famous engineer, Brunel—who built the "Great Eastern"—once lived here. They are soon to be torn down.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 7.—Across Blackfriars bridge, scarcely five minutes' walk from St. Paul's Cathedral, is a row of very ancient "frame buildings;" the only one of its kind now remaining within the boundaries of the metropolitan district. These old wooden structures are soon to come down, to make room for modern offices.

From the purely architectural and, perhaps even artistic point of view, these particular wooden buildings are nothing to boast of. Any "new" American western town can show similar structures. They are "clinker built," two-story affairs, unpretentious as to outward appearance.

But it is their history that counts. And, in this respect they have America at an advantage, or, in the vernacular, "beat to a standstill." These buildings have always possessed more or less interest to American visitors, as they were erected during the first year of the American War of Independence. As specimens of early London building work they possess an interest in themselves. After the great London fire of 1666, a large number of wooden buildings were erected in various parts of London, and, though these particular ones did not come into existence until a hundred years afterward, they were regarded in their day as among the most imposing edifices of their kind.

Historically, the buildings possess interest as having been the temporary abiding place of the famous engineer, Isambard Kingdom Brunel, who built the first tunnel under the Thames, and also planned the famous Clifton suspension bridge, which won his fame in the engineering world. Brunel was also at that time the designer of the Great Eastern, the largest ship ever built, and of the first propeller ship to cross the Atlantic. It is said that he lived in these houses during the years of his greatest engineering activity.

The district in which these houses stand is not now considered a "select" one, but, in the early days, several prominent London city merchants resided there; and in this neighborhood also lived numerous famous actors and actresses. Garrick, Mrs. Siddons and Sheridan at one time lived on the south side of the river, and even in earlier days, Shakespeare's theater, the Globe—of which the poet held the majority of the shares—stood in the neighborhood of Blackfriars bridge.

The whole district of Blackfriars derives its name from a monastic institution which stood near to the site of these old wooden buildings. Shakespeare's brother, Edmund, is buried in a little churchyard not far away. Americans will be interested to learn that not five minutes' walk from these old buildings is the identical wharf described by Charles Dickens as being the place where "Quilp" used to pinch his wife. Dickens himself, as a boy, worked in a blacking factory quite near the entrance to Blackfriars bridge. This neighborhood was once famous for having a "bear garden," where a live bear was kept for the delectation of the multitude, who were allowed to bring dogs with which to "bait" and worry bruin.

FORECAST OF THE COMING BOOK POINTS TO GERMAN ROMANCE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 21.—During the last year or two a favorite line with English readers has been French biography; and now it is reported that the next "craze" in this line is to be German personal character sketches. One or two prominent English scholars are already engaged in "doing into English" some of the lighter phases of this class of German literature, and the name of Augusta von Koenigsmarck is likely to figure somewhat prominently during the coming book "season."

The romantic movement in Germany has a good chance of exploitation in the near future. A London critic in suggesting this subject to publishers, remarks: "A number of the heroes and heroines in the German romantic period conducted themselves in such a way as to make their lives extremely entertaining." So, we shall probably see a lot of books dealing with "newly discovered personalities whose names will be more or less unpronounceable; but whose lives will doubtless prove fascinating. Germany is sprinkled all over with romantic castles, and the tales connected with a number of these out-of-the-way places will make thrilling reading.

Some interesting figures have been recently published concerning the production of books in England during the year just closed. The main feature of the last "book season" has been the numerous cheap reprints on the market. There has been a steady decline in the bringing out of original works of fiction, history, memoirs, religion and education. Strangely enough the only subjects which have shown an increase of original work are voyages, and poetry. As to the last named, though every one will tell you that poetry is absolutely "deceased," still a certain amount of original work has been published. Would-be poets should not, however, take this as a "tip" to begin producing; as, while a few books of poetry have been published, no publisher has admitted to having made anything from them.

During the year just past, while 1819 new books of fiction have been brought out, there have also been 963 "reprints," which is a considerable increase in reprints over the previous year. In speaking to a firm of booksellers who have their fingers on the "pulse of the trade," I inquired what was the cause of the decline in original work.

"Well, there are several answers to that question," was the reply. "I think the present day newspapers have a lot to do with the book trade. The newspapers are growing in bulk; many of them are in for serials, short stories, and a few even publish complete short novels. With sensational fiction getting into the newspapers and weekly magazines, the book—especially the $1.50 variety—must suffer.

"Another very fruitful cause of the decline in the book trade," continued my informant, "is the heavy demand made by authors for 'cash down.' Authors of these days do not seem willing to take any risks with their publishers. They get such a big sum down, that the publisher is often hampered in the production, and especially in the advertising of a book. In addition to this, the new reprints of 14-cent books are knocking holes into the higher priced productions."

Charlotte Brontë and her two sisters have recently figured in an interesting reminiscence by the Rev. J. C. Bradley, who lives in Yorkshire. This old minister—now in his ninetieth year—was the actual "Rev. David Sweeting," the celebrated curate in "Shirley." He knew all the Brontës quite well, and frequently spent Sunday afternoon at their home in the parish of Haworth. "Charlotte often used to make tea for us," he says in describing these visits, "though now and then Emily and Anne undertook the task when Charlotte happened to be away from home, after she had gone out as a governess. Charlotte had a particular way of suddenly lifting her eyes and looking straight at you with a quick, searching glance while you spoke to her."

He gives a hitherto unpublished explanation of how "Jane Eyre" was first suggested. "There was on the very border of her father's parish a big house inhabited by a family named Greenwood. I had called and seen its master several times, and always thought there was no mistress of the house, since he never spoke of one, and I never saw one. Then, on a certain day, I was simply astounded to hear something there which raised my curiosity. I made private inquiries and eventually discovered that the gentleman had a wife who was insane, and whom he kept quite secluded in a back room at the top of the house. Now you see the curious resemblance in this part of the main incidents in 'Jane Eyre' which is admittedly somewhat autobiographical of Charlotte. It was through this house and its mystery that the plot of 'Jane Eyre' was first formed in her mind."

Judging from the Rev. Bradley's descriptions, the Brontë home was anything but a happy one. The father was given to the worst kind of "tantrums," and used to fire off a pistol in the house when angry. He never shot at any of the family, but used to amuse himself—or work off his anger—by shooting at objects of bric-a-brac or pictures. When he missed them, he became still more incensed. Once, according to Mr. Bradley, he picked up the hearth rug and threw it in the fire. The brother of the Brontë girls was addicted to drink and Charlotte Brontë considered herself lucky when she got an engagement as a governess, and was able to leave her home. Emily Brontë, author of "Wuthering Heights," though less known than her sister Charlotte, has recently come into her own. Her book figures largely among recent reprints, and its genius is recognized. The Flemish philosopher, Maeterlinck, by the way gives this novel of Emily Brontë's unstinted praise in his remarkable book, "Wisdom and Destiny."

There was recently disposed of at one of Sotheby's famous "literary" auction sales the pen of Charles Dickens. It brought about $100, and is said to have been one used by the famous author in the writing of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," his last book left uncompleted. Dickens's pen is a quill, such as you see today in British government offices, and occasionally at the British Museum. This particular pen was taken from the novelist's desk at Gad's Hill by his eldest son, and for many years the family cherished it as a relic. It has, however, passed into strangers' hands at last. Considerable surprise is expressed that it was not purchased by the Dickens Society. The Dickens cult, it might be mentioned in passing, has recently spread to Paris.

HOW I TOOK MY WRINKLES OUT.

After Facial Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.

BY HARRIET META.

Trouble, worry and ill-health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman, with deep lines and furrows in her face, must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cold cream and skin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity, hoping to gain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary, they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment I found I still had my wrinkles. So I gave up in despair and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on the subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials and discouragements I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night. I was delighted beyond expression. I tried my treatment again, and, lo and behold! my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment—three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to offer it to the public. Miss Gladys Desmond of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night.

Mrs. M. W. Graves of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left; my friends say I look 20 years younger. I consider your treatment a godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barss of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more a work of magic."

I will send further particulars to anyone who is interested absolutely free of charge. I use no cream, facial massage, face steaming or so-called skin foods; there is nothing to inject and nothing to injure the skin. It is an entirely new discovery of my own and so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed. In the morning, lo! the wonderful transformation. People often write me: "It sounds too good to be true." Well, the test will tell. If interested in my discovery please address Harriet Meta, Suite 526C, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send you full particulars.

Check Your Fat

Hold it where it is, or take off some. You can do either without disturbing your meals or your ease or your digestive organs. You can do it without physical risk, mental effort or danger of a wrinkle. "Sounds well, but these are words only," you say. True, but there is a nation full of indorsers of these words, so your protest, while natural, is feeble. Prove it. Write to the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., inclosing 75 cents, or, better still, take that amount over to your druggist and get one of the extra large cases of Marmola Prescription Tablets. You will find it generously filled. Take one after meals and at bedtime, and within thirty days you should be losing a pound of fat a day, without disturbance, as we said, of either your meals, habits or organs. Fact is, these statements are not to be denied, for the tablets are an exact duplicate of the famous fat-reducing Marmola Prescription: One-half ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water, which any druggist will tell you is the world's Fair medal winner in its class.

Have Your Clothes Dyed by "The Berlin"

The Responsible Dye House of Los Angeles

It costs no more money to have your clothes dyed and cleaned by the Berlin—where you know the work will be done expertly and satisfactorily—than to take chances with some house about which you know absolutely nothing.

The Berlin is the oldest and largest institution of its kind in Los Angeles—it owns its own property—it is a permanent Los Angeles industry.

It stands to reason that a house like this is better equipped—better qualified and more anxious to serve you well than the many smaller concerns—that have no standing investments—no past records and no definite future ahead.

We guarantee perfect satisfaction in every job that comes to us—however small or large it may be—or however delicate the material.

Mr. Marchetti was one of the founders of a branch organization of the society in Los Angeles. Upon his return to Italy, he was mentioned for the highest honor of the great educational organization and was voted the "Diploma di Benemerenza." The sheepskin, signed by Minister P. Boselli the president of the society, arrived yesterday.

WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Mills Alumnae.

Mrs. Edward Bosbyshell was the charming hostess for the Alumnae Club of Mills College during the week. The pretty home at West Adams and Orchard streets was attractively decorated with gold and white flowers to carry out the club colors. An enjoyable feature of the meeting was an original monologue given by Mrs. Geo. V. Wright, entitled "Mrs. Ephemera and the Modern Drama," which was a clever satire upon the superficial woman and contemporary playwrights. Mrs. Wright read passages from several of the plays, interpolating these with witty comments, while keeping up the thread of her story all through. Mrs. Bosbyshell's guests included about forty members of the club.

Galpin Shakespeare.

Members of the Galpin Shakspeare Club were delightfully entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald, No. 2115 West Adams street. The hostess wore a beautiful Japanese costume and gave a delightful description of her recent visit to the Orient with the Chamber of Commerce delegation. She exhibited beautiful gifts which were showered upon the visitors by the Japanese during their stay. Hospitality and generosity are among the chief characteristics of the Japanese, says Mrs. Fitzgerald. The Japanese national hymn was played on the piano by Miss Marion Wilson, as well as a number of other pleasing selections, while refreshments were daintily served in the dining room. Miss Evelyn Withrow, the well-known artist of San Francisco, who is the art commissioner for California to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, was the special guest. Miss Withrow will remain in Los Angeles a short time in the interest of the exhibit.

Address by Prohibitionist.

Hon. Eugene W. Clafin of Chicago will deliver an interesting address on "Civil Government," next Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock in the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A. The address will be made before members of the Woman's Equality League, Woman's Prohibition Party Club, the Mothers' Congress and the W.C.T.U.

At Tropico.

The Thursday Afternoon Club of Tropico held an all-day meeting at the home of Mrs. Jesse Stine, Thursday, Mrs. Wesley Bullis entertaining with Mrs. Stine. The morning hours were spent in the patio; the members cutting all the pretty pictures from the magazines discarded by the Tropico library. These pictures will be pasted into paper cambric books for the use of invalid children in Los Angeles. In the afternoon the regular meeting of the club took place, during which Miss Harriet Myers read an interesting paper upon the growth of the library. It being library donation day, many books were given by the club members.

Delta Gamma Reunion.

At a beautifully appointed luncheon served in the blue room of the Y.W.C.A. building, members of the Delta Gamma Sorority in and around Los Angeles met yesterday afternoon. Covers were laid for thirty, and a fragrant corsage bouquet of sweet peas marked each guest's plate. The entire color scheme of the decorations was charmingly arranged with pink, bronze and blue, the sorority colors. This beautiful combination was carried out even in the bon bons and ices.

The universities represented were Berkeley, Stanford, U.S.C., Madison, Northwestern, Ann Arbor and others. Wit and good cheer characterized this delightful affair, which will be the last meeting to be held before the grand president, Miss Rose Smith, leaves for the Delta Gamma convention, which will be held at Ann Arbor in April.

Monrovia Saturday Afternoon.

A very delightful musical was enjoyed yesterday by the members of the Monrovia Saturday Afternoon Club, Miss Helen Goff, dramatic soprano, Miss Lucy Fuhrer, 'cellist, and the celebrated young Leo Domke, pianist, furnishing the entertainment. Miss Goff's interpretation of Grieg's "The Water Lily" and her brilliant rendition of "Sweetheart, Thy Lips are Touched with Flame," by Chadwick, scored another triumph for this beautiful young prima donna. The entire programme was: "Longing" (Stevenson,) Miss Fuhrer; "The Water Lily" (Grieg,) "Still as the Night" (Bohm,) Miss Goff; "Rondo Capricciosa" (G. Mendelssohn,) Leo Domke; "Serenade Bodine" (Gabriel Marie,) Miss Fuhrer; "Sweetheart, Thy Lips Are Touched with Flame" (Chadwick,) "Retreat" (La Forge,) Miss Goff; "Andante Concerto" (Goltermenn,) Miss Fuhrer; "Salut a Pesth" (H. Kowalski,) Leo Domke; "Ave Maria" (Gounod,) Miss Goff.

WINS SUIT AND COMING HERE.

Woman Convicted of Slaying Husband, But Pardoned by Nebraska Governor, Likes Los Angeles.

Mrs. Lena Margaret Lillie, who yesterday, at Lincoln, Neb., won her suit against the Modern Woodmen for the amount of the policy held by her late husband, with interest, is coming to Los Angeles to live. Her daughter and parents are here.

Mrs. Lillie, after a sensational trial, was convicted of murdering her husband. Gov. Mickey of Nebraska, who thought her innocent, pardoned her, and then she brought the action against the fraternal organization. It was practically a retrial of the murder case. The jury awarded her $4283.75.

EAGLES' MEMORIAL SERVICE.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles will hold their annual memorial service at their hall on East Third street, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The speaker of the afternoon will be former Senator W. W. Dodge, Past Worthy President of Los Angeles Aërie, the roster of which shows a list of sixty-four names of departed brothers. Rev. George E. Foster will conduct the devotional service, and there will be both vocal and instrumental music. The committee in charge is composed of Charles E. Rice, A. J. Ashen, George Hutton and John Bouett.

GUESTS AT A LUNCHEON.

Mrs. Alfred Harold Sellers of Pasadena, Mrs. Frank G. Logan of Chicago, Mrs. William Harney and Mrs. Charles G. Rohrer of Redlands were guests of Mrs. William Rohrer of Chicago at a luncheon yesterday at the Alexandria Hotel.

"OUR BEAUTIFUL CITY."

Dr. Charles Edward Locke, pastor of the First Methodist Church, addressed the City Club at its noon luncheon yesterday, on "Our Beautiful City: its President Crisis and Opportunity." Dr. Locke sounded the proper note when he urged upon those present the necessity of pulling together and spending their time in letting people know that this is the best city in the world in which to live. He expressed himself as pleased with the recall idea, and said he hoped the courts would not feel compelled to intervene and prevent the election of "Uncle George" Alexander. "I'd like to see the devil of licensed drink sent out of this city," said Dr. Locke.

JOLT FOR OFFICIALS.

Territorial Officers Must Stay at Home Hereafter, Orders Secretary of Interior.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Territorial officials in Alaska, Arizona, New Mexico, Hawaii and Porto Rico will get a shock in a few days, when they receive an official order from Secretary of the Interior Ballinger informing them that in the future they must remain in their Territories except in cases of emergency.

Secretary Ballinger called at the White House today and his contemplated order received the approval of President Taft. The order is intended to put an end to Governors and other Territorial officials coming to Washington during sessions of Congress and spending many months here lobbying for their measures or for Statehood.

SWINDLERS INDICTED.

Iowa Grand Jury Returns Ten Indictments Against J. C. Mabray "and Others."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) March 20.—The grand jury of the District Court of this county today returned ten indictments in the wholesale swindling cases. The announcement was made that each of the indictments is against J. C. Mabray and others, but the names of nine of the others were not made public, it being intimated that some of them are not yet under arrest. Conspiracy and larceny is charged in each indictment.

Among the complaining witnesses in the ten cases was Joseph P. Walker of Denver.

EDITOR HARVEY DEMURS.

Man Who Wrote Letters to Prominent Men Says He Is Victim of Plot.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

STAMFORD (Ct.) March 20.—John C. Harvey, the western editor, charged with sending an objectionable letter to Mr. Carpenter, secretary to President Taft, filed a demurrer today to the complaint, asking for a trial by jury. The demurrer was overruled, and Harvey was held in $2500 bail for the Superior Court. Harvey claims he is the victim of a conspiracy, but admits that he has been writing numerous letters to prominent men. Harvey came here from Preston, Idaho.

A TRAIN LOAD OF TOBACCO.

Twenty-four Carloads Purchased for Lewis' Single Binder Cigar Factory.

What is probably the biggest lot of all fancy grade tobacco held by any factory in the United States has just been purchased by Frank P. Lewis, of Peoria, for the manufacture of Lewis' Single Binder Cigars. The lot will make twenty-four carloads, and is selected from what is considered by experts to be the finest crop raised in many years. The purchase of tobacco is sufficient to last the factory more than two years. An extra price was paid for the selection. Smokers of Lewis' Single Binder Cigars will appreciate this tobacco.

STATE HIGHWAY.

believe, if the sentiment is only strong enough.

"We have Gov. Gillett on our side, and it seems easy to get everybody to thing right when the State officials are favorable to the proposition. It must be the automobile men, however, who take the first steps. I believe that we in Los Angeles can do much to make this idea popular."

While in San Francisco for three weeks, Anthony passed much of his time with the prominent autoists there, and found every one of them favorable to the San Francisco-Los Angeles boulevard plan. They are anxious to secure a better road between the two greatest cities of the State.

At present the highway from this city to San Francisco is rough, because of the rains in the vicinity of Santa Maria, Arroyo Grande and Santa Barbara. A portion of the great highway has been repaired, and is in splendid condition. From San Francisco to San José the going is good. From San José to Gilroy the road is splendid. Over the Jolon grade it is sadly in need of repairs. In the vicinity of Salinas a splendid macadam highway permits of fast driving. This is the finest piece of road on the entire run.

From Jolon to Paso Robles there are several bad places, but from Paso Robles to San Luis Obispo the going is over roads that are in the best of shape. Rough roads are again encountered from San Luis through Arroyo Grande to Santa Maria.

From Santa Maria to Santa Barbara the roads are wretched. Over the Gaviota grade cars must be driven slowly. In Santa Barbara county the roads are so bad that several drivers have broken the springs of their cars while en route.

From Santa Barbara over the Casitas and Canejo grades the roads have been washed out in places, and have been repaired, and are now better than they formerly were. The roads near Los Angeles are not good.

CHINO RANCH

Thirty-two Miles From Los Angeles, Adjoining Pomona and Ontario

Colonists, homeseekers, farmers, fruit raisers, have paid the highest compliment to the Chino Ranch—they have bought land and pitched their tents here, under sunny skies.

A great many localities are being exploited in the West. In some instances extravagant claims are made in favor of certain sections; but we find PLAIN TRUTHS sufficiently strong to induce settlers to decide in favor of the Chino Ranch. Since Jan. 1—less than three months—there have been approximately 3000 acres of land sold on the ranch—from ten-acre to thousand-acre tracts. Many have bought for homes; others as an investment. Below we enumerate some of the more important sales:

Recent Sales of Chino Ranch Lands

Southern California Colonization Company (Free Methodist Colony), 400 acres, about three miles east of Chino. This purchase was made with a view of establishing a colony on the ranch. A number of families have already been located.

George Junior Republic, 213 acres, one and one-half miles southwest of Chino. This purchase was made with a view of establishing a colony, school and agricultural station. Development work is already under way.

Patrick Farrell of Cincinnati, Ohio, 187 acres. Mr. Farrell, who is a railroad and general contractor, will impove and plant his land to fruits, walnuts and alfalfa.

Chas. E. Shaff, vice-president of the Big Four Railway Lines—headquarters in Chicago—bought 171 acres, four and one-half miles southeast of Chino, in the artesian belt. This land will be improved, and planted to alfalfa. Mr. Shaff's purchase was made purely as an investment.

Fred S. Kimball, a prominent livestock dealer, of Westminster, Vt., 160 acres, two and one-half miles south of Ontario. Mr. Kimball and his sons will improve the land and make their permanent homes on the ranch.

Nathan W. Miller of Pomona, 100 acres, located one and one-half miles southwest of Chino. Mr. Miller will improve his land and plant it to alfalfa and sugar beets.

C. L. Ames of Pasadena last week bought 1000 acres on the Chino Ranch. This land is located in the hill section of the ranch, and will be devoted to horse and cattle raising.

James R. Elliott, a farmer of Covina, recently bought 120 acres, three miles southeast of Chino, in the artesian belt. Mr. Elliott is superintendent of the irrigation works at Covina, Cal.

While all of the purchases noted above are for 100 acres or more, a great many sales of ten-acre to forty-acre tracts have been made to actual settlers.

Personal Talks by the Men Who Have the Handling of Lands on the Chino Ranch

I first saw the Chino Ranch about twenty years ago. For the past two years I have been connected with the Company as salesman. I believe I know California as well as any man in the West, and I will say, without any hesitation whatever, that I consider the lands on the Chino Ranch the best in the State for alfalfa raising.

I have been selling farming lands all my life, and in all of my experience I never handled a better proposition for the small farmer, or the investor, than the Chino Ranch.

I recently met a number of people from Panama, Canal Zone, to several of whom I sold land. A number of their acquaintances have since bought on the ranch, without seeing the property, at the recommendation of these first purchasers. This is what I call "doing business at long range."

(Signed) W. E. McMARTIN.

Before coming to California I lived in Nebraska, and later in Texas, where I handled large bodies of farm lands.

Having seen considerable of the country, I feel that I am about as fully posted on values in the different states as any man of my acquaintance.

I have been in California now for about four years—during the past two years handling Chino lands.

I believe, in my twenty years' experience, I have sold as many acres of land to as many different people as any other man in the West.

I am always glad to sell a man land on the Chino Ranch, because I feel that I am doing him a good turn.

(Signed) HENRY MALMGREN.

Chino Ranch is located in one of the most beautiful valleys in Southern California. Almost everyone who has visited the ranch will bear me out in this statement—but its beautiful location is not all—the best land in Southern California is to be found here.

I have been living in this State for thirty-eight years, and I make the above statement advisedly. I have been connected with the Chino Land and Water Company for the past two years, during which time I have sold a great many tracts, and I believe I can say, without exception, that every man to whom I have sold land is well satisfied with his purchase.

They give me the "glad hand" every time I visit the ranch, which is a considerable source of pleasure to me. My specialty is small tracts for home places, and Chino Ranch is certainly a world-beater for this class of property.

(Signed) FRED HARDY.

Experiences of Some of the Farmers Who Have Built Homes on the Chino Ranch

E. L. Page, who is a typical representative of diversified farming on the Chino Ranch, raises nearly everything that will grow out of the ground. His latest success is with crimson winter rhubarb. Mr. Page reports that he sold 500 boxes at 90 cents a box from five acres, between the first of December and the first of March. This land was planted to rhubarb in May, 1908.

W. E. Stanton is another of Chino's successful farmers, owning thirty-four acres. Mr. Stanton has planted a large portion of his land to English walnuts—which will soon be in full bearing.

Hollingsworth & Hargrave are among the leading alfalfa farmers and dairymen on the Chino Ranch. Last year these gentlemen sold 220 tons of alfalfa, which was cut from twenty acres—an average of eleven tons to the acre. Their land was bought about two years ago at $125 an acre; they consider it worth today at least $400 an acre.

R. J. Seaman is an authority on deciduous fruits—having about twenty-five acres on the Chino Ranch in peaches, and ten acres in apricots. His crops are marketed at the cannery in Ontario—a distance of one and one-half miles—and net him annually in the neighborhood of $3000. Peaches, he says, should pay at least $100 an acre, over and above cost of handling.

George Shafer, who looks after the ten-acre orange grove belonging to G. M. Turner, stated that the grove showed a net profit last year of more than 20 per cent. on a $10,000 valuation—the crop aggregating between 3000 and 4000 boxes. Mr. Shafer, who is a practical orange grower, says that the Chino Ranch requires less water than most sections of Southern California.

E. S. Nelson is the apple man on the Chino Ranch. Mr. Nelson owns ten acres, seven of which are in full bearing apple trees, from which he sold last year thirty tons of apples for $2100—an average of $300 per acre. In addition to this, a quantity of the fruit was utilized for cider and vinegar. Mr. Nelson also raises English walnuts, and reports a yield of $200 an acre from last year's crop.

W. T. Reynolds, who is an alfalfa farmer on the Chino Ranch, gives much of his time to raising berries, small fruits and potatoes. Mr. Reynolds' crop of sweet potatoes last year averaged about 200 sacks (of eighty pounds) to the acre. These potatoes brought better than two cents a pound, averaging about $350 an acre. Mr. Reynolds says that the cost of planting and cultivating sweet potatoes is only about $50 an acre, leaving him a net profit of $300 an acre.

Prices of Chino Ranch Land--Terms of Sale

Lands on the Chino Ranch sell at from $100 to $225 an acre. The lower-priced lands lie in the artesian belt, where wells are developed by boring a depth of from 200 to 300 feet. These lands measure up to the standard of those under irrigation that bring $200 and $225 an acre. Much of this land is especially adapted for suburban residences—many handsome homes having already been built. Terms, one-fourth cash, balance in one, two, three and four years at 6 per cent. interest on deferred payments.

The company maintains a permanent exhibit of Chino Ranch products at its office in Los Angeles. You are invited to call at any time and inspect this splendid exhibit, and to procure maps and illustrated literature, which presents many typical ranch scenes.

Personally conducted excursions to the Ranch leave the Company's office daily. Come in and arrange to take this trip with us. You'll find it both interesting and instructive.

RICH REFUSE.

WINS WEALTH FROM RUBBISH.

City Dump Proves Real Gold Mine to Owner.

Place Yields Queer Harvest and Fattens Hogs.

Old Clothes and Shoes Are Saved and Sold.

Handling the waste of Los Angeles is a business in which there is considerable profit. Very little of the so-called waste is really waste. Old newspapers, worn-out account books and damaged paper boxes make perpetual fires all over the Los Angeles city dump, but very little else that goes there in the big rubbish wagons one sees daily heading from central points in the city toward Central avenue and the extreme east side, actually goes to waste.

The city dump is a queer place. Except to the few score of men who earn a livelihood through the disposal of rubbish, and a handful of hog dealers, this queer place is scarcely known at all. It lies partly within the confines of Los Angeles and partly in Vernon, being distant a short walk from Santa Fé avenue, within a stone's throw of the Los Angeles River, and within gunshot range of Jeffries's fistic arena. All about, the air is resonant with the grunting and squealing of hogs. For it is a somewhat dubious fact that much of the pork we eat is the product, not of the soil, but of the swill of Los Angeles markets, restaurants and green goods shops. In the absence of any more adequate method for the disposal of garbage, this is deemed to be the most expeditious, as well as the most profitable. It at least appears to be entirely satisfactory to several thousand robust hogs.

The land upon which the city has its dump is the personal property of a prosperous, taciturn and pay-as-you-go Pennsylvania Dutchman, named De Turk. He is a Civil War veteran, whose gospel is that no man in this country need be poor, and that every man should pay his debts. De Turk knows the genus hog, from the cradle to the grave. He has served that useful animal in every capacity, from bottle nurse to undertaker, occasionally pausing to be an executioner.

SOME NEED THINNING.

It is not to be inferred, however, that there is a slaughter-house at the city dump. There is not. De Turk now sells his hogs in lots, as soon as marketable, to a dealer, who does the rest. It speaks well for the quality of the city's garbage and refuse that he often is obliged to corral a lot of hogs of market age for the purpose of thinning them down before they can be profitably sold. The Los Angeles taste is not for the fattest and jardiest hog meat.

De Turk's ranch, including the city dump, is scarcely fifteen acres in extent, and the wonder is that a place of its size and barrenness can produce so much. The owner has made himself what is called "comfortably well off" there, and now has valuable property on East Fifth street and at Boyle Heights, lives pretty well himself, has a wife, gives employment to a number of ranch hands, and has become a lender of money—all this without the soil having produced as much as a carrot or a head of lettuce. The soil, indeed, takes everything and gives nothing. Over large patches of it fires are always burning, and at times so fiercely that it becomes necessary to dig ditches around them and start backfires to preclude a menace to surrounding property.

MOST LIFE AT NIGHT.

On a dark night the place looks as if an isolated hamlet had been but just devastated by fire and the inhabitants had fled. As a matter of fact, it is at night that there is the most life on this queer city dump. Squire De Turk at dusk closes the big entrance gates to the wire-enclosed refuse ground and opens another gate, out of which emerge half a hundred hungry hogs. It is at night these rooters are busy. All day they have wallowed and fought and slept in a big pen, with no other food than water. Now it is only on certain areas at a time, on the main dump, that rubbish wagons loaded with paper are allowed to dump. All of the ground is not being burned over at once. In the reserved places there will have been dumped whole wagonloads of fish that have passed their freshness, chickens and other too-long-frozen stuffs from cold storage warehouses and lots of other supplies much cherished by hogs.

By morning all the big mounds will have been leveled and the half-hundred hogs are found to be full-bellied and sleepy. Then they are driven back into their own enclosure and the big gates of the dump are thrown open once more for another day's receipts of the city's rubbish.

One of De Turk's staff is assigned to the task of carefully pitchforking and more minutely picking over the entire dumpings of each day. An immense amount of miscellaneous material is thus rescued from the nightly tramplings, rootings and ravishes of the hogs. It is astonishing how much "available" clothing of all kinds, including men's, women's and children's shoes, find their way to the city dump—stuff that many poor people would not scorn. Indeed, the Salvation Army itself is one of the largest contributors in this line to the city dump. Whole loads of clothing that the Army has collected in its house-to-house canvass in behalf of the city's poor, material which has glutted its many stores to such an extent that it has interfered with second-hand sales, is sent directly by the army's own teams to the city dump. Here it is again "sorted over." The best of it finds its way back to "ole clothes men" for reselling in garment form, and the remainder is, in due course, reduced to marketable rags. Barrels upon barrels of passable shoes, women's shoes predominating, are fished out of this conglomeration of the city's unwasted waste, and once more made to be of use.

Then there are wagonloads of bottles, little, large, square-shouldered, round-shouldered, short and long, thin and fat; clippings of copper, cans galore, and a thousand and one other things that sooner or later bring a revenue to the De Turks.

MRS. DE TURK A PARTNER.

For Mrs. De Turk is a business partner in this queer enterprise. She has nothing to do with the hogs, but she is commander-in-chief of the Los Angeles city dump. Her office is at her cottage gate, directly in front of which every rubbish wagon must pass before it may enter the dump enclosure. Every one of them must pay toll. For regular customers there is a comparatively small charge per load for the privilege of dumping the city's refuse upon the De Turk property, but "transients" must pay as high as 50 cents the load. For "regulars" there is a simple ticket system and settlements are made weekly. No negro, Japanese, Mexican or "plain white" rubbish mover is allowed to extend his credit beyond that limit. The gross sum received is more than enough to keep a small family in comparative affluence, but a greater profit comes from the chickens and hogs.

There is a section of the dump, not mentioned before, to which all wagons loaded exclusively with hog food are directed. These bring tomato and chile pepper shells—tons upon tons of them—and decaying fruit and vegetables from the markets and a certain class of factories. Another half-hundred hogs, including sows, shoats and a few Poland China and Rhode Island Red boars, have access to this mess of provender, and they certainly thrive upon it.

CHEMICAL FEASTS FATAL.

Every day from three to seven pigs are found dead in the pens or on the dump. Hogs sometimes get their snouts mixed up with chemicals in the rubbish piles and this usually proves fatal. Little pigs often inadvertently eat fine glass that goes out to the garbage cans from the sweepings of restaurant floors. In these sweepings the hog-pen attendants frequently find nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars and one of them claims to have found a dollar—though this sort of thing is not reported to De Turk. It appears that about the only thing a hog has no use for is money. The daily record of hog mortality might cause other pork raisers some uneasiness, but the squire expects it. He figures that he can afford the loss, inasmuch as many men pay him for the privilege of providing provender for his pigs.

Besides the pigs, he has usually from 1000 to 1500 chickens roaming over the place. They are as thick over the swill barrels as flies about a hogshead of molasses. For the privilege of picking over the leavings of the hogs, they yield De Turk several cases of eggs weekly, which are taken to market every Saturday and scheduled as "fresh ranch candeled." And besides the hogs and chickens, this queer little, big-paying ranch boasts sheep, cows, horses, ducks, dogs, cats and a parrot.

But some day Los Angeles may burn all her garbage, as most eastern cities do, and, like some other cities, she may prohibit the use of swill for the sustenance and fattening of hogs that are to be eaten by human beings. And then some of the waste of a great city may be really wasted.

MINE IN HIS BACK YARD.

M. F. Lansdale, a Denver inventor whose home abuts on Clear Creek, which is everything but clear, is extracting gold from the river bed which is a part of his home plot. Mr. Lansdale has invented a machine for separating gold from dry sand and has been making public demonstrations at his home. From test runs he obtained many nuggets and flakes of gold, and claims that there are millions in Clear Creek sands within the city limits of Denver, waiting to be extracted. This claim is not new as several years ago a company was formed to work these beds but never actually commenced operations.

Mr. Lansdale claims that when once the taking of gold from the creek bed starts, Denver will resemble an old-time mining camp.

It is alleged by the inventor, who is corroborated by reputable witnesses that his machine saves 95 per cent. of the values and he says he will save all of it before he is through improving it.

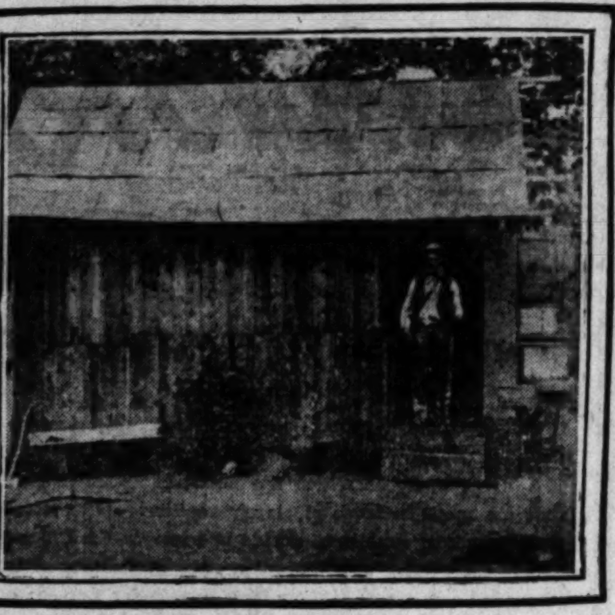
SYLVAN BEAUTY IN SANTA MONICA RANGES.



Sam Carson and his cabin in Rustic Canyon.

The rejuvenation of Port Los Angeles and Santa Monica and Rustic cañons, through the conversion of the old Southern Pacific steam road into an electric line, and the development of the historic long wharf into a pleasure pier, has served to remind those persons who enjoy a summer outing near to nature that these cañons are among Southern California's most entrancing beauty spots. Time was when these shaded breathing places were annually visited by hundreds and thousands of tourists as well as Californians; but that was before the days of corporation control—before the cruel barbs of wire fences barred progress to the leafy bowers far up the cañons. Then came forest fires and the vales and mountain sides were shorn of their beauty. These unfortunate visitations were charged to the account of the predatory hunters and campers, who before departing from the sylvan scenes neglected to stamp out their campfires. For the purpose of protecting the timber from destruction and consequent injury to the watersheds, fences were run across the winding roads and trails and the shady nooks thereafter became as a sealed book. While pedestrians could still find their way into the secluded spots the tally-ho and carry-all excursions became a thing of the past.

In those days one of the attractions of Rustic Cañon was the hut in which Sam Carson made his home. Poor old Sam, who during the latter days of his life was supported by a bounty provided by the county, has been dead seven or eight years; but his memory lives. Just when he made his appearance in the cañon is not remembered by even the oldest inhabitant. But a quarter of a century ago the old hunter and trapper, with his wind-broken nag and twenty dogs, was a familiar figure. Sam's claim for place in the gallery of fame hinged upon his allegation that he was the son and lawful heir of Kit Carson. Nobody either disputed the contention or asked for proof. The claimant was looked upon as a wise child. Sam said it was the case, and an indulgent public was content to let it go at that, knowing that Kit had visited Los Angeles in 1827. The old fellow with his Mexican-Indian wife and their issue were permitted to subsist as best they could among the trees and their squalid abode was ever the piece de resistance of a trip to the wilds. The old house, constructed of parts of drygoods boxes and coal oil cans, has long since fallen into decay and today its location is preserved by nothing more enduring than a few streaks of rust and a pile of old boards. After Sam's death his squaw wife sought new pastures, and with her went the herd of hungry dogs and the last living witness linking those days with the Kit Carson of the plains.

CHAMBER WILL BOOM THINGS.

SPECIAL EXCURSION TO YUMA AND LAGUNA DAM.

Chamber of Commerce Makes Great Arrangements for Its One-Hundred-and-Eleventh Trip by Train to Interesting Sections of Country—Trade Follows Visits.

Filled wtih enthusiastic Los Angeles boosters, a special train will pull out of Arcade Station next week, Monday night, the 29th inst., for Yuma and the Laguna dam. On the way, the travelers will visit the principal towns in the Imperial Valley and partake of the far-famed hospitality of its residents.

It will be the one-hundred-an-eleventh excursion conducted by the Chamber of Commerce. Owing to the financial depression of last year, the "Glad Hand" jaunts were discontinued. The Yuma trip will mark the resumption of interesting excursions to various points in the Southwest and along the Pacific Coast.

Our excursions are well worth patronizing," said Secretary Wiggins, yesterday. "The members always have a good time at a minimum expense, and travel like magnates in a special train with full equipment. It gives the Los Angeles business and professional men an opportunity to see what is going on outside our own little country, and incidentally serves to attract increased trade to this metropolis.

"It's a mighty good advertisement for the city to have a trainload of energetic boosters pass through a section that is naturally tributary to us. The price of a ticket for one of our excursions is a good investment."

Mr. Wiggins says that several other excursions will be given this year, if the public takes enough interest in them. Already there is talk of a big excursion through Arizona and New Mexico, and a special trip to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition may be arranged.

The itinerary of the Yuma excursion has been somewhat changed since its first announcement. In order to reach Laguna dam at the right time, the side trip through Imperial Valley will be taken on the way east, instead of at the last as first planned.

The special will reach Calexico 8 a.m., Tuesday, the 30th inst., and leave an hour or more later. Short stops will be made at El Centro, Holtville, Imperial and Brawley. The citizens of these places will turn out to welcome the visitors, although the time allowed at each town will not permit of extended entertainment.

The Angeleños will reach Yuma in the early morning, the 31st inst. After remaining there several hours, the train will proceed to Laguna, a half hour's ride farther.

At Yuma, elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the visitors. There will be a parade, a barbecue at the dam, a baseball game and a ball in the evening.

The completion of the Laguna dam across the Colorado River is well worth a celebration. Engineers declare it one of the achievements of the period, in the line of dam construction. It will impound water sufficient to irrigate nearly 80,000 acres, and serve to transform a barren waste into fruitful ranches and orchards. The soil is rich, and well adapted for raising tropical and deciduous fruits and alfalfa.

The watershed area is 200,000 square miles, and the average "run-off" from the watershed is 11,000,000 acre-feet. The reservoir site is ten miles square, with a capacity of 25,568 acre-feet. The dam itself is nineteen miles long; six miles on the Arizona side and thirteen on the California side. The laterals extend for 138 miles, and the dikes for about seventy-three miles.

More than 500 men are still at work, as the government engineers have not fully completed the project. Already 6000 acres adjacent to the dam have been planted to crops, and 4000 acres have been cleared in readiness for irrigation.

ELECTRIC BELT

DR. McLAUGHLIN'S
ELECTRIC BELT
MADE US STRONG

"You cannot possibly estimate the true import of the discovery of Professor Loeb," said Dr. McLaughlin yesterday in discussing the scientific announcement that "Electricity Is Life."

"It means more happiness to the civilized race than has followed any discovery for years. It will bring about the general recognition of the great possibilities which exist in the application of electricity for the preservation of youth."

"We have for years contended that old age was nothing but the freezing of the blood when there was no longer sufficient vital heat in the body to keep the blood warm and the organs active. We have said that years will not cause decay, and have proven it by citing cases where some men have been made vigorous under our rejuvenating treatment at 80, while you have examples all about you of men who are old and decrepit at 60.

"Now, Professor Loeb says that the animal heat is Electricity. That we know to be true. We get that heat from the chemical action of the acids and juices of the stomach upon our food. That is combustion. This combustion produces carbonic heat, and carbonic heat is Electricity. That is the basis of life in every vital organ. As long as the stomach is able to generate enough of this heat to replenish the wear and tear upon our vital energies we are strong and active. It is when the stomach finds the strain too heavy that we grow old and begin to decay.

"This is upon the same principle that an engine pulls a train of cars up hill. On level road it goes easily, but when it goes up hill the strain is heavy, and your engine, making power from the burning of coal, just as your stomach makes it from burning your food, is taxed beyond its limit, is unable to go further, and, exhausting all its steam in the effort, breaks down.

"The human body is just like that engine. It breaks down when the physical energy is overtaxed. That energy is electricity. We have here a means of replenishing the electricity of the body, and that is the basis of my treatment.

"Years have nothing to do with it. In each case it is the failure of the stomach to generate sufficient energy to supply the demands made by the vital organs.

"How quickly we fail when the stomach fails to digest the food! That shuts off the supply of energy.

"We have on record hundreds of instances where men of 75 to 90 have returned to the hard labor of their youth with a vim after having worn our appliances three months.

"One decrepit old man of 75 had in youth been a blacksmith. After using our appliance he

In spite of Lent, there is a round of gayety, of teas and luncheons in order just now, in honor of the coterie of Kansas City visitors. They include the Crittendens, both senior and junior, Mrs. Puterbaugh and Mrs. Clarke-Salmon.

It was St. Patrick's day in the morning, when that white-haired patrician representative of old Irish nobility, Mrs. Andrew Mullen, started on a pilgrimage from the Hollywood Hotel to see the babies at the Brownson House Day Nursery, on North Anderson street.

This was an unaccustomed journey, for Mrs. Mullen is advancing in years, and in the estimation of her devoted children is much too precious to be intrusted to the tender mercies of street cars. But the descendent of Irish kings must see to her favorite charities, hence the trip. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marie Mullen.

When the car came to First and Spring streets, and it was necessary to alight, behold the camels were coming, and a perfect riot of St. Patrick's day parade and circus was going on. The calliope screamed, horses pranced, and a general pandemonium reigned.

"Will you please lift the bar and let me take my mother out on this quiet side," Miss Mullen asked the motorman, for she saw a clear path to the sidewalk to the right and a general mix-up of circus parade to the left.

"Gainst orders ma'am, I can't do it," said the cast iron official.

"But she may get hurt," argued Miss Mullen.

"Nope, there won't nothing hurt her," was the comforting assurance. The two ladies alighted with much trepidation. The camels had passed and "My Lords, the elephants," were going by. It really looked dangerous. Rajah of the orange coat drew nigh, the mahout leaped to the ground. He saw the venerable lady and her escort, and quickly an order was given. Rajah's great head was lowered for the rider to mount, but he was held at attention with the prickly ankus until the stately Irish lady had made her passage in safety.

"Sure and St. Patrick will forgive the likes of him for wearing an orange coat," exclaimed an enthusiastic Hibernian who witnessed the little incident.

California has never ceased to be a wonderland to many old people who remember the day when a trip had to be made around the Horn or the terrors of the dreadful desert braved to reach the land of the heart's desire.

A dear little old lady, Mrs. Philip Rothchild, from Denver, reached Los Angeles last week, and caught her first glimpse of Southern California's winter charms. She has been in the seventh heaven of delight over it all, but today will realize her fairy dream of this golden Eldorado. She is going to Redondo to gather moonstones, and even the thought of getting the first sight of the great Pacific does not appeal to her as much as the milk white stones that she expects to find by the bushel.

"Do you think it will be wrong for me to pluck moonstones on Sunday," she asked of her hostess, who quickly assured her that there could be no earthly harm in plucking all she might find. If you go to the Redondo beach today, and see a peachy-cheeked old lady with a great happiness shining in her eyes, you may know who she is, and that she is "plucking moonstones."

I was discussing race-track evils with my friend Frank M. Coulter the other day, well knowing that the "dope sheet" hath no charms for his sane soul.

"Well," he said in his slow southern drawl, "I came mighty near getting mixed up in race-track betting myself not long ago." I gasped in astonishment, and thought "another good man gone wrong," but he soon assured me it was a purely vicarious affair.

"I was down in Nashville, Tenn., and one of my friends took me out to the race track in his automobile. I was sitting there in the grand stand looking on, and a little bit of a lady came up behind me; she wasn't bigger than a minute.

"'Would you let me see that score?' she asked, and I said, 'Why, certainly, madam,' and handed her the sheet I had.

"Then she talked some more. 'I want to bet on this race,' she said. 'You better not,' I told her, but she said she just had to bet on one of the horses."

"'Which one would you pick out if you were going to bet?' she asked me."

"'Well, I'd take that 20-to-1 number there,' I said.

"I thought she would take out a dollar to bet on the horse; but when the man came around to get the bets she paid down $100 on that horse, sir, and she won. After that she would put her money on every horse I picked out, and she won $[illegible]00 that afternoon.

"'Mister, you must be a pretty good judge of horses,' she said to me at the last; but I told her I knew a goer when I saw one, that was all."

There is one man in Los Angeles who should believe in the old saying "Coming events cast their shadows before."

This is William Rhodes Hervey, one of the new Superior judges recently appointed. Now harking back a good many years, and not so many either, when you think he is now a judge, he was a student at the University of Arkansas, then called Arkansas Industrial University.

He was a popular student at the A.I.U., but withall a very quiet and dignified sort, with a delightful remoteness which the girls mistook for an outward and visible sign of a romantic disposition.

He would have none of the adoration meted out to him and increased his desirability by being still more remote. Then the girls retaliated; they nicknamed him "Judge." Dear me, that was twenty years ago, but it has proved a true prediction, and I wish those girls could know.

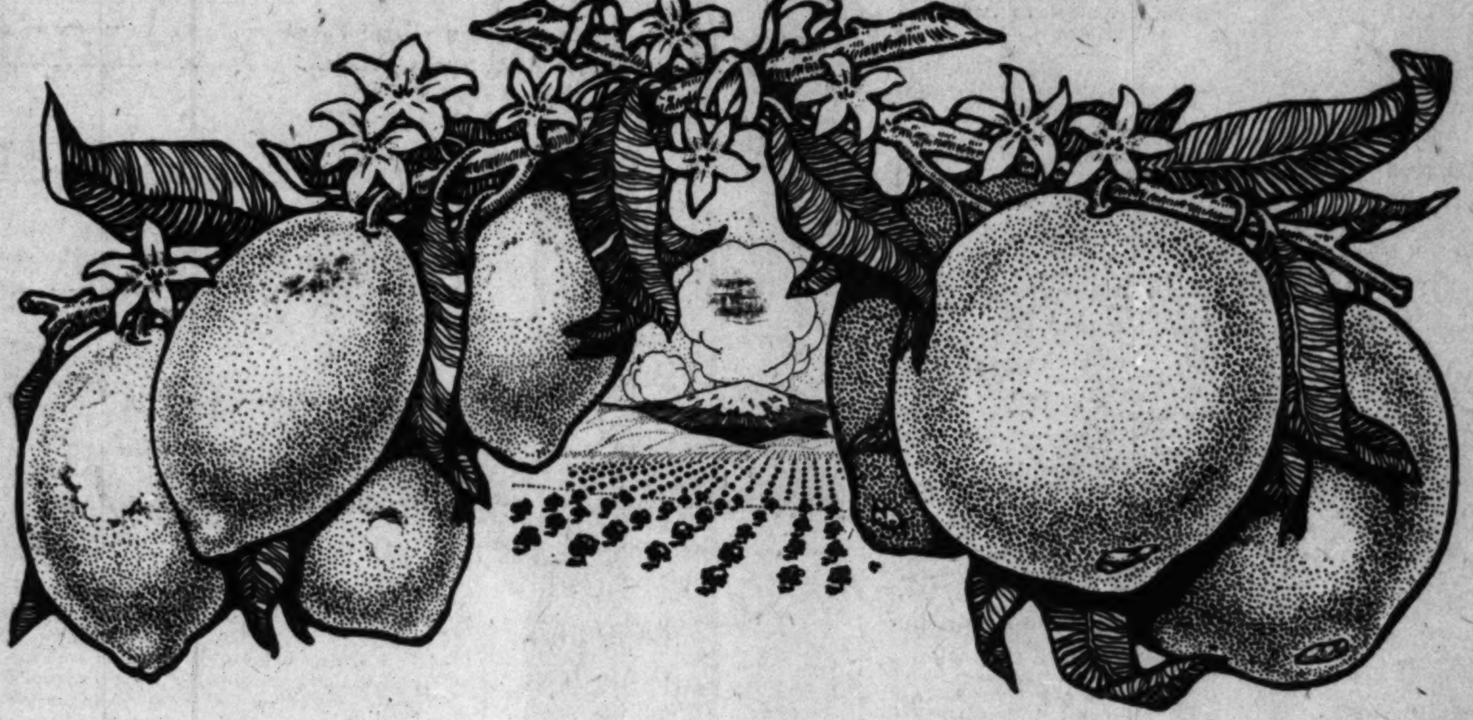
SUFFERING FROM ASTHMA

New Method of Home Treatment Checks the Disease at Once.

The discovery a short time ago of the wonderful specific, Ascatco, has made it possible to cure the most obstinate cases of asthma right at home in four or five weeks, and ward off the choking spells at night, so dreaded by sufferers and looked forward to with fear and anxiety. There can be no stomachic disturbance, as the dose is so small, seven drops.

The Austrian Laboratory, which dispenses the preparation, keeps the Owl Drug Co. constantly supplied with Ascatco, where sufferers in Los Angeles may secure it in either the 50-cent size, intended for mild cases, and which will prevent the choking paroxysms, or the $2 size, which lasts a month, and in which time the more obstinate or chronic cases are permanently cured.

The Austrian Laboratory, 32 West 25th street, New York City, will send free an experimental treatment to all who write for it.



Riverside Orange Heights

NEAR CORONA, CALIFORNIA

A tract of the finest orange and lemon land in Southern California, with water piped in underground cement pipes, is now, for the first time, offered for sale in parcels of five acres and more.

This property has never before been on the market. It is an old Spanish grant, and comes from the original United States patents. Adjoins luxurious citrus orchards. Would have been citrus groves years ago but for the fact that the lands could not be had at any price.

In point of location, lay of land, convenience to transportation, climate and scenery and quality of soil, this property is equal to the best that has ever been offered in the state.

Abundance of pure water for irrigation and domestic use.

Near Corona and Riverside, the mother colonies of the orange and lemon.

Less than two miles from transportation, schools and churches.

This land is so very choice, the water supply is so ample, the price and terms so reasonable, the location so excellent, that the demand for it is certain to be very prompt and eager, and you will do well to make quick selection.

Orange and lemon growing have paid better, one year with another, than any other industry in this state during the past 30 years.

Opportunities to get first-class citrus land at moderate prices are becoming very rare.

Cans That Mar Beauty.

LOS ANGELES, March 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] It does not, perhaps, seem quite right to criticise a city which has given me such cordial welcome, and where one has been so generously entertained, but the interest, acquired under such circumstances, prompts this letter. Los Angeles is certainly "The City Beautiful;" then why allow a condition to exist which is a constant blot on her fair streets? When I first arrived I started one morning for a motor trip, and when we reached lovely Chester Place I was enchanted at the beauty of the residences, lawns and flowers. Why should there be anything to mar its perfection?

But there was. As we passed down the avenue, on either side of the street, in front of every residence, I noted two or more cans, dented and bent out of shape, with covers so twisted and warped they did not fit, there, disclosing the contents—ashes and garbage. I was told the condition of the receptacles was caused by the careless handling of the collectors of garbage; that no matter how many new cans were purchased by the householder they soon presented the battered appearance I noted. We drove on through aristocratic Adams street, St. James Park and Figueroa street, and everywhere at the curb stood cans of the same description. In many cases careless domestics had allowed egg shells, lettuce leaves and other refuse to rest beside the cans on the well-kept strips of lawn at the edge of the sidewalk. At other times, in other parts of the city, where beautiful homes abound, the same conditions were observed. What sights for an otherwise clean and handsome city!

I had been visiting in Oakland and Berkeley, and nothing of the kind is seen there. Upon inquiry I find that the householders pay 50 cents per month in Oakland, 25 cents per month in Berkeley, and the collectors take everything from alleys and back yards. In Berkeley there are many houses built in the rear of other houses, the lots there being very deep, yet the collectors go to the rear of even these rear houses. Why, in the name of all that stands for beauty, does not the city of Los Angeles try to have such work done in the same way? Why not let this gathering of garbage by private contract? Surely no one would object to pay the small monthly sum requisite for such service, and by that means secure the beauty of cleanliness in his streets. Suppose the contractor did make "big money" on his contract, would it not be far better, even if he made a fortune out of it in ten years, to have the work properly done, the present annoyance stopped, your streets and sidewalk kept clean, and the unsightly and often offensive, cans kept off the streets. I urge this matter upon your good citizens as well worth their best attention.

GEORGE A. FITZGERALD.

Bulkheads in Passenger Steamships.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Many of the "Forty-niners" were conveyed to San Francisco in the wooden ships of that period, in which bulkheads were unknown. The inside space of such vessels was divided by two or three decks extending from stem to stern, provided with suitable hatches forward of the masts. In the case of a collision, if the water entered the hull faster than the hand pumps could force it out, the nature of the cargo determined the fate of the craft. With a heavy freight, such as iron rails, pig iron, coal, etc., sinking was inevitable, but if the goods being transported were cotton, wool, lumber, etc., she would float. As iron ships replaced the wooden ones, it was noted that their chances of surviving a collision and reaching port were less than those constructed of wood and so insurers of "tanks," as the iron vessels used to be called in 'Frisco, sent forth a cry for help and inventors designed the first bulkheads.

Placed a few feet abaft the stem and called collision bulkheads they were useful in the case of head-on collisions with other vessels, docks or rocks. Steamships replaced the passenger-carrying clippers, and as they increased in size more bulkheads were placed in each, and it became the aim of naval architects to so subdivide them that they would not sink even with the two largest compartments open to the sea. Theoretically, during the past seventy years, no steamships could sink after a collision at sea. Practice has disproved theory in many cases, and great numbers of "unsinkable ships" have been sent to the bottom by collisions, for in 1841 the President mysteriously disappeared, a fate which successively overtook the City of Glasgow, in 1854, the Pacific in 1856, Tempest in 1857, United Kingdom in 1869, City of Boston in 1870, Ismailia in 1873, Zanzibar in 1880, Ludwig in 1882, Rapidan in 1886, and there is no doubt many of these disasters were caused by the ships colliding with others or with icebergs. Collisions leading to the loss of steamers have been noted from time to time, as Arctic in 1854, Le Lyonnais in 1856, Scotland in 1866, Hibernian in 1868, Ville du Havre in 1873, Vicksburg in 1875, sunk in a field of ice, Borussia foundered at sea and Pomerania in 1879, City of Vera Cruz foundered off the coast of Florida, and Anglia run down in 1881, Edam in 1882, City of Brussels, Cimbria and Ludwig in 1883, State of Florida in 1884, Oregon in 1886, W. A. Schotten in 1887, Geiser in 1888. More recent dates have added the Bourgoyne, Denmark, Waesland, Finance and Republic, to the list. Pessimists have asked of what use are bulkheads? and optimists have cited such cases as the Arizona, of the Guion Line, that rammed an iceberg on the banks of Newfoundland while running at fifteen knots speed, smashed in her bows for a distance of thirty feet from the stem, but was saved by her bulkheads and later became the army transport Hancock; and the Anchoria of the Anchor Line, rammed by the Queen of the National Line off New York. Both ships entered the harbor with the seas washing about in the side of one and the bows of the other. Fresh in the memory of all is the Italian liner Florida, which recently reached New York after having crushed in her bows when she gave the Republic a fatal blow in the side.

The question is, have the huge modern steamships bulkheads and compartments enough to save them from the fate of the Republic? It is assumed that a naval architect, accustomed to planning big battleships, would answer, "No," and that he would proudly point to plans showing a hundred or two compartments in such a ship. Yet, we cannot forget that the British battleship Camperdown rammed the side of her sister Victoria, and sent her to the bottom with most of her crew, in a few minutes. Also, that the American liner St. Paul sank the British cruiser Gladiator, near Southampton, England. American passengers, who travel on so many of the modern big liners, certainly hope that the fate of the Republic will cause the naval architects of all nations to design such vessels with an adequate number of bulkheads, regardless of the inconvenience they may cause in segregating the various parts of the ships. A drawback which has been largely overcome by the modern bulkhead doors, that are opened in port to facilitate the work, but are closed at sea automatically by electric power, started from emergency stations, such as the navigating bridge, engine room, etc. The captain or bridge officer seeing a collision imminent, can set the apparatus at work and instantly warning bells ring at each bulkhead door for the determined number of seconds, say ten, then the door slides tightly over the opening, making it water-tight. In many known instances bulkheads have given away on account of weakness, so it may be necessary to change their flat surfaces and give them an outward curve and use two, curving toward the bow and the stern, instead of relying on the single ones, supported by angle irons, now in use. No matter how many bulkheads a ship may have, nor how well it is fitted with automatic self-closing doors, the personal element will be ever present and the safety of the ship, passengers and crew, will depend on the cool heads of all who have details to execute, from the captain on the bridge to the grimy stoker down below, who looks out that iron wheel barrows and débris, hurled along by a miniature Johnstown flood, are not allowed to "jam" the doors or their mechanism after a terrific collision. To illustrate: A few years ago Evangelist Moody and Gen. O. O. Howard claimed to have saved a North German Lloyd steamship by holding a prayer meeting in her salon after she had broken her tail shaft and was being flooded with sea water that poured in through the stern tube. While they were praying, brave engineers worked heroically in the shaft alley, at the risk of their limbs and their lives, from the mighty mass of the shaft and the rising water. Timbers, planks and mattresses were used and the shaft was at last secured in place. The pumps had been worked to the utmost and the ship was saved. By whom? Engineers say by the men down below. We may compromise by quoting St. Timothy, that "faith without works is dead," and pray for good engineers to be on board the huge modern steamships in which we may be privileged to travel.

NEW DIGESTIVE JUICES WANTED

MORE GASTRIC JUICE AND NO FERMENTATION IN YOUR STOMACH.

Absolute Relief From all Stomach Trouble is Merely a Matter of Taking Some Diapepsin—You Will Wonder Five Minutes Later Why You Hesitated So Long—No More Distress From Indigestion and a Weak Stomach.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad Taste in Mouth and Stomach, Headache—this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure the worst case of Dyspepsia, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from Stomach Trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve a sour stomach or Indigestion in five minutes. Get a case now and eat one Triangule after your next meal. They are harmless and taste like candy, though each contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a hearty, healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your Stomach and Intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach prescription, too, if you ever have Indigestion or Gastritis, or any other Stomach misery, and eat just one Triangule of Diapepsin.

SPOOK MESSAGE UP TO COURT.

Spiritualistic "Bishop" of Brooklyn Asks Tribunal to Decide Validity of Her "Communications."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—Mrs. May Pepper-Vanderbilt, the spiritualistic "bishop" of Brooklyn, asks that the Kings County Court determine whether there is such a thing as communication with the spirit world. In a motion filed yesterday counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt asks the dismissal of the indictment against the medium, charging grand larceny.

It is alleged by Miss Minerva Vanderbilt, a daughter of the aged husband of the medium, that she caused Vanderbilt, by fraud and deceit, to deed to her a house in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney now asks the court to ascertain by what definite means the grand jury decided that spiritualism was a sham and a fake. The lawyer thus puts up to the court the rather puzzling question of deciding how to prove whether the medium did or did not receive messages from the dead. Because of divided authority he argues no one is competent to testify against her.

In support of this contention, the attorney attempts to show that spiritualism is a recognized religion and to prove this, he quotes Alfred Russell Wallace, Sir William Crooks and other authohities, and mentions Jules Verne, Marconi, William Lloyd Garrison, Salmon P. Chase, Bayard Taylor, Robert Owen, Parker Pillsbury and others.

H. W. Topping, chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners of St. Paul, Minn., has returned to this city, and is residing at No 695 South Burlington avenue.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR.

Doctors Say There is a Harmless, Safe and Sure Way to Remove Superfluous Hair.

Dr. Fowler, who has made a thorough study of superfluous hair growths, speaking of a case in which he used DeMiracle, says: "I applied DeMiracle, and in a few minutes I had her lip devoid of hair without any pain whatever. I instructed her to call again in two weeks, which she did. I found about one-fourth of the hair roots were not killed by the first application, so I made a second application. I saw her again in about a month, and found her lip as clear of hair as an infant's. I can heartily recommend DeMiracle for all the uses for which the manufacturers recommend it."

It is well to remember that DeMiracle is absolutely non-poisonous, antiseptic and germicidal, therefore it will not produce blood poisoning or eczema, which is so common with hair removers. DeMiracle is the only method in the world which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DeMiracle mailed, sealed in plain wrapper, for $1.00. Your money back without question (no red tape) if it fails to do all that is claimed for it. Booklet free in plain sealed envelope by the DeMiracle Chemical Co., Desk 2, 1909 Park Ave., New York. For sale by Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring; Fifth and Broadway; 625 So. Broadway.

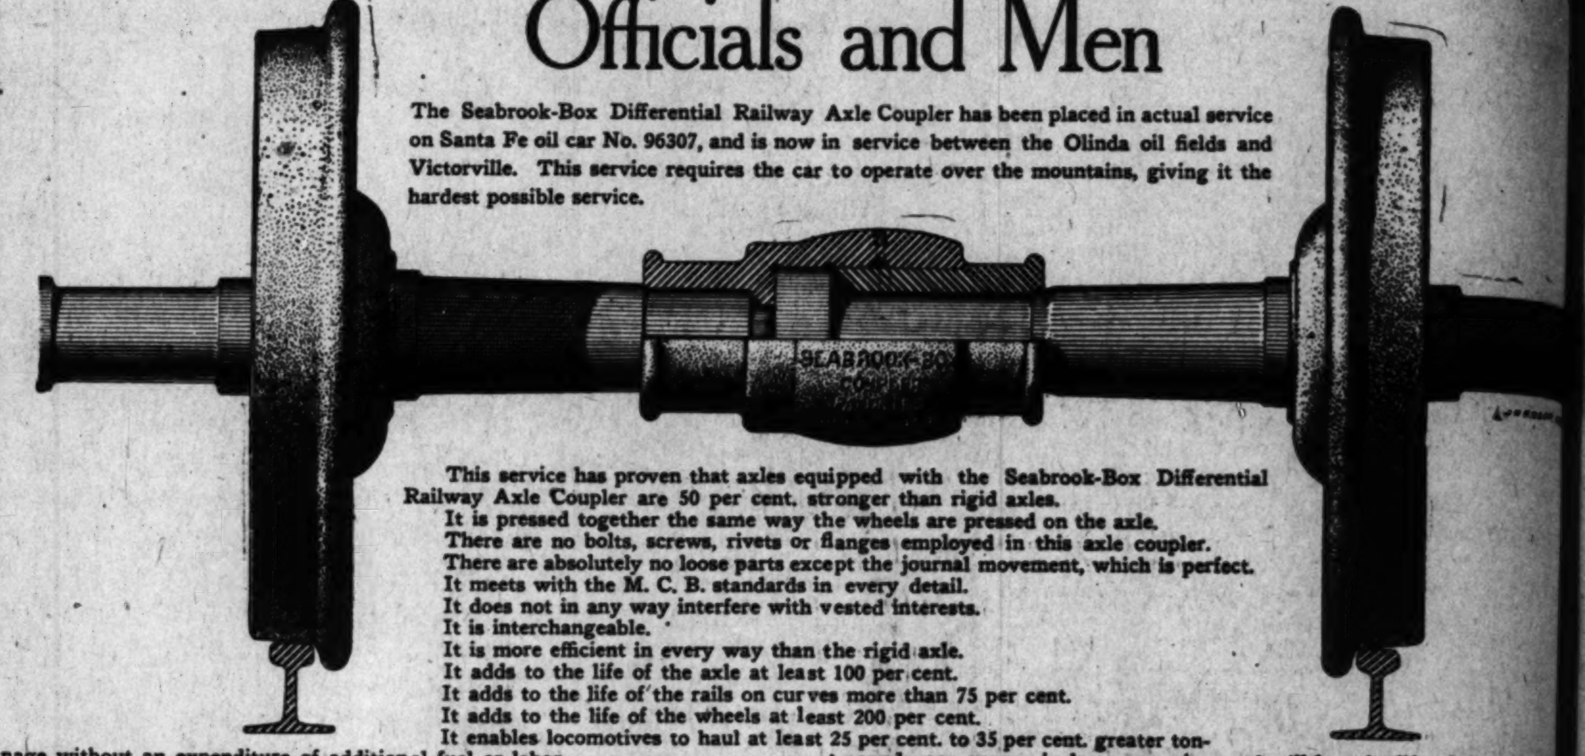
Great Enthusiasm Among Santa Fe Railwa Officials and Men



The Seabrook-Box Differential Railway Axle Coupler has been placed in actual service on Santa Fe oil car No. 96307, and is now in service between the Olinda oil fields and Victorville. This service requires the car to operate over the mountains, giving it the hardest possible service.

This service has proven that axles equipped with the Seabrook-Box Differential Railway Axle Coupler are 50 per cent. stronger than rigid axles.

It is pressed together the same way the wheels are pressed on the axle.

There are no bolts, screws, rivets or flanges employed in this axle coupler.

There are absolutely no loose parts except the journal movement, which is perfect.

It meets with the M. C. B. standards in every detail.

It does not in any way interfere with vested interests.

It is interchangeable.

It is more efficient in every way than the rigid axle.

It adds to the life of the axle at least 100 per cent.

It adds to the life of the rails on curves more than 75 per cent.

It adds to the life of the wheels at least 200 per cent.

It enables locomotives to haul at least 25 per cent. to 35 per cent. greater tonnage without an expenditure of additional fuel or labor.

It never has to be inspected.

It does away with 75 per cent. of the flange wear.

It never has to be lubricated, as this is accomplished at the time of its construction, by the use of graphite, which is pressed into the coupler under 4000 pounds per square inch compression and will last the life of the axle.

It is endorsed by railway officials, superintendents of motive pow car builders and master mechanics.

All of our statements are absolutely confirmed by the operation vice on the car now in operation on the Santa Fe Railway.

We have already started to equip for the San Bernardino Valley Traction Company, and we expect to equip a freight train and a passenger train at th possible date.

This device will save the railroads of the United States millions of dollars. It will at the same time make millions of dollars for the stockholders pany. Last year the railroads of the United States earned $2,500,000,000.00. We will save them more than 10 per cent.—this would be $250,000,000, and much do you think we will be able to make out of our device when we can save the railway companies the amount mentioned above?

A small investment in our stock now will net you immense returns. The stock is selling at $1.00 per share, but may be advanced any day to $2.00. that within a few months the stock will be selling for at least $5.00 per share.

For further information call at our demonstration rooms, 224 WEST THIRD STREET, and 44 NORTH RAYMOND AVE., PASADENA, or at our offices.

Are Small Stockholders Squeezed?

¶ It is a common saying that most corporations squeeze out their small stockholders. The following is an illustration of how the largest corporation of its kind in the world squeezes out its small stockholders: This company, which was founded 43 years ago, has a fund in the Globe Savings Bank of Los Angeles, amounting to over $20,000.00, which was contributed by its officers and large stockholders. The sole and only purpose of this fund is to purchase stock from anyone holding less than $500 worth of stock, securing him against loss; but any stockholder who has ever held more than $500 worth of stock must take his share of loss or profits, as it comes. This company says that the big stockholder does not need protection. As a large per cent of its stock is held by persons who own over $500 worth, this leaves only a small percentage of the stock to be protected, and this fund of over $20,000.00 makes the small stockholder absolutely secure. The wonderful earning power of a small sum saved daily or weekly, and invested with earnings compounded, is shown by the fact that if you had commenced 13½ years ago and put in ten cents a day with this company, your investments would now be worth $7201.25. If you had put in $10 per month for the same period, it would be worth $24,004.19. This company, which is the largest of its kind in the world, and one of the oldest, asks you to inquire of your banker about it, or call at 335-7 South Hill Street. If you become a small stockholder you are absolutely protected against possible loss.

[illegible] of Pitt in respect to [illegible] twofold, and I shall seek [illegible] distinct, and to [illegible] order. In the first [illegible] William Pitt and as War [illegible] George II he was acting [illegible] foreign nations, in con[illegible] King's colonial fellow-[illegible] any idea of rebellion [illegible] entered the mind of [illegible] George Washington, in[illegible] in the very campaign [illegible] and organized; [illegible] of Pittsburgh bears [illegible] to the magnificent strat[illegible] the English statesman [illegible] French and planted our [illegible] over the continent [illegible] Lakes to the mouth of [illegible]

[illegible] work was very differ[illegible] William Pitt, but Earl [illegible] longer the dominant [illegible] victorious government [illegible] longer in office or in [illegible] health of body or in peace of mind, without followers, or hope, or fortune, the wreck of a great man himself, and the mark of hostility and scorn to his sovereign and his peers, Chatham, in his decrepit old age, fought on alone in prophetic passion against the crimes of his tyrant master, in defense of the just rights of his countrymen in America, in denouncing it as 'civil war,' the curse and ruin of his country. And in defense of an oppressed and calumniated people of three nations, he died at last in the midst of the disasters he had foreseen. And yet to me—and I think to you—this second career of his—utter failure as it seemed to be to those who heard him, and saw him carried out to die—is truly the grandest, the purest, the most heroic. To me and I think to you—Chatham with his racked limbs swathed in flannel, staggering through a speech in support of Franklin and Washington and the patriots of their time, is a grander man than Pitt, the organizer of victory, the terrible War Minister, who announced a new triumph in each dispatch—before whom Spain and France trembled, whose return to power foreign statesmen prayed heaven to avert.

"When Pitt became Minister by the popular voice and his own transcendent eloquence, in spite of the jealousy of aristocratic factions and the fears of a hostile monarch, the condition of England and of the British colonies was indeed dark and ominous. France held the dominant portion, for she could sweep right round our colonies over a line of at least 1500 miles. She had magnificent naval bases at Cape Breton on the St. Lawrence River, Lakes Champlain and Ontario, and she had fortresses in Louisbourg, Quebec, Montreal, Frontenac, Duquesne, St. Francois on the Ohio, and others. She had the vast range of Canada and the whole Mississippi Valley on the northwest and she led and subsidized the Indian tribes over that boundless area. The French fortresses were far superior to the British. France had superb soldiers and a hero of genius in the Marquis of Montcalm. And her colonial territories were not detached and independent, but under the direct control of an absolute monarch.

"The British colonies lay on a long and narrow seaboard, in breadth never more than 200 miles from the Atlantic westward, and in New England hardly 200 miles across. They were continuous and not spread over such vast and separate areas as the French colonies, but, on the other hand, they were divided into thirteen self-governed and not very cordial groups, with hardly any common American patriotism or sense of fellow-citizenship with each other. They were loyal subjects of King George and regarded Britain as their natural home and their lawful head and protector. Instead of the regular troops of King Louis the British colonies, for the most part, were defended by an irregular and ill-equipped militia which had little of an army except personal courage.

"Mainly from these causes the condition of the British colonies in 1756 was disastrous. Their detached and ill-managed expeditions to break through the ring wrought round them by the organised strategy of the French generals, had ended in defeat and ruin. George Washington saved the remnant of Braddock's force. Braddock was cut to pieces. Oswego on Lake Ontario was captured. New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia were harried by savage Indians subsidized by France and on all sides the British colonies seemed about to pass under the practical domination of the French. They were jealous and hostile, disorganized and disheartened by a long series of disasters and disputes.

"In December, 1756, William Pitt became practically Prime Minister with almost absolute authority for war and diplomacy, and within four years he had made one of the most marvelous revolutions in all modern history. Great Britain had expanded into a world-empire, and the whole of the North American continent had been secured in effect to the English race and tongue. Cape Breton and the great port and fortress of Louisbourg were taken. Quebec was captured and the two French and English heroes fell almost side by side. Then Montreal fell, and the control of all Canada soon followed, the French forts along the Ohio and the lakes became English, Fort Duquesne became Pittsburgh—and with it the command of the western plains. By this marvelous series of combined strokes within four years it was finally decided—if I may repeat words of my own which I am proud to find quoted by an American woman in a book issued by the 'Colonial Dames' of America—'It was finally decided that the English language, common law, literature and blood, should be settled on the continent of America from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Arctic Ocean to the Gulf of Mexico.'

"This was the first great service to America, which justifies our remembrance of Chatham even on this day that is consecrated to the memory of Washington. For the details of this stupendous achievement I must refer you to two recent books, neither of which were issued, I regret to say, when I wrote my little sketch of Chatham's life. The book I have just cited will give you a true insight into the marvelous knowledge into men and things that Pitt possessed, into his indefatigable power of work and concentration, into his grasp of details and his practical wisdom, foresight, and caution, which make him the peer of Frederick and of Washington. The book is the 'Correspondence of William Pitt when Secretary of State with Colonial Governors and Military and Naval Commissioners in America, edited under the auspices of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America by Gertrude Selwyn Kimballe, 2 vols. 8vo. New York MacMillan Company, 1906.' Read those 127 letters of Pitt if you desire to understand how a great man thinks out, plans and orders a vast and organic scheme which creates a mighty nation.

"Another essay based on contemporary documents in our own Record Office is by Hubert Hall, the learned director of the Royal Historical Society. His paper is to be found in the American Historical Review of 1901.

"For the politics and the strategy of this amazing epoch we may turn to another book, 'England and the Seven Years' War,' a study of combined strategy by Julian Corbett, L.L.M., with maps and plans, 2 vols. 8vo. Longmans, 1907. Here we shall find in conjunction with Capt. Mahan's 'Sea Power' a scientific account of the vast combination of military and naval strategy on a world-wide scale which gives us the measure of Chatham's genius. When we consider the enormous range of these expeditions over the face of the planet, the multiplicity and variety of them, their combination of natural armaments by sea and by land, of maritime blockade and long marches, storming parties both by sea and land—the schemes of Chatham are on a scale more elaborate than any of Frederick or of Washington—indeed they surpass in area even those of Napoleon—and in English history can only be compared with those of Cromwell—which were on a smaller and less successful scale.

"I turn now to the second point where the United States owe to Chatham a deep debt of reverence and affection—I mean his heroic efforts to stem the torrent of folly and injustice of the British crown and government and to defend the just claims of the American colonies to self-government and freedom. This is a very different picture from that of the triumphant statesman we have been contemplating. No longer in power, but without followers, or party, almost without friends or help, Chatham, for some ten years, stoutly resisted the oppressive policy of George III and Lord North.

"The story has been often told, and I do not think it has ever been summed up in words more eloquent than those of one who is at once an experienced statesman and a brilliant historian—Sir George Trevelyan—a former Secretary for Ireland, the nephew of Macaulay—of a family which for at least three generations have served the state. In Trevelyan's monumental history of the American Revolution, I read this noble panegyric:

"'. . . With proud heart, his swift perception, and his capacious intellect, Chatham knew America, and he loved her; and he was known and loved by her in return. He had done more for her than any ruler had done for any country since William the Silent saved and made Holland; and she repaid him with a true loyalty. When the evil day came, it was to Chatham that she looked for the good offices which might avert an appeal to arms. When hostilities had broken out, she fixed on him her hopes for an honorable peace. And when he died—in the very act of confessing her wrongs, though of repudiating and condemning the establishment of that national independence on which her own mind was irrevocably set—she refused to allow that she had anything to forgive him, and she mourned for him as a father of her people.'

"On the first day of the Session of 1774, Chatham moved in the House of Lords to withdraw British troops from Boston. He denounced the plan of trying to tax America. 'This country,' he said, 'has no right under heaven to tax America.' When the famous riot about the tea chests took place in Boston harbor, he made a good speech denouncing the tea tax as contrary to the principles of justice and civil policy.' 'The day is not far distant,' he said again, 'when America may vie with these kingdoms not only in arms, but in arts also. It is an established fact that the principal towns of America are learned and polite, and understand the constitution of the empire as well as the noble lords who are no win office.

"'The cause of America was the cause of all Irishmen, Catholic and Protestant, and of all true Liberals in England—i.e., of every man who is not a friend to arbitrary power. The colonists were our countrymen, and if we persisted in treating them as aliens and foes, the consequences were incalculable. It was civil war.'

"What words of wisdom and of prophetic genius!

"Chatham was in close touch with Franklin, the envoy to England and France of the United States. He boldly introduced him into the House of Lords, defended him there when attacked, and consulted him as to the bill of reconciliation and settlement that he proposed. He said in Parliament, 'If I were minister I would not hesitate to call Franklin a man whom all Europe holds in estimation for his knowledge and wisdom.'

"Oh, that Chatham could have retrieved his health! His magnificent outbursts of patriotism and genius were only in the occasional hours of relief from his cruel and paralyzing malady. Had Chatham been able to return to power, to break down the foolish obstinacy of King George and his viziers—if he could have brought in Burke, and with him could have made a settlement with Franklin and Washington—how different would the history of the eighteenth century have been. Britain and the United States would have been in brotherhood and alliance—in a harmony which it has needed nearly a century and a half to cement. It was not to be.

"Chatham took a step of extraordinary audacity and sacrifice. His eldest son and heir, Lord Pitt, was in the military service. Chatham had taken care to place his beloved son on the staff of his own friend, Gen. Carleton, who was in command in Massachusetts. Chatham was intensely proud of his heir, and proud of the army in which he had been an officer, proudest of all of the honor of his house and his country. But he could not bear to think of his boy fighting in an unholy war. In 1776, as hostilities became continuous and bitter, Chatham faced the contempt and indignation of soldiers and politicians, and wrote to the general that 'from his fixed opinion with regard to the continuance of the unhappy war with our fellow-subjects in America, he will withdraw his son from such a service.' And the young Lord Pitt had to resign and return home.

"Before the war became declared, Chatham, in 1774, had written to the Sheriff in London, 'What infatuation and cruelty to accelerate the sad moment of war! Every step in America of our government seems calculated to drive the Americans into open resistance, vainly hoping to crush the spirit of liberty in that vast continent at one successful blow; but millions must perish there before the seeds of freedom will cease to grow and spread in so favorable a soil; and in the meantime devoted England herself must sink under the ruins of her own foolish and inhuman system of destruction. I fear the bond between us and America will be cut off forever!'

"Has that bond been cut off forever? Your presence here today gives the answer—No! But it has taken nearly a century and a half to rejoin the links in the chain that binds together the Anglo-Saxon race. But time does justice at last to the honest and the true—for all that they disappear in neglect and ingratitude. There is a pathetic monument of Chatham still standing in its defacement and decay which seems to me an emblem of his heroic soul.

"There stands still in Charlestown the classical monument erected to William Pitt by the Commons of South Carolina in 1769. The inscription records that it was raised 'in grateful memory of his services to America,' and they add that 'time shall sooner destroy the marble statue of the hero than it shall erase from their minds their just sense of his patriotic virtues.'

"The statue stands still erect, but it is defaced and mutilated, for a British fleet bombarding Charlestown struck it with cannon balls, and carried away the outstretched arms of the figure. What an emblem of a great life! One hundred and forty years ago the Commons of an American State expressed in marble their grateful memory of an English statesman. His own countrymen in a spirit of infatuated tyranny mutilate that figure just as they opposed and maligned him in his life. But now at last Americans and Englishmen join hands in two continents to rehearse the memory of the patriotism and the virtues of their two national heroes—Washington and Chatham—as the two creators of their respective States, and certainly the two greatest men of their nation and their age."

An "Ugly" Judge Toasted.

Chief Justice Shaw of Massachusetts, one of the greatest lawyers of his time, was a plain, practical man, and looked in his old age, as he sat on the bench somewhat like a Chinese idol, as he used frequently to cut off Mr. Choate's eloquence by calling him back to the plain facts. At a bar dinner Choate was called upon to toast the Chief Justice, and what he said was this: "We regard our Chief Justice as the heathen regards his idol. We know that he is ugly, but we feel that he is great."—[Exchange.

Our Friends, the Birds.

THE BEST AGENCY KNOWN FOR KEEPING DOWN THE INSECT PESTS.

THE recent attempt to secure legislation in this State favorable to the extermination of the meadow lark because he eats a few grapes as they are ripening on the vines, was, fortunately, frustrated by the second thought of the members of the Legislature. The government's investigations, extending through a period of two decades, have proved that the birds are men's best friends, and that they are the only reliable aid for keeping down the pests of insects that come from no one knows where. There are a few birds, like the English sparrow, that should be exterminated, and such legislation based on the government's investigations would meet no opposition. Fortunately, the English sparrow has not yet crossed the continent.

As a rule, birds are less familiar to most people than any other kind of living creature, probably. The reason is plain enough, the city dweller rarely sees much of them, and the country dweller regards some of them in the same category with weeds and others only as part of the landscape. A good many birds are of more use to humanity than a good many animals, though, while as a study they are infinitely more interesting by reason of their variety, their intelligence, and our unfamiliarty with them and their habits and occupations.

Uncle Sam began a systematic study of his feathered citizens twenty-three years ago, with the particular purpose of finding out which of them were to be classed as benefactors and which as undesirables. There had been so much complaint against the feathered folk that it seemed worth while to discover just how much of the poor crops was to be attributed to them and how much to the politicians in power. So the Department of Agriculture organized a kind of secret service, calling upon all good citizens to give their aid in the detection of male malefactors, and for nearly a quarter of a century now the little people of the underbrush, the tree top and the free air have been spied upon and shadowed, their every movement reported, the amount and kind of food they eat scientifically tabulated, and a ledger account of the harm they do and the good they accomplish has been kept, with sme surprising results.

Recently, ornithology has been acquiring a place among the popular sciences. Four of the important colleges and universities now provide rather extensive courses in ornithology and the rudiments of the science are being added to the "nature work" of many of the public schools. It has been found in Brown University, where the study of birds that received particular attention, that the course in ornithology is one of the most popular and is considered by those who take it as one of the most valuable in the department of extension teaching, established a year or two ago to reach school teachers and other busy people who had neither time nor opportunity to enroll themselves as regular students in the college.

The course at Brown consists in lectures and in field excursions taken early in the morning while the spring migration is on. The bird's place in nature, the classification of birds, their anatomy, their value to man, their protection, and their habits and characteristics, are studied with a view not so much to makng expert ornithologists of a large number of people as of spreading more generally an appreciation of birds and broadening what is after all the most important branch of any kind of education—the understanding of the marvels of the world in which we live. For it is the theory at this university that each well nstructed man or woman is a missionary from whom every associate in after life must absorb a certain amount of teaching.

A great deal of good has been accomplished already by the investigations of the national and State governments and by the Audubon societies, but such investigations as a general thing reach only a limited number of busy every-day citizens. The interest in ornithology which the schools and colleges are taking seems more likely to bring Americans to a realization of the dollars-and-cents value to every one of the most frivolous seeming little songster as well as his most sedate brother on wing. The birds keep in check innumerable menaces to man's welfare, whether by disposing of carrion, destroying the swarming insect life that constantly threatens crops of all kinds, or preventing the spread of noxious weeds.

Their greatest service is in keeping down the insect pest. Dr. Lintner, when he was State Entomologist of New York, estimated the number of different species of insects at a round million, and the number of individual insects is, of course, incomprehensible to the human mind. On a single tree scientists, by an ingenious method of calculation, have counted 12,000,000 plant lice; it would take a man eleven months, working ten hours a day, to count them aloud if he spoke as fast as he could. And of all creatures in the universe insects—which include caterpillars and the multitudinous tribes of creeping things—have most voracious appetites. Many caterpillars will eat twice their weight in leaves in a day, and there are some who are such gourmands that in thirty days they grow to ten thousand times their original size. Some of these creatures, too, when they have lived their caterpillar lives progress to a moth existence, in which they continue for another period their work of destruction. But, fortunately, there is scarcely an insect which is not considered a toothsome morsel by some bird or other.

Whatever effects the food crops affects every American, obviously, be he the farmer who grows the grain, the miller who grinds it, the grocer who sells it, or the city dweller who consumes it. So there is something almost startling in the figures compiled by Dr. C. L. Marlatt of the Bureau of Entomology of the national Department of Agriculture, who says that there are few years in which the loss on the wheat crop caused by the Hessian fly is less than 10 per cent., estimating that on the crop of 1900 the damage approached $1000,000,000. Dr. Marlatt's figures for 1904, for example put the loss caused by insects at $80,000,000 for the corn crop, $100,000,000 for the wheat crop, and $530,000 for the hay crop, while the codling moth alone caused $20,000,000 loss on the fruit crop. The total destruction of farm products by insects in that year Dr. Marlatt estimated at $795,000,000.

The Rocky Mountain locust, which ravaged the Mississippi Valley States for a long while, seems to be a direct descendant of the Egyptian plague, for he has appeared in such numbers as to hide the sun. The cinch bug does millions of dollars damage every year; the havoc wrought by the cotton worm ranged from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in every twelvemonth; and the boll weevil is doing his best, along with the gypsy moth, to break all records. The more land is brought under cultivation, the greater the insect pest, and the more the resulting loss.

It is no wonder that the movement to protect bird life has been gaining headway rapidly in recent years. The best way to accomplish its purpose is to widen the acquaintance of people with birds, increase its intimacy, and make it more discriminating. That is the aim of the work at Brown, in addition to the more serious investigations of the department of biology in the field of ornithology. Very few of us realize—very few of us who dwell in cities, particularly—how many different kinds of birds surround us, and how much entertainment they can afford. Dr. Herbert E. Walter, who conducts the courses in ornithology at Brown, made extensive studies of the birds in the public parks of Chicago, while he lived in that city. Altogether he found at different times 176 distinct species, and at the height of the migration observed as many as sixty-six species in a single morning.

It takes no great equipment to become an amateur ornithologist, and the pursuit of this pleasant science involves a little of the healthful exercise that is the greatest need of the twentieth century American. Dr. Walter's advice is to provide yourself with a simple handbook which gives descriptions of birds, go out into the suburbs or into a public park at 6 o'clock in the morning and spend two hours trying to see how many different sorts of hopping, flying, singing creatures you can "spot." It will surprise you to find that very little practice makes you quite expert. The process of identification is largely one of elimination to start with; certain sorts of birds will rarely be seen except in certain kinds of places, for some of them almost never fly above the ground, some of them, on the other hand, never come very near the earth, some of them make frequent pauses in the trees, while some seem never to alight at all. Before long you will know a bird as you would any other friend by his voice, his manner of walking, of turning his head, of eating his breakfast, or what not. And, quite the reverse of the case with some human acquaintances, the more you see of your bird friends and the better you know them, the more you will want to see and know

Industrial Independence.

INDIFFERENCE OF WORKMEN TO EMPLOYERS' INTERESTS A RESULT OF UNIONISM.

[From the New Zealand Times.]

TRADES UNIONISM seems at the present time to be firm and unanimous on several points. It claims that it is the duty of the State to see that every able-bodied man in the community shall obtain work; that every individual shall receive a living wage; that no unionist shall labor more than a given number of hours a week; and that no man who wears the union label shall exert himself in order to earn an exceptional fee or reward. As a speaker at the Trades Hall succinctly put it the other night, "it is the duty of each man to get as much wages for as little work as possible!" The Sydney Labor Council has voiced its conception of perfect labor conditions by indicating that it intends to fight for a forty-four-hour week, a minimum wage of eight shillings a day, and the abolition of overtime for miners and those who have worked eight hours a day. The ideal unionist, then, is a man who is content to drudge along from year to year performing the work that falls to his lot in a more or less perfunctory manner, sinking his identity in the common ruck, setting his face sternly against any ambition to get on in the world, and doing his utmost to deter and prevent any individual in his own class from aspiring to higher things.

We saw the other day how the miners at Huntly showed their resentment against members of the union who were placed in positions of trust by their employers, presumably because of special abilities and qualifications. The experience of those who employ labor is that artisans are becoming less and less proficient and more and more exacting. The unionist no longer takes a pride in his work; no longer embraces opportunities for self-culture and improvement; no longer feels the necessity of rising above the daily round and common toil. The leisure which it is his will to enjoy is largely wasted in frivolous pursuits, and the example which is handed down to successive generations is altogether enervating and deleterious.

Labor, revelling in its new-found freedom from the restraints and restrictions of the ancient régime under which individualism had unfettered play and the worker was the slave and chattel of the capitalist, adopts an arbitrary and independent attitude, and sets at nought the conventional ties which formerly bound master and man in a common bond of sympathy. The worker has been taught to regard the employer as a distasteful necessity, and he sells his labor to him with spare and grudging hand. The wage-earner is not wholly to blame. In many cases employers have by passive resistance to the aims of labor, and by a too close insistence on the letter of the contract, induced a spirit of retaliation. Even yet there are captains of industry who by generous treatment and a broad conception of their responsibilities towards their employés win their sympathetic coöperation; but this cordial atmosphere is often disturbed by the machinations of the professional agitator, who is aften as unscrupulous as exacting.

The outlook is distinctly unpromising, unless existing conditions can be regarded as a passing phase. Relief may come from such experiments as are being promoted by Sir Christopher Furness and others in the direction of profit-sharing. If men can be actively interested in the projects upon which they are engaged by being made participants in the gains which their handiwork produces, they will not only be taught to value the advantages of coöperation, but to appreciate the difficulties which are frequently encountered in the promotion of industries. Ca' canny may only be a passing phase. The lions may not always be content to be led by asses. As education becomes diffused ambition may take the place of indifference, and energy and enterprise become characteristic, first of the unit and then of the whole nation. 'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Unionites Demanding More Wages.

The union tile layers and glaziers of Chicago have quit work on the finishing of a number of new apartment-houses in Chicago because their demand for increase of wages was not granted. Only about 400 men comprise the complement of both unions. The tile setters have been receiving $5 a day, and their carfare additional, and are now demanding $5.60 a day and carfare. Their helpers also ask increases. The glaziers ask an advance of 5 cents an hour.

On the other hand their employers declare that they have already been paying the highest wages in the trade in the United States, and that for many years the hours and working conditions have been the easiest and most favorable for any class of men employed in the building trades. Unless the unions recede from their demands and the men return to work the operators will make an endeavor to obtain other men that the buildings on which work has been suspended may be finished.

Unionism Extraordinary.

The absurd extent to which union arrogance will go is shown by charges brought against a Catholic priest in Napier, New Zealand. Rev. James Goggan was charged with committing a breach of the Napier painters' and decorators' award in employing a lad named John Connell without first employing a journeyman, as required by the award, and also with employing the lad without first having him duly indentured.

The inspector of awards said defendant instructed Connell, his house boy, to do some painting at the new Catholic Infants' school. The secretary of the Painters' Union approached the defendant and pointed out that the boy was not apprenticed. The defendant refused to apprentice the boy, and said he would contest the matter.

The solicitor for the defendant said the boy was an orphan, and had been taken in hand by Father Goggan, who employed hkm at the rate of 29s a week. Father Goggan had a good deal of painting work done by contract, but as a practical man he, assisted by the boy, executed some of the painting of the school.

Legal questions were raised, and the magistrate reserved judgment.

Dull Times in England.

Statistics compiled by the Managing Committee of the British Federation of Trade Unions show that there are now 7,000,000 of the people of the British Isles who are without regular means of earning a living. This enormous aggregate includes, of course, the workingmen out of employment and those who are dependent upon them. Various trades are mentioned in which from 10 to 25 per cent. of the members are without work.

Strikers Will Lose.

The Chicago Shipbuilding Company announced a few days ago that it would be necessary to cut wages. The result was that eighty workmen at once went on strike. As the company faces a condition and not a theory the strikers are now notified that unless they return to work the plant will be shut down and the work sent to Milwaukee. Such a result would affect not only the strikers, but many other toilers employed in other branches of the plant will be thrown out of work. At Milwaukee no trouble has been experienced with employés.

Union Proselyting.

Because a dozen men employed in the hat factory at Woodbine, N. J., refused to join the ranks of the strikers, 400 of the latter created a riot a few days ago, during which several persons were injured and others badly scared by the firing of a revolver by some one in the building. Abraham Willert, one of the men engaged in the fight, was struck in the head and rendered unconscious by a brick which was hurled by some one in the mob.

Because of the trouble and the fear of other efforts to intimidate the men now employed in the place, the managers deemed it best to close down the plant for the day.

The employés of the hat factory went on strike after having been refused shorter hours.

IN LITIGATION.

Arizona Supreme Court Has Reversed Lower Court in Cieneguita Decision.

The affairs of the Cieneguita Copper Company, which have been in litigation for several years, have been further tangled by a decision of the Supreme Court of Arizona, reversing that of the lower court, declaring the organization of the Nevada company, which took over the assets of the Arizona corporation, void and appointing a receiver. The Cieneguita was organized in Mexico, and a holding company of the same name in Arizona. Later this company turned over its properties and stock to the company organized in Arizona, over the protest of minority stockholders, who brought suit to annul the transfer. The decision was against the minority stockholders, and on appeal was reversed by the Supreme Court, according to a telegram received here yesterday. Nearly 400 shares are owned in California, it is asserted, and an effort will be made to reorganize under different management.

How Many Can Answer?

If you would come to a realization of the human ignorance of the average man and woman, gather together 100 and ask a few simple questions, something like these: How many ribs has a man? How many joints in a baby's spine? How many joints are in a man's spine? Is a man's spine longer than a woman's? On which side is the liver? Where is the spleen? How large is the stomach? How long are the intestines? There are two lungs, one on the right, the other on the left; one has two lobes; how many has the other? Are your bones solid or hollow? Do the bones of a bird contain marrow? How many toes has a dog? Does a cow have teeth? Can a horse breathe through his mouth? Why does a dog pant with his tongue out? Why do most perching birds roost on one leg when asleep? Why does a fox terrier run on three feet? What makes a cat purr?—[New York Press.

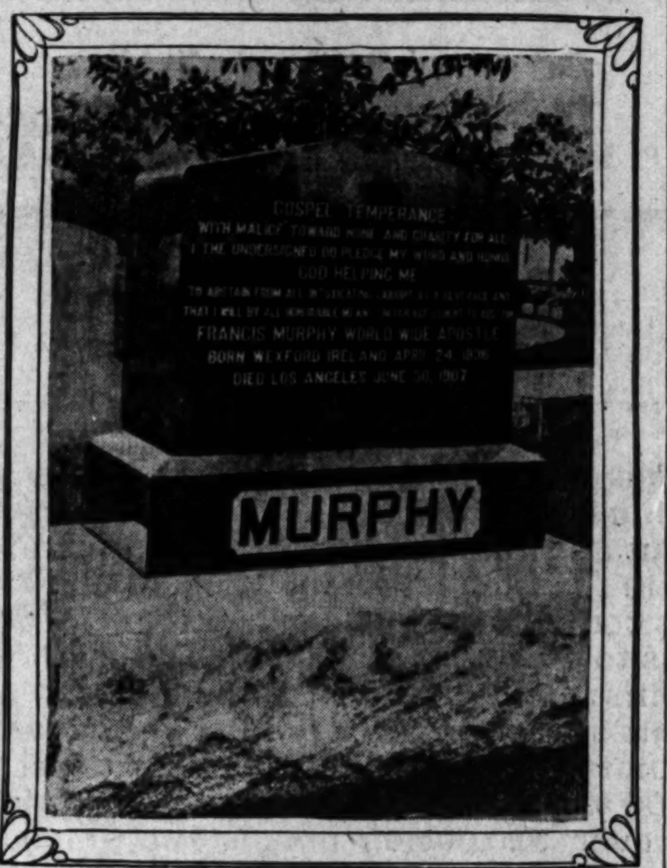
Coldest City in World.

Yakutsk, in eastern Siberia, is said to be the coldest city in the world. It is the great commercial emporium of eastern Siberia and the capital of the province of Yakutsk, which in most of its area of 1,517,063 square miles is a bare desert, the soil of which is frozen to a great depth. Yakutsk consists of about four hundred houses of European structure, standing apart. The intervening spaces are occupied by winter yoorts, or huts of the northern nomads, with earthen roofs. The doors are covered with hairy hides and the windows are of ice.—[Exchange.

Several Kinds of Bird.

The matrimonial experiences of an Indiana woman read like an essay on ornithology. Her maiden name was Partridge, and she had three husbands, named, respectively, Robin, Sparrow and Quayle. She apparently has a liking for birds—not for cold bottles.—[Providence Bulletin.

"MURPHY PLEDGE" INSCRIBED ON MONUMENT.



GOSPEL TEMPERANCE
FRANCIS MURPHY WORLD WIDE APOSTLE
BORN WEXFORD IRELAND APRIL 24 1836
DIED LOS ANGELES JUNE 30 1907
MURPHY

With a massive block of gray granite, typical of the man who lies beneath the green sward, the family of Francis Murphy, deceased temperance apostle, marked his resting place on Friday evening.

A plain, square-cornered monument, with no undue ornamentation, and inscribed with the famous "Murphy Pledge," is a graceful and suitable memorial which will meet the approval of the tens of thousands of admirers, in all parts of the world, of the tender, sunny and eloquent Francis Murphy.

Standing prominently in a beautiful spot in Rosedale Cemetery, it will become the shrine where redeemed men from afar will go and do reverence to his memory. The inscription reads as follows:

"Gospel Temperance. With malice toward none, and charity for all, I, the undersigned, do pledge my word of honor, God helping me, to abstain from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and that I will, by all honorable means, encourage others to abstain.

Francis Murphy, world-wide apostle.

Born, Wexford, Ireland, April 24, 1836.

Died, Los Angeles, Cal., June 30, 1907."

On the granite base of the monument, the word "Murphy" is cut in large square letters.

ADVERTISING BRINGS 'EM.

The Tulare County Board of Trade held its annual meeting here yesterday, representatives being present from Visalia, Tulare, Porterville, Dinuba, Exeter and Lindsay. The report of Secretary Miot showed that a great deal of good work has been done by the board during the past year, especially in an advertising way, and as a result more people are coming to Tulare county to make their homes than ever before. It was also definitely decided that Tulare county would have a special exhibit at the Seattle fair. The display will be largely devoted to oranges.

At the regular meeting of the City Council last night bids were opened for the new City Hall building. There were three, ranging from $28,500 to $50,000. The Trustees intend to spend only $25,000 for the building and so none was accepted. The lowest was laid on the table, however, and the plans will probably be scaled down so as to come within the $25,000 figure.

The Pacific Coast Eucalyptus Company has begun the work of setting out a tract of 480 acres to eucalypti near Monson, in the northern part of Tulare county. It is the intention of the corporation to plant out in the neighborhood of 4000 acres within the next two years. A nursery will be established in Visalia next fall and several million trees will be propagatad for the use of the company and for sale.

A carload of orange nursery stock arrived at Klink station, near Visalia, yesterday, and was found to be infected with red scale. The trees were from Southern California. The shipment has been condemned by Commissioner Tout and will either be returned to the shipper or destroyed. The Tulare county Horticultural Commissioners are watching closely every shipment of trees into the county to prevent pests being introduced into the county orange groves, which are now clean.

R. J. Washburn, local agent for the Santa Fé, left yesterday for Kansas City, having been called there by the serious illness of his mother. During his absence M. Pettit of Fresno will act as agent.

ARMONA SAFE SOAPED.

HANFORD, March 29.—The postoffice at Armona, four miles from this place, was entered last night by burglars, who blew open the safe with dynamite, and escaped with $140. Two men were arrested on suspicion today and lodged in the Hanford jail. One had in his possession a small bottle containing nitro-glycerine and a piece of soap, similar to that left in the postoffice by the cracksmen.

The Lapp and His Herds.

In April, the Lapp lets his reindeer loose to wander as they please, and when the mosquitoes begin to abound (about midsummer) collects his herd simply by catching one deer, fitting it with a bell and trusting to instinct (which leads the animals to gather in herds for protection against the mosquitoes) to do the rest. In a cool summer, when mosquitoes are few, this instinct does not come into play, and it is almost impossible to bring the reindeer together.—[Exchange.

The largest plant is at Redondo, where 15,000 kilowatts of electrical energy are supplied by three 18,000 volt generators, the largest in the world. All of the power generated here is used by the street railway companies. The Kern River plant has a rated capacity of 10,000 kilowatts. The other stations vary from 8750 kilowatts, generated at Sixth and Central avenue, to the 150-kilowatt plant on the water canal between Riverside and Colton.

The power is brought into Los Angeles over several sets of wires at a high voltage. That from Kern River is received at a pressure of 50,000 volts over six wires, while that from the eastern power stations is sent in at a lower voltage.

All of the output of the Redondo plant is delivered to the street car companies as a 500-volt current. Many pumping plants are supplied with power over wires carrying 15,000 volts, but the average line for consumers in this city carries 2000 volts.

Power is graded down through pole transformers into two and three phase currents of 200 and 460 volts. These pole transformers are big black boxes that can be seen in any part of the city. They act in the same manner as a gate on a canal, allowing only a certain portion of the energy carried by the wire to go through to the smaller wire.

The wires supplying the municipal arc lights are charged with 5000 volts.

The electric current used in and about Los Angeles that is supplied by the Pacific Light and Power Company would light 720,000 sixteen-candle-power lamps.

The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Company generates power by steam only. It has a plant of 16,777 horsepower capacity and supplies three-phase alternating currents of 110 and 220 volts for illuminating and general power purposes, and of 500 volts for operating elevators.

ARCHITECTS.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks for the people. Mr. Morrison declared that the action was brought chiefly to test the constitutionality of the law. Since that has been decided, not only here, but in a similar case brought in San Francisco, the board will proceed to prosecute all persons practicing without certificates.

The decision of the court is far reaching. On it depended the final outcome of legislation appointing a State board in New York, where architects heretofore have been unlicensed. The only other States in which there are boards of architecture are New Hampshire, New Jersey, and one of the Middle West States. In several legislation to establish boards is pending.

It is held that architects are in a profession which has a great deal to do with human safety, and that they should therefore be licensed in the same manner as physicians, attorneys and dentists. There are boards for these professions in nearly every State and it is a criminal offense to practice medicine, dentistry or law without a certificate.

The leading architects of Los Angeles are in favor of the license, since it prevents persons who have not had sufficient training from establishing themselves in the profession. A single mistake in the erection of a large building might endanger the lives of hundreds of people. Octavius Morgan, a member of the State Board of Architecture, said:

EXAMINATION NOT SEVERE.

"The examination of the board is not severe, but embodies the essentials in which every man, who would properly construct a building, must be versed. The applicant for a certificate must be up on construction, design, mechanics, plumbing, electricity, and a history of architecture of the past, with achievements of the present; on rendering estimates and supervision. There have been very few failures since the board was placed in operation in 1902.

"For some reason, the work of eradicating the incompetent architects has never been taken up spiritedly until the last year. We have been waiting for the final assurance of the higher courts that the law is constitutional, and, having found that it is, we shall now go ahead and prosecute any man who publicly advertises himself as an architect but who does not hold a license.

"In this way the citizens of the communities of California will be assured of a higher class of buildings.

"The board is not at all a political organization, but is composed of practical architects, who are competent to judge of the merits of the examination papers of an applicant. The laws enacted are not only for those who are regulated by them, but for the benefit of the greater majority whom they must serve. There has never been a time when the State board has defined the limitations of architecture, nor is that the intention, but it is merely to protect the public from the incompetence of those not fitted for the profession."

If It Disappears, It's Eczema

How to Tell Whether a Skin Affection Is an Inherited Blood Disease or Not.

Sometimes it is hard to determine whether a skin affection is a sign of a blood disorder or simply a form of eczema. Even physicians are often puzzled in their diagnosis. The best way for any one afflicted is to go to the Owl Drug Co. or any good druggist who handles pure drugs, and obtain 50 cents' worth of poslam. Apply this, and if the itching stops at once and the trouble is cured in a few days it may be set down as having been eczema, as this is the way poslam acts in the worst cases of eczema, and in curing acne, herpes, blotches, tetter, piles, salt rheum, rash, barber's and other forms of itch, scaly scalp, and all surface skin affections.

Those who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York, can secure, by mail free of charge, a supply sufficient to cure a small eczema surface or clear a complexion over night and remove pimples in twenty-four hours.

Tree Splits Itself.

Now comes a nurseryman with the announcement that he has succeeded in growing a self-splitting wood tree. This benefactor of the human race is none other than Adrian Anck, the noted expect of forestry who gave the world the seal fir tree and the dried apple tree.

If there is any task that has caused religious men to become backsliders, and impelled country boys to leave home it is the job of cutting wood. To split enough kindling to last over Saturday and Sunday is a job that everybody wants to leave for some other person, and to saw sufficient lengths to keep the fires going until spring is a terrific strain on the human system, says the Philadelphia North American.

With these thoughts in mind Mr. Anck set to work upon his self-splitting tree. It is not quite perfected, as the knots do not cleave easily, but for ordinary use the tree is practical.

All that is necessary is to chop the tree down. As it falls it divides itself into stove lengths and these in turn split themselves in kindling sizes. Anck says that he arrives at this end by crossing the much-jointed bamboo with the shell-bark tree.—[Kansas City Journal.

—New Spring Coats

To Be Worn With the New Suit

WHILE no manufacturers or tailors have a monopoly of styles or fabrics, it is certain that the "Goodyear" is the only store in Los Angeles showing absolutely correct styles in Men's and Women's Coats for Spring. The Coat business is our specialty. We are not dabbling in a dozen other lines, resulting in indifferent success in all of them.

Your Spring wardrobe is not complete without a "Goodyear" Coat. The two prime elements which go to make up a strictly desirable garment—style and workmanship—are a feature of every Coat in the house. A visit will convince YOU.

For Women—Models in Rich Silk Mohairs and Duo-tone Silks .... $17.50 to $25
Season's Smartest Productions in Men's Imported "Priestley" Coats $12.50 to $30

This Week's Special—$32.50 Black Tibet Suits $25

Here's a special that will be popular. The "old reliable" Black Tibet Cloth—the modern substitute for broadcloth—made to your measure at $25 a suit—regularly $32.50. For semi-dress, informal, theater and general wear there's no suiting like Black Tibet. The $25 price for this week only.

ALSO SPECIALS IN GUNMETAL GRAYS.

We Want To Make Your New Spring Suit

Our line of Spring Suitings has been endorsed by hundreds of the city's most discriminating dressers. Opening week found our staff of cutters and tailors very busy turning out the new suits to everybody's satisfaction.

The season's patterns and shades appeal to the man who knows good clothes. The Scotch Cheviots, English Tweeds and Fancy Serges offer a wide selection in sage and olive greens, London smoke, granite grays, new browns—in a host of patterns—stripes, shadow stripes, checks and mixtures.

The best tailoring talent in the city will build a suit expressly for you at $25 to $50. Correctness of style, perfection of fit and all-round satisfaction go with every suit.

The Drama---Players, Playhouses, Theatrical Chit-Chat.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

By Julian Johnson.

Mr. Broadhurst says he wouldn't sell "The Dollar Mark" for $100,000.

The dramatist uttered this financial pronunciamento standing in the Belasco lobby the other day, watching an eager throng elbowing each other to give him their money.

With "The Man of the Hour" going at the rate of $70,000 a year, Lillian Russell's piece, "Wildfire," touching about $11,000 a week gross, with several of the common or garden variety of pieces dubbing around in stock for miserable little sums like $500 or $1000 per week, total, and with this play in fine prospect, Mr. Broadhurst seems in a fair way to become the thing he makes money by despising—a sort of trust.

I ventured as much.

"Not on your life," responded Broadhurst, promptly, "I'll be mighty lucky if I succeed in holding onto a little of it. I'm no money multiplier, like the Amalgamated crowd."

The success of Broadhurst, as exemplified by this play and "The Man of the Hour," illustrates the worth of taking that which lies nearest at hand.

Richard Carle says, "As Romeo I am an onion—or some such piffle—and I'll wager that as a writer of the old-idea romantic drama, a la Marion Crawford, etc., Mr. Broadhurst would have been a fine forty horse-power garlic.

"I'm rotten on that sort of thing," said Broadhurst, when our talk veered to the sentimental play. And that admission prefaced the word I had been awaiting ever since meeting Mr. Broadhurst. We watched the street traffic in silence for a few moments. Then he spoke confidentially.

"When I accumulate nerve enough," he said. "I'm going to write a play without a love interest. It's not the expected, of course, but I hold that a man who has the daring to do the unexpected is the only one who makes for progress. And why shouldn't we have a play without a love story? There is no other human interest that is considered absolutely essential to dramatic progress.

"It was only a little while ago that a love story between married people was considered a tame sort of thing for the real drama. Managers refused plays in which the spoons were held by any other than blushing young beginners at the game of love. Now, practically the reverse is true."

After that we turned to "The Dollar Mark" as a subject.

Broadhurst said "The Dollar Mark" was turned down by a prominent New York manager because he—the manager—felt hat it wouldn't interest women. "And,' commented Broadhurst, "the better portion of its audiences have been women, and women have taken the keenest interest in it."

We had a heated argument over the reason therefor.

Broadhurst maintained that it was because women in the past ten years had come to concern themselves more and more with what interested their men folk.

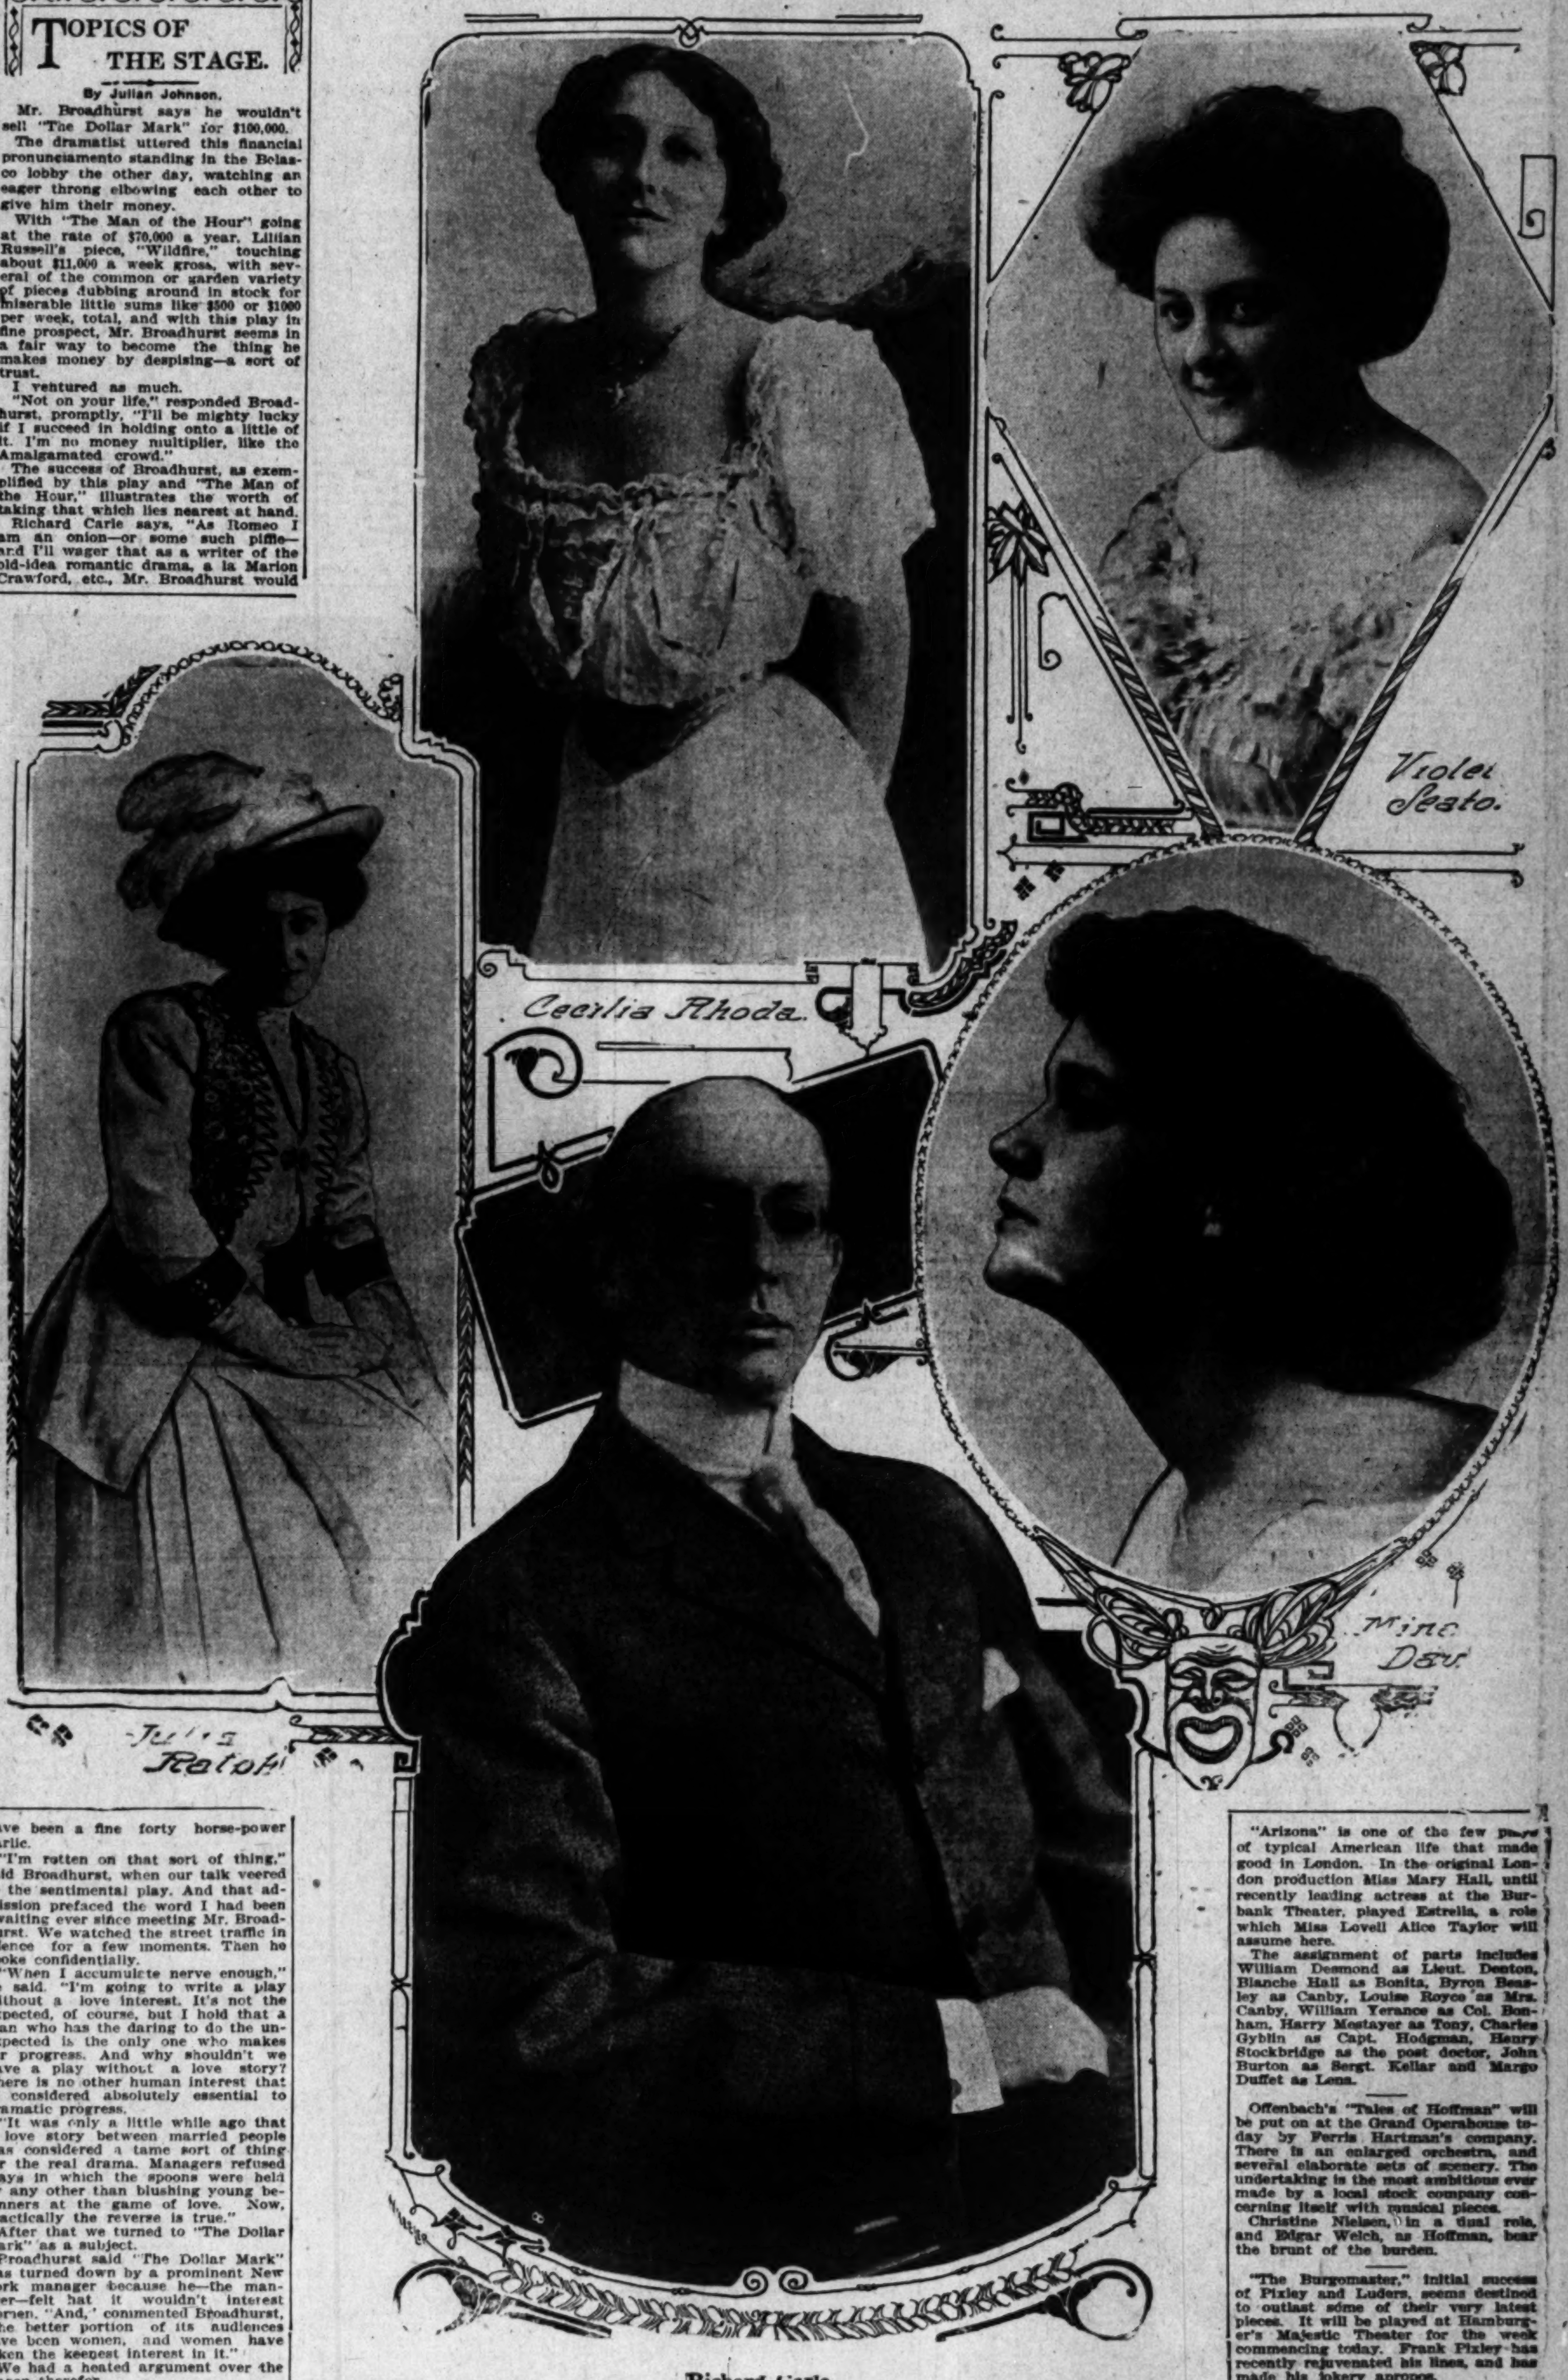
I held that it was because, during this same ten years, femininity has learned more of business and has become more practicaly informed concerning the evolution of the dollar than in all the years that have gone before.

There's probably truth in both of these hypotheses.

"The Dollar Mark" evidences some more concerning the new fashion in writing plays. Until recently it was considered quite necessary to have a four-act piece in which the climax came in the third act, with the fourth act left for a mild, gentle Laura Jean Libby sort of explanation about how it all happened, anyway. Nowadays, when you know what the matter is, or how it's going to be fixed, the play's done. The author who henceforth ventures to linger after he has slipped the feline from her sackcloth inclosure will be nightly actuated by a straggling line of exiters, starting the moment the plot coughs up its secret and ending only wtih the final get-up at the last curtain.

"When the boy tells his astonished father that he has really been the broker's partner,' says Broadhurst, "I'm done. I've only a minute left to get it all over, or they'll be putting their hats on and getting out. So I get busy, and the curtain comes down in a hurry."

But most of all Broadhurst potently illustrates the worth of present-day subjects in his most recent writing. There is more romance in the world today than ever before. The empire of the dollar is more alluring to the imagination than the empire of spear and sword, despite the glamor of a forgotten chivalry. As education and human knowledge advance, just so much more wonderful does human life become.



Richard Carle,

who will inaugurate his first Coast visit since his rise to stardom by a short Los Angeles engagement this week. Mr. Carle is playing his most recent personal pleasantry, "Mary's Lamb." The young women are of his company.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Richard Carle and his company will present "Mary's Lamb" at the Mason Operahouse during the last three days of this week.

In the words of Mr. Carle's facetious press agent, "Mary's Lamb" began bleating in public March 2, 1908, since which time it has enjoyed two extended engagements in Chicago, and was presented for four months in New York.

The central character is Leander Lamb, hen-pecked husband of Mary Miranda Lamb, whence the title of the piece. Leander has been qiescent under petticoat rule for many years, when he is suddenly stirred to life by an irresistible infatuation for an actress. He meets the charmer in the studio of an artist friend, and when the two are surprised by the wife, Leander pretends that he has been walking in his sleep. Here we have the start, and the finish of a present-day musical farce may always be imagined.

Mr. Carle plays the lamb, Julia Ralph is the wife and Cecilia Rhoda appears as the actress. The rest of the cast is large, as this is a genuine first company.

Augustus Thomas's most successful stage work, "Arizona," will be presented at the Burbank Theater this week, commencing with a matinée performance today. This is its first time by a stock company.

"Arizona" is one of the few plays of typical American life that made good in London. In the original London production Miss Mary Hall, until recently leading actress at the Burbank Theater, played Estrella, a role which Miss Lovell Alice Taylor will assume here.

The assignment of parts includes William Desmond as Lieut. Denton, Blanche Hall as Bonita, Byron Beasley as Canby, Louise Royce as Mrs. Canby, William Yerance as Col. Bonham, Harry Mestayer as Tony, Charles Gyblin as Capt. Hodgman, Henry Stockbridge as the post doctor, John Burton as Sergt. Kellar and Margo Duffet as Lena.

Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" will be put on at the Grand Operahouse today by Ferris Hartman's company. There is an enlarged orchestra, and several elaborate sets of scenery. The undertaking is the most ambitious ever made by a local stock company concerning itself with musical pieces.

Christine Nielsen, in a dual role, and Edgar Welch, as Hoffman, bear the brunt of the burden.

"The Burgomaster," initial success of Pixley and Luders, seems destined to outlast some of their very latest pieces. It will be played at Hamburger's Majestic Theater for the week commencing today. Frank Pixley has recently rejuvenated his lines, and has made his jokery apropos.

Harry Hermsen will be seen this year in the part of Stuyvesant, which Gus Weinberg played here last year.

Phemie Lockhart will be seen as Willie Asterbilt, Joseph F. Rooney as Terence O'Rafferty, Fred Bailey as E. Booth Tarkington, Leo Kendall as Doodle von Kull, Marie Grandpre as Ruth, and a variety of others in character assignments.

A good supporting chorus is promised.

"Thirty Dollars," a sketch which heads the Orpheum bill this week, is pronounced a powerful affair. It is from the pen of Sewall Collins, and Frank Nelson and a complete little company, including Dorothy DeShelle, interpret it. The skit hinges on race-track betting, though the atmosphere is decidedly not horsey.

An act appealing especially to children is Tschernoff's circus troupe of dogs, ponies and pigeons. Goldsmith and Hoppe are a team of typical vaudeville music-makers. Nonette is an attractive young woman, recently featured in "Vassar Girls," who is also a skilled musician. Violin selections are the chief feature of her act.

The holdovers include the prize-ring dramalet, "At the Sound of the Gong;" the Amoros sisters in their acrobatic stunt, Tony Wilson and Heloise in the same, and Imro Fox, the talkative conjurer.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," as produced at the Auditorium by Manager Crawford's company, will continue for another week.

The features of this revival are the Topsy ballet, the dancing of Miss Swan Wood, and the interesting individual work of Miss Olga Stech, Maude Beatty and Billy Onslow.

"The Dollar Mark" will be continued at the Belasco Theater for a third week. Broadhurst's new play has proven an unusual attraction, and with Lewis Stone and David M. Hartford as pivotal personages is one of the most notable pieces of contemporary life yet offered upon a local stage.

Lukens's trained lions, seven in number, will be the feature at the Los Angeles Theater this week. They work inside a strongly-built barricade, and perform numerous feats.

The rest of the bill is of considerable promise. Howard Truesdell will present his one-act comedy, "Two Men and a Bottle." Mr. Truesdell is supported by a company of four. Deave's mannikin actors will offer a mechanical burlesque on "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Joe Edmonds, who created the role of the Scotchman in "The Maid and the Mummy," will do a monologue stunt. The Van Diemans, women acrobats and gymnasts, will provide the athletic part of the programme.

The bill for the Main-street Regal Theater will include Garrett and Loftus, in a comedy musical act; Bessie Evans, singing comedienne; Wilbur S. Westerman, eccentric monologist, and Bessie Chaddock, in songs and specialties.

The principal attraction at the Grand-avenue Walker Theater this week is Mysterious Roberts, in "The Milk-can Mystery." Roberta is placed in a large can, and the can, with its lid padlocked down, is then filled to the brim with water. Roberta then appears in another portion of the theater. The act is a novel change on the familiar trunk mystery.

Other attractions on this bill include Will Tomkins, monologist; Loftin and Stuart, in a one-act playlet, "Spooneyville," a Nell Brinkley inspiration; La Nole brothers, in performances on the bar and rings; Luella Davis, soprano; Belle Barron, character comedienne, and Joseph Manley, in illustrated songs.

Manager Fischer's current offering is "The Pawnbroker," a musical comedy dealing with the marital troubles that befall a Yiddish husband and a Hibernian wife.

Max Bloom has the title role, Ben Dillon will give a burlesque impersonation of the wife, Tracy McDermott is the rent collector, and Frank Vack is the latter's tough brother. Nellie Montgomery, Pearl Jardiniere and Dot Raymond, in character parts, complete the cast of principals.

Director Frank Blair of the Unique offers "The Astronomer," a musical comedy, for the coming week at that house. Jupiter, Venus, Mercury and Mars are the principal factors of entertainment. The plot concerns an invention of one Jupiter McMars, called the monoscope, which draws the inhabitants of Mars to the earth. One B. L. Planet of Mars, Pa., gets into the inventor's laboratory, and is taken by that person to be a star-dweller, instead of an ordinary citizen of Pennsylvania. Upon this mistake hangs the comedy of the piece.

Principals in the piece include Will Armstrong, Morey Long, May Parker, Laurel Atkins, Lillian Sutherland, John J. Martin and Jack Curtis.

PLAY-POINTS.

Interesting Paragraphs Concerning the Doings of Actors, Actresses and Playwrights.

Lawrence Irving, son of the late Sir Henry Irving, made his initial appearance in vaudeville in Boston a few days ago. His "team-mate" is Mabel Hackney. Such was their success that Mr. Irving was compelled to make a speech.

Edmund Day's novel, "Squire Finn," is being dramatized by Eugene Presbrey and will be produced next September at McVicker's Theater under the title of "The Circus Man," with Macklyn Arbuckle in the leading role.

Clyde Fitch has named the central character of his new comedy, "The Bachelor," after the oldest dramatic critic in America, George Goodale. This piece, by the way, will serve to exploit Charles Cherry as a star.

After celebrating the 400th performance of "Three Twins," the company went to a restaurant, had something to eat, heard a few speeches, and then each member received as a gift a gold fountain pen. It does not always happen thus.

The receipts of the Wallack benefit amounted to $3000, which will be held in trust by the Theatrical Managers' Association for Mrs. Lester Wallack, who sent a touching letter of thanks, which was read by Wilton Lackaye.

William Gillette is to assist in the staging of "An Englishman's Home," the third act of which is worked out by much the same methods as those employed in Mr. Gillette's success, "Held by the Enemy." In that production Sherlock Holmes, Jr., was star and stage manager in one person.

Coquelin kept alive "Le Juif Polonais" (The Polish Jew) for a long time, and lately Guitry has assumed for his own the role of Mathias. This piece, it will be recalled, was the original of "The Bells" that served Sir Henry Irving so long.

A society has been formed with the avowed purpose of keeping a German theater alive in New York. Both the companies have suffered from lack of patronage for some time. One of the two has passed into the hands of American managers already, and only the old house in Irving Place is left.

Julia Marlowe is to go to South America about September 1. Arrangements for her appearance in all the principal cities on the continent have been made already. Her repertory will include several Shakespearean dramas, "The Goddess of Reason" and "Don Quixote."

The wedding of Fanny Rice occurred in Colorado Springs last week. After Miss Rice completes her bookings she will retire from the stage. A report in one of the newspapers was to the effect that she had forgotten the name of her first husband, who was Dr. George W. Purdy. Her present husband is P. W. Ryder.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

By Julian Johnson.

Ferris Hartman and his little band of singers, who have been valiantly interpreting light opera and musical comedy all winter, will take a hardy plunge into deeper musical waters today, presenting the last stage composition of Offenbach, "The Tales of Hoffman."

To the best of my knowledge this will be the premier of "The Tales of Hoffman" in Los Angeles. This work, which had lain in obscurity for many years, was revived with great success by the astute Mr. Hammerstein a little more than a year ago, on his Manhattan stage. The American contralto, Eleanore de Cisneros, and the great French baritone, Maurice Renaud, were accredited with superb impersonations, and Dalmores, Gilibert, Jomelli and Zeppilli also did very good work. Hammerstein has produced the piece at frequent intervals this year with practically the same cast, excepting De Cisneros and Jomelli.

The only other recent production of great success in this country, as far as I am able to learn, was the revival in English in San Francisco this summer, in which our old friends Tom Persse and Edith Mason sang principal roles for many weeks, to delighted audiences.

Offenbach is better known for his "Grand Duchess," "La Belle Helene," "Madame Favart," "La Perichole," "La Princesse de Trebizonde," and others of the formal opera comique school, but to the "Contes d'Hoffman" the composer pinned the faith of his declining years, and it was one of the sorrows of his last days that he was unable to see a performance of his concluding work.

"The Tales of Hoffman" scored an unexpected success, and was given 101 nights during its first year, but it struck a tremendous and almost insurmountable obstacle in the destruction of the famous Ring theater, Vienna, as it was being given there when that theater was destroyed. German theatrical superstition then relegated the plan to an inconspicuous rear.

Offenbach himself called "The Tales of Hoffman" an "opera fantastique." It is certainly unique among music dramas, inasmuch as any one of the acts might be transposed or entirely eliminated without interfering with the general plot in the least.

In the prologue the hero, the German poet, Hoffman, is shown among a lot of roistering students in a tavern. He is dejected and sullen. Asked the reason, he explains that he has had a number of love affairs, each of which turned out disastrously. He is requested to relate his experience and instead of relating them, the audience sees them enacted.

The first act is located in Milan, and the object of the poet's love is an automaton. The second is a Viennese courtesan, who, after inducing Hoffman to kill his rival, turns her back upon him and departs in a gondola with still another lover. The third love affair has to do with a beautiful consumptive, the daughter of a music teacher. This young girl has been forbidden to use her voice, her physician advising that such use would surely result fatally. But, urged on by the demoniac Doctor Miracle, and by the picture of her mother, brought to life by him, the girl disobeys her doctor and sings herself to death.

Then the scene changes back to the tavern, with Hoffman still surrounded by his bibulous companions as he sings one of the great songs of the opera, "There, you have the story."

Edgar Walsh, the new tenor of the Hartman Company, will sing the role of Hoffman, while Christine Nielsen will have the triple role of the three young women, playing, in order, Olympia, Juliette and Antonia.

The orchestra of the Grand will be enlarged to twenty-four instruments.

This is without any doubt at all the most serious effort ever made by a

Elmer Wachtel.

The most important one-man exhibition of the year is that of Elmer Wachtel, which opened in the Blanchard gallery last Monday, and which will continue for another week. Thirty canvases are shown, all landscapes of California and Arizona. Every one of these canvases is a well-considered, carefully-painted picture, a phase of nature, a mood of the poet-painter, giving subtle and delicate pleasure alike to the eye and the spirit. All are beautiful, though perhaps not in the same degree. It would not be too much to say that at least three or four of them are veritable masterpieces in landscape painting, instinct with style as well as beauty.

For a dozen years and more this painter has studied, with a rarely single-hearted devotion, the countless aspects of Southern California's out-of-doors, putting down his impressions one by one, and ever gaining power and knowledge, till he stands today one of the strongest landscape painters in America, a country whose school of landscape painters is reckoned to be the most consummate, as regards feeling and execution, in the modern world of art. In truth, our landscapists have traveled fast and far away from the Hudson River school of fifty years ago, those conscientious but uninspired painters of "scenery."

For modern landscape painting is preëminently a thought, a mood, an impression of the painter, translated and transcribed from the out-door scene before him. Equally is it true that Mr. Wachtel is preëminently a modern of the moderns, for without an inner vision as clear and pure as truth itself, no man could paint the tremendous hills and mountains of California, with the fidelity to outward facts that this artist has always shown, without making "scenery" of them.

This, then, is Mr. Wachtel's glory and distinction, that he has painted our grandiose hills as they really are, and yet never once has made them scenic. These hills of his are the hills we know, so familiar to us that they have become almost commonplace to our dull vision. But he has seen them under the necromancy of moving clouds, the witchery of brooding sunlight and lingering shade, and has turned them into "something new and strange," giving them an epic solemnity and grandeur, with here and there a quick and vibrant touch of keen beauty which is truly lyric, a poignant sweetness to relieve the almost austere nobility.

Now and again, Mr. Wachtel has made brief excursions into other regions, painting Utah and Arizona with an understanding that approaches closely to what he knows of California. Notable in the Arizona group of the present exhibition are his exquisite sunsets, "Walpi" and "Desert Sunset," and his two moonlights, "The Citadel of the Hopes" and "Moonlit Mesa."

The complete and easy mastery of moods and materials which the artist displays in "The Land of Golden Light," "The Shadow of the Cañon," "The Solitude of the Hills," "Silvery Morning," and in many others of his California subjects, proves him, I think, a truly great landscape painter.

I regret to say that the closeness and subtleties of values render an adequate reproduction of Mr. Wachtel's paintings an impossibility. Rather than falsify the painter's work, I have preferred to let this little appreciation go without an illustration. The pictures themselves are to be seen in the Blanchard gallery all this week. No one who loves noble art can afford to pass them by.

For the Exposition.

Evelyn Almond Withrow, a well-known artist of San Francisco, is in Los Angeles, gathering up pictures, sculptures, etc., by Southern California artists for the art department of the California Building in the coming Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition to be held in Seattle next June.

Although Miss Withrow's work is not yet finished, she having passed only three days here, by the time she is through she will have visited over sixty different artists in painting, sculpture and craft work. This counting includes Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and vicinity.

Miss Withrow expresses herself as delighted and amazed at the forward stride which Los Angeles has already taken in art matters, and predicts a most brilliant future for us. She feels that there are both originality and power in most of the work she has inspected.

She will send from Southern California about fifty paintings, including canvases from J. Bond Francisco, Eugene Torrey, Benjamin Chambers Brown, Carl Oscar Borg, Charles S. Ward, Ralph Mocine, and pictures from Gamble, Wagner and Welch of Santa Barbara, and C. A. Fries of San Diego.

There will be ten or twelve statuettes and busts from different hands, notable among these being "The Dancing Indian," and a "Portrait Bust" by Alexander Stirling Calder. Miniatures on ivory will come from Miss Harland, Miss Ludovici, Mrs. Waterbury and others, and on porcelain from Mrs. Katherine Thomas. René de Quelin will contribute some beautiful examples of stained glass and interior decorations, and Mary Mott-Smith Cunningham, Idah Meacham Strobridge and others will show craft jewelry and book-binding.

The work of collecting in the North is still incomplete, but the final showing promises to be as good as that of the South. Such names as Keith, Wores, Cadenasso, Mathews, Partington, Goddard Gale are on the list.

The models of some of our best work architecturally will also be shown, and the hitherto unrepresented "pictures in tone and words"—the canvases in book form or musical publications of our California writers and musicians. Such names as Kelley, Fickenscher, Pratt, Zech, Luchesi, Troyer are listed, while the role of California writers is too long to be given. But books from the pens of Mary Austin, Gertrude Atherton, Jack London, Helen Hunt Jackson, and a score of others are promised.

There will be plenty of room in the handsome California building, the painters themselves being promised as much as 160 feet of wall space.

"The idea of the art exhibition," Miss Withrow declared the other day to me, "is to suggest the great possibilities of art in a new country, as yet unhampered by traditions in method, and to impel all to work honestly in the desire to manifest the truth, each in his own medium."

Work of the Fine Arts League.

The Fine Arts League has been working very quietly among us for the past year, but with such enthusiastic industry that the results of their labor are already big, with promise of much more in the near future. These immediate results are made plain in the following report, by Mrs. W. H. Housh, chairman of the Art Committee, to the board of directors of the league:

"Mr. President and Members of the Board: Your Art Committee has just been organized, with Mrs. Cora Lewis as vice-chairman and Mrs. W. J. Chambers as secretary. Other members of the committee are Mrs. J. O. Koepfli and Mrs. Herman W. Frank. The regular time of meeting for the committee will be 3:30 p.m. on the third Mondays.

"After long-continued study of the situation in its various phases, with an intimate knowledge of conditions prevailing in art circles of Los Angeles and vicinity, and following the instructions as specified in Section 2, Article XV, of the bylaws, regarding the duties of the Art Committee for the league, we have prepared recommendations.

"With a sincere desire to give credit where it is due, trusting to wound the feelings of none, and hoping to bring to the league the greatest service, we have formulated as follows:

"Believing that a number of artists have earned the right to a place of distinction in this community, that they will be as interested as we are in establishing and maintaining a high standard of excellence in our exhibitions, and wishing to give, as far as lies within our power, recognition of their work as an uplifting force in our midst, we recommend that the following-named artists be made honorary exhibitors of the Fine Arts League, and that each artist so designated be invited to keep one picture or one piece of sculpture, as may seem to him best, in the galleries of the league; the work so contributed to be sold or replaced at the discretion or convenience of the exhibitor.

"Honorary exhibitors of the Fine Arts League: William Keith, H. J. Breuer, Fernand Lungren, Robert Wagner, Jules Pages, Charles H. Grant, Elmer Wachtel, Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, Granville Redmond, William Lees Judson, Edith White, Benjamin Chambers Brown, J. Bond Francisco, Leonard Lester, John W. Clawson, Jean Mannheim, Jaul de Longpre, William Wendt, Julia Bracken Wendt, Marion Holden Pope, Hanson Puthuff, Joseph Greenbaum, Blanche Duggan Cole, Alexander Stirling Calder, Nannette Calder, L. E. Garden-Macleod, Helma Heynsen Jahn, René de Quelin, Regina O'Kane, Helen Coan, Antony Anderson, Lu Deen Christensen, Emilie S. Perry, Fannie Duvall, Frank P. Sauerwin, Norman St. Clair, C. P. Neilson, James E. McBurney, George F. Winterburn, Margaret Patterson, M. Eleanor Evans.

'We further recommend that the following-named committees of selection be appointed as judges of art and of special collections, respectively, for the Fine Arts League; the entire group of committees so designated to constitute the local jury of selection; each chairman of a committee of selection to be ex-officio a member of the Art Committee, and to report indirectly to the board of directors of the league.

"With the request that an extension of time be granted for the completion of the list of names for the Committee of Selection, this report, with its recommendations, is respectfully submitted."

Other artists in the northern part of the State, and in the East, later on will be made honorary exhibitors.

An exhibition will be held by the league about the first of April. It will include pictures from New York and by the honorary exhibitors. All the pictures will be by American painters. The place for holding the exhibition has not yet been determined upon.

Santa Monica.

THE celebration of St. Patrick's Day held at Columbia Hall Wednesday evening proved a pleasing social affair. It was conducted under the direction of the Sisters of the Academy of Holy Names. Joseph Scott of Los Angeles delivered an oration, and there were musical and literary numbers appropriate to the occasion.

There was a gay social time Wednesday evening among the members of the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias. The guests of the local lodge were the knights from Hollywood, who came to the beach to perform the third degree work. A smoker followed the lodge work.

Heath Seymour has returned to his home in Champlain, Ill., after having spent the winter with beach relatives.

The entertainer at the regular meeting of the Santa Monica Women's Club tomorrow afternoon will be Mrs.

OPEN AN ADVANCE CREDIT ACCOUNT

To Customers Who Prefer Cash Shopping:
Cash shopping is best. Most people do not care to buy on credit and therefore do not desire an ordinary charge account. Our system of accounts gives you many conveniences of a charge account, yet you pay cash—in the unusual way; your shopping money is earning interest up to the very moment you use it. Our system does away with the inconvenience of carrying money, writing checks and having goods sent C.O.D.

To Customers Who Prefer a Charge Account:
You can have a charge account in this cash store. By our unique plan you obtain the economies of our low cash prices, and can shop with all the speed and comfort of a credit account. Place your shopping money in our Advance Credit Department. This insures cash prices.

Our Plan is Simple:
Pay for your purchases by simply saying, "Charge it"—this affords the conveniences of a charge account. "Your money may be withdrawn in cash."

We do not do a banking business and only accounts for purchasing purposes are invited.

It's Parasol Time

Pretty Parasols $1

Lots of them. Lots of styles. Lots of ideas. Lots of colors. Lots of variety. They come in pongee and fancy cretons in solid browns, blues, reds. Straight or crook handles, in congo or bamboo wood. You really ought to look this lot over.

Dandy Parasols $2.50

A hundred ideas to choose from. Here's one of them. Taffetas in many colors. Some come in pongee with polka dots. There are straight handles of natural wood in selected stock. They're worth a good bit more than we're asking. All go at $2.50.

Daisy Parasols $3.50

The late conceits in white silk, with Dresden borders. 12 and 16 ribs. Late Tokio fashion. All the handles are straight, and the long Directoire and Beau Brummel styles. You ought to see these novelties, if only to keep posted. We are Fashion Headquarters.

Stylish Parasols $5

Best grade Taffeta in latest greens, blues, reds, tans, fancy hemstitched effects and fancy pattern bands. Come with 12 or 16 ribs. They, too, have the long stylish handles, popular in all the fashion centers of the day. Haute Nouveaute. Just received.

Elegant Parasols $7.50

Richest Spring fashions in high grade silks. Solid colors with fancy borders and the new Directoire, Beau Brummel and Imperial handles. Choice 12 or 16 rib construction. Right-up-to-the-minute in style and coloring. Be in the lead. It doesn't cost much here.

Exclusive Spring Millinery

Here's where we set the whole town talking again. The town's been talking about the Hamburger millinery ever since the chill came out of the air and the spring buds began blossoming. That's just what our millinery department looks like. There are blossoms and buds all over in the way of new models, new ideas, new patterns, Hamburger new millinery—new creations.

Exclusive Dress and Pattern Hats $25.00

Just about 50 of the most exclusive dress and pattern hats made of all the accepted high class materials and fashion's latest shades. Stylishly trimmed with blossoms, aigrettes and fancy feathers. Many new ones in the lot being shown for the first time Monday. Products of our own workroom and we are proud of every one of them. Prices? A very reasonable figure would be $35 and still they all go at $25.

Dressy Suit and Smart Tailored Street Hats $7.50

An entirely new lot of the prettiest and most up-to-date street hats shown. The assortment consists of the new pressed braids and of course, the shading, the tones, the trimmings, the combinations are all new. They're Hamburger hats; that really tells the whole story. The prettiest of the flowers, wings and quills and again—note the prices. $10 would be cheap for any one of them, most of them would be priced higher than that in exclusive stores and here they all go at one low price, $7.50.

Cable By Postal Telegraph

Our millinery and other foreign messages go by Postal. We do lots of "wire business."..We do it quick. Fully equipped branch at your service. (Main Floor.)

75c For These Plain and Fancy Wool Suitings
They're Fully Worth $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 a Yard

Your new Spring suit need only cost you very little money. But, of course, you must investigate bargain offerings like these. Even Hamburger's don't often get an opportunity to offer goods at the beginning of a season at so little money. Here are 200 pieces, including 54-inch serges and fancy suitings, 44-inch striped panamas, voiles, cream crepes and nuns veiling, 46-inch fancy wool taffetas, 48-inch fancy wool serges and 52-inch panamas. Yes, and there are a whole lot more of others, too. All choice materials.

20-INCH 85c, $1 AND $1.25 FANCY AND PLAIN SILKS, PER YARD 39c

We know just what kind of a crowd this offering is going to bring. But we're prepared for it. 5000 yards in the lot and it includes plain and fancy taffetas, warp prints, checks, stripes, plaids, white damask and ever so many more. Only your eyes can make you realize the enormity of such a special offering as this. Words count for little. MAIN FLOOR.

Exclusive New Spring Dresses and Suits

It's a value showing and a style showing. It's going to be a time-saving and a money-saving visit if you make a visit to our garment section Monday. There are values here such as you would never expect to find and especially at this season of the year. Here they are at the outset of spring and 'way, 'way underpriced. You'll be interested.

Suits, Dresses and Costumes

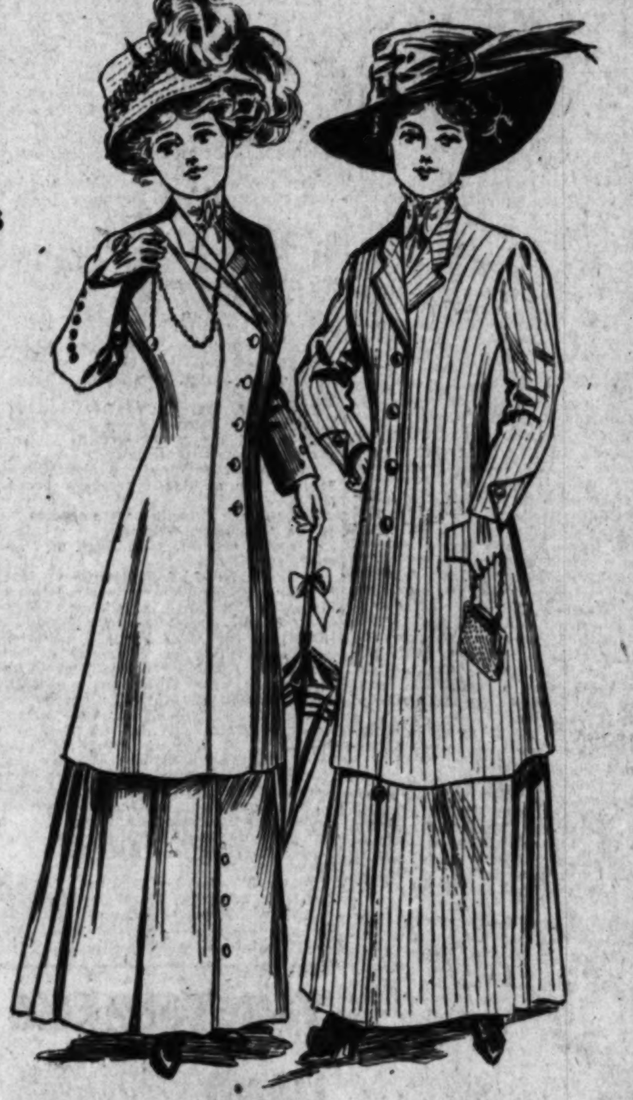
A combination offering making up a magnificent display in all the beautiful colors that are favorites this spring—stripes and plain serges—satin finished prunella cloth—chiffon weight of broadcloth—imported panamas, satins, messalines, foulards—Shantung and pongees. An unrivalled comparison of smart styles to please the most fastidious or the simplest taste, at small prices.

$25 Suits and Dresses Worth to $37.50

And, mind you, when we say they are worth to $37.50, that's a Hamburger statement. In other words, they are mostly worth $37.50 and there is not one in the lot that's worth any less than $32.50. Lengthy description would do no good; you must see these to really appreciate them. Do!

$45 Suits and Costumes Worth Up to $69

And again the value is not overstated. You could not begin to buy any one of these suits or costumes—even if you could find them eslewhere—for anything less than $69 or more. You are saving just $20 or more.



Just two swagger suggestions, sketched from the goods. The lines are right. See hundreds of other models in the department. We're proud and pleased to show them.

BITS OF VERSE.

My Mother Sleeps.

Blow gently, oh breeze, in the land of the hills:
Blow gently, and sing ye the song of the rills;
On the slope of the east where the evergreens grow
My mother sleeps sweet 'neath a mantle of snow.

Play lightly around the white stone that is there;
Not whiter that stone than her soft silken hair.
The breath of the morning awakes not to sigh
The sleeper who sleeps in the hills of the sky.

Rest kindly, oh rays of winter-worn sun,
Rest light on the mound. The sleeper is done
With care and with toil; the winds do not chill
The sleeper who sleeps on the brow of the hill.

—[William H. Phipps.

The Story It Tells to "Him."

A little blue story book, faded and worn,
Has its own hallowed place on the shelf,
Where the little queen heroine wise but forlorn
Calmly communes with herself.

But the page is turned down where the wonderful prince
Boldly knocks on the fierce ogre's door.
Ah, he has not looked at the story book since,
By which he once set so much store.

She said: "Daddy dear, don't read any more,
For somehow I can't understand."
So he turned the page down with the prince at the door
And held her wee feverish hand.
But while the prince waited his promise to keep,
And the little queen sat on her throne,
An angel band sang his wee girlie to sleep,
But left him awake and alone.

The brave little prince still waits with a frown
For the ogre to come or to go,
But the place in the book where the page is turned down
Is only for "him" to know.

Oh, little blue book, thy covers are dim,
But thy stories are happy and bright,
Save one little tale told only to him,
Which is breaking his poor heart tonight.

—[T. H. Kendall in Chicago Record-Herald.

For This One Day.

For this one day—
Grant us sight to see the road
Creep plainly, on our winding way.
Grant us strength to bear the load,
For this one day.

For this one day—
Guide out feet the road along.
Let not our weary footsteps stray;
Give us to lift a stave of song,
For this one day.

For this one day—
Let us not see the mud beneath,
But know the gold above the gray
And smell "the wind upon the heath,"
For this one day.

For this one day.
When bowed at eve for benison,
Grant that upon the uphill way
Our passing smile has gladdened one,
On this one day.

—[E. C. Valentine in Success Magazine.

The Sweetest Rose.

This is the sweet rose, sweet as sweet can be,
Jenny's lips, they touched it—she kissed the rose for me.
Best one in the garden, with its red an' white;
Never needs more sunshine than Jenny's eyes of light.
This is the sweet rose—sweeter still it seems
Than all the dreams that bless me when Jenny makes the dreams.
Garden's red with roses, but here's the heart that knows
That Jenny's lips can sweeten the sweet lips of a rose.

—[F. L. Stanton.

Futurity.

My youth to me was like a lovely flower,
All flushed with crimson of its own delight,
Its flamelike petals poised as if for flight,
Ethereal child of changing sun and shower,
Of misty dawn and night.

My age to me is like a golden fruit
Whose quality and sweetness have been won
From earth's rough use—from alternating sun
And rain and that dark soil wherein my root
Invisibly has run.

My soul to me is like a ripening seed
Which holds the heart of all that went before—
The flamelike flower and golden fruit in store,
Close-sealed, secure, in larger love and deed
To live and bloom once more.

—[Helen A. Saxon in Appleton's Magazine.

Where Sleep the Gods.

Tread softly through this vale of asphodel,
Nor let harsh echoes wake its hallowed spell;
Peace lingers here and tenderly has flung
Her mantle o'er the myrtle and the rose—
Mayhap, beneath our very feet—who knows?
They sleep, the gods, who long ago were young.

Unknown to them the tumult and the stress
Of flying years—only forgetfulness;
Unmindful e'en when all the glade has rung
With the sweet strain of some rapt nightingale,
For little now can loveliness avail—
They sleep, the gods, who long ago were young.

So softly tread this vale of asphodel,
Nor let the echoes break its ancient spell,
Where once a golden song was gladly sung;
Here, they are free from memory and pain,
Here, till they come unto their own again,
They sleep, the gods, who long ago were young.

—[Thomas S. Jones, Jr., in the Smart Set.

The Lad Knew Why.

"Papa" was becoming impatient at the lateness of the hour when he remarked: "I can't see why that young fellow who is calling on Minnie hasn't sense enough to go home. It's near midnight."

"The dear little brother" of the family just then came in, heard his father's remark, and ventured some light:

"He can't go, father. Sister's sitting on him."—[Exchange.

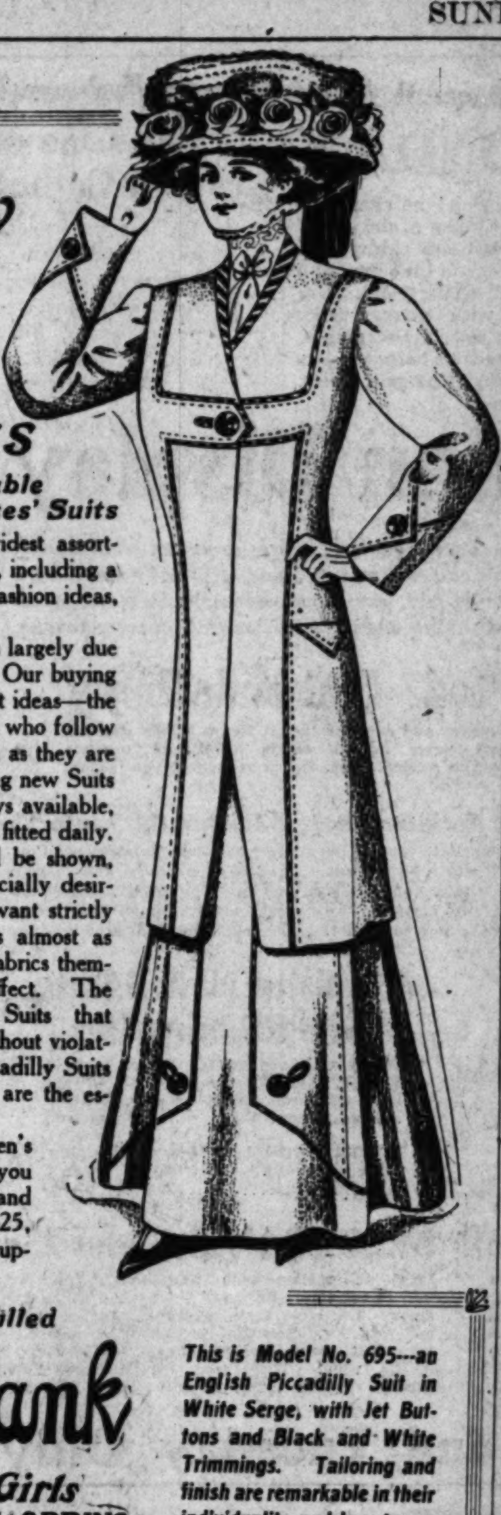
Further New Arrivals in Women's Tailored Suits
--Also a Remarkable
--Showing of Misses' Suits



TOMORROW we will show the widest assortment of Tailored Suits of our season, including a remarkable display of the very latest fashion ideas, just received by express.

To this condition, suggested above, is largely due the success of our Women's Department. Our buying arrangements are such that the very newest ideas—the late models which set the vogue for women who follow fashion closely—are sent to us just as soon as they are produced. Thus we are constantly showing new Suits—thus a wide variety of selection is always available, in spite of the large number of suits that are fitted daily.

New English Piccadilly models will be shown, among others, tomorrow. These are especially desirable for Misses and Small Women who want strictly tailored garments. Piccadilly tailoring is almost as severe and simple as men's tailoring; and fabrics themselves are mannish in texture and general effect. The result is real style distinction—Tailored Suits that carry the tailored idea to its last degree without violating good taste. You must see these Piccadilly Suits to realize just what is meant—truly they are the essence of tailored smartness.

Moderate prices prevail in our Women's Department. Values are exceptional—you will appreciate that. English Piccadilly and other Tailored Suits $20, $22.50, $25, $27.50, $30, $35, $40, $45, $50—and upward. Visit this Department.

ENGLAND'S TOP-NOTCHER.

RICHEST HEIR BY ACCIDENT

Lord Arthur Grosvenor in Line for Millions.

Death of a Baby Gives Him Vast Estates.

His Eccentric Wife Is Living in a Caravan.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 6.—Lord Arthur Grosvenor, by the recent death of the four-year-old son of the Duke of Westminster, has become heir presumptive to the most valuable landed estates on earth. This property includes 600 acres of the choicest portions of London's best residential section, including Park Lane and the districts surrounding Buckingham Palace, also Eaton Hall, a $5,000,000 palatial country mansion, surrounded by about 5000 acres; to say nothing of 30,000 acres in Flintshire and Cheshire, and 40,000 acres of farmland in South Africa. It has been estimated that the annual revenue derived by the Duke from his vast estates totals $3,000,000. A small section of the West-end property alone brings in a steady revenue of $2,000,000. It might afford an idea of the value of these estates to mention that when the late Duke of Westminster died, he paid "death duties"—amounting to about 10 per cent.—to the tune of $6,000,000. It would be almost impossible to give a correct approximation of the actual market value of the Westminster properties, but, taking them on a twenty-five years' purchase basis, they would probably be "capitalized" at between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000.

Lord Arthur Grosvenor,

As the grand-uncle of the recently deceased Earl Grosvenor he becomes "next of kin" in the inheritance of the Duke of Westminster's property—the richest estates in the world, bringing an income of $3,000,000 a year.

Naturally, such valuable estates can only be inherited under the most rigid laws; and hence it is that, now that the present Duke of Westminster has no male heir, title to the property must pass to the Duke's uncle, grand-uncle to the little Earl Grosvenor who recently died under an operation for appendicitis.

It seems that a strange fatality has always pursued the direct heirs to the Westminster dukedom. Two Earls Grosvenor have passed away without coming into possession of the great estates which belonged to them. One died at the age of 31, leaving his father in possession; while another died at 5 years of age, leaving the property to the present Duke, who was a second son. An almost identical situation has arisen with reference to the present Duke. His son died before succeeding, and the title goes back to the second son of the first Duke—unless, of course, the present Duke should have another male heir.

By the strange law of "primogeniture," title to all land in England is vested in the eldest son; and the other children must content themselves with making their own livings the best way they know how. When disinherited by the law of the land, Lord Arthur Grosvenor turned his attention to a military career, and won distinction in the war with the Boers. On returning to England, he practically lived in retirement in the country.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor, however, though her husband did not inherit any portion of the Westminster estates, possessed considerable wealth in her own right, being the daughter of Sir Richard Sheffield. Lady Arthur Grosvenor is anything but "retiring" in disposition, and is one of the best known all round sportswomen in England. She has an abhorrence of conventional life; and gave ample evidence of this fact not long ago by buying a gypsy wagon and literally "tramping" about the country with it. She assumed the name of "Sarah Lee," which she painted upon the caravan, and went through the formality of taking out a hawker's license, so as not to be molested by the country police as she went from place to place.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor's adventures as a gypsy made her the talk of England for some little time; and quite a number of her society friends cut her because of her strange whim. She went all over England, however, and seldom took the trouble to explain her identity. On one or two occasions she found it necessary to extricate herself from an embarrassing position by letting it be known that she was a titled lady simply enjoying an outing. As a rule, English farmers are not at all partial to nomads of the tramp persuasion, as Lady Arthur Grosvenor often found to her great inconvenience. Gypsy wagons are not permitted to camp by the roadside, nor can they occupy a field or a meadow without the consent of the landlord. Lady Arthur Grosvenor on several occasions found great difficulty in obtaining the necessary permission, and was often "moved on" by the police from place to place. Now and again, when arriving late at night at some village, her van has been surrounded and somewhat unceremoniously moved on before her ladyship could explain her identity. Gypsies have an unenviable reputation for pilfering, and wherever they go, are looked upon with great suspicion. However, despite all the drawbacks, Lady Arthur Grosvenor has stuck to gypsying for several months out of each year, and is said to have become quite proficient in the art of buying and selling. She often carries a stock of household necessities, such as brooms, mats and wickerware, and enjoys the experience of going into the farmers' cottages and disposing of her goods.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor, alias "Sarah Lee," Gipsy. Her husband has just become heir to the richest landed property on earth through the death of little Earl Grosvenor, son of the Duke of Westminster. Her Ladyship follows the life of a Gipsy under the name of "Sarah Lee."

While out on these journeys, Lady Arthur Grosvenor does all her own cooking, over a regular camp fire. She makes it a rule to rise at 5 o'clock every morning; breakfast is ready "in the open" by 6, and a little later the wagon is on the move for the day's journey, covering usually about fifteen miles. Now and then some of Lady Arthur Grosvenor's society friends accompany her for a day or two, but, as a rule, the life proves too strenuous for them. Lord Arthur Grosvenor frequently goes along with his wife on these strange tours, but he is not so fond of the life as Lady Arthur Grosvenor herself. In her own social circle she has become known by the nickname of "Sarah Lee."

Lady Arthur Grosvenor's camping-out life has given rise to a "fad" among the upper ten in England. A month or two out of the year, many of them attempt to practice the "simple life" by camping out on the lawns of their country mansions, walking barefooted on the grass, and limiting themselves to farinaceous diet. There are not many, however, who have the hardihood to go in for the "real thing" to the extent indulged in by Lady Arthus Grosvenor. The Grosvenor heirs to the Duke of Westminster have one son and two daughters.

INSURANCE NOTES.

Several fire insurance companies are seeking to amend their charters so that they may write hail and tornado insurance. Among these companies are the Hartford Fire and Connecticut Fire. The former also wants to write inland transportation, hail, windstorm, automobile and sprinkler leakage business.

Judge Muench of St. Louis decides that suicide is an accident, and that an accident company must pay the full face of its policy. Missouri has a peculiar statute providing that suicide is no defense under a policy of life insurance, regardless of any suicide clause, unless it can be shown that the insured intended to kill himself at the time the policy was taken out. For a long time this was interpreted as applying only to life insurance companies, but in the Whitfield case it was extended to apply to accident policies also. The accident companies thereupon inserted a clause in their contracts limiting the liability to 10 per cent. of the sum specified for death in case the death was by suicide, the court having suggested that as a safeguard. Judge Muench now decides that the companies must pay the whole regardless of the agreement in the policy.

The Michigan Legislature is to be asked by the fraternal insurance companies to enact such measures as will place fraternal insurance on a sound basis, as opposed to the present current expense plan, under which the greater number of the fraternal organizations are now working.

The problem of unemployment, which is so acute in other parts of the world, notably in England, appears to be successfully solved in Switzerland, where men in active employment are induced to join a labor insurance institution—of which a good example exists at Berne, says the Zion's Herald. Any man who lives in Berne, whether a Swiss subject or not, may now insure against unemployment in the municipal bureau, providing he is able to work and not above 60 years of age. Such an accepted applicant is given an insurance book, into which he fastens every month an insurance stamp of the value of 70 centimes, in return for which he secures the right to a money allowance for every day up to sixty days that he is out of work during the months of December, January and February, provided that he has been at work for at least six months in the course of the year, has not lost his work through laziness, disorderly conduct, or other fault of his own, and that he has not refused work offered him on reasonable conditions. A man who is unemployed because he is unemployable cannot claim an allowance. For the first thirty days the allowance is a franc and a half a day. In connection with the insurance bureau, a labor bureau is conducted, which in one year has found work for 8365 persons out of 15,500 applying.

One of the most remarkable fire insurance bills of the year has made its appearance in the Massachusetts Legislature. It authorizes cities and towns to issue fire insurance policies at a uniform premium rate of $1 per thousand of value. This will be fine for the high-rated hazardous risks, but not quite so good for the owner of a first-class dwelling or fireproof building. The bill provides that every other insurance company doing business in the State shall pay annually to each city and town 25 per cent. of its gross premiums in that town for the benefit of the fire department.

The California Legislature has passed a bill compelling the construction of temporary floors in buildings more than three stories high while under construction, for the protection of workmen from falling objects. To protect the passers-by a bill was passed requiring the erection of scaffolding outside of buildings in the course of construction.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—Everybody who is anybody or hopes to be considered such is a "downtowner" now. Even the most exclusive ladies express pity for Fillmore street and Van Ness avenue. Those once populous marts of trade have not changed their location, but the glory which was once theirs has vanished and the shopping district is now in the old section bounded by Market, Kearney, Sutter and Powell streets.

Now that the downtown section has come into its own it will be convenient for society people when weary of shopping to drop into the police court near Powell and Eddy streets and rest themselves by testifying in the Ah Sam case. Lawyer Countryman tells me that he is going to prove that his client is no more of a gambler than any of his white fellow-citizens, male and female.

The course of true love in the Aoki case was rough for awhile, but the father of the girl is willing for her to marry the Jap. This sustains his reputation for wisdom, as the girl intended to do it anyway. Aoki, instead of being a noble as first reported, is a farmer and the son of a farmer. As soon as his brother stated this, the swells of Corte Madera at once said the couple must drink their pink tea elsewhere.

Congress can go as far as it likes with the tariff, "us don't care." As long as coffee is not to be touched we feel no sympathy for suffering borax, as we neither drink it nor produce it.

After a painful search, Mayor Taylor found thirteen Independence Leaguers and obeyed the Supreme Court by appointing two of them to serve as election commissioners. Now the Mayor feels a sense of duty done and the two appointees must get the courts to install them as the men they are supposed to supplant refuse to give up the jobs.

In the past there may have been dishonest men in this city and the report may have gone broadcast that we were all grafters, but we are living it down and now call attention to the fact that $8,000,000 of gold was carried through our streets safely and the best riflemen in the police department who accompanied it had no chance to show their markmanship.

Even the strictest believers in the sanctity of the marriage tie must praise Jacob Walter, a hardware dealer, for getting a divorce from his wife, Mary, because she advertised for another husband and was about to accept William Huthman of Stockton, who wrote her: "I am a German, 35 years old, black hair, 6 feet tall, weigh 185 pounds, jolly disposition and have a good will and a good job."

Julius Caesar Eikerenkotter and J. Debendetti, former Supervisors of San Mateo county, indicted for malfeasance in office, have had the charges dismissed because they are no longer in office and if convicted the only penalty would be loss of the job. Technically, the two gentlemen are washed whiter than snow and have the right to carry an air of injured innocence to their graves.

It is a little late to spring a recall on our delegation in the Legislature, but we are watching it as to a line-up on the bill making it a misdemeanor to ask a man to take a drink. Some of us will never go to jail for that offense, but the jails would be overcrowded if it is made a crime to accept life-saving courtesies from liberal friends.

The ladies of the Outdoor Art League, who saved Telegraph Hill from the mercenary ravages of rock-crushing contractors, are studying the subject of spontaneous combustion. They erected on the hilltop what they deemed an artistic cabin, but it burned down without rhyme or reason. They are uncertain whether spiteful contractors did it or whether it was a spontaneous burnt offering to Apollo.

The paths of glory may but lead to the grave, but the industrial path of today has another direction, as demonstrated by an energetic little woman who shines boots at her own stand in the St. Francis Hotel.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

LONDON, March 3.—"The Dancing Girl," which was first produced in London at the Haymarket on January 15, 1891, ran for an entire year, with a very short break. It played to bigger business considering its limited run than any play for which Henry Arthur Jones has been responsible, not excepting even "The Silver King," a famous money maker.

Little Elise Craven, the 10-year-old dancer, who made such an enormous hit in Beerbohm Tree's "Pinkie and the Fairies," has made her appearance at the Coliseum in a short sketch called "The Queen of the Fairies." Elise probably establishes a record in the matter of salary for one so young, and, at the same time, so new to the stage, for her appearance at His Majesty's early in the year was her début. She is drawing $500 a week at the Coliseum, and although a remarkably clever and precocious child, there is nothing affected or unnatural about her. She quite fails to understand the cause of her popularity, and attributes it to her fairy dress and wand.

George Grossmith is about to "drop out." He refuses to call it retirement, but says that he will quietly efface himself so that some day his friends will wake up and say, "Oh, by the way, where's Grossmith?" He says, however, that he will appear from time to time at charity performances, and that his public appearances hereafter will be limited to that.

The popular comedian has been on the stage for thirty-eight years, and his son, Laurence, is the talk of London as Geoffrey Smith in "An Englishman's Home," and his other son, George Grossmith, Jr., is, of course, well known as a playwright and actor, and was with you a short time ago in "The Girls of Gottenberg." He is 60 years old, but his appearance gives little hont of it. His father, who was well known as a lecturer and entertainer, was at one time a Bow-street newspaper reporter, and in that capacity was assisted by his son.

"I am weary of traveling the country," said Grossmith in speaking of his plans, "of sleeping in strange beds and living on railway station buns. My advice to comedians who are anxious for success is to learn to sing and play, study human nature, avoid imitating, avoid caricaturing too much and especially avoid cheap jokes. That is how I have made as high as $3500 a week for making people laugh."

Something to Repeal.

"Human nature is the same the world over," said the philosopher. "When a man discovers that a law interferes with his personal interests he wants it abolished."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "I'm looking for some of these aviators to come up with a proposal to repeal the laws of gravitation."—[Washington Star.

Although there is a marked leaning toward plain coats for practical wear, any novelty in outline is welcomed as an agreeable change. Our suit department abounds in coat suits that meet practically all tastes.

"When I see a bargain advertised at Lane's, I know I am going to get one when I go after it," was the remark of a shopper in our hosiery department. Lane's invariably state facts in their advertising and we heartily concur in condemning exaggerations, either in print or over the counter.

Short chamois gloves are the newest thing for street wear. They're washable — soap and water does the trick. Quite an item of economy when the first cost is only $1.25 pair.

Elastic and leather combination are the basis for the latest fad in belts. If interested will pay you to see our line.

Coat shirts for men. How much more convenient to get into and out of. Our line at $1.00 is a leader and a trade winner.

[illegible]nge Whims in Stone and Land-[illegible]—New Interpretation of Dec[illegible]tion of Independence—Cleverly [illegible]ceived Lakes.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

[illegible] March 11.—Spending a [illegible] dollars on a garden has [illegible] the unique hobby of Sir [illegible] one of England's fore-[illegible]. It is not often that [illegible] the legal profession go in [illegible] cultivation save in the [illegible] crops of lawsuits; but, [illegible] it's different. His le-[illegible] has not satisfied the [illegible] soul, and his exuberant [illegible] overflowed into building a [illegible] which no other plot of [illegible] earth can hold a candle.

[illegible] "astonishers" is to [illegible] dressed ladies, accom-[illegible] by a couple of children, [illegible] apparently walking [illegible] one of the ponds, [illegible] the water. You are at [illegible] think the people either [illegible] or else lay fig-[illegible] some kind of mechan-[illegible] idea is soon dis-[illegible] them emerge from the [illegible] side perfectly dry, [illegible] of their partial im-[illegible]. The head gardener explains [illegible] the people are only walk-[illegible] of rocks placed behind [illegible] ponds in such a manner [illegible] the appearance of people walking through the water, as they cross over.

Even the rocks themselves which form the stepping stones for this curious stage effect present unique features. They show the footprints of some antediluvian monster, together with those of a man, a woman, and some children. The various footprints suggest a pre-historic tragedy, showing that the man stayed behind to fight the supposed monster, while the woman and children fled to safety. Some of the stones are without footprints, these indicating perhaps the most exciting parts of the chase. "That's where they jumped," Sir Frank explains, with laughter. The mystery of how these special stones came to be in their particular place, and how the markings of the feet are so perfectly plain is explained when Sir Frank calmly informs you that he had the stones "faked" out of stuff called "pulhamite" and placed there purposely. The pre-historic tragedy is also an invention of the same fertile brain.

Close to the ponds, is a cave modeled after the famous "Blue Grotto" of Capri. Here a series of mirrors give wierd effects, and those who have seen the original blue cave agree that Sir Frank's is a close imitation.

ALL CARVED.

The outside of Sir Frank Crisp's house is, perhaps, one of the most curious in the world. Every inch of the palace-like structure is carved with designs representing friars of every description—the friar, by the way, being the motif of the whole place. Friars "from grave to gay, from lively to severe," are seen everywhere, and, in addition to these, there are mottoes, puzzles and inscriptions—the exterior of the house being, as it were, a veritable manuscript in stone. On the eastern front, which faces the beautiful terrace overlooking the grounds, Sir Frank has placed a number of puzzles or designs with double meanings. For instance, there is a match which illustrates "The Maiden's Prayer," while a box of bear's grease satirizes Byron's poem, "'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more." On the corner of the building is a design showing some cubes. If you count them over carefully, you will find only six, whereas Sir Frank soon proves to you that there are seven in all. The base of each cube is so drawn that the whole makes a complete optical illusion. On the same corner, near these cubes, are two segments of a circle, so placed that one appears much longer than the other. Yet, if you test them by measure, you find that they are of the same length. Just above these are two straight linese which appear to be of equal length, and yet, if measured, prove to be different. Above these are two other lines, one appearing considerably longer than the other. Sir Frank promptly offers to bet you they are the same length. They really are not, but by this time your sense of proportion has been so mixed up, that you naturally refuse to bet with Sir Frank. He then shows you that you would have won "hands down," and so you have the vain regret of wishing you had taken him up.

MINIATURE MOUNTAIN.

Still, the surprises in stone on the building are greatly exceeded by other surprises in much bigger stones in the marvelous "rockery" close at hand. Sir Frank has had built, just to the right of his mansion, a veritable mountain, in imitation of the Swiss Matterhorn. It is a faithful representation of the famous peak. More than 7000 tons of massive rocks were brought from Yorkshire to form it, and Sir Frank had it remodeled four times before it satisfied him. Hundreds of quarrymen worked night and day shifting the rocks about until they were all in the exact places he assigned them. Inside the mountain are some wonderful grottoes, built to represent ice caves. Streams representing mountain torrents dash down from these rocks. The water is pumped up to the top by special machinery, built at enormous cost. Everything is so wonderfully concealed that one cannot but imagine all he sees to be perfectly natural. And yet, at a turn of the hand, Sir Frank—as reigning deity—can cause the "mountain torrents" to dry up. So much attention has been paid to detail in this bit of "fake" Switzerland that if you look through a pair of opera glasses from a certain seat in the rockery, you can see tiny chamois on the heights. They cannot be seen by the naked eye. These tiny animals were built "to scale," and are just the size they would appear in Switzerland if seen some distance off through a glass.

THE CAVES.

Inside the ice caves—which are marvels of imitation—Sir Frank has placed an enormous crane. If you hold a glass of water up to the beak of this bird, the water disappears. Few visitors understand how this is done, but the secret lies in the fact that one of the "mountain torrents" flows just under the crane's feet, and this forms a sort of syphon which sucks the water out of the glass as you hold it up. This was explained to the writer by Sir Frank, and he asked me please not to tell any one. It is, therefore, only mentioned here as a state secret.

All the flowers that grow on the Swiss Alps are to be found on the Henley Matterhorn, together with rare plants from such cold districts as the highest Himalayas and other places. Gardeners come from all over the world to inspect Sir Frank's wonderful "rockery."

But the plants in the rockery do not compare with those which he has in his twenty-five separate conservatories, ocupying about ten acres of ground. In these hothouses, which are heated by the most modern methods, are gathered many of the rarest plants of the world, some of which have names that would give Webster's unabridged apoplexy. Many of these have truly remarkable attributes. There are whole families of "flesh eating" and "insect trapping" varieties, and to watch them busy at meal times is highly entertaining. Here one may study Darwin's theory of the "consciousness of flowers," with every chance of coming to the conclusion that plants think, eat, sleep and perhaps play whist. Quite a number of the plants and flowers in the Crisp collection have "faces" which greatly resemble those of human beings. Sir Frank takes delight in pointing out these weirdnesses, and listening to the astonishment of his guests.

FRIARS INSIDE.

Inside the Crisp mansion the idea of the friar is carried out with the same degree of persistency as on the exterior. Even the electric light bulbs have friars' noses, which are turned up when the lights are on, down when they are off. An immense hallway, giving one the impression of the interior of a cathedral, is carved in elaborate designs, in which every sort of friar imaginable is portrayed.

This flower-fancying lawyer has a special fondness for American visitors who go over his grounds. He likes to hear their breezy remarks on various queer things they see, and these sayings of the American cousins have in many instances been incorporated in an elaborate catalogue which Sir Frank has just published.

In the dining-room of his magnificent house he has a framed Declaration of Independence done in tapestry—certainly an unusual mural decoration for the home of an English lawyer. But this is not the most singular fact about this particular Declaration. If you look closely at it you will see that one of the words, in which it is executed, is in white letters. This has its peculiar significance.

"If you will examine the work closely," said Sir Frank in explaining this matter, "you will see that I put the word 'men' in white letters for the simple reason, that when the Declaration of Independence was signed, there were negro slaves in the United States. I knew that I had no right to interpolate the words, 'All white men are created equal,' and so, by painting the letters of the word 'men' white, it reads 'all white men are created equal,' which, I take it, is the way in which the signers of the declaration meant it."

This little joke at the expense of American sentiment is characteristic of all Sir Frank Crisp's whimsicalities.

Considering the immense amount of work which Sir Frank has had done on his grounds, house and conservatories, the cost has not been under $2,500,000, the gardens alone costing a million without the conservatories. They represent the personal hobby of one of the busiest men in England, for Sir Frank Crisp has one of the largest legal practices in the world. He is the best-known solicitor in the city of London. His specialty is commercial law and he is a familiar figure at most of the great company meetings in the city. He was knighted a year ago and it is a safe statement that no honor conferred by the King was ever more popular among the business men of London than this.

Sir Frank is head of the great law firm of Ashurt, Morris, Crisp & Co. His connection with it began when he was 16 years old.

He is an LL.B. and a B.A. of London University, a justice of the peace for Oxfordshire and a member of the Law Society, the Solicitors' Benevolent Association and the Law Association. He was secretary of the Royal Microscopical Society for ten years and treasurer of the Linnaean Society for a longer period.

Friar Park—The "Manuscript in Stone."

[illegible] residence occupied by Sir Frank Crisp is one mass of carvings, but the work is so cleverly hidden, it [illegible] interfere with the architectural effect. There are hundreds of quaint designs, mottoes and drawings on [illegible] of the building.

[illegible] Friar Park are so arranged that people walking between them, by means of hidden stepping stones, [illegible] knee deep in the water. This is one of Sir Frank Crisp's many little jokes.

INFLUENCE OF HABIT.

Automatic Power Individuals Acquire of Performing Certain Acts.

[London News:] Habit is the acquirement of a machine-like or automatic power of performing certain duties. Actions which we have at first to exercise our intellectual centers to be able to perform are ultimately discharged without any reference to our mind or consciousness.

Indeed, when the intellect comes to interfere with the automatic performance of such acts they are apt to be less perfectly executed than when the machine-like activity of brain is permitted to have its sway. Take the case of reading, writing and spelling; at first we have to acquire these gifts through the exercise of close intellectual attention; later on they are automatically performed.

We do not after the childish stage of education require to bethink ourselves over the shape of letters, the sound of syllables or the formation of words by act of the pen. Clearly what was at first an intellectual act has become purely mechanical.

Also in exercising the other "R" and doing a sum we arrive at a correct solution without having to think out the rationale of the operation, as we did when taught arithmetic at school. The saving to the intellectual centers which deal with questions and affairs of every moment must be enormous in consequence of this division of labor. The centers in question are left free to exercise judgment and to engage in the highest operations of our conscious life.

In the brain structure we actually find centers which discharge these automatic duties and play the part of private secretaries to the head of the mental firm. Even when we come to higher brain operations a like principle prevails.

No Hurry.

He: Then you have decided to accept the proffer of my heart and hand?

She: Yes, dear.

He: Thanks! You have made me the happiest of men; but we must have some regard for the old maxim and not be married in haste.

She: Don't worry about that. I am perfectly willing to wait till next week.

Open Saturday Evenings

Mrs. G. W. Wickersham.

Wife of the Attorney-General a Woman of Sterling Qualities, Well Equipped for Her High Position.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—In the group of women who will next winter figure as the leaders of the highest official set, Mrs. George Woodward Wickersham, wife of President Taft's Attorney-General, is a preëminent figure and this for many interesting reasons. First because as the wife of a man who is very close to the President she will be a power in social affairs at the White House. She is the intimate friend of Mrs. Henry W. Taft, and her relations with Mrs. William Howard Taft are as cordial. Then she is a woman of charming characteristics, socially accomplished, highly cultured and more than usually intellectual and Washington can well rejoice that she has been added to the list of official hostesses.

"I am coming to the Capital under such pleasant conditions," said Mrs. Wickersham to the writer, "that I could not help but rejoice in the anticipation. But then I always loved Washington and I am proving my devotion by setting to work to get a permanent home almost before I got my trunks packed for the journey. During the very busy days around March fourth, I managed to slip away to visit some of the old places dear to me when I was quite a young girl, but I felt almost like Rip Van Winkle.

[Copyright, 1908, by Harris-Ervin.]

Mrs. George W. Wickersham.

Everything is so changed that the very streets have taken an unfamiliar aspect and the great new buildings have so crowded the city as it was in the sixties that I now hesitate when I say to my friends that I know Washington as I do New York.

"My father was Public Printer here under President Andrew Johnson, and we lived in a big old-fashioned home in F street, between Sixth and Seventh streets. It has been entirely remodeled to suit the business purposes to which this entire section of Washington is now devoted. But the old walls still stand and I can trace a shadowy outline of what it used to be and I have no doubt if I could penetrate into the interior I could pick out spots in the old house which memory has hallowed. Then my former schoolhouse in New York avenue near Thirteenth is almost unchanged, though business structures are encroaching on the old scholastic seclusion and the prim parlor of my school days is now a commercial emporium. But only sentimentally can I lament these changes. The capital has developed from the chrystalis I knew into the most glorious beauty. I have fairly reveled in the broad sweeping avenues, the stately homes, the exquisite vistas and the magnificence of the park system. I am going to explore every nook and corner of my new home when I have my household goods established in order."

The Attorney-General and Mrs. Wickersham have made the most promising beginning, in that they purchased a home in Washington a full month before they took up their official residence. It is the spacious mansion in Sixteenth street near N, which was built by Mrs. Frank Brandegee, formerly Mrs. Sprague of Boston, co-heir with Mrs. Larz Andersen of the vast estate which Commodore Perkins left. Mrs. Brandegee, before completing her home, decided to build a more pretentious house in the western hills near Sheridan Circle. So Mrs. Wickersham is having the interior remodeled and decorated according to her ideas and she hopes to get possession in the early spring. Few changes, however, were needed to make this house adequate for the demands which official etiquette makes on a Cabinet officer. The house is dull red brick with elaborate trimmings of sandstone with the entire basement floor given up to dressing-rooms, offices and culinary apartments. The drawing-room suite is stately and well adapted to accommodate the crowds which will invade it in the Wednesdays during the season and for the large receptions and dinners to which the official world is asked.

"I am well pleased with my home," said Mrs. Wickersham, "though I am convinced that when I get down to the routine I shall find many things to change or wish changed. For the perfect house, like the perfect man or woman, does not exist. But to have a home is a necessity for me, and I was fortunate to find one waiting which so nearly supplies my needs. I am so unfamiliar with social life in Washington that I cannot discuss the theme in a way which would interest any one but myself. The cosmopolitan society of New York always had the most intense fascination for me, and I suppose the same element lends life and color to the social intercourse of the capital. I have been asked what I liked the most and answer people—what I study most, and the answer is the same. The psychology of crowds is a study which one can pursue with great advantage in New York, and I found it an unfailing source of mental and spiritual profit in addition to the pleasure exhilleration it affords. Washington during the inauguration time appealed to me. As for the ball it was the event of a lifetime. The happy faces, the lights, the music, the flowers, above all the evidences of joy and good spirits inspiring young and old was like a strong tonic to me."

Mrs. Wickersham has formulated no social plans and explains that she is simply going to fit in her niche and follow the routine sanctioned by tradition. But those who study Washington's social life and who know its possibilities, hope from her more than the mere executing of stereotyped duties. Some even talk of a salon, of having a woman who will fulfil that long felt need of knowing how to bring brainy, interesting people together, irrespective of social classes and official prestige. Those who knew Mrs. Wickersham years ago in New York point out that she is the one to draw men of force together. Some fifteen years age before the Attorney-General had begun to reap a golden harvest from the stupendous energy and intelligence with which he studied law, the family resided in a modest up-town flat. All the equipments of that home were simple and many of the suppers enjoyed by distinguished guests were prepared by Mrs. Wickersham's own hands. But the guests, if one were fortunate enough to know either Mr. or Mrs. Wickersham so intimately that he could drop in informally, he could listen with rapture to Augustus Saint Gaudens talking art. He could hear Henry George and the Rev. Edward McGlynn discoursing on the virtues of the Single Tax. Robert G. Ingersoll and Dr. McGlynn clashed swords many times in the claims of the revealed religion, and the gentle scholarly Rabbi Gotthell often urged the merits of Judaism on the fiery agnostic and the brilliant Roman Catholic philosopher. Such memories as these which Mrs. Wickersham's friends love to recall give substance to the shadow that the salon at last is possible in the National Capital. The maetrial exists in abundance; only a leader has been eneeded to rally the force.

Mrs. Wickersham belongs to the old Knickerbocker class of Albany, N. Y., and she is an exalted type of the grande dame of the New World. Her father, Cornelius Wendell, was of the old school of politics, an unflinching Democrat in a time when blood ran hot and expediency urged many to enroll under the banner which stood before the world for the undivided union. He served his party faithfully and came to Washington first to reorganize the printery establishment under President Johnson. With his family he remained for two years after Grant's inauguration and he and his wife were prominent members of official society.

Mrs. Wickersham and her sister, now the widow of Lieut. Taylor, U.S.A., were intimates of Nellie Grant and her brothers and they caught a glimpse of the social life of the White House under pleasant circumstances. The young daughters of the Attorney-General, Miss Constance Wickersham, will see life in Washington under similar happy auspices. She is just 14 and is attending a fashionable school in Fifth avenue. Next winter she will come to Washington with her parents and probably go to the Cathedral School, famous as the seat of learning which prepared Miss Ethel Roosevelt and Miss Helen Taft along academic lines. She will take part in the Small and Earlies after the agreeable fashion now prevailing among mothers in high society.

"Seclusion for boys and girls during their school days," said Mrs. Wickersham, "means misery for them when they become of an age to mingle in society. I have always admired the English method of permitting young children to come to the table and share the dessert at dinner. It accustoms them to mingle with their elders and gives them poise.

There is an elder daughter of the Attorney-General, who was very popular in New York society as Miss Gwendolyn Wickersham, and who last autumn married Albert Aiken of New York, now a sugar planter of Cuba. Mrs. Aiken will spend part of the winter in Washington with her parents, making an additional attraction to this interesting family. There is one son, Cornelius Wendall Wickersham, who will graduate at Harvard this coming June, and who may be relied on to appear at intervals, at least, in their Washington home. Mrs. Wickersham's mother, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Taylor, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will also pay frequent visits to the Washington home. Mrs. Wendell, who is now quite a venerable woman, is a member of an Albany Knickerbocker family as famous in the social and patriotic annals of the State as the Wendells. She was born Harriet Hinckley, and the old Hinckley homestead on the high hills of the Hudson below Albany is well known to travelers on the day boat from New York.

Like all women of such intellectual bend, Mrs. Wickersham is perfectly conversant with all the public questions of the day. Not even such a complicated theme as New York politics, the laws of the corporations and the industrial issues are beyond her grasp. She is, however, of the type furnished by the wives of many of the most successful public men in America and England. She does not care to express her opinion about public questions. Her sphere is the home, and she reigns there as a queen. The Wickersham home in New York was in Sixty-first street, and it was maintained with the elegance which is characteristic of the Attorney-General and his wife. They entertained many of the foreign notables who pass through Gotham en route to discover the wonders of the West. They belong to the most exclusive clubs and assemblies, and have been among the potent forces to elevate social intercourse from utter frivolity to something worthy of conditions in the greatest emporium in the New World.

The Attorney-General and Mrs. Wickersham have a delightful summer home in Cedarhurst, Long Island, and they will go there as soon as official and social duties will permit. In appearance, Mrs. Wickersham is handsome and dignified. Her manner is all graciousness and she seems as well fitted for the role of Cabinet hostess as her husband is for the trying post of Attorney-General.

EDUCATIONAL DRIFT.

Samuel P. Orth in the March Atlantic arraigns the public schools for the indefiniteness of the teaching, and declares that the pupils do not gain real knowledge, solid facts. Second, that the pupil is not taught to use his mind, the school being an enslaver of memory rather than an emancipator of reasoning. Third, that they are not practical, do not fit for bread and butter earning, thus leaving the pupils unfit for the hard tasks of life.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward is writing and speaking much in behalf of the movement in London to teach children how to play. An association has been formed to revive the folk-music and Morris dances, and English games are encouraged. Twenty-three thousand children are now being educated in twelve play centers in London. It is curious that meadow dances should be revived by children who have no meadows upon which to dance them. In some instances the children of London slums have been sent down into the country to teach the children their own dances.

President Harris of the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., says: "One of the reasons why young men seek a college education today more than in the past is because the controlling of enterprises by big corporations demand more highly educated employés. More men today work for salaries than in the past, and employers want young men to earn more than their salaries. "A man who works for a large corporation must be a success and show ability, and this, generally speaking, means that the young man must have secured a college education. The smaller merchants are being forced out of business and the man that reared a family on a small business and just kept his head above water is gradually working more for corporations and securing a larger income than if he conducted his own small business."

The San Francisco Board of Education has adopted a resolution requiring all school teachers in the department to reside in the city limits. To enable those who now have homes in suburban places to make the necessary rearrangement of their affairs the requirement will not be inforced till next January. At least 20 per cent. of San Francisco's public school teachers are now living outside the city.

The simplified spelling board of New York has published a list of 1100 words in the simplified form, such as rime, gard, iland, autum, center, honor, helth, activ, imagin, doctrin, etc., and 2200 forms ending "ed" now simplified to "d" or "t" according as they are pronounced, (as armd, burnd, compeld, instild, snapt, stept, dropt, stopt.)

In order to furnish sittings for the thousands of children who now either cannot attend school at all or only on half time, the New York school board recently recommended that the school day be shortened to three hours and a half. This, it is argued, will enable two daily sessions to be held, and at the same time increase the teachers' school day from five to seven hours.

There is a well-defined movement towards the opening of schoolhouses as social centers for boys' clubs, girls' clubs, etc. This has already been done in Philadelphia, and in Cleveland there is only just a beginning, but the Board of Education has recognized the wisdom of such use of its schoolhouses, and has a subcommittee that decides the form that it shall take. BRASS AND IRON BEDS

At 50¢ On The Dollar

Our San Francisco house wired us on Friday to close out all Iron and Brass Beds of certain factories. The reason: The home office has contracted to take practically the one of the largest factories in the United States. This means making room for stock on the way. Tomorrow we sacrifice Beds at 50c on the dollar. These are all new, up to date, made by Simmonds Manufacturing Co., Oliver Brothers Co., the Knickerbocker Brass Bed Company, and the St. Louis Iron and Brass Bed Co. If ever you expect to buy a Bed, now's the These lines offer more than 2000 Beds to choose from. Take your pick from this veritable forest of high-grade Brass and Iron Beds at 50c on the dollar. Come early—all Beds marked "Divide it by two and that's the price." Again—come early.

This Massive Brass 2-inch Continuous Post Bed $25

A Positive $50.00 Value

This magnificent Brass Bed is constructed of the best standard stock of brass, the kind that is only used by the manufacturers making the highest grades of Brass Beds. PRICE ON HEAD, KANG-YU IN EXILE IS LOYAL.

Kang Yu and his daughter.

PENANG (Straits Settlement) Feb. 27.—Reformer, but no revolutionist; loyal supporter of the dynasty of the Manchus, rather than devotee of the idea of a republic of China; firm in the confidence that China will in due time work out her own salvation without being put to the test of baptism with blood, His Excellency Kang Yu-wei is as completely an exile from his native land as the revolutionary leader Sun Yat-seh, and, like the latter, finds asylum under the British flag, which flies over the Straits Settlement.

There is a price upon his head. Among high officials in Peking there are enemies who would gladly buy arsenic for his rice and pay a high price. For ten years it has been so, and although the death of the Dowager Empress removes the foremost of these enemies, Kang Yu-wei's life is today no safer than it was when that wily old woman snatched the throne from his pupil and chief supporter, the young Emperor, who, according to the official record, went to his death a few hours before she did.

The exiled progressive leader says that Yuan Shi Kai, the late Grand Councilor, had the Chinese Emperor poisoned, and also charges him with domination of the reactionary element, which led to the Boxer uprisings and massacre of foreigners.

ACCUSES YUAN SHI KAI.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Miss Kang Tung Pih, daughter of Kang Yu-wei, leader of the Chinese reform movement, when asked about her father's assertions that the late Emperor was poisoned through the agency of Yuan Shi Kai, former Grand Councillor, said:

"Yuan Shi Kai has been found to be a defaulter to the Chinese government, though the news has not yet come officially to America. He was not rich, but throughout his long official life he spent enormous sums of government money, of which he had rightful control. This was used in building up his own political power and party, and not for the benefit of the government. Since he was deposed from the Grand Council and degraded last month it has been found that 14,000,000 taels of the government funds in Yuan Shi Kai's charge are missing. I do not know if anything will be done about this right away. Prince Chun, the Regent, and the government must move cautiously in matters concerning Yuan Shi Kai.

"It was known as well in the court at Peking as it was known to my father that Yuan caused the Emperor to be murdered, because, with the Dowager Empress dead and Kwang Su in real power as Emperor, the power of Yuan Shi Kai would have been swept away and his life would have been in danger, if not forfeited. Yuan, as every one knows, betrayed Kwang Su ten years ago, when the Emperor's reform edicts caused the Dowager to resume the reins of government, and, with Yuan, try to catch and kill my father."

HEREABOUTS.

Dr. James A. B. Scherer, president of Throop Polytechnic Institute, will start East next Friday and will sail soon after for Europe, to be gone about three months. He will study engineering methods on the other side, visiting the chief engineering schools of the Old World. He will spend some time in Berlin, Paris and Munich, and will return home the middle of July.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

LEONARD H. LANE of Berkeley has applied for a patent on a flying machine. His idea was developed by observing the strong lifting power of an umbrella during a wind, following which he built a rude machine operated by hand and foot power with which he made a successful flight. He is now working on a practical machine.

Rev. Father Henry J. Woods, S. J., a professor at St. Ignatius' College, San Francisco, for more than a quarter of a century and formerly president of that institution and moderator of the alumni, has been called to New York to act as editor of the Messenger, a Jesuit weekly published there. During the last two years he has been in Los Gatos as superior of the Sacred Heart Novitiate and Normal School for Jesuit Students.

Ralph Martin of Spokane, whose flesh on one side of the breast was nearly cooked by a stroke of lightning, is being cured by lying at full length in the sun, the affected parts being covered by a piece of gauze.

Dr. Samuel H. Willey, first president of California College, and one of the five missionaries who came to San Francisco in 1848, celebrated his 88th birthday at Berkeley last week. He continued in active ministerial work till his hearing became somewhat impaired a few years ago.

A bust of James G. Hill is to be placed permanently on the State University grounds at Seattle. The site will be to the right of the main entrance of the exposition grounds between the Palace of Fine Arts and the Mines building.

J. Stanley Webster, who has been appointed to a Superior Court judgeship at Spokane, had a record before going to Washington. He was the first prosecutor who dared to take up the prosecution of the Hargis family in Breathitt county, Ky.

Mrs. Harriett Anderson-Woodson of Salem, Or., has reached her 99th year. She is a native of Virginia, and has lived on the Pacific Coast since 1886. Her husband, Rev. Thomas Woodson, died in 1846.

EDUCATORS.

EX-PRESIDENT ELIOT, in an interview at Montgomery, Ala., said each race should retain its individuality, that the Irish should not intermarry with the Americans of English descent; the Germans should not marry with the Italians, nor the Jews with the French. The experience of civilization, he said, shows that racial stocks are never mixed with profit and such unions do not bring for the best and strongest children.

Mme. Selma Lagerlof, the Swedish novelist, has been recommended for the Nobel prize. She celebratd her fiftieth birthday last Novmber, and is a most painstaking writer and scholar.

Prof. T. C. Chamberlain and E. D. Burton, of the University of Chicago, are reported as in Shanghai, China, as advance agents of the university's oriental educational investigation commission.

Prof. H. A. Sanders of the University of Michigan, announces that he will not take any more summer vacations till he finishes his Codex Bible, which may take him five years longer.

President Jordan of Stanford University is trying to devise means for improving the scholarship of the members of the secret societies. He believes that the right woman presiding over each fraternity house would have a very beneficial influence on the scholarship of the students.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

LIEUT. CALVIN P. TITUS, Fourteenth Infantry, arrived from the Philippines last week in charge of some casuals and army prisoners, and after reporting to the department will be granted a four months' leave of absence. Lieut. Titus was one of the soldiers who, during the siege of Peking, scaled the great wall and was instrumental in performing acts of great benefit, in recognition of which he was given a gold medal by the government.

Lieut.-Col. Charles G. Woodward, inspector-general of the Department of the Pacific, has returned from the annual inspection of forts, posts and other army features at Honolulu.

Capt. William Elliott will be chief commissary of the Department of California, in accordance with orders of the War Department. He succeeds Lieut.-Col. David L. Brainard, who is appointed to the office in the Philippine division. Capt. Henry T. Ferguson, who has been acting chief commissary in this city, has been ordered to join his regiment, the Twenty-first Infantry.

Brig.-Gen. John J. Pershing has been granted a leave of absence on a surgeon's certificate for physical disability. Gen. Pershing was but recently ordered to a command in the Philippines, but he will be relieved from duty for a period of six months, in addition to which he has permission to go beyond the sea.

Surgeon Charles F. Stokes of the navy, who commanded the hospital ship Relief during the voyage of the Atlantic fleet from Hampton Roads around South America to San Francisco, has assumed the duties of senior medical officer at the Naval Academy and as head of the newly-established department of hygiene and physiology. This department was established at the instance of the surgeon-general of the navy, the chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Lieut.-Col. Fred W. Sibley of the Second United States Cavalry, has been appointed commandant of the West Point Military Academy, to succeed Lieut.-Col. Robert L. Howze, who becomes commandant of the District of Porto Rico. The latter had been in charge at West Point since June, 1905.

Commander George N. Bradshaw, who recently relieved Commander Sims as inspector of target practice, has been assigned to sea duty on the Asiatic station. Lieut.-Leigh C. Palmer, who made the world cruise as ordinance officer of the battleship Vermont, will become inspector of target practice.

POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

SECRETARY KNOX has a remarkable memory; can sleep whenever he wills to do so and waken at a specified moment; drives the finest light harness team in the country; is fond of fishing and golf; is an omnivorous reader of newspapers and magazines; loathes the telephone, which he will not have about his house; is an Episcopalian, and has a favorite residence at historic Valley Forge, besides one in Pittsburgh and another in Washington. He is reputed to have received $200,000 as a single fee while a corporation attorney, before entering public life.

R. B. Glenn, late Governor of North Carolina, has been engaged by the Executive Committee on Home Missions of the Southern Presbyterian church as its special representative. This means that all his time will be given to this work, and the ex-Governor declares that the remainder of his life is to be devoted to public and private work for the extension of Christianity at home and abroad.

Dr. A. Donaldson Smith, the well-known club man and explorer, is about to enter the consular service, having already arranged to qualify at Washington for the consulate at Mersene, in Asia Minor.

Frank J. Sobotka, confidential clerk of the Austro-Hungarian Embassy at Washington, has been decorated with a golden service cross by Emperor Francis Joseph in recognition of his fidelity and close application to duty. Ambassador Hengelmuller recommended Mr. Sobotka for the honor.

ARTISTS, AUTHORS.

VICTOR D. BRENNER, the sculptor whose design for the new Lincoln penny was accepted, has been at work upon his model for more than a year, and for many months before that had in mind the idea of submitting this design for the coins. Mr. Brenner came to New York nineteen years ago. He was born in Russia, in a place caluled Shavely, in 1871, and at the age of 13 he began to work with his father, who was an engraver of seals and a stone cutter. Three years later he left home and took up his trade as an engraver of jewelry, and later as a sculptor in a number of Russian cities. Last summer President Roosevelt sat for Mr. Brenner at Oyster Bay for the Panama Canal medal, which is given to every employé who has served for two years.

Miss Lillian Fahey, who acquired her proficiency in sculpture in San Francisco, was recently honored at New Orleans, when a plaster bust which she had modeled of President Taft was presented to him. The bust will be mounted on a pedestal in the White House.

Col. Freeman Thorpe, the well-known portrait painter, has been painting portraits of Judges Morris and Leonard and of the late Gov. Miller of North Dakota and others. He expected to go to Texas this winter to paint George Breckenridge's portrait, for the Texas Statehouse, but owing to the absence of Mr. Breckenridge in Europe, the work will be postponed, probably until next winter.

Mrs. Margaret Deland of Boston is not only a writer, but she is a lover and a grower of flowers as well. Every year she grows jonquils and sells them for charity early in the spring. This year she had 300 pots of jonquils, hyacinths, tulips and other spring flowers. It was the fifteenth annual sale.

Hamlin Garland has made an entrance into the field of the drama with a play called "Miller of Bosko Bell." Bosko Bell is a small town in Wisconsin, which has only a nominal part in the Garland play. One point in the plot is the experience of a woman who finds that the Golden Rule resolutely refuses to be applied to the methods of business.

Miss Agnes Irwin, dean of Radcliffe College, has resigned her position, to take effect in September. She has been at the head of the college for fifteen years, ever since it ceased to be an annex merely of Harvard College. Under her direction Radcliffe has taken its place as one of the first American colleges. On her mother's side she is related to Benjamin Franklin.

OVER THE SEA.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON has written to friends in Milwaukee that he will soon take to the air instead of trying to conquer America at the yachting game. He may offer a trophy for supremacy in navigation of the air which will give England a chance to compete with America.

Sir William Wallace, the British resident general of Northern Nigeria, has reported to the home government that cannibal tribes owning hundreds of thousands of horses in Nigeria, are being subdued by peaceful means, and that their country contains perhaps the richest tin and copper fields in the world.

Mrs. Aubrey Le Blond, who has climbed many mountains, says that a climb of many hours becomes no more fatiguing than a hard game of tennis. "Only a short time ago the mother of one of our members, who is nearer 80 than 70, did an expedition of fourteen or fifteen hours in the snow without turning a hair."

The three-year-old son and heir of the Czar Nicholas is insured for $2,500,000, and is said to pay the highest premium in the world.

Czar Nicholas is really an Oldenburg, although he is accepted as a Romanoff. If his name were to be traced through the paternal line it would be found that the founder of his family was an Oldenburg. But in accord with the generally accepted rule it is traced through the feminine line.

"WE'RE OLD ABE LINCOLN'S BOYS."

BY GEORGE I. MOSHER.

(Late of the Fifty-third Illinois Infantry.)

Oh, comrades true, who wore the "blue" from sixty-one to five;
Keep your camp fires burning brightly, yes, keep the flames alive,
And you'll not forget those days of strife, their sorrows and their joys,
In victories won or battles lost, we were "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

From crowded marts and western plains, how our volunteers did pour,
Singing "coming, father Abraham, three hundred thousand more."
For Sumter's walls "in ruins rife by traitors' missiles hurled,
And sounds of fratricidal strife, went echoing round the world.

There was Donaldson and Shiloh—what awful carnage there,
Then Corinth fell, and Vicksburg too, gave up in wild despair,
Our gunboats open up the way, where, ere their line deploys—
Our transports pass the silenced forts with "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

Before our veteran ranks in blue, the southern legions flee,
'Till Lookout Mountain comes in view, hard by the Tennessee.
Along its base and on its crest, far, far beyond our view,
Bragg's southern army waiting for "Abe Lincoln's Boys in Blue."

That foggy dark November night, no moon nor stars to shine,
With muffled wheels, and footsteps light, we formed our battle line.
We waited for the morning sun—that did not pierce the gloom,
'Till General Sherman's signal gun upon the air did boom.

A shout, a charge. From vales below, out from the misty shrouds,
Up lofty Lookout heights we go, we fight "above the clouds."
Bragg's mighty hosts in full retreat from carnage fierce and noise,
They'd met a "Waterloo" defeat—from "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

And then we turned our faces from Savannah and the sea—
We waded South Carolina swamps, the turbid Congaree.
We met Hood's shattered army, some in groups and some alone,
They'd fled from far-off Nashville and "Pap Thomas's cyclone."

We were after General Johnston and his veterans in gray,
They tried all kinds of hindrances our onward march to stay—
But we cleared away obstructions, or one side our columns turned,
Sometimes we waded chilly streams, where bridges had been burned.

We heard of Lee's surrender. Oh, the "end" was coming fast,
Then Joe Johnston's fifty thousand men laid down their arms at last.
"To Richmond," then to Washington, then in the "Grand Review."
Marched the loyal union armies, "Abe Lincoln's Boys in Blue."

But what of all our heroes, three hundred thousand dead?
"On fame's eternal camping ground their silent tents are spread."
Their marchings done, their battles o'er, be theirs eternal joys,
In life, or death, forever more, they're "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

The North and South join heart and hand, against one common foe;
Our war cry ringing through the land, "the dread saloon must go."
Its leprous stain upon our flag—through all these passing years,
While in its wake are ruined homes, and crimes and groans and tears,

Life's tide is ebbing out so fast, soon, soon we all must go,
But in God's name, while strength shall last, let's march against this foe;
'Till purged and cleansed from this foul stain and purified from dross,
At last we'll plant a "Stainless Flag" by the "Banner of The Cross."

Oh, matchless twain, your folds be flung o'er mountain, plain and sea,
'Till every kindred tribe and tongue joins in the jubilee,
Then happy homes and firesides, with never ending joys,
Will bless the day we fought this away, while "Old Abe Lincoln's Boys."

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6, 1909.

Kind Hearts.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Mrs. Randall Hutchinson of this city who is the granddaughter of a noted Boston philanthropist of the days when Emerson wrote, and Bronson Alcott promulgated his gentle transcendentalism, is emulating the quiet good deeds of her grandsire in the scholarship work of which she is chairman.

Not long ago an ambitious young girl applied to the district board of California Federation of Women's Clubs, thinking that the scholarship fund might afford her a much-needed course at Occidental College. But, alas, the scholarship department is trying to save the little people under fourteen from the burden of premature bread winning by paying them for good conduct and attendance at school. No college or even high school scholarships have ever been attempted.

The girl's wistful face haunted the kindly Mrs. Hutchinson and she quietly set to work to find some one to bear the expense of the college tuition. Mrs. Hutchinson is very convincing when it comes to begging for youngsters, and it was not long before she had all arrangements made. The girl was entered for the rest of the school year, and even her books were the gift of the district federation's scholarship department.

When the great earthquake disaster came upon Sicily and Calabria, there were lying in the Bay of Syracuse warships of Russia, Italy and England. At a greater distance away were war fleets of France, Germany and the United States.

Unquestionably these fleets were built for the purpose, if occasion arose, of attempting to blow each other out of existence, of sending hundreds to their graves as a tribute to the brutality of war. In a sense these fleets typified the wrong hatred of man for man.

But a great disaster comes upon a helpless people. Quake, tidal wave, fire, attack them. They are prostrated, their homes ruined. Everywhere arise the cries of stricken children, of weak women, of bruised men. Help must come at once if help is to be of avail.

What did the commanders of the big, steel-clad warships of the navies of the world do when they heard of Italy's woe? Did they wait for orders from the home headquarters? Did they use up valuable hours wondering what they ought to do? To the honor of all the world near-by, to the glory of the brotherhood of man, let it be answered, No!

Out of the huge funnels suddenly shot clouds of black smoke. Over the decks ran the jackies obeying orders. Up came the anchors, and across the blue waters, straight for stricken Italy, steamed the monsters. The instruments of war became the messengers of peace and love. They brought not bullets to their fellow humans, but cots, medicines, food, material and spiritual comfort.

Stricken Italy could look down into her ruined harbors and see a representative of every great navy of the world doing the service of mercy.

Miss Mary B. Duclos Snow of Hartford, Ct., was a great lover of animals, so much so that she made her will nine years previous to her death and provided therein for a fund of $32,500 to be devoted to the care of her fine horses. Although she outlived all the animals but one, no change was made in the legacy, and its terms were carried out during her life the same as though conditions had been reversed. Today the remaining horse is housed in a luxurious box stall, and receives better care from Miss Snow's former coachman than one-half of the members of the human race.

Miss Snow also left a fund of $10,000 for the care of her thirty dogs.

Animal devotion was beautifully exemplified at Oakland a few days ago. Dewey Denning, a ten-year-old lad, in attempting to cross the mud flats of Lake Merritt, sank into the mire, and, despite his endeavors, was being engulfed. Just before the rising mud reached his head his dog "Jack," an intelligent water spaniel, with more than human intelligence and bravery, dashed across the quickmire, spread his feet wide apart and settled down across the mud so that his master could clasp him about the neck. Almost involuntarily the onlookers burst into a storm of cheers, while the more practical among them secured a number of planks and hastily laid them across the mud. Over this precarious bridge Herbert Remmer, a ball player, stepped hurriedly and dragged the exhausted boy and his canine rescuer from their perilous position.

Senator Bristow.

dently to emphasize his pride and joy in the occurrence.

"And you were only 18?" I asked.

"Eighteen and a month or two over. Remember, I was as tall as I am now and was a full hand in the harvest field or at the plow. Furthermore, I was old enough to comprehend the responsibilities of matrimony and to understand the limitations of Kentucky. My father was preaching at Howard City, in Kansas, and thither I journeyed with my bride."

"Did you have any money?"

"Enough to pay our railway fare. From Eureka we traveled thirty miles in a stage over the gray and brown prairies. The stage stopped before my father's door, and Mrs. Bristow and I entered the house. We hadn't written, and our wedding and our visit were to be a surprise. My stepmother looked at me for a moment, and then exclaimed: 'Why, it's Joe! I know you by your eyes.'

"'And this lady,' I said, pointing downward toward the little girl at my side, 'is Joe's wife.'

"My stepmother was speechless with amazement or something else—doubtless it was something else. However, she recovered quickly and sent for my father, who had gone to the village. My father was six feet, four inches in height. Normally, he was a large man, but on that particular day he looked as big as a house.

"Mrs. Bristow and I stood up as he entered the room. Four years bring many changes to a boy, and he didn't recognize me. It is possible that he thought we wanted to be baptized or to join the church. Finally, my stepmother broke the tension and said: 'Father, Joe has come to visit us, and has brought his wife.'

"My father just sat down and gazed at us. I smiled and tried to look as bold as a lion, but I fear I didn't succeed.

"Well," Senator Bristow went on to say, dropping the curtain of silence over his whimsical picture, "I got down to work as soon as I could. A farmer, some distance in the country, had an immense crop of corn which I cut and shocked nearly all winter, getting $2.25 a day for my labor. In the spring I bought eighty acres of land, ten miles from Howard City, near the flint hills. A man had preëmpted it at the usual cost of $100. I paid him $300 for his equity and assumed a mortgage of $250. A neighbor had come in, half a mile away. The man felt crowded, and wanted to go where the population was not so metropolitan and dense. After he loaded his wife and children into his wagon and passed out of sight over the plains toward the West, Mrs. Bristow and I moved into our little cabin. I was 18 years old, a family man and a landed proprietor.

"The next day I went to the timber along the Elk River, three miles distant, for fence posts. A great wind came up in the morning. The little cabin rocked and groaned in the gale and frightened Mrs. Bristow. She looked very miserable when I reached home that night. The following day the prairies burned for miles along the rim of the northern horizon. Huge black clouds of smoke filled the air, shot with flame, and ashes, driven by the wind, turned noon into twilight. When I returned in the evening Mrs. Bristow was in tears. 'I am sure I can never like it here,' she said. 'Let's go back to Kentucky.'

"After that I took her with me to the timber, I got a fish line and hook and cut a pole in the woods and she caught all the bass we could eat. A neighbor gave us a venerable dog. Inside of a week he was an old established member of the family.

"One afternoon while I was chopping in the timber I heard the dog bark and then Mrs. Bristow call. I ran along a path and met a wildcat. It turned off into the brush. Following the wildcat came the dog and behind the dog was Mrs. Bristow with a cornstalk in her hand. She had never seen a wildcat, you understand, and thinking it a harmless animal was driving it down to me so that I could catch it alive and take it home.

HARD TOIL.

"By hard toil and careful attention to business we prospered. And I know we were happy. No part of our life since has been quite so joyful and wholly satisfactory. I bought some heifers, and soon had a fine drove of calves. Mrs. Bristow brought her saddle from Kentucky, and in the evening when our work was done we would jump on our ponies, and, riding far out into the prairie, would bring the cattle in.

"My first crop was good, and we were getting along splendidly. But I was ambitious, and wanted to try larger things. I was mixed up with a debating club, and had found that I liked to argue and to think about other subjects than farming. My father sympathized with me, but said I couldn't do very much without an education. So I sold my farm, moved to the village of Baldwin, and entered the preparatory department of Baker University. We had lived about eighteen months on the farm, had harvested two fine crops, and had accumulated $1600 in money and property. We rented two rooms at Baldwin, and lived well, but economically.

"I spent five years at the university, and was duly graduated. During four of my summer vacations I peddled books, walking from farm to farm and village to village, getting many new views of human nature, suffering defeat and disappointment, but making a good deal of money. A printer had started a newspaper in Baldwin. By and by there were two papers. Certain things in the village needed regulating, in my opinion, and I also thought I might improve the university. I got in the habit, therefore, of writing anonymous articles of suggestion and criticism. Near the close of my junior year I found I could buy both papers for $1000. I went to a man named Dunlap—he had moved to Baldwin in order to educate his children—and asked him to lend me the money. It was a brazen thing to do, because I could give no security. 'I am not in the habit of lending money to boys,' Mr. Dunlap said, 'but I will let you have $1000 on the reputation of your father, who is an honest man.'

"I called my reorganized paper the Baldwin Ledger; it is still one of the going concerns in Eastern Kansas. In the autumn, before the beginning of my senior year, I sold out and made $300. Still I was in debt when I left college. I had organized a Blaine and Logan Club in 1884, and taken some part in politics. Before I was graduated the sheriff of the county volunteered the information that I might get a place on the next Republican ticket as a representative of the students.

"'I have had no thought of office for myself,' I said, 'but I wouldn't object to a seat in the Legislature.'

"I wanted an opportunity, you see, to make speeches. The Sheriff, however, advised me to run for County Clerk. Later a slate was made at the county seat, and I was compelled to go there with some of my friends and enter a protest and sound a warning. I hired a long-legged dun horse and cart of the livery stable keeper at Baldwin for $1.25 a day, payment to be made at some unknown time in the future. My campaign was personal and vigorous, and I was nominated, to the surprise of some of the politicians, on the third ballot. I was Clerk of Douglas county for two terms, at an average yearly salary of about $1800.

"While a student at Baker University I heard young men talk about being called to the ministry. I had thought of practicing, but was also inclined toward the legal profession. My father and grandfather were ministers. I had joined the Methodist church in Kentucky. Tradition impressed me considerably. However, I heard no call. I took counsel with Col. Buckner, who had been an officer in the Union army and a presiding elder. 'If you believe,' he said, 'that it is your duty to preach, you will be guilty of a great sin if you do not preach.'

"'But I have no conviction that I ought to preach,' I replied. 'I have asked for a call, but there has been no response. I would enter the ministry, just as I would take up the practice of law or medicine, with enthusiasm and a purpose to succeed, but I have no feeling that it would b wicked were I to do something else.'

"'But it is my judgment,' Col. Buckner declared gravely, 'that you ought not to preach.'

IN WASHINGTON AND NEW YORK.

BY MARSHALL CUSHING.

Our own "Bill" Sulzer, the Tammany Congressman who holds on so much better than Burke Cochran, is back from the Capital, disgusted that his bill providing funds to raise the lost battleship Main was not put through. I doubt if there is any mysterious reason, to which the leaders in the last Administration and in Congress gave heed, why this should not have been done. They simply have not found sufficient cause actually to appropriate the money, perhaps $150,000, for the purpose. It would be a harrowing thing, at best; and thus it has happened that many who have a right to speak to the proposition may not have objected, but they have not favored it. There is Admiral Sigsbee, for instance. He thinks that it would be a good idea to remove the wreck from the path of navigation, but the probability that any remains of the lost sailors would be found is believed to be remote.

Soon after the Spanish War contracts were made with two different firms of wreckers to raise the Maine. The task may have been too great, or the money appropriated too little. Robert Bacon, lately Secretary of State, tried in the last few days of the last session of Congress to secure authority (and the money) required to remove the wreckage of this ill-fated battleship, but he could not succeed. Admiral Sigsbee declares that to raise her at this time would be next to impossible, as she is nothing but a tangled mass of iron and steel, with nothing out of the water except her fighting top. The only resort, (and perhaps this was Mr. Bacon's,) would be to blow this tangled mass of iron and steel to pieces with dynamite, a proceeding which might involve danger for the city, or at least for the neighboring wharves. The old Maine now lies close to shore, having been anchored at the closest buoy when she was blown up, and is not such an impediment to navigation as would be the case if what is left were scattered further. The proposition to bring what remains of the eighty or more sailors, whose bodies were never recovered from the wreck at the time of the explosion, to Arlington Cemetery for burial has its attractive, patriotic side. Evidently those well informed question whether such a plan is feasible.

I note, finally, that an officer of the Maine once told me that neither he nor any of the other officers, nor any one of the men on board the battleship when she was ordered into Havana Harbor, but knew that all of them might be blown into eternity at any time; but they went right in.

Another man, quite prominent now and liable to be more so, Hon. James S. Sherman, the Vice-President, has not been fully understood, or much understood. He has appeared to be a plain, every-day representative who was doing a considerable number of things. During his twenty years in Congress—Blaine's period—"Jim" Sherman (who came to be called "Jim" affectionately) has probably accomplished more than any other Representative, not a Speaker, in his time. He has not a superior in the country as a presiding officer, which means that he knows the parliamentary game. He is up on the rules of the continuous political performance. He is a rattling speaker in debate—no great orator, but capable of the straightest kind of business talk. No one ever has a doubt where he stands. Over in the Senate he affects the Vice-Presidential plug hat and Prince Albert—which are not an affectation, either, because "Jim" Sherman has often worn them, and knows how. He is a little better situated than any one else connected with either the present administration or the new Congress to keep things going amicably between two of the coordinate branches of the government and between the two houses of one of them; for he enjoys to a unique degree the confidence of the new President, the new House and what is practically the same old Senate. A man is not a House leader (whether a Speaker or a fighting committee chairman,) or a scrapping President, for that matter, without exciting many antagonisms all along the route. That he survives them is a tribute to his efficiency; which is something like what they say when they speak contemptuously of a man who has no enemies.

These observations apply partly to the going and partly to the coming men—unless the going are coming again, and the coming are bound to go some time, as undoubtedly they are. Mr. Taft is coming, and coming strong. It is not necessary to express any Rooseveltian extravagances about him. He starts in well, enjoying everybody's confidence in his sincerity; especially well up in our new problems; learning about the tariff; learning incidentally of the relationship of one of the coordinate branches of the government, Congress, to the Executive, as when the House of Representatives ruthlessly cuts his salary $50,000 a year; and already making a deep study of our newest and greatest problem, the regulation of monopolies. Keep your eye on that problem.

ELECTROPODES
A NEW ELECTRIC TREATMENT
NO CURE - NO PAY
$1.00 PER PAIR.

ELECTROPODES

THE NEW ELECTRIC TREATMENT

A sure and positive cure for Rheumatism in any form. They build up the entire nervous system, thus curing nervous headaches and all nervous ailments. They positively restore a good circulation of the blood, and remove all unpleasant bodily odors.

What Electropodes Are—How They Act

Electropodes are two metallic insoles, worn in the heels of the shoes. One is of copper; the other of zinc—forming the two poles of a galvanic battery—the nerves becoming the connecting wires, over which a constant flow of life-giving Electricity courses throughout the day—building up the entire system.

ELECTROPODES are the only appliances ever constructed by which a continuous, mild and soothing flow of electricity is fed to the body and nerves the entire day. ELECTRICITY, when applied through ELECTROPODES, will recharge the system with new life, energy and ambition.

YOUR DRUGGIST WILL SIGN A CONTRACT

Electropodes are positively guaranteed to cure—or money will be refunded. The price of Electropodes is $1.00—and your druggist signs a contract to refund the dollar if they fail to effect a cure. Try Electropodes for liver and kidney troubles, rheumatism and all forms of nervous diseases.

Buy Electropodes of Your Druggist—and if he cannot Supply You, Have Him Order a Pair From

CHAPTER XIII—(Continued.)

"You would be doing the right thing, and it will be worth your while. Somebody will have to pay handsomely."

"Who, sir, if I may make so bold."

Tisdale smiled, sensible that he had rushed, so to speak, at a rather formidable obstacle. The Board of Guardians might, it is true, be compelled to pay, but any action on their part would be interminably slow. Meantime, children were dying.

"I could clear out," said Hugo slowly.

"How many lodgers will come here next Easter, when they find out this 'as been turned into a 'ospital?"

"That must be taken into account, of course."

Sarah shook her head.

"I shall appoint you matron, at 30 shillings a week."

"Well, sir, I ask again, who's a-going to pay for all this?"

"Mrs. Owbridge," said Hugo, "will you let me discuss this with Mr. Tisdale? It's not necessary to assure him, is it, that as far as fear of the infection goes you are far above any such weakness? I saw you coming out of the Mowlands's cottage yesterday."

"What, against my positive orders?" exclaimed Tisdale.

"Well, sir, to my notion the law of God Almighty comes before the law of man."

With this parting shot, Sarah left the room.

"Tea's very good," murmured Hugo. Tisdale sat down.

"I'll Lave a cup. Look here, I see you know how to manage women? You needn't shake your head. Soft soap is necessary sometimes. I don't use enough of it."

"Aren't you using some now?"

"I'm cornered. Those confounded Guardians! I can't wait till half the children in Hernshaw are buried. And our district Medical Officer——!"

This individual—a Forester, also—had made an inspection. As a result, a very large quantity of carbolic acid, not properly diluted, had been sprinkled in the small gardens about the cottages. The acid had killed every green thing it had touched, without, of course, doing a scintilla of good. According to Tisdale, crucifixion was too easy a death for the medical officer. Hugo listened to keen, incisive, convincing phrases, sensible that the young surgeon's enthusiasm and indignation had fired a spark in him. For many years he had lived with the people who gave, ungrudgingly, their best as well as their worst qualities to the pursuit of pleasure. He himself, after he left Oxford, had undergone incredible hardships in Thibet with no worthier object than the slaying of some rare and inaccessible animals. In a word, comparing himself with Tisdale, he arrived at the conclusion that he had spared neither himself nor others in the desire to take life, while the surgeon had been as indefatigable in his passion—that was the right word—to save it. Perhaps, for the first time, he saw himself with the divine inner vision shrunk to Hyde-like proportions, the splendid man metamorphosed by his own act into an apish dwarf.

"Look here," he said, slightly flushnig, "can I be of any use, you know, in carrying out your orders? I've seen worse epidemics than diphtheria."

"So Miss Venable told me. Do you mean it really?"

"Yes."

"Right! In the first place, if you can, persuade Sarah Owbridge to give up this house."

"I can."

"Tell her she'll get her money in time."

"I'll make that perfectly clear."

"Meanwhile, those Purkesses——"

"What of them?"

Again Tisdale exploded. Purkess having taken the responsibility of bringing thirteen children into the world felt that he had done more than his part. Mrs. Purkess, poor soul, with a weak mind in an exhausted body, had discovered gin to be a never-failing pick-me-up in domestic emergencies. Three children in a condition that exacted unremitting attention and care, were dependent upon a father who couldn't stop awake if a battle were raging after nine in the evening, and a mother who tippled! Joy, it seemed, had passed the previous night in the cottage and had announced her intention of passing this one also.

"I'll take that job," said Hugo. "Tell me exactly what to do."

A couple of hours later he tapped at the door of a ramshackle cottage prettily situated half-way up the hill, with the pigsties and cesspool of the cottages just above draining—in obedience to the laws of gravitation—into the small hollow where it stood. Hugo had admired this cottage from the outside, reflecting, as he went to and from the golf course, what an admirable subject it presented for an artist: a typical example of one of these rural scenes so dear to the heart of the right-thinking Briton, and so often recalled by him with grateful emotion and pride, when contemplating other cottages in other lands less favored than his own. A heavy thatched roof, exquisitely toned by lichens and mosses, surmounted brick walls plastered white. The bricks beneath the plaster were rotten, but the plaster, shining through masses of honeysuckle and clematis illuminated pleasantly Sir Giles Mottisfont's earnest wish to, as he phrased it, "put a good face on things." Door and casings were painted a bright apple green. Behind, lay the Forest of Ys: an incomparable background. In front was a small garden, gay in summertime with such flowers as hollyhocks, larkspur, stocks, and what the children call "red hot pokers." The Misses Mottisfont took particular pride in the Hernshaw gardens. They presented packages of assorted seeds to deserving tenants, and prizes to be competed for at the annual flower show always held in the Park. Sir Giles was inordinately proud of this flower show, and made a point of filling his house with guests, to whom he would murmur: "I think my people appreciate what I do for them. I should like to show you my cottages. There are none prettier in England, though I say it. We'll stroll through Hernshaw Parva on Sunday afternoon."

And to see this upright, portly, clean shaven English gentleman taking the air with his guests upon a Sabbath afternoon, to hear him expatiate, in language as carefully chosen as his neckcloth, upon the privileges and duties of conscientious, stay-at-home landlords, to mark him as he waved his gold-mounted malacca, indicating with complacent sweep the boundaries of his domain, was to apprehend with feelings of mingled awe and admiration the secret of England's greatness.

Hugo was received by Joy in the small parlor, where nothing offended eye or ear, although an acute nostril might have detected the cloying odor of the juniper penetrating the robuster fumes of carbolic acid. In this parlor were five children and their sire. The children, not yet attacked, exhibited a somewhat pathetic excitement. Their eyes shone brightly. Hugo recognized one of the boys as a caddy, and spoke a word to him. Purkess, half-asleep after a heavy supper, stood up, a lumbering, powerful clown, significant of that amazing vis inertiae which had kept his family in one place for nearly a thousand years.

Joy drew Hugo aside. He saw that her face was very white and drawn, but indomitable spirit shone in her eyes.

"You will be horribly shocked," she whispered.

She led the way into the next room. Beyond this was a small closet whence proceeded unmistakable sounds; the stertorous breathing of the drunken mother. In the family bed, which, owing to some unevenness in the floor, presented with absurd significance an appearance of inebriety, lay three children. One of these breathed stertorously also, as if it were mimicking the mother a few feet away. Its tiny face was congested. Joy touched Hugo and shook her head. Then she glanced at a watch worn in a leathern strap around the wrist.

"The doctor will be here in two hours," she whispered. "Perhaps I had better stay till then."

"Can you do a single thing which I can't do?" asked Hugo curtly.

"N-no."

"Then obey the doctor's orders, and go straight to bed. I have my instructions." He pulled out his notebook.

"The eldest girl," said Joy, pointing to the quietest and palest of the three, "is slightly better, but appallingly week. You must watch her. If she tried to sit up, for instance, her heart would proably stop."

"Right!" said Hugo. "Show me the medicines."

With almost professional coolness and quickness she indicated the position of everything needful. Then a smile flickered across her face as she nodded and left the room.

Hugo sat down near the bed. He was curiously aware that with the passing of Joy, some indefinable beneficent spirit seemed to have passed also. He remembered his conviction that high health was as contagious as disease. Then the door opened quietly, and he saw her face in the shadows. She came to him, putting her sweet mouth close to his ear. The intimate movement, her breath upon his cheek, the light touch of her hand upon his elbow, thrilled his pulses.

"There is a nurse in the next cottage. She remains till morning. If anything unexpected happens, wake up Purkess, and send him for her."

Hugo nodded.

"You may have to kick Purkess."

"I shall do so with pleasure."

Her fingers lightly pressed his elbow: an acknowledgment of sympathy and appreciation of his humor. Hugo had wondered whether a big emergency would destroy in her that sense of comedy which overspreads all things, and which hitherto had kept her absolutely free from any taint of priggishness. Now he was glad to think that she had pressed his elbow and smiled. He had seen strong men go almost mad when confronted with horrors they were unable to mitigate. Joy's white, drawn face had alarmed him, but it was surely well with her so long as she could smile at the probability of Purkess being kicked!

For half an hour, at least, there was nothing to do. He sat thinking, with his eyes on the three heads on the pillow. The smallest child, who breathed so pitifully like her mother, was far the worst of the three; and it seemed to Hugo that she grew worse while he watched her. He found himself counting the breaths, as he used to count waves. The seventh always appeared, no doubt it was only fancy, to be the most labored: a veritable spasm, as if delicate tissues were being torn apart.

The eldest child was awake, although she lay with eyes closed, exhausted by the deadly struggle against millions of unseen enemies. She knew that a stranger had taken the place of Miss Joy, and that he would sit there in her chair till the doctor came. The little boy in the middle of the bed moved restlessly, and moaned in his sleep, faint cries which possessed a curiously penetrating power: the poignant appeal of the utterly helpless.

Face to face with disease and death, Hugo became supersensitively conscious of his own health and strength. Physically, he had not felt so extraordinarily "fit" for some years. Naturally a temperate man, so far as meat and drink were concerned, he had, however, obeyed the apostolic injunction by eating without much thought whatever was set before him, and this included the best of everything and far too much of it. Another year or two of the fleshpots of Mayfair and he would have acquired the ripe, overfed look of that swashbuckling ex-major of Lancers, who had acclaimed him as "Old Sport!" A few weeks of hard exercise and the plainest food had given back to him the elasticity and exhilaration of youth.

Unquestionably this recuperation would have been less marked had Hugo allowed his mind to dwell much upon either the past or the future. He had deliberately put these from him, living in and for the present alone, and in this he had been wise with the wisdom of the bear, who curls himself up in his snug winter quarters without any morbid misgivings as to whether a square meal will be procurable when he tumbles out in the spring.

Presently, the throat of the eldest patient had to be painted. The taking of temperatures and the painful swallowing of milk followed. The children were very docile: a bad sign. They obeyed orders, sinking back on to their pillows without speaking a word; but the third child was unconscious and quite unable to take either milk or medicine. Hugo watched it more keenly, wondering if it would pull through, knowing (for Tisdale had told him) that he could do nothing except look on at the final struggle between Nature and Death.

Believing the child to be growing worse, he laid his finger upon her wrist. To his surprise the pulse was slower and less wiry than it had been half an hour before. He put the clinical thermometer beneath her arm. Another surprise: the high temperature was falling. And yet, surely, surely the child was dying. Each breath rattled in the small throat.

He glanced at his watch. Nearly an hour and a half had passed. Within a few minutes Tisdale would be here, Tisdale, who had predicted a higher temperature and a galloping pulse.

Suddenly, as if by inspiration, he understood. The child was better; Nature had conquered; and—oh! irony of fate!—she would die all the same, not of diphtheria, but of suffocation. He hesitated a moment and then went into the parlor. What was left of the Purkess family was sound asleep.

Hugo sent the father hot-foot for the nurse and went back into the bedroom. The child's complexion was perceptibly darker, and there was a convulsion of the limbs, a clenching of the tiny fists, with every breath that was drawn. He laid his finger upon the throat; it was hard to the touch, swollen and slightly discolored. Would

JAPAN TODAY. By James A. B. Scherer. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. (Price $1.25.)

YOUNG JAPAN. By James A. B. Scherer. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. (Price $1.25.)

Five years Prof. J. A. B. Scherer, the president of Throop Polytechnic Institute, spent in close contact with the Japanese, four of which he was a teacher in the government school at Saga. During this time he applied himself sedulously to the study of the Japanese educational and social life, and the experience thus gained he has recorded in two of the most interesting books I have ever read. The style is not that of an academician; it is not the creditely impersonal English one would expect to encounter in a college president's work. The books were written by a man who felt he had a message, and gave it with a frankness and fluency which come only when one feels personally and intimately the things one writes. The books are enthusiastic, facilely expressed, sometimes eulogistic; but beneath all the spontaneous energy one is conscious of careful, judicial consideration; and this combination places Dr. Scherer's work with the other great books on Japan, such as Chamberlain's "Things Japanese," Murry's "The Story of Japan" and Lafcadio Hearn's "Japan."

The two books of Dr. Scherer, "Japan Today", and "Young Japan," while complete singly, are really complementary, and should be read as companion volumes in the order given. "Japan Today," as Dr. Scherer calls it himself, is "a random portfolio of views, showing contemporary life in Japan under every ordinary condition, and from every attainable angle." In this book there has been no attempt at unity. The material, taken and stored in a notebook, is given to us in a kaleidoscopic method, and these manifold aspects of modern Japanese life as presented have about them all the interest and charm of the most delightful fictional writing. In the chapter, "Sunrise Land," we are given a rapid survey of the country and the people as a whole. In "Views Awheel," a title chosen in contradistinction of Bayard Taylor's "Views Afoot," and in "Home Life," Dr. Scherer presents the people and country to us at closer range. His descriptions of the country are personal and beautiful; they are the subjective descriptions which are fused with individual appreciations and emotions. City and country hold equally marvelous delights for him. And the doctor is not without humor, he is blessed with a delectable insouciance of spirit. His glimpses into the home life of Japan, his descriptions of the children, the festivals, and the women, are of the utmost interest, and always escape the stereotyped exposition of—well, those given to sterotyped exposition. In an interesting chapter on "The Awful Japanese Language" we are introduced to the difficulties and complications of this nation's method of speech, and are given a recountal of some of the beginners' blunders. From the standpoint of humor perhaps no more delightful chapter is there than "Sermons Garnished With Smiles." It includes a delicious sermon on "The Chief End of Man," tales from Japanese folk-lore, and a review of the old and new religions. Then, from a sketch of the actual experiences of an American teacher in a modern Japanese school, we go north and visit the interesting Ainu. The traits of the Japanese are explained to some length; a forecast is given of Japan's possibilities; and, finally, the larger meaning of the Russo-Japanese War is discussed.

Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, author of "Mission Tales in the Days of the Dons."

"Young Japan," Dr. Scherer's other book, is divided into three sections, namely: "Early Culture," which treats of the development of Japan from the first historical traditions to the sixth century which marked the introduction into Japan of Chinese civilization; "Adolescence," which brings the growth of Japan up to the time when western civilization supplanted the Chinese culture in the middle of the nineteenth century, and "School Days," which traces the development of Japan under the influence of the Occident. The book is unified, simple and comprehensive, and accomplishes two purposes—first, it outlines the story of the Japanese people, and, secondly, it shows the wonderful development the nation has made, educationally. The opening of each of the three sections recounts the national evolution of Japan, and the remainder of the sections explains the actual influences which have controlled this evolution.

James A. B. Scherer, author of "Young Japan" and "Japan Today."

Both books are rational, clear, delightfully written, shot with humor, and, I should say, indispensable additions to the literature on that little-understood and important nation.

California in the Old Days.

MISSION TALES IN THE DAYS OF THE DONS. By Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes. A. C. McClurg & Co., New York. (Price, $1.50 net.)

"Mission Tales in the Days of the Dons" is the suggestive title of a book recently completed by a local writer, upon whom the spirit of old California has descended.

The thirteen short stories of which the book is made up have been written by one having authority, for Mrs. Forbes treasures in her heart many an old tale told from lip to lip by the pioneers of the land; she sat at the feet of the venerable Father Rubio, many years ago, and steeped herself in the life interest of half a century of work in the mission field from San Luis Obispo to San Fernando; she searched the "dusty tomes" in the Mission archives for the romance and tragic incident of early Spanish days.

Dashing caballeros gallop through the pages of the book; Mission bells intone the hours, red-lipped señoritas, dusky Indian maidens and brown-frocked Franciscan friars figure in the stories. That period in Alta California is rich in the stuff of stories, and a number of exquisite legends are interwoven with historic facts.

One of the most beautiful is the legend of the Matilija poppy, in which the Indian maid of the Ojai brought all the healing herbs to salve the wound of her dying lover.

"Carefully she watched over him and soothed him," runs the story, "but he died, and with his spirit went the love dream of the fairest of Matilija maidens. . . . Years passed, and a stranger mounted the hill to gather the great white blossoms that crowned the crest. He found they guarded the grave of two lovers. Kind nature had woven the choicest of shrouds about the form of the brave Indian girl."

Familiar features to Los Angeles folk are found in the Mission tales. There is the story of the buried treasure, ghost-guarded, near the old mill of El Molino Viejo, known to every Los Angeles boy and girl. There is the legend of the San Gabriel grape vine which grew from a slip once the riding switch of the sweet-faced Sister Concha.

The book is handsomely gotten up, and contains nine full-page illustrations, and marginal drawings by Langdon Smith.

Inconsequent and Ungrammatical.

THE STORY OF MY LIFE. By Ellen Terry. The McClure Company, New York. (Price, $2.00.)

Ellen Terry's "The Story of My Life" lacks only one thing to make it an interesting autobiography. It needs to be rewritten by some one who knows how to write interesting autobiography. It is to be regretted that any one who has managed to attract attention deems it a sufficient excuse to write a book of memoirs. It is not so inexcusable with writers, but when people, who have given up their lives following a pursuit which is not writing, attempt this difficult art, it is as though I should endeavor to interpret my emotions on a saxophone. I am quite sure no one would remain until the concert was over; I really wouldn't expect them to. It is bad enough when people skilled in the craft write their memoirs, but when one who has no knowledge of writing attempts this difficult feat—oh, dear me!

I have sought in vain through the four hundred cumbersome pages of "The Story of My Life" for the slightest excuse for the book's existence, and I assure you I have found none. It is very much like any other theatrical autobiography. There is nothing new in it, and one of George Bernard Shaw's "Dramatic Opinions" is worth more than all of Ellen Terry's criticisms. Again, the things that have happened to this actress are the same things which have happened to all stage people, and Miss Terry's English has not the freshness which would warrant the repetition of anecdotes already familiar.

The book, too, on account of its mock modesty, its reticence, and its inaccuracies, is unreliable as history, or even as a record of the events in Miss Terry's life. Her marriage with the artist, George Frederick Watts, is handled so briefly and so gingerly that one is left almost in the dark concerning it. The author skips over so many things in Irving's career that her appreciation of him loses all its reliability. She spends much time prating idle advice, and rambles so in her writing that all those who believe in unity (and I am one of them) are exasperated.

It is unfortunate that the publishers would encourage a book of this kind. It certainly will add nothing to Miss Terry's greatness. It cannot be accepted as final by any one who desires to read a biography of this actress. It is not even grammatical.

Pleasing Poetry.

THE WOMAN OF CORINTH. By Hermann Hagedorn. Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston. (Price, $1.)

Hagedorn's poetry is of a cold, intellectual character, the kind which would have given joy to Lionel Johnson. "The Woman of Corinth" is of the precise, impeccable variety that disarms criticism. There is no fault to be found with it; it is perfectly turned, classically proper, erudite and pleasing. But it lacks something, just what this something is it is difficult to determine; it is that intangible undercurrent of emotional sensitiveness which one feels in all great poetry, but which one cannot explain. I would not imply that Hagedorn's poetry is commonplace or that he clings to mediocrity either in execution or diction. To the contrary his lines attest the existence of a temperament artistic and opulent. "The Woman of Corinth" abounds in beautiful conceptions, and the style is fluent and chaste. But the poetic figures never get at one, they leave in their trail a succession of intellectual emotions; but they never startle the senses, as, for instance, the lines: "Her name is ashes in my mouth," or "Come, tangle your souls in our hair."

The poem is peculiar. It is hard to believe that it is a product of the twentieth century, and, did I not know Hagedorn to be still under thirty, I should say the book had been written by some contemporary admirer of Byron. There is no hint of modernity in the poem; the feeling, the diction, the conception, all are of that early period of the nineteenth century when Keats, Byron and Hunt were writing. I do not say this derogatorily, it is no small feat to shake so completely one's age and environment and write a long poem with all the ear marks of a time a century past. It is unfortunate, however, that in a poem as admirable, as consistently excellent as "The Woman of Corinth," there should appear the following unscannable lines, the roughness of which could have been obviated by "the labor of the file."

"Glimmers in the gray twilight,"
"Sings my lady without cease."
"Hath a purer love stolen in," and
"Is Mohammad among men."

This last may be hyper-criticism, but Stephen Phillips has forsworn any high rank as a poet by just such asperities. Hagedorn knows, as well as I, that "without" and "among" are not accentuated on the first syllable; and also he knows that "twilight" and "purer" are not accentuated on the second syllable.

On the whole, however, the poem is distinctive, and in no small degree, pleasing in a day when an abnormal sentimentality has grown up about locomotives and flying machines. Still, Hagedorn lacks a certain robustness of temperament necessary to narrative versifying (the gift of John Davidson, for instance,) and my advice to Mr. Hagedorn (which, of course, will not be taken,) is to cling to the lyric. Hagedorn has written many beautiful lyrics.

A Man, His Wife and Another.

THE SPELL. By William Dana Orcutt. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price, $1.50.)

Mr. Orcutt's book is another sad and unfortunate result of the demand of publishers that books must reach a certain length. I am strongly of the impression that when "The Spell" was written it was about half its present size. Then, counting his words, the author sighed, and set to work to debauch his book to please the inartistic and pachydermatous publishers. The actual story being told in all the fullness possible, Mr. Orcutt took the next method of elongation and padded the dialogue. The result is that the book is for the large part irrelevant, unimportant, labored, and utterly tiresome conversation.

Between these lapses of extraneous talk there is a mystical and unconvincing tale about a Renaissance obsession which seizes two people who are at work on some literary matters. No doubt it is hysteria due to overworking the emotions and the brain. But both people get it, and this constitutes the "spell." Not being a psycho-pathologist (or patho-psychologist: which is it?) it strikes me as being a little ridiculous. At any rate, this temperamental insanity (really, you know, that is all it was) makes the man treat his wife, who is sane, quite disgustingly. Apparently finesse and subtlety are unknown quantities to Mr. Orcutt.

Another Novel.

ARAMINTA. By J. C. Snaith. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price, $1.50.)

"Araminta" is just another novel. To say anything further would be to indulge in superfluities; but, being somewhat addicted to indulging in superfluities, I shall say something further.

J. C. Snaith is a victim of the writing habit, which results (as all such things result) in sporadic outbreaks of about 90,000 words each.

The situations in his new book are quite impossible—the pet situations of all melodramatists striving for humorous relief. They have been used so often and for so long a time that what humor they may once have had has long been lost through their ubiquity. Here is a free sample in capsule form. Those desiring more will be fully supplied at one-fifty per supply.

Exhibit A at Demonstration Table No. 1: The daughter of a bucolic parson visits her aunt, the Countess of Crewkerne, in London. Being unversed in the ways of conventional opulent society, she proffers her hand to the butler and is taken for a maidservant. The ensuing farce is orthodox, and the thinking out of the situation has left Mr. Snaith's originality (if he has any) quite unimpaired.

Later the heroine comes to her own, and an earl, a duke and a portrait painter fall in love with her. The earl, as well as the duke, being a bit of a rake, Araminta, of course, loves the artist. Then follows some wearisome sentimentalism about the duty the girl owes her family, which results in her giving up her lover and consenting to marry the earl. This is Exhibit B, Demonstration Table No. 3, of Mr. Snaith's originality. Anon, the earl withdraws from the race on ethical grounds, and—I shall leave the ending to your telepathic powers. I will say, however, that the countess's character is delineated with humorous vividness; and with this I am done with my superfluities on Mr. Snaith's silly book.

Louisiana Life.

ALINE OF THE GRAND WOODS. By Nevin G. Henshaw. The Outing Publishing Company, New York. (Price, $1.50.)

Now, "Aline of the Grand Woods" is not an atrociously poor novel, and in this it differs from the great number of books with which I am inundated. I would go farther, and say that there seems to be a spark of literary life in "Aline." There are local color (it is etched on, however, instead of painted,) a few characters whom one might suspect of being alive, and a sequacious plot—a plot that hangs together with strange and peculiar unity.

There is something uncanny about the plot; one can actually follow it satisfactorily. And when such a miracle is perpetrated in this day of leaning-tower-of-Pisa tales, it is not a thing to be passed lightly.

The Cajuns were the offshoot of the Arcadians sung of by Longfellow in "Evangeline," and they figure prominently in the Louisiana life with which "Aline of the Grand Woods" deals. Aline, as the title suggests, is the heroine, and I have seen worse. Her father, who was disinherited for marrying the woman he loved, dies, and leaves his daughter early in life to be brought up by Telesse, a trusted overseer. There are many interesting characters who have a hand in Aline's destiny; Pere Martain, father confessor and spiritual adviser; Numa, a rake, with the drink habit, who becomes one of Aline's suitors; Grandfather Varain, who is really sorry for his early action, and makes restitution in a most orthodox and improved method; and—ah, you have been waiting for him, eh?—Carey Gordon, rice-planter, wealthy, not bad-looking, chivalrous, and has known Aline since childhood—in fact, he was her defender in youth against Numa.

So, in conclusion, let me remark after this wise: If you must read popular novels (and I realize there are many who must,) "Aline of the Grand Woods" will while the hours away pleasantly and inanely—perhaps more pleasantly and less inanely, though, than the average ephemeral tale.

Medical Treatise.

NERVOUSNESS. By Dr. Alfred T. Schofield. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price, 50 cents.)

"Nervousness" is a small book, but it accomplishes more, perhaps, than many large volumes which have heretofore appeared on the subject. Dr. Schofield is an Englishman, and for many years a recognized authority as a specialist.

The author's point is not altogether new. The modern truism that "a disease due to the imagination is not necessarily an imaginary disease," but may be a very real and even a very painful disease, is the doctor's thesis condensed. He reviews with rapidity the field of the disordered nerves of today, explains their probable origins and causes, gives their symptoms and manifestations, and ends with suggestions for their cure. His handling of the subject is deft and his differentiations and classifications are swift so that the untrained but interested general reader may get a comprehensive view, with a true perspective, of the entire field.

Local Author's Work.

DEATH VALLEY SLIM. By Pauline Wilson Worth. The Segnogram Press, Los Angeles. (Price, 75 cents.)

Miss Pauline Wilson Worth is a young woman of this city, whose western stories for many years have appeared in magazines and newspapers. One magazine used so much of her work that she changed her name to Paul Wilson temporarily so that it would not seem she had cornered the fiction market of that publication.

In a little book, published by a local concern, she has gathered together six of her best stories, one of them being "Death Valley Slim," from which the book takes its title. Miss Worth's stories have a sturdy masculine vigor, and attest the writer's familiarity with western types and western atmosphere.

The book is tastily bound in limp boards, with large margins and decorations. The headings and tailpieces are attractive.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

All of "Jimbo," Algernon Blackwood's fantasy, is, in a sense, poetry, but it is only in a few places that the poetry is expressed in the form of verse. Then strange beings, whose existence is hidden from grosser eyes, sing to the little hero of subtle beauty and subtle dangers. The poems remind one of Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verses" in their wonderful expression of a boy's mind, but Mr. Blackwood's hero-dreamer is a more sensitive spectator of life than the happy tenant of Stevenson's garden. For Jimbo had been frightened, and the fate of frightened children was sung to him by the shadowy forms in the "Empty House."

"We are the children of the whispering
night,
We live eternally in dreadful fright
Of stories told us in the gray twilight,
By nursery maids.

"We are the children of a winter's day;
Under our breath we chant this mournful lay;
We dance with phantoms and with shadows play,
And have no rest.

"We have no joy in any children's game,
For happiness to us is but a name
Since Terror kissed us with his lips of flame,
In wicked jest.

"We hear the little voices in the wind
Singing of freedom we may never find,
Victims of fate so cruelly unkind,
We are unblest.

"We hear the little footsteps in the rain
Running to help us, though they run in vain,
Tapping in hundreds on the window-pane
In vain behest.

"We are the children of the whispering night,
We dwell unrescued in eternal fright
Of stories told us in the dim twilight
By—nursery maids."

The publishing business, apparently, has not always been a hazardous enterprise, or does the following story merely illustrate the fact that poetry sixty years ago was not more generally welcome to publishers than it is now?

While D. Appleton & Co. were negotiating with George Hazelton for the publication of "The Raven: The Love Story of Edgar Allan Poe," the president of the concern was shown the following letter, which appeared in the Century from the famous poet to a less distinguished contemporary:

FORDHAM, June 19, '48.—My Dear Miss Blackwell: You could not have applied for advice to any one more incompetent to give it. Think for a moment how long I have been out of the literary world altogether. I have no influence—none. Your poems are, in my honest opinion, admirable—infinitely superior to many—to most of those which have succeeded in America—but you will find difficulty in getting them published—for copyright-law reasons needless to specify. The Appletons will publish them, leaving you the eventual copyright, but binding you to supply all loss resulting from the publication—and then will allow you 10 per cent. on all values effected, after all expenses are paid—so long as they continue to publish the book. No publisher will make better terms with you than these—and even these will be more advantageous to you than printing on your account.

Coincident with the revival in this country of the crusade against vivisection, B. W. Dodge & Co. have published G. Colmore's novel, "Priests of Progress." It describes the career of Sidney Gale, who enters the medical profession as an enthusiastic believer in orthodox methods, and forms an attachment to a girl—the heroine of the story—whose father is a well-known physiologist, and champion of the vivisectionists. Sidney's own hospital experiences disturb his mental balance, and for some time he remains undecided, but at length professional esprit de corps, and his respect for the father of the woman he loves, prove too strong for him, and he declares for vivisection. The heroine's faith is also sorely shaken by the harrowing experiences of treatment accorded to patients by surgeons who are practicers of vivisection; but she also eventually marries a scientist, though without deep attachment. They have an invalid child, and the heroine is drawn closer to her husband, and her belief in vivisection becomes a passion, owing to her husband's impotent endeavors by means of vivisectional experiment, to find a cure for the child's disease. Through an accident, she witnesses an experiment performed by her husband; the child dies, and later the husband suffers a tragic death, due to the action of the Pasteur serum (this is taken from well-authenticated cases.) Sidney has, by this time, once and for all, thrown in his lot with the anti-vivisectionists, sacrificing fame and success to conviction. In contrast with Gale's career is that of Edgar Hall, who, pursuing the orthodox lines of medical scientific research, reaches the pinnacle of eminence.

WHAT THE PUBLISHERS HAVE IN STORE FOR US.

Louise Morgan Sill, a writer whose name is associated with lyric verse, and whose first poems were published under the title, "In Sun and Shade," has allowed herself another expression of her talent in stories for children. The rhymed "Adventures of Miss Kitty Tipsy Toe," having been so successful as to be shipped to the little folk in England and Australia, is now to be followed by a prose story for older children. The Harpers will bring out this new story book of Mrs. Sill's this month.

On a strip of California beach between the pines and the sea, lies fair Carmel, the home now—pro tem. at least—of a group of talented writers, among them Miss Alice MacGowan, author of Judith of the Cumberlands, and many a stirring tale of the Tennessee mountains, and her sister, Mrs. Grace MacGowan Cooke, who collaborates with her. Miss MacGowan's new novel will appear in Putnam's Magazine, the first installment in the April number.

Herman Whitaker, whose last novel, "The Settler," was a story of the "remittance men" and their wives on the northern frontier, will publish a new novel under the Harper imprint this spring.

Henry Gardner Hunting, a frequent contributor to the best magazines for young folk, publishes his first book with Henry Hold & Co., this month. "Witter Whitehead's Own Story" is rather a new departure in juvenile fiction, as it reflects accurately the life of the working boy in a large city. The hero is a wagon boy in a big department store. The story has to do with a splash of whitewash, some stolen silver, and a house that wasn't vacant.

"The Negro Problem—Abraham Lincoln's Solution," is the title of a book by William P. Pickett which will be published by G. P. Putnam's Sons this spring. It is perhaps not generally known that Lincoln early in life became convinced that the negro problem was susceptible of but one solution. What that solution was, Lincoln's efforts to secure its acceptance, the present necessity for its adoption, and means necessary to accomplish it, and the result which would flow from its adoption, are set forth in full in the book. The author has made a complete study of the subject, and the publication of this work cannot fail to be of deep interest to all students of this most vexatious of problems.

"The Master Builders," a novel of American manners and adventure, by James Edmund Dunning (American Consul at Milan, Italy,) will be published by D. Appleton & Co. in April. Though the main theme of the story is concerned with the character of a rather remarkable woman, the background of the novel deals with an exciting episode in the development of the navy of the United States.

In their American Nature Series, Messrs. Henry Holt & Company are about to follow up C. William Beebe's very successful "The Bird: Its Form and Function," with a notable book, "Birds of the World." This sumptuous one volume work to appear near the end of March, has enlisted the services of three leading authorities; Frank H. Knowlton, of the United States National Museum, is the principal author; F. A. Lucas, chief curator of the Brooklyn Academy of Arts and Sciences, has contributed a long chapter on the anatomy of birds, and Robert Ridgway, curator of birds in the United States National Museum, has edited the entire work. Every known family of birds is accorded approximately equal treatment, except that the discussion of game birds has been made especially full. Particular attention is paid to the appearance of birds in their home—their plumage, habits, songs, nests, eggs and food. Sixteen colored plates and several hundred text cuts add to the volume's attraction.

"The Laws of Friendship, Humane and Divine," by Henry Churchill King, president, of Oberlin College; "The Government of European Cities," by Prof. William Bennett Munro of Harvard University; and "Greek Architecture," by Prof. Allen Marquand of Princeton University, are announced by the Macmillan Company for next week.

The Century Company will publish late this month, Maurice Francis Egan's new book, "The Wiles of Sexton Maginnis," and a new and unusual book by Louise Forsslund, "Old Lady Number 31."

Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Company will shortly publish a new novel by Bettina, Baroness Von Hutten, author of "Pam" and "Pam Decides." "Pam" and also little "Pammy" appear again. The publishers promise a charming story, told in Baroness Von Hutten's characteristically vivacious and entertaining style.

One of the most successful of modern plays is "The Music Master," written by Charles Klei, a dramatist of remarkable insight into human emotions; acted by David Warfield, whose own mother, upon seeing him in the play, said, "That isn't acting, that's Dave." "The Music Master," though running almost constantly for over five years, is as popular as ever. The story of this great play as produced by David Belasco, has been novelized by Mr. Klein, and has been published in an attractive form by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Company. The volume has several illustrations in color.

Ernest Thompson Seton's "The Autobiography of a Silver Fox" will be issued late this month by The Century Company. In it the author has set out to portray the romance of an ideal life union of two noble animals. The cover-design, title-page, and general makeup of the book are the work of Mrs. Seton; and there are one hundred of the author-artist's characteristic illustrations.

The retirement of Col. William F. Tucker of the pay department on account of physical disability insurred in line of duty, results in the promotion of Lieut.-Col. Harry L. Rogers to be colonel, and Maj. George F. Downey to be lieutenant-colonel.

Discontent.

"I wish I were a rose," sighed the lily one bright day,
"With the rose's sweet perfume, and coloring rich and gay;
Then I would shed my petals in showers of brightest hue—
I know I would be happy if this I could but do."

"I'd rather be a sunbeam that shines down from on high,"
The modest little daisy to the lily made reply;
"For, then I'd shine just where I pleased and bright would be my lot, Instead of standing like a stick in just one little spot."

"I prefer to be a star," said the glowing rose so bright,
"For then my station would be high a clear and sparkling light,
I'd be a queen of beauty, set in the azure sky,
Where now I live just for a day, then quickly fade and die."

"I'd love to be a butterfly," hummed the busy little bee,
"Then I would fly and play all day;
It's now all work for me—
I'd sip the honey from each flower
And be so glad and gay;
Oh, yes, I'd be so happy to just fly around and play."

Thus as they sadly murmured, their discontent grew strong;
All things to them seemed clouded, and everything was wrong.
The breeze who had been listening to their wishes and their sighs,
Now, very softly whispered as he was passing by;

"You are just what you should be, in the place in which you are;
You would only be a failure if a sunbeam or a star.
So do your work in gladness, in the spot in which you're placed,
For in the whole creation it's the spot which best you grace."

An Invalid's Gratitude.

Mrs. M. A. S. of Union City, Mich., acknowledges receipts of bright letters and pretty post cards on February 14:

"Dear Friends: Since I last wrote you we have had much trouble and sorrow in our home. About four weeks ago my husband was taken down to his bed with heart and lung trouble. The doctor had very little hopes that he would get up again, he had such severe attacks of coughing that brought on sinking spells, and as I had no one to care for him I had him on a cot near me, so I could give him his medicine. The worry and want of rest has made me suffer much more and weakened me so now I can scarcely move my hands. I wish to thank all those who so kindly wrote me such lovely letters of sympathy. How gladly I would answer each one personally if I had the strength to do so. I will try some time.

"The doctor says nothing but a long rest will help my husband, but that he cannot take, as he says as soon as he can sit up he must try and work. As soon as he is a little better I am going to read the letters I received to him and that will help to pass the time pleasantly for him. I am so weak and full of pain I can scarcely hold pencil to write. Again, I thank you all for your kind letters and cards. I hope you will keep on writing to me, even if I am not able to answer all personally. With much love to Each and All. M. A. S."

On March 27 this dear old couple will have been married twenty-seven years. It would be very fine to have that linen shower fall for this celebration.

Dawn.

(Written while keeping vigil over sick baby.)

It is dawn—the birds are waking—
Shafts of light illume the east;
Looms of Nature start to action,
Which on yester-night had ceased.
Start to sight, and sound, and action
To creation's noble strife;
Tissues fresh and firm evolving
Of the wond'rous Book of Life.
A Great Spirit's thoughts pursuing,
(Nature's language is His tongue,)
Weaving tales of golden glory
Which from human acts have sprung.

Things of earth must spin a chapter
'Twixt the rise and set of sun,
Luminous pages deftly weaving
Till another day's begun.
Out of air must come a chapter
From the denizens of space,
Mystic love, breathed forth in music,
Borne on wing, to fill its place.

Things of sky, in "sounding silence,"
Having influence profound,
Woof shall yield of light and color,
Shining words, in shadow bound.
Each in all together blended
All, by each in concord done,
As the "Scroll of Time" suspended—
Many stories in the one.

Thus we find in one day's weaving,
Of the whole, epitome,
But the tale in all its splendor
By an Infinite light must be
To the soul revealed. By stages
Will this consciousness unfold.
Nature's child, in wisdom's temple,
Shall possess the story—told.

NELLIE N. SULLIVAN.

A "Loving Member."

Our little girl from Monrovia, who signs herself "Your loving member, S. M.," wants to become acquainted with some of the younger members of the society. She writes:

"I will just write you a few lines tonight. I always read the letters in The Times every Sunday. They are always so cheery. I send a stamped envelope, for which please send me the address of the lonely Pomona girl. I think her initials are F. C. P. I would like to get some of her pictures. Would some of the members about 14 or 15 years old please write to me? I will answer their letters promptly."

Will not some of the members of the Carminita Chapter correspond with this young member? Our Pomona girl's address has been sent to you.

"A Sunshiner."

Sunshine of Los Angeles sends along a bit of helpful verse:

"I have just finished reading the beautiful letters published in the Each and All page of The Times. I enjoy reading 'Marguerite Winnifred's' letter so much. I like the idea of her wanting to call the 'Would-be Author' she speaks of in her letter, 'Faith.' I think it a beautiful name for her, it carries so much meaning with it. I hope she will adopt 'Faith' as her nom de plume, and look up, and have faith as there is a higher power that will help us all in time of trouble if we only look up trustfully with faith. Will you please send me this dear sister's address? I will try to write her a few cheering words, and I hope more of the Each and All girls will help to bring sunshine into her life. We never know when we may be in need of a cheering word from some dear soul. I hope for a speedy recovery of her husband's health. I am going to write a couple of verses that I think beautiful; there is much meaning to them:

'Loving words are rays of sunshine
Falling on the path of life,
Driving out the glom and shadow
Born of weariness and strife.
Often we forget our troubles
When a friendly voice is heard;
They are banished by the magic
Of a kind and helpful word.
Keep not back a word of kindness
When the chance to speak it comes,
Though it seems to you a trifle,
Many a heart that grief benumbs
Will grow strong and brave to hear it,
And the world will brighter grow
Just because the word was spoken—
Try it—you will find it so.'"

The address requested has been forwarded.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE:

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

The acceptance of this pledge and sending of name and address to the Each and All department of The Times entitles any girl to the privileges of this society. There are no dues of any kind whatsoever. The official pin of The Times Each and All Society, represents the California poppy. Any chapter may be joined by sending stamped envelope with letter in order to put the applicant in communication with the chairman of the chapter.

A New Member.

A Sawtelle girl, whose initials are V. W. C., asks to become a member of the Each and All Society:

"I am greatly interested in the Each and All Society and would like very much to become a member. I accept the pledge and hope to receive an early reply stating full particulars. I would also like a copy of the post-card list."

You are already a member of the society, and the post-card list will be mailed to you as soon as arranged.

A Far-Away Shut-in.

A shut-in girl living in far away Stillwater, Minn., has heard of the California Each and All Society and asks the girls to write to her.

"Dear Editor of the Each and All Department: Will you kindly allow me space in your columns? I have been reading the Sunday Times and I enjoy your department very much. It has such a lovely motto and I am prompted to ask to become a member of such a useful society. I am a helpless shut-in; have been since I was 4 years old, and therefore never ran and played as other little children. I have paralysis in my feet, limbs and hands. I can do nothing but write. I am now 27 years old. I would greatly appreciate letters and post cards, reading, etc.

"Just one little ray of sunshine coming from some honest heart.
Just one little deed of kindness will the peace of God impart.
And the ones who send the sunshine will the peace of God receive.
None shall ever be unrewarded who a helpless child will relieve.

"Please write, dear readers. I will answer all who will kindly inclose a stamp for reply.

"With best wishes to the editor and all the girls of the society, I am, your shut-in sister."

It is good news to know that our department cast a bit of sunshine into the life of this far away shut-in girl, who is now welcomed as a member of the Each and All Society. Her request for letters and cards from our girls will not go unheeded.

PLANS FOR THE AUTHORS.

Something About the Courses of Study That Are Proposed for This Chapter.

Marguerite Winnifred tells in the following article something of plans she has for her chapter:

A few weeks ago "Star" told us in a short, but sweetly helpful poem—how I wish that we had more such from Would-be Authors!—not to look ahead to cross "the bridge of sorrow" for there may be "a fairy boat waiting to ferry us over, beneath skies of cloudless blue." No, we must not peer into the coming days with eyes darkened by forebodings, but if it be of the boat of silvery sheen of which we are thinking—of the gauze-winged elves who will row us where water lilies nestle on placid waters—we may "look forth with brightness into the future unknown."

Today, I want to take a peep a long way ahead into plans for the Would-be Authors, at one of the large things which we shall attempt before this second year of the society has ended. There were a couple of things which I started to say last week, but "laid over," and which, if you will grant me your patience, I shall postpone a couple of weeks longer (Marguerite is ever wilful, you know,) in order to speak of the study courses about which some have wished very much to know, which are being planned for such members as wish to take up systematic study work.

Not all of the Would-be Authors want lessons on literary technique. Some do not need them, among whom are several professional and semi-professional writers who have become interested in our work, who contribute to well-known magazines; others have not the time to give to systematic study. A considerable minority, however, very much desire thorough courses in the different branches of authorship.

In time, courses on all the different forms of writing will be given for those who wish them. It is too huge an undertaking to give four or five different series of lessons at one time, so they will be taken up, one series at a time, each probably being carried through to the end before another is begun. The first will be a short-story course, with side excursions into novel writing, because there seems to be the greatest demand for this. The next course probably will be either on the composition of poetry and songs, or on newspaper reporting and correspondence and feature work. Both have been requested by a number, and at this time I scarcely know which will be given precedence. The fourth course may be on that difficult art, play writing. Somewhere between these lessons, or following them, will be arranged a grammar, rhetoric and word study for those who feel themselves weak in the simpler rudiments of literary composition.

The short-story course will be based upon the following books and upon others which will be learned of and ordered from time to time: Albright's "The Short Story; Its Principles and Structure;" Smith's "Writing of the Short Story," Heisch's "Art and Craft of the Author," Wilmot's "Pleasures of Literature," Reeve's "Practical Authorship," Knowles's "Practical Hints for Young Writers," Quirk's "How to Write a Short Story," "A Publisher's Confession," Alden's "Magazine Writing," Horne's "Technique of the Novel," Luce's "Writing for the Press," Hiland's "How to Become An Author," Brewster's "Prose Nerration," Baldwin's "Prose Description," Lamont's "Exposition," Woodbury's "Appreciation of Literature," Winchester's "Principles of Literary Citicism," Barrett's "Short Story Writing," Canby's "The Short Story," Matthews's "Philosophy of the Short Story," Cody's "World's Greatest Short Stories," Jessup and Canby's "Book of the Short Story," Baldwin's "American Short Stories," Gates's "Talks on Writing," Booth's "Notes for Guidance of Authors," "The Way Into Print," "Essays on Authorship," Esenwein's "Writing the Short Story," Given's "Making a Newspaper," and Vizetelly's "Preparation of Manuscripts," a collection of books partly good and partly of indifferent value, gathered at one time and another, and here and there, as I heard them recommended or saw them listed. I have no doubt that you know of several helpful books not in my list. Will you not please let me know what they are, for I wish my library to be as complete as possible for my own and others' use? A further description of this course and full instructions may be obtained by writing to Marguerite Winnifred, care of the Each and All Department of The Times.

A New Member.

Mrs. O. C. C. of Covina, a new member, thinks it is not easy to live up to Each and All pledge, but will do her best.

"I accept the pledge of Each and All Society, and wish to live up to it as well as I can, but I think one would be perfect who could keep it all the time.

"Please send the address of the invalid in Union City, Mich. Also of the paralytic girl of whom Mrs. Payne spoke, and of any others nearer home who are in need of cheer."

You are welcome into the ranks of the Each and All girls. The addresses requested have been forwarded to you.

Here's a Cat 28 Years Old.

Edward Malcolm of No. 6 State street, Jersey City, Saturday celebrated the twenty-eighth birthday of his cat Grizel. The animal was originally black, but has grown, like its name, into a sort of nondescript color, although its tail stays white.

Grizel has been the mother of sevdreds of kittens, and, strangely enough, while the back fence has attractions, she has never been known to leave the premises. Dr. Nicoll of West Ninety-sixth street, when asked yesterday if he ever heard of an older cat, answered that he had not. Mr. Malcolm's cat has lived with them ever since he bought the house where his family lives, twenty-eight years ago yesterday. The animal is well, and, besides gray hairs, does not show her age.—[New York World.

Beat Lot's Wife.

"You have heard what happened to Lot's wife, I suppose?"

"Yes; she looked back and turned into a pillar of salt."

"Well, I saw something today which beat that."

"No?"

"Fact. A red-nosed woman with a kettle in her hand, hurrying down the street. She looked furtively over her shoulder—and turned into a saloon."—[Exchange.

CAMPANINI OUT.

Hammerstein's Director Does Not Renew His Contract, to Surprise of Musical New York.

Cleofonte Campanini's absolutely undivided reign at the desk of the Manhattan Operahouse will end with the expiration of this season. This announcement caused as much surprised comment in New York as an announcement of Harley Hamilton's resignation from the symphony or J. B. Poulin's departure from the Ellis Club would have caused here. Musical America says:

"With the flag of truce flying over the Metropolitan Operahouse this week, the center of operatic disagreement shifted to Oscar Hammerstein's institution in West Thirty-fourth street, where it was announced that Cleofonte Campanini, who since the opening night of the Manhattan three years ago has been Mr. Hammerstein's musical director, would sever his relations with the impresario at the close of the present season.

Following the formal statement made a few week ago that Mr. Campanini had been reëngaged for a period of five years, the announcement of a sudden termination of the director's contract naturally came as a great surprise in operatic circles.

"The disagreement is an aftermath of the Mary Garden-Lina Cavalieri feud, which brought about friction between the French and Italian forces at the Manhattan, and has resulted in a straining of the entente cordiale between the factions ever since. Mr. Hammerstein gives the following explanation of the circumstances which led to Mr. Campanini's decision:

"'When it came to the signing a contract with Mr. Campanini, I found it necessary, with a view to restoring amicable relations between the rival camps of artists, to insist upon certain added conditions, and upon this negotiations fell through. I have but one object to consider, and that is the best interests of my operatic institutions. I must be master or otherwise I cannot continue giving opera.

"'As the preponderance of the repertory next season will be French, I shall have no fewer than six musical conductors next season; two of them for French operas, two for Italian opera, and two for opera comique. Among them will be one of the greatest living conductors, who has already been selected.'

"It has been hinted that Mr. Campanini will go over to the Metropolitan next season, although the added power granted to Arturo Toscanini at that institution precludes the possibility of the former occupying anything more important that a secondary position at the Broadway operahouse.

"'I wish above all things,' said Mr. Campanini, 'to avoid even the suggestion of any discussion in the newspapers between Mr. Hammerstein and myself. We could not agree as to the terms of our contract, and consequently I have decided not to conduct here next year. I shall conduct in London in the spring, and then, in all probability, will go to Naples. I am heartily sorry to leave New York.'"

Viscount Charles de Chambrun, military attaché of the French Embassy at Washington, was recently having some repairs and alterations made at his residence. While connecting the gas meter the workman became overcome by the escaping gas. Through the Viscount's efforts the man's life was saved, and upon his recovering consciousness he was placed in a private ward at the hospital and a special nurse assigned to his care.

Viele, I. N. Van Nuys and William Cross.

Two Devoted Cousins.

Gilbert Collins Crossley is the name of the handsome, manly little chap pictured here today. Gilbert is just 5 years old, the only child of Mrs. Elisabeth Collins Crossley. There is nothing of the baby about this sturdy boy, who is already quite an athlete. Gilbert is very proud of his pretty young mamma, and loves to be her escort on visiting trips about town.

Accompanying Gilbert's picture is one of his beautiful and dainty little cousin, Katharyn Collins, whom you would never believe is only 6 years old, if you were to judge by this picture. Here the little girl is playing lady, which is her favorite game. Katharyn has great dark blue eyes and brown curling hair, which makes her a striking little beauty. This little lassie has a critical eye for hats and gowns, and is destined to become a leader in her circle, for even now when playing lady, she is always chosen by her playmates as "the mamma," and when playing school she is again always chosen for the teacher.

The Possum.

Now that the Taft possum bids fair to become as popular as the Teddy Bear, everything concerning this cunning creature is of interest. Roasted possum is a great southern dish, and it has been said that President Taft enjoyed the toothsome possum served to him in southern style, on his recent trip through Georgia.

Little baby possums are carried by their mother in her pouch, where the little family sleep and grow and are nursed until they are big enough to be turned loose on the world to look out for themselves. Through the day old mother possum sleeps in the hollow of a tree, or up in the branches, but when night comes on, she begins to forage for food; pouncing on a lizard here or a cricket there; sometimes she finds a nest of eggs or young birds. A possum can climb a tree as nimbly as a monkey. Baby possums are only about an inch long when born, and stay with their mother for weeks until they are grown. All little children have heard the saying, 'playing possum," that is a wise and favorite trick of these animals, to pretend to be dead whenever they are threatened with danger. The possum is so clever at this that he draws back his gums and drops his jaws until he looks as if he had been dead for months.

Possums love warmth, and when the weather is cold they stay huddled up in some cosy corner. The possum looks very much like a little pig, and the meat is thought by many to taste like pork. The possum is the natural enemy of the cotton rat, and does the planter many a good turn by killing these destructive little animals.

Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Every girl and boy should read Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Wonder Book," for it was written especially for them by this great and gifted author.

Something about a man who wrote such a wonderfully pleasing book for young people should also interest them.

Hawthorne was born in Massachusetts, a State that has given birth to more celebrated writers, perhaps, than any other in the Union. In the town of Salem, Mass., on the Glorious Fourth, 1804, Hawthorne first saw the light of day.

Katharyn Collins,

just six years old, in her "playing lady" costume.

His ancestors used to persecute the Quakers and burn witches and do all sorts of like things, for they thought it was perfectly right and proper to do so. Nathaniel was never fond of school. He was never a strong boy, so he used to make his bad health an excuse to stay home as often as he could. He did not know that a boy who does this sort of thing is cheating himself, and not his teacher. Nathaniel was a very good-looking boy; in fact, he was so handsome that an old gypsy woman who met him one day in the woods asked him: "Are you a boy or an angel?"

When he was quite a boy he wrote to his mother: "I do not want to be a doctor and live by men's diseases, nor a minister to live by their sins, nor a lawyer to live by their quarrels, so I don't see that there is anything left for me to be but an author. How would you like some day to see a whole shelf of books written by your son, with 'Hawthorne's Works' printed on their backs?" She did live to see the day, too, and mighty proud she was of that son. Hawthorne's favorite book was the "Pilgrim's Progress," just as it has been the favorite of many noted men. The first book he bought with his own money was the "Faerie Queen."

As a young man, Hawthorne very seldom went out anywhere, but just stayed home and read and thought and wrote. He was very poor when he was married, but neither he nor his wife cared very much about money. When his friend, Franklin Pierce, was elected President of the United States, he appointed Hawthorne American Consul to Liverpool. The Hawthornes were delighted with this chance to go abroad, and they stayed there for several years. Hawthorne died at Plymouth, N. H., in 1864, and is buried in pretty Concord Cemetery.

LITTLE STAGE PEOPLE.

Children in Play, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," Have Both Day School and Sunday-school.

No doubt many of our young readers went to see the play called "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" which was presented at one of our theaters recently, and so of course you must have become interested in the children of the play, and maybe wished, too, that you might be one of them instead of trudging off to school every day.

Well, do not think you would be missing class duties if you were one of these tots, for they have their daily lessons to get just as you do. There are eight children in this play, and the mother of three of them is matron in charge of all. The company under whose management "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is given also employs a governess who teaches the children an hour and a half each day in class, and from a half to a full hour is also given each individual child.

These little people all have contracts with the managing company, which state that they must have sleeping-car privileges given them, and carriages must be provided for their use to and from stations and hotels. In the contract with the matron and governess the management stipulates that one or the other shall be with the children at all times, both day and night.

The managing director of the company has personally furnished the children with all kinds of toys and games, and their time is laid out in such manner that at least two solid hours of each day is spent at play. George C. Tyler, who is manager of the company, is very fond of these little folk, and is anxious to have them have a good time, and grow up good men and women, and so he arranged with two of the older ladies of the company, as a favor to him that the religious training of his little friends be not overlooked, while they were on their travels. This request resulted in the forming of "The Mrs. Wiggs Sunday-school class." The class gathers together every Sunday under the leadership of four ladies of the company. Each of these four ladies declares that the Sunday-school hour with the children is the happiest and most profitable hour of their week of work and travel.

Fun from the Tots.

Johnny: The camel can go eight days without water.

Freddy: So could I if ma would let me.

Teacher: Johnny, can you tell me why water runs down hill?

Johnny: 'Cause it can't walk, I guess.

"Cyril," said his mother, as they sat down to the breakfast table, "did you wash your face this morning?"

"Well, no—mamma," said he, slowly, evidently casting in his mind for an excuse, "but," he added, reassuringly, "I cried a little before I came downstairs."—[Delineator.

"Now, children," said the teacher, "supposing a tiger were to seize one of you in its hungry jaws and carry you off into the jungle. What would you do?"

No reply.

"You tell me, Tommy," she continued, pointing to one of the brightest youngsters.

Tommy hesitated.

"Come, Tommy," she said. "Would you cry for help?"

"No, ma'am," said he; "mother says little boys shouldn't speak at meal times."

A teacher in a small Oregon school was giving a lesson on the circulation of the blood. Trying to make it clearer, he said: "Now, children, if stood on my head, the blood, as you know, would run into it, and I should turn red in the face."

"Yes, sir," said they.

"Now, Arthur," continued the teacher, addressing a small boy, "what I want to knew is this: How is it that while I am standing upright in the ordinary position the blood doesn't run into my feet and turn them red?"

"Why, sir," answered Arthur, "because yer feet ain't empty."—[Harper's Weekly.

Little Willie, who for some months had invariably ended his evening prayer with "Please send me a baby brother," announced to his mother that he was tired of praying for what he did not get, and that he did not believe that God had any more little boys to send.

Not long afterward he was carried into his mother's room very early in the morning to see twin boys, who had arrived during the night. Willie looked at the two babies critically and then remarked: "It's a good thing I stopped praying when I did."

I still hate school,
I always will,
Yours truly,
Brother Bill.

The above is the short, but emphatic note of a young Portland boy recently sent his sister, who is visiting in Los Angeles.

The Tiniest Baby.

Effie Martha Ramsey is the name of the tiny daughter recently born to the royal house of the Lilliputians. She is so small that her weight has not been given out; maybe it is because she cannot tip the scales.

The baby's mother is Queen of the Lilliputians. The Queen herself weighs but fifty-five pounds, and is only forty-six inches in height, at the age of 25 years.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

the nurse never come? And when she came, what could she do?

XIV.

A few minutes later he heard Purkess's heavy step upon the brick-laid path, and then, bringing with her a faint fragrance of the forest, the nurse entered.

She was small, but erect and alert, with a pair of round eyes that reminded Hugo at once of a robin's, being singularly bright and quick in their movements. She flashed a glance at him, nodded, and bent over the convulsed child. At her touch she seemed to become better, but the hard rattle in the throat continued.

"She's been getting worse," said Hugo.

Purkess stood in a corner of the room, looking on, wide awake and frightened out of his life. From the closet came the heavy, stertorous breathing of his wife. Upon his forehead the veins stood out, and when he wiped the sweat from his face his thick hairy hands trembled. The helplessness of the man was pathetic.

"Can't you do anything?" whispered Hugo.

The nurse shook her head.

"Tisdale will be here in a minute or two."

"He'll arrive too late," she replied with authority.

He marveled at her self-possession, her air even of contentment, and the indefinable expression of well-being, recognizable at once, but so hard to define. She was nearly 30, but her clear, smooth skin had not a line upon it.

Suddenly, Purkess began to sob violently.

Hugo looked with appeal at the nurse, who nodded her head. The poor fellow's grief had something terribly animal about it, something, too, not quite sane, like the fury of a horse that kicks out his master's brains in a moment of terror. Afterward, thinking the incident over, Hugo decided that this tremendous ebullition of emotion indicated the revolt of ignorance against cruel circumstances, and the belittling sense of impotence, so strange to a strong man.

The nurse went up to him and touched him.

"You mustn't do that here," she said firmly. "You will disturb the others. Go into the next room!"

Hugo felt that the man would curse her and refuse to budge, but he obeyed instantly, slinking away, convulsed with misery.

"Poor devil!" said Hugo.

Again the nurse nodded with her odd air of detachment, as if she were bound by some oath to make no comment upon matters outside the sphere of her own particular business. Hugo hurried after the stricken father.

"Look here," he said, taking the man by the shoulders. "Pull yourself together! You're wanted, do you hear?"

Purkess raised his heavy face.

"Go to the bottom of the hill and stand there. When the doctor comes, bring him on here at once. A minute or two may make all the difference. Run!"

The heavy face brightened. A minute later, Hugo heard the man clattering down the hill. Action had touched him with healing fingers. Hugo went back into the inner room. The nurse had the child on her knee, trying, with all her art and experience, to soothe it.

"Is there nothing we can do?" whispered Hugo.

"If Mr. Tisdale were here he would try tracheotomy. See!" She pressed the swollen throat. "There is the thickening; below the passage is quite clear. One tiny incision—and a tube! I've seen it done several times. I could do it with a sharp pair of scissors myself."

"Do it," said Hugo.

"I daren't."

"The child is dying."

"Yes, yes; but—I daren't, I tell you—and we have no tube."

The words died on her lips as a worse spasm seized the child. The struggle for breath was terrible to witness. The nurse had the child, face down on her lap. Hugo looked on, feeling the sweat break upon his forehead.

After an eternity, the swollen throat relaxed for an instant, the breath passed through with a fierce gasp, the twitching limbs lay quiet.

"I thought she had gone then," whispered the nurse.

"You say the incision must be made in the windpipe, and held open by something?"

"That's it."

She stared at him, arrested by an expression upon his face that few had ever seen. The moment was intensely dramatic. Nurse and man knew that a life was being snatched because they lacked the skill to save it. That the man who could save it was close at hand, perhaps not more than half a mile away, made the situation infinitely more tragic."

The breathing began to grow labored again. Ever since Hugo had been in the room, these dreadful intermittences had taken place. And always the period of ease had been shortened. Another violent attack was about to begin.

Hugo hurried from the room; when he came back his face was quite impassive.

"I can't hear the motor," he said quietly.

The nurse gave a significant shrug of her shoulders; and as she did so the childs' legs curled up piteously, and the spasm began.

"Oh!" said the nurse.

Into that one exclamation she condensed everything; her protest against the irony of fate, against her own helplessness, against the torture she was about to witness, unable to alleviate it. She had passed the last seven years of her life in the hospitals, and might have been deemed case-hardened, but Hugo saw two tears trickling down her cheeks as she tried in vain to calm the twitching legs and writhing arms.

"I'll make the incision," said Hugo. "Show me the exact place!"

She obeyed in silence, after one glance upward. She realized that protest was unavailing; he had counted the cost. Upon the table near the bed was a vessel of disinfecting fluid. She saw Hugo dip his knife into it.

"A hairpin, please," he said, in the same even tones.

Again she obeyed, too bewildered to understand. He dipped the hairpin into the fluid, watching the child, but with ear intent for the distant toot of the motor.

"It's now or never," said the nurse, desperately. Afterwards she admitted that she was entirely dominated by Hugo. She had forgotten that he was a layman; from his cool manner she might have supposed that at some time or other he had practiced as a surgeon. Nevertheless she had waited till the last possible second; the child's face was livid.

"Keep the incision open with the hairpin," said Hugo.

Five minutes afterward the motor roared up the hill!

Next day Hugo saw Joy for a few minutes. Everybody was frantically busy turning Jordan Cottage into a temporary hospital, but Joy led him aside and grasped his hands.

"Mr. Tisdale says that hairpin was an inspiration."

"Yes," said Hugo, stiffly, seeing the friendliness, the interest, the admiration in her frank eyes.

"And he tells me that you have guaranteed the money for this." She indicated the changes in Jordan Cottage. "Of course, the ratepayers will have to settle with you in full, but father and I are so grateful. Father will be down directly."

He moved slightly away from her, muttering:

"If the child had died, what then?"

"Because you took that risk, I, we," her eyes sparkled, "shall never forget what you have done."

"I suppose if it had been an only child it would have died," said Hugo with a grim smile.

His first meeting with George Vennable followed. The parson said little, a few courteous, carefully chosen words, but plainly he was impressed. His clear blue eyes, which lacked the vitality of his daughter's, rested inquiringly upon Hugo, asking questions the tongue was too polite to put. In conclusion he said nervously:

"You have set us an example, Mr. Charters. You have given me a lead over an awkward fence. I shall turn the rectory into a hospital for Hernshaw Magna. I am going to see Pragson about it at once. Ah! here's Sir Giles."

Sir Giles rode up on his pampered cob. He had heard the news—who had not? The Misses Mottisfont at breakfast learned from pretty Esther that Mr. Charters had saved the life of her youngest sister, and by lunch time they knew of what was happening at Jordan Cottage. Dr. Snelgrove, who happened to call about 10, damned the crusade with faintest praise. He was doubtful about anti-toxin treatment, preferred old-fashioned, well-tried remedies. As for this stranger, a layman who had dared to perform such a delicate operation as tracheotomy—well, all he could say was that experiments of that sort were quite unjustifiable!

Fortified by this opinion, and by a glass of cherry brandy, which the Misses Mottisfont had insisted upon their dear brother drinking, Sir Giles rode down to Hernshaw Parva.

"Mornin', George!"

"Good morning, Giles; how are you?"

"Only so-so," Sir Giles replied, crossly. "This confounded animal bit me this morning when I was mounting him."

"Upon the principle that all flesh is grass, I suppose." Then, in his pleasant, leisurely voice the parson continued:

"Let me introduce Mr. Charters. Sir Giles Mottisfont."

Hugo bowed; Sir Giles inclined his head stiffly, the points of his starched collar making dents in his plump pink chin. He blinked owlishly at Hugo, whose glance was slightly disconcerting. Then he said irritably: "What is this I hear about a hospital?"

The parson explained with a twinkle in his mild eyes. Sir Giles frowned; his pink complexion assumed a shade of purple, not quite so becoming to him.

"I ought to have been consulted," he growled.

"You were consulted, and you did nothing."

Hugo slipped away.

"That young man," said George Vennable, indicating Hugo's retreating back, "has done what we ought to have done."

"I deprecate haste," said Sir Giles. "Who is this young man? What do you know about him? Where does he come from?"

"As to that, I can't answer you; he's a friend of Esmé Burgess. His pluck and common sense saved one of the Purkess children last night."

"Priscilla informed me." He pursed up his lips. "That sort of thing appeals to the gallery, no doubt, but it's not sound, not sound."

"My dear Giles, forgive me! but I must say it—Pooh!"

"Snelgrove, good man Snelgrove, very sound man, Snelgrove says it might have been manslaughter."

George Vennable smiled. Into his blue eyes came a frosty light.

"Snelgrove is right. It might have been manslaughter. In Jessie Mowland's case it was manslaughter, and we, you and I, Giles, ought to be indicted."

"'Pon my word!"

"I take my share of the blame, but it's lighter than yours. And now, my dear fellow, if you won't help, don't hinder!"

The parson hurried into the cottage leaving his portly brother-in-law agape with astonishment and apoplectic in appearance.

"He's a Rad, is George," he muttered. "A Rad. I always knew it! If this sort of thing is encouraged the Forest won't be a fit place to live in."

He rode on. Opposite the tavern some children curtsied. A couple of men touched their hats, assuming the adulatory smirk so familiar in village streets and so soothing to a certain order of mind. Sir Giles's brow cleared. His own people understood him. George Vennable, all said and done, was an outsider. Sir Giles gave the children a three-penny bit, and saluted the two men with affability. They were notorious loafers, but they never forgot to touch their hats to authority, and on that account authority, even on the bench, tempered justice with mercy. Sir Giles rode on till he came to the Mowland cottage. He remembered little Jessie, and intended to speak a word to Mrs. Mowland. She came out of the cottage as he approached. Two children stood beside her. The three dipped reverently as Sir Giles pulled rein. When he cleared his throat with a preliminary "Ahem!" they dipped again.

"Very sorry to hear you have lost one of your children, Mrs. Mowland."

"Two! Us have lost two," said the elder child, excitedly.

"Impossible!" gasped Sir Giles, honestly shocked, and thereby putting a misleading inflection into his voice.

"Two," repeated the child, shrilly, "two!"

"Don't ye dare to conterdict Sir Giles," said Mrs. Mowland, sharply. Then, curtesying for the third time, she said, miserably: "If you please, Sir Giles, it were two, it were indeed."

"I said two," cried the child. "It'll be three, tomorrer!"

"God bless me!" said Sir Giles. He was visibly upset, having the Mottisfont prejudice against dying in a hasty and undignified manner. In his rumbling voice, he added: "You're keeping these away from the others—quite right!"

"We can't, sir," said Mrs. Mowland. "It ain't possible. They've just got to take their chances, same as their fathers and mothers did afore 'em."

"Dear me!" said Sir Giles. "Well, well, we must try to accept these afflictions in the proper spirit. Send up to the Park for soup, or port wine, or—or anything else you want. Good day!"

After this, for a time, he rode along, pursing his lower lip, frowning and muttering to himself. The ugly word manslaughter obsessed him, refusing to be exorcised till he happened to think of Admiral Pundle of Pundle Green, generally admitted to be one of the right sort, a "true blue," who went out hunting, although he was past eighty, and could drink his bottle of claret after dinner and a couple of glasses of his own famous Waterloo brandy. The admiral's cottages were in a shocking condition. Inspired by the happiest of thoughts, Sir Giles jogged along till he came to Pundle Green, where he made an exhaustive survey of pigsties, stagnant ponds and thatched roofs honeycombed with rat holes. He spent nearly three-quarters of an hour in this pleasant and profitable fashion, and trotted home, much heartened by the shortcomings of an old friend and neighbor.

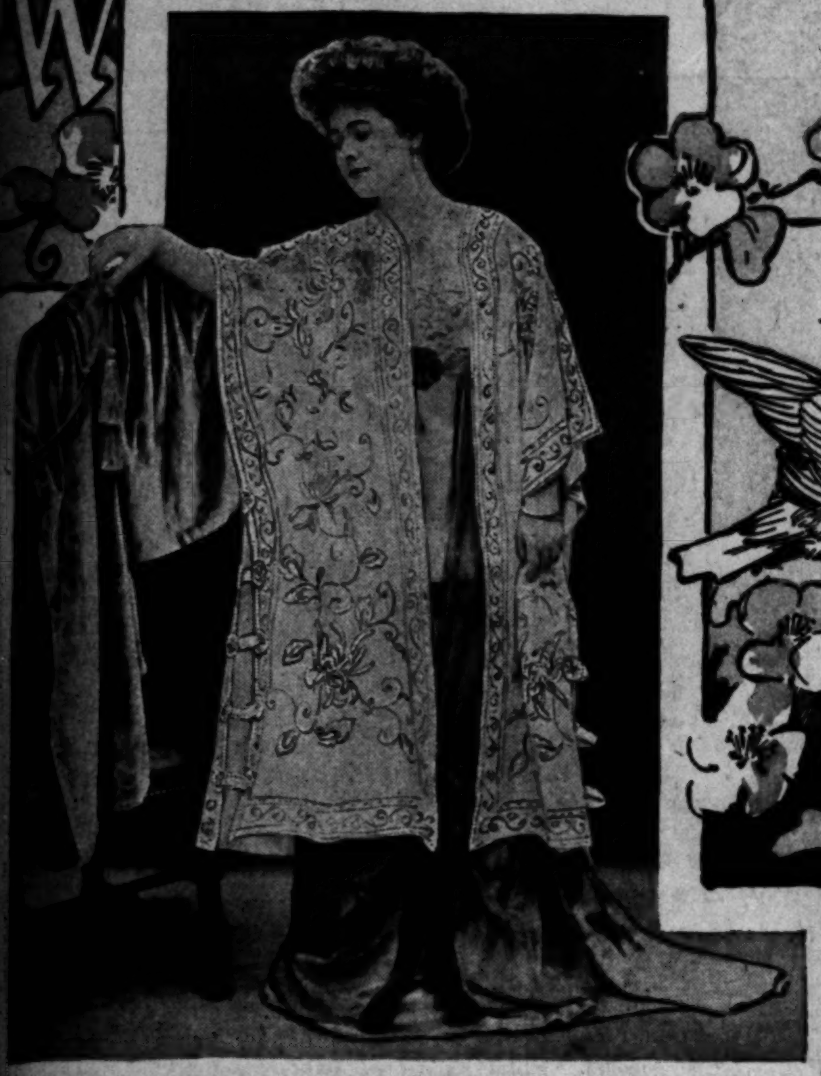
WRAPS for BALMY EVENINGS



Japanese Crepe embroidered with white

The girl who is looking forward to the summer campaign must always begin to think at this season of a summery wrap. This should, however, be heavy enough to really keep milady but it also should be attractive and dainty to be with the fluffiness of the typical summer Of all the materials which are suitable for this there is no more fascinating one than liberty although crepe is, perhaps, a very close second. wraps need not be lined, for the silk is closely and no ordinary summer breeze can penetrate There was a time when shawls and overcoats were to take the place of dainty capes, but they never very well when worn over delicate gowns.

For the last three years every summer has brought two or three new ideas for these wraps. The was a straight piece of wide liberty satin, caught at the back so that it hangs straight over shoulders and yet gives the effect of drapery. The was a liberty cape—the fascinating round with the graceful hood. Now we have a combination of both of those styles, with the best points of each.

The white wrap is of Japanese crepe, and is cut on the chasuble order—something like the popular last year; but the wrap of today is handsomer, for it is longer and more square the embroidery which decorates front and back As you see, there is little shape to the and it is only held together on the sides by the material caught with applied medallions. The back is straight and square like the front. This the wraps that may be worn over any gown crushing it.

The satin cape is that on which the pointed hood falls gracefully down the back, while the front is finished with two embroidered revers. As you see, the sleeves are cut on mikado lines, yet the satin is so pliable that they fall in a graceful and attractive way. The bit of hand embroidery extending around the sleeves and over the shoulders is not very elaborate, but is just the finish that the wrap requires.

An interesting evolution from the straight piece of satin is the cape of old rose, whose bands of embroidery extend over both shoulders and are fastened on either side of the front. This, as you see, is also cut in one piece, but it is not fastened under the arms. The back is caught up under the bands in three loose pleats to give added fulness over the arms. A bias band of the material finishes the outer edge of the wrap, while a few braid tassels give the finishing touch.

Another evolution of the same idea is shown on the cape of grape-colored satin. Here the pleat has been taken out of the center back and the extra fulness has been drawn up on the shoulders into wide tucks. The bands of the embroidery are then placed round the neck and over the shoulders, so that they appear but slightly in the front. The most interesting part of the cape is the extreme fulness which is given over the shoulders. This could not be acquired in any other way except by a clever arrangement of pleats.

All of the wraps on the page today are made of straight pieces of satin. Of course, where the material is not wide enough, it is necessary to piece it; but as this is done by a plain seam which joins the two selvedges, the sewing is not noticeable.

The BUSINESS GUEST

He Informs You through the Telephone

Daintiness of Personal Appearance

Meet the Shock with a Smiling

Inevitably Shows Up on Ironing Day

Brown Bread Cut Thin and Buttered

JOHN MILTON was not happy in his married life. From what his biographers hint, rather than assert, we gather that Mistress Mary Powell, "a simple and apparently stupid country girl, accustomed to dance with king's officers at home," soon wearied of the quiet, humdrum life she led with her poet-husband, and after provoking him to stern rebuke of her follies, she ran away to her old home, under pretense of visiting her parents, and flatly refused to return to John's household drudgery until such time as pleased her caprice. When she did come back, we are told plainly that she is more of a hindrance than a help to the student; also that one reason for this was that she crowded his house with her own friends and kindred and paid scant attention to his erudite associates.

It may well be, then, that recollections of his own unsatisfied desires by the very force of contrast helped him to paint the picture of the first garden party of which we have any record. Espying the majestic angel through the vista of trees, and divining that he would shortly visit him, he ordered his spouse incontinently to bestir herself to get ready a luncheon worthy of Eden and the celestial stranger. Eve's ready promise to—

"Haste, and from each bough and brake,
Each plant and juiciest gourd, to pluck such choice
To entertain our angel guest, as he,
Beholding, shall confess that here on earth
God hath dispensed His bounties as in heaven—" has stood for over two centuries as a model example for the housewife whose husband, without or with warning, brings home a Business Guest to partake of her hospitality.

A more authentic instance of early and gracious hospitality in like circumstances is the beautiful story of Abraham's entertainment of the three men who appeared to him as he sat in his tent door under the oak of Mamre in the heat of the day. After seating them in the grateful shade and offering water to wash their tired and dusty feet, he sped him to Sarah and bade her with patriarchal imperiousness:

"Make ready quickly" (the original means in modern English: "And be quick about it!") "three measures of meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth."

"POT-LUCK"

Sarah, we know, was a bit—and not a little bit—of a virago on her own account, yet she obeyed her lord's behest with as cheerful alacrity as the chief wife of the Bedouin sheik at whose tent door we alighted when noon was high and hot over the plains of Jericho ten years ago—and made haste to prepare coffee and unleavened bread, honey in a lordly dish and the "leben" our translators have done into "butter" in the narrative of Sisera's flight and death.

Oriental hospitality is as punctilious in claims upon householder and tent dweller now as when the apostle to the Gentiles admonished his converts not to be unmindful to entertain strangers, adding for their encouragement: "Some have thus entertained angels unawares."

If the housewifely reader be disposed to cavil at the length of this preamble, I hasten to remind her that few of the minor happenings of domestic life vex her righteous soul more sorely than when John brings home a business friend to dinner, or to spend the night. It so often falls out, in the natural perversity of "things," that the guest who is not a friend and barely an acquaintance appears upon the scene at the most inopportune season for the family comfort, that reminiscence adds gloom to anticipation. The fact that John—the very embodiment of gentle considerateness of her convenience and happiness—"couldn't get out" of asking the man from Chicago or Atlanta or Montreal to take "pot-luck" with his family does not abate the nuisance. You may be morally certain in the depths of your conscience that John had some irrefutable reason for imposing the alien element into the peaceful domestic brew. he loves his home and enjoys an uninterrupted evening in the bosom of his family as much as most men enjoy their clubs. I doubt if the best wife who ever loved and respected her husband as the wisest of men fully appreciated the business expediency of asking "a man" home to dinner, even though his wife may not quite approve of the politic measure.

In our gossip of Eden and Mamre we made clear the point that the angels who dropped in unexpectedly were Business Guests. Also, that the choicest dainties of Paradise and the quick loaves and the roast veal were made ready and pressed upon the strangers before the hosts had an inkling of the purport of that business. I did not say this in jest. There are lessons to be learned from every page of Holy Writ. The Martha of the twentieth century may sit at shrewish Sarah's feet and learn of her here.

I know (nobody better!) what a jar to the orderly routine of the day is the unlooked-for apparition of the aforesaid "man." I recall dreadful moments when he was three men. Do not smile when I say that the thought of the three who "looked in" upon Abraham, resting after a hot day's work—perchance dozing—in the tent door, came to me with healing in its wings. I would not be outdone in philosophic composure by Sarah!

Coming to close quarters with the trial—here is where "The Emergency Shelf," of which we talked together last year, is a stay and a solace. Without stopping to pry into the occult causes of the coincident appearance of the Business Guest with the infrequent assignment of cold corned beef to the place of honor on the menu, if the meal be luncheon or supper, or the second day's appearance of the roast (warmed up, or down?) which you and the cook decided would just "do" for the family proper, or the more mysterious fact that the most important "man" for whom John would have you and the home show at their best, inevitably shows up on washing or ironing day—let us reason together regarding the manner in which the infliction should be met. Before we attack the "shelf," put yourself in John's place from the moment he informs you through the telephone that he has asked a business friend from out of town to dine or sup or lunch with him. The telephone booth being soundless and discreet, he deprecates the necessity confidentially, and hopes—anxiously—that it won't throw you out in the least. If he have the habit of talking over business with you, he adds a hurried abstract of the imperative circumstances which have urged him to this step without consulting you. He knows from past experiences how nobly you rise to the situation, etc., etc., et cetera.

Putting yourself in his place, justify all that he says of yourself. Bid him bring his Man along and to rest confidently in the persuasion that you will do your best at such short notice.

Cold corned beef is—cold corned beef! Nevertheless, it may be made a shade less plebeian by the accompanying sauce of grated horseradish beaten to a cream with a little white of egg, and the slices may be lapped symmetrically over one another on the dish and garnished with celery tops or parsley. Baked potatoes—preferably sweet—go well with the meat, and require no preparation beyond washing and wiping. Baked cream toast is another good impromptu dish. Begin the luncheon with sardines. Serve with them brown bread cut thin and buttered and pass sliced lemon with the sardines. The meat and vegetable and the dish of steaming hot cream toast come next. Then cake and home-made canned fruit from the "shelf." Hot, creamy cocoa should go around with the cake. If you have time and opportunity to get lettuce for a salad, you give a touch of elegance to the meal without much expense. Season with a French dressing and pass heated crackers and cheese with it. It should immediately precede the sweets.

This schedule is designed as a suggestion of what may be done at short notice to alter the character of a luncheon. It is not likely in this age of telephones and well-trained husbands that you will not have an hour's notice of the addition to your family group. Should the business guest be picked up on the way uptown and introduced to you unceremoniously, meet the shock with a smiling face, and make up by a cordial welcome for any deficiencies in the menu.

DON'T APOLOGIZE!

Excuses and flurries accentuate blemishes and do not engender charitable judgment. On the contrary, the stranger is led to the conviction that you are careless of John's everyday comfort. Stand fast by the rule which every bride should make at the outset of housewifely life, namely, that what is good enough for her husband is good enough for any other man. The clean and smooth tablecloth should be a matter of principle; shining silver and unnicked china, bright glass and clean napkins are the honest due of the man whose labor supplies the means to keep the house "going." Study for him little niceties of table appointments and daintiness of personal appearance.

AN HONORED GUEST

"I have been married forty years," I heard a white-haired lover-husband say. "In all that time I have never seen my wife sit down to a meal in a slovenly dress or with unkempt hair. And I have never been ashamed to set an accidental visitor at the table she had spread for me and the children. Such things make a man respect a woman, you will say? Yes! and they keep up the average of his self-respect. The boys and I must live up to what she believes us to be. Since she prepares for us as for honored guests, she must not be disappointed in us."

He was not a sentimental man in the usual acceptation of the word. He was sensible and appreciative of the position his wife assigned him in his own house.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

I HAVE a beautiful point lace handkerchief that was blued too much in the wash. I have washed it several times since then, but it is still a violet blue.

Can anything be done to whiten it?

MISSOURI (Memphis, Mo.).

Make boiling water quite sour with cream of tartar, and soak the handkerchief in it. Leave it thus for three hours, then lay in the sun and wet hourly with the acid water. Rinse at night and lay in loppered milk until morning. This will not injure the handkerchief, but will abolish the violet blue.

Returning Favors

So many good things come to me through the Exchange that it seems to me more than fitting that I should make some return.

1. Condensed milk may be used in all kinds of cookery. We have certain unsweetened brands here which are yet manufactured in the East. By using twice as much water as cream from the can you get a rich milk. I have never tried to whip it. If "Young Housekeeper" wishes to have my address, I will gladly tell her the name of the brand we have used successfully for five years. It keeps sweet longer than the fresh milk from the cow.

2. Use old linen underwear for holders. It keeps out heat better than cotton, especially in ironholders.

3. A good cement for whiteware is the white lead used by painters. It should stand some time to become thoroughly dry before it is used. Then it will withstand hot water. It is fine for mending kitchen cup handles.

4. To restore faded artificial flowers, use water colors or some good patent dye. Apply with a fine paint brush.

Mrs. W. E. P. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

Our California contingent grows stronger and more helpful as the weeks roll on. The address of this correspondent is at the service of the novice whose query has drawn out this letter.

Treating Hardwood Floors

A correspondent asked lately for a remedy for a sticky hardwood floor which had been treated with boiled oil and turpentine. There should have been a good supply of some patent drier added to the oil. And I should not have heated the oil. One may buy any kind of stain to add to it—light and dark oak, black walnut, etc. It comes put up in cans.

I have had some experience in painting. As this floor was not treated in the way I have spoken of at first, I am sure that a pail of strong cider vinegar applied with a cloth would remove the stickiness and leave as nice a polish as could be desired.

I hasten to write this, thinking it may save the perplexed woman much trouble. I had the same trouble with some chairs some years ago, and the vinegar set all right again.

I notice a query: "How may I prevent my jelly from candying?"

A day or two after making jelly I cut tissue papers a little larger than the glasses, dip them in alcohol and fit on the surface of the jelly. Then I cover these with melted paraffine. This last may be saved and used several times. My jelly never candies. I do not keep it in the cellar, but in an upper room.

Here is a recipe for a good hard soap:

Put five pounds of grease over the fire, and as it melts stir in a quarter of a pound of borax. When this is dissolved and the grease is a little more than lukewarm, turn into the kettle slowly a can of patent potash dissolved in a quart and a pint of salt water. Stir steadily until all the ingredients are thoroughly incorporated, and you have a smooth, thick paste. Turn into moulds, and when firm these should be cut into cakes.

I read in your paper some months ago that a white penny with an eagle on it of the date 1857 is worth $1. I have several of these, and I should like to realize something on them.

Mrs. H. T. P. (Sanquoit, N. Y.).

Your query respecting the odd penny is referred to our numismatic experts, of whom we have a goodly number on our list.

May I ask if you have a good recipe for nice toilet soap? We have frequent inquiries for it. Home-made soap would seem to have come well to the front of late in the estimation of our housemothers. For a long time nobody thought of making soap for home consumption. We believed that we could buy better than we could make, and that it was cheaper in the end. What has wrought the change?

Wants a Poem

This is hardly a theme for the Exchange, perhaps, yet I, as a housemother, may profit by the reply, as I will prove presently.

Have you or your readers anywhere in your scrapbooks a poem entitled "Hour by Hour," author unknown? It was the greatest imaginable comfort to me, and my girl lost it for me. I want it again. It teaches that if God were to lay burdens upon us all at once we could not bear them; but He lays a little every day and hour, and we are thus enabled to carry them.

It ends thus:

"If by God's power
We bear the burden of the hour."

Will you put a "call" in the paper for it? I cut it out of an old magazine, and did not really appreciate it until I fell ill. And then it was lost!

Mrs. J. G. J. (Rapid City, S. D.).

I fully appreciate your desire to regain possession of the verses. Each of us treasures some choice bit of rhyme or prose that has brought comfort in the hour of need, as if it were a direct message from heaven. Your poem embodies the truest Christian philosophy. "Be not anxious for tomorrow," said the Master; and one of His followers: "Take sorrow and trial, as it were, one stick at a time. We always have strength to bear today's stick. God nowhere promises grace for fagots." We will try to get your poem.

More Uncooked Candy

Here is a recipe for French uncooked cream candies. I hope it is in time to be of use to the one who asked for it. To one egg, beaten stiff, as for frosting, add enough confectioner's sugar to make a stiff dough, and knead on a breadboard, sprinkling with sugar as you go on. It will require a good deal of kneading, and it is best to work in flavoring and coloring as you go on, if the latter is desired. Roll into balls and, when dry, they may be dipped into chocolate. A perfectly new and clean hatpin is a good thing to use in dipping the balls.

The recipe for chili con carne which I saw a little while ago was unlike that made in Mexico, where I once lived. I lived there for many years, and I know just how the dish was prepared. I send the recipe, which you may use, or not, as you like.

Chili Con Carne.

Cut raw or cooked meat into cubes and fry in lard or suet. When browned, remove the meat; brown some flour as for gravy, work into it [illegible] with water; add a teaspoonful of chili powder to this and a little salt. Put the meat back into the pan with this gravy and simmer ten or fifteen minutes before serving. Add "a teaspoonful of chili powder." That may make it too hot for some tastes. Use less, and it will be good.

I should like a recipe for making German potato pancakes. I had a good plate [illegible], but it is so yellow I think it must consist chiefly of eggs and flour. It is served with maple syrup.

I enjoy the Exchange, and am filing away some of it.

Mrs. M. S. V. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

And a very good use it is to make of it! It will be a Handy Book beyond price some day.

Your recipe for the much-talked-of Mexican dish is far simpler than any other bearing that name which has appeared in our Corner. Yet you are a prime authority on the subject from your long residence in the home of chili con carne—which means "chile with meat."

You will get your German pancake. Some of our most active members are German housewives.

He was very studious, and learned, too; but he was also very poor, so that he could ill afford to burn more than one candle.

It grieved Ling, however, to think he must wait for daylight in order to continue the reading of this very interesting work. What could he do?

Ah! Here was an opportunity to apply the great wisdom he possessed. Ling knotted his brows, but only for an instant.

Then he carefully soaked his queue in melted wax and permitted it to dry until the hair was quite stiff. To the end of the queue he attached the lantern. He bent the queue over his head, and, with the light shining clear upon his paper, calmly went on reading. Clever Ling!

One day the tiny miss pottered all the way up the stairs by herself. She hadn't seen the Artist Man for a whole day, so that she was lonely. Therefore she had slipped away from the lodge.

After rapping timidly upon the door, to Honoree's surprise, it was opened by her friend, the nice lady, dressed in exactly the same way SHE had often been dressed while the Artist Man painted.

"Why, do you play 'Marguerite,' too?" gurgled Honoree, clapping her hands delightedly.

The lady took the child upon her lap as she replied:

"Yes, little one. Sometimes before a great many people, while the music plays. I always sing when I play 'Marguerite' this way. Perhaps some day you will do it so, little one."

You see, Honoree was too small to know that the lady was "Marguerite" when she sang in the opera, but she did understand very well when the lady said gently:

"Tomorrow I am going to play 'Marguerite' far away from here, little one. So today I must kiss thee good-bye."

Honoree was sorry, so sorry that tears welled in the great blue eyes. Nor was she comforted even when her kind friend gave her a present of a handsome little necklace at parting.

"No Marguerite should be without her jewels," the lady had whispered.

A QUIET LETTER GAME

SOME boxes of capital letters are needed. These can be printed or drawn or painted on squares of cardboard beforehand, by the way. The leader tells the circle of players seated round the table what to do. As soon as she gives a command the players begin to seek for letters. The one who fulfils the order first wins a small prize. These prizes are greatly appreciated, be it noted, and they should be nice little bonbon boxes. This is the game: Make a girl's name with two letters—(Answer L N). Something not full—(M T). A warning—(L O). An observation call—(I C U). What dead things do—(D K). Pepper in two letters—(K N). Water in one letter—(C), very easy. Water with something in it—(T). A town—(C T). Not cheap—(D R). To a fowl—(U R A N). To a stag a whole sentence in seven letters—(I C U R A D R). This game ends with a small trick. The guide says, "Write the word 'empty' in two letters." All will put down M T. But two round O's must be drawn and "empty" written in each one.

Ballooning

NURSE had just bought it for Tobie in the Garden of the Tuileries, which, you know, is in Paris. It was a beautiful toy balloon, big and red and shiny, with a long cord that kept it from flying away.

Tobie wondered whether, if he pressed very hard upon the balloon, he could make it rest upon the ground. He knelt and put the toy carefully on the grass. At the same time his hold on the cord loosened. Then, strange to tell, the balloon moved not upward, but along the ground. How it rolled! Tobie chased madly after it.

There was only one thing in the world in which Tobie was interested now. His sole desire was to clutch the end of the string attached to the balloon. But the chase was long and hard before he managed to secure the coveted grasp.

To the boy's great surprise, however, the balloon did not stop when he caught up to it. No, it was drawing Tobie after it. But the lad wouldn't let go. He was determined to keep a firm hold.

And then—Tobie himself didn't know how it happened—the balloon was soaring up through the trees and bearing the little boy with it. Tobie was too busy keeping a grip on the cord to feel frightened.

THE ELF APPEARS

Presently a tiny door near the bottom of the balloon opened. Tobie had not observed this door before. It did not show on the outside. However, it surely was a door, because a wee elf poked his head through it almost immediately.

"Hello, down there!" he shrilled; "don't you want to come in?"

"Can't; I'm too big!" gasped Tobie.

"Nonsense!" returned the elf. Reaching through the door, he braced himself and pulled up the cord, with Tobie dangling on the end. A moment later the boy was safe and sound within the door.

And he was no bigger than the elf! It seemed that the balloon cord was a magic cord, and the longer you held it the smaller you grew.

A cosy little place Tobie found the balloon. He and the elf seated themselves so they could look through the door.

"Let's play checkers," suggested the elf.

Tobie was willing, but there didn't seem to be any board or "men," and he didn't see how they could.

The elf smiled with superior knowledge. "Down below is our checker board," said he.

Surely enough, when Tobie looked toward the earth he found that the fields of grain and green pastures made square blocks of different colors, so high was the balloon in the air.

"We'll use only one 'man,'" continued the elf, "and that will be the balloon. We'll take turns using it. Now, it's your move. As soon as the balloon passes this square and is above the next, my turn comes, and I move across the square and into the next one. So we move until we come to a town. And the one who moves off the squares into the town wins."

Tobie found this game to be most fascinating. It was he who won, too; for he jumped the balloon from the last field on to the outskirts of a town.

While they were passing over the church spires, which looked like needles, and the red roofs of the houses below

IT MOVED ALONG THE GROUND

Tobie thought for the first time of how worried nursie must be about him.

"I really ought to go home," said he soberly to the elf.

The other cheerfully replied: "Very well; but we'll come out and play checkers some other time."

Thereupon the elf said a magic word. The balloon turned in the direction of Paris. With wonderful speed they traveled, until the balloon was immediately above the house where Tobie lived. Then it descended quickly and flew through a window into Tobie's playroom.

He leaped out the balloon door and found himself just as big as he had been before the adventure, while the door was completely closed and the elf was invisible!

Tobie put his magic balloon securely away in the closet. Then he went to tell nursie and mother that he had arrived home safely. He's going to play checkers again, however, just as soon as he has a chance.

"Jack on the Right, Come Out and Spin"

THIS game is a variation of the old-fashioned "Turn the Trencher," with a mixture in it of "My Right-hand Neighbor." The players sit in a circle, one goes to the center and spins a top, saying meanwhile: "Jack on the right side, come out and spin." The spinner, having made the top twist nicely, then calls out a name. Now the owner of that name must not move. It is the right-hand neighbor of the name's owner who must run out and catch the top before it ceases to spin. Failure to do this involves a forfeit. If the owner of the name jumps up as in "Turn the Trencher," he, too, pays a forfeit. As soon as the right-hand "Jack" realizes he has to run, the spinner takes his seat, and the "Jack" in turn spins the top. This game teaches prompt attention, with power to suit action to thought; makes children very keen and quick. It is varied with "Jack on the left."

Take the Apple From the Plate and Eat It

THE players are taken one at a time and blindfolded. A big, juicy apple is the prize of victory. Another player sits at one side of the room holding out the plate. Before being blindfolded the seeker of the apple stands at the opposite side of the room, which is cleared for the purpose, and takes his or her bearings. Then, with outstretched hands, the blindfolded one goes across the room to try to take the apple from the plate. The others hiss when the player is going out of the way, but are quiet when the direction is right. This game trains the locality sense. It gives great fun, when the apple-seeker goes greatly out of the way, to watch the curious antics made in trying to walk aright.

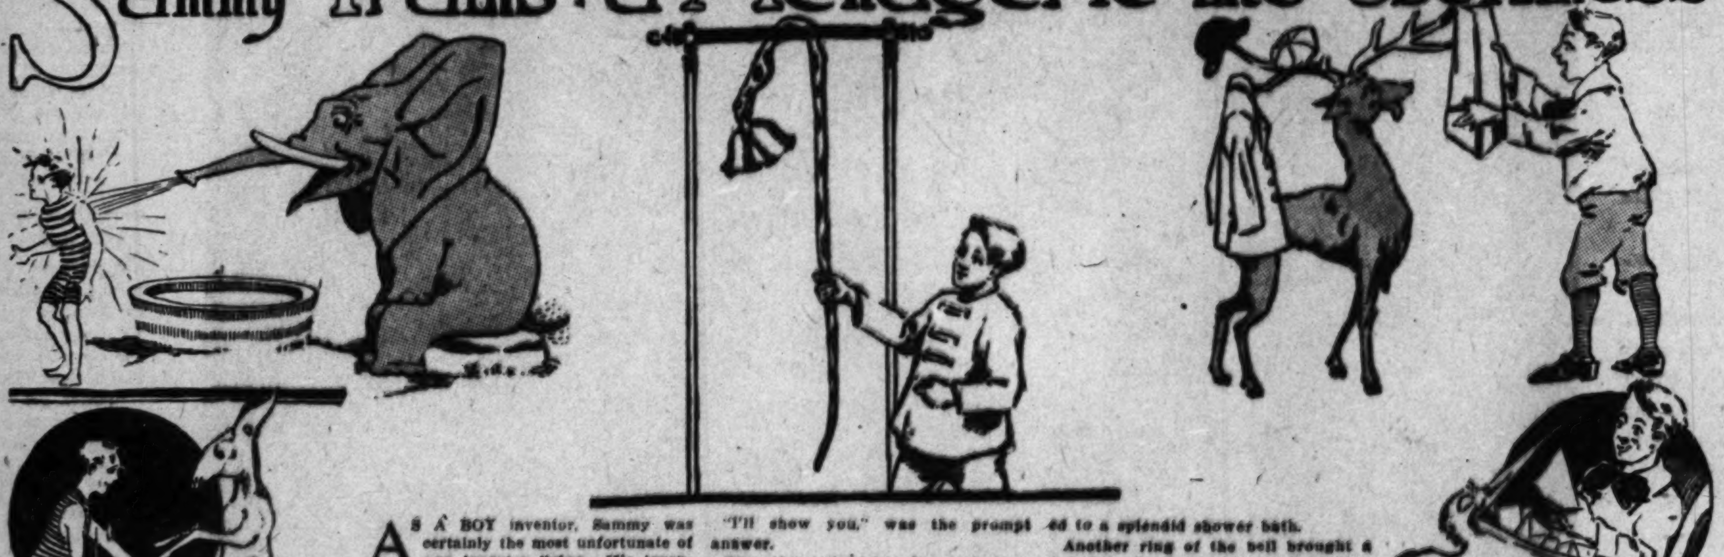
How the Baby Bird Flew

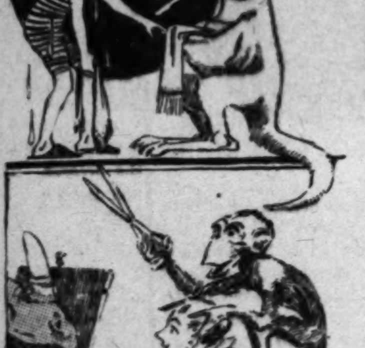
J. M. BARRIE has a little fable in one of his works about a baby lark asking its mother to teach it to fly. The mother thought hard about how she herself had learned to fly long ago last year, but all she could recall was that you suddenly do it.

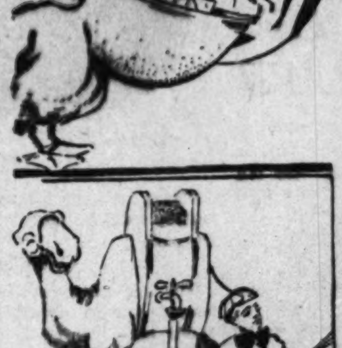
"Wait till the sun comes out after the rain," she said, half remembering. The rain came and glued the bird's wings together.

"I shall never be able to fly nor to sing," it wailed. Then of a sudden it had to blink its eyes, for a glorious light had spread over the world. The baby bird's breast swelled, it did not know why, and it fluttered from the ground. It did not know how. "The sun has come out after the rain," it trilled. "Thank you, sun, thank you," and it floated up crying, "Thank you."

Sammy Trains a Menagerie into Usefulness







AS A BOY inventor, Sammy was certainly the most unfortunate of any inventor living. His inventions worked out all right, you know, but somehow people never seemed to take kindly to them.

Sammy really was disgusted. "Folks don't appreciate genius!" he complained.

While in this state of mind he was only too glad to accept the invitation of his friend, the showman, to spend some time traveling with the circus and menagerie. He needed a long rest, and here was the opportunity. He promised himself that not one invention would he attempt during his stay with the showman.

But Sammy, in spite of himself, could not remain long inactive. Although he tried to invent nothing, soon he became annoyed at the idleness of the animals in the menagerie.

"All the rest of your show works," he remarked to the showman, "but those lazy beasts. Why don't you make them be of some use other than that of being stared at by people?"

"Yes, but what can they do?" responded the amused showman.

"I'll show you," was the prompt answer.

The other laughed in disbelief, as he said: "Rather difficult to show a showman, you know. Ha ha!"

The showman laughed a different way before long, however. This happened when Sammy sent for his friend early in the morning.

"Now, watch me prove that animals can be of use," said he immediately the showman appeared.

Then the boy stepped out of bed and tugged at what his companion imagined to be a bell rope, but which, on closer inspection, he saw was a snake with bells gripped in his fangs.

Five minutes elapsed, when a chimpanzee came into view, bearing a plate of rolls and a cup of steaming hot coffee.

Having eaten this food, again the snake-bell was rung. The elephant quickly thrust his trunk into the wagon-dwelling, lightly picked up Sammy and seated the lad on his back. Out to a tub of clear water nearby the two went, with the showman following close behind. There the astonished man saw the boy treated to a splendid shower bath.

Another ring of the bell brought a hopping kangaroo upon the scene. In the animal's pouch were several towels, with which the chimpanzee proceeded to give Sammy a brisk massage.

Afterward the rhinoceros appeared with a mirror fastened to his tusk, in front of which Sammy seated himself. The chimpanzee then neatly clipped his hair.

It took but one stroke of the bell to bring a deer leaping into the tent. From the magnificent antlers were suspended all of Sammy's garments.

"A grand clothes rack," commented the boy, grinning toward the showman, who by this time was incapable of uttering a word. His eyes opened a little wider when the pelican waddled in with Sammy's mail in his bill. But the showman collapsed entirely as the chimpanzee led up a camel and Sammy proceeded to cool the grass outside the wagon by his new "camel-sprinkler," as he called it.

"You win," murmured the man, weakly, while Sammy looked at him in triumph.

Her Horoscope

By MINERVA MEARES.

BORN February 1, this nature will be proud, truthful, conscientious, with profound respect for religion. This girl will have a good intellect and reasoning powers, and will be proficient in any occupation in which she is engaged.

The evidence of the natal sign is corroborated by the face, which, with its low, broad brow, level eyebrows, eyes well set apart, with drooping lids, indicates dignity, intelligence, reserve and pride.

The ear is well placed, showing good mental balance, and the nose, slightly Romanesque, and strongly turned chin mark strength of character, which will jealously guard its dignity and honor.

The birth sign indicates a nature thoughtful and intuitive, prone to wander in the realms of the spiritual and mysterious—a nature that will strive quietly and patiently to overcome obstacles, but whose efforts will begin and end vaguely and darkly.

To this tendency the eyes bear witness, as people with the level, brooding gaze of the picture are always questioning the Sphinx, and back of their apparent serenity are invariably hidden pools of world weariness and silent disapproval of the great scheme of things generally.

This nativity will have great sympathy for its own people, but it will not extend beyond that circle.

It will be very sceptical, will be hard to rouse to enthusiasm in anything, and will require considerable convincing before it accepts or evinces interest in material affairs.

It will have a good deal of light which it cannot express, and will consequently live chiefly within itself, which will militate against its worldly progress.

Where enthusiasm is lacking it will be replaced to a large extent by quiet executive ability; the memory will be exceptionally good, and there will be no desire to waste money or moments.

Aquarius people are generally tall, dignified, healthy, with clear complexion.

If married to one born between March 21 and April 19 reasonable happiness is promised. A marriage with one born between November 22 and December 21 will be harmonious, but there will be no monotony about it, owing to the quick inspirations of both nativities.

THE STORY OF HER DAILY LIFE

"IRONIN' still? Goodness, how many ruffles?" The pert, rosy parlormaid flips her feather duster aggressively as she speaks. The tall figure behind the board raises the frilled frock which she is pressing.

"I do not know," she returns, smiling. "I've lost count."

The parlormaid seats herself on the edge of the nearest chair.

"Well, she's awake," she vouchsafes. "I heard her ring. She'll be howling for you soon."

With a smothered exclamation the girl behind the board gathers up the frills, sets the board in place and vanishes up the stairs. The parlormaid calls after her:—

"What's your hurry? Let 'er fume." But the tall figure heeds not. She hurries through the long corridor to the front of the house. A bell is ringing wildly. She pushes open a door and then pauses for an instant, surveying the scene before her.

In the corner of the dainty room, upon the daintiest of white beds, lies a woman. The room itself is a chaos of disorder. White slippers, silk stockings, lingerie, fan, gloves, silken skirts, occupy every available chair and are strewn over the velvet carpet. A voice from the bed calls dismally:—

"It's you, is it? I've rung till I'm exhausted. I didn't call you last night. There aren't many women who would be so considerate, but it was after three, so I undressed myself."

The tall girl stands by the bed, listening. She looks rather pityingly at the small, sharp face propped up on the pillows. The scant golden hair, the big baby blue eyes, the pale cheeks and pointed little chin have a pinched, pathetic look. Even the occupant herself feels it, for she mutters with a tinge of jealousy:—

"Good gracious, Porter, you're an abominably healthy looking thing. I'm frightfully fagged. Get my bath."

Quiet Obedience.

The tall girl's lips set themselves firmly, but she obeys. A more discriminating observer might have called her a superb looking woman. Tall, modelled on generous lines, she carries her head with the regal air that comes to two classes only—those born of long generations of gentlefolk and the peasant women who carry upon their heads heavy jars of water.

This girl, however, is no peasant. Every feature of the reserved face, every line of the well poised head and shoulders, betrays both birth and breeding. The severe coronet of dark braids surmounting the high forehead, the steady gray eyes, the straight, well cut nose, the tense lips, the square chin, contrast oddly with the service she renders. There is an air of repression about the whole figure which carries a subtle annoyance to the woman on the bed.

"Porter," she asks abruptly, "do you ever smile?"

The girl stops in the act of picking up a jewelled buckle torn by impatient fingers from its satin slipper and shivers.

"Not often," she answers evenly.

"Well, if you did"—the small figure has risen and is crossing the room to the bath—"I think you would be quite handsome."

The girl, still with the buckle in her hand, goes to the mirror. She raises the window curtain to its highest point and deliberately gazes at her reflection. In three years she will be thirty. The face she looks at is intelligent, cold, reserved, well balanced and rather attractive. But if the eyes should sparkle and the lips relax their firm lines, if the cheeks should glow and the mask drop and the woman leap into being—she sighs and falls to arranging the dresser. Her mistress, emerging from the bath, claims her attention.

"I have an engagement to breakfast at eleven. Hurry my hair, get out my green suit, be as quick as you can."

The girl's fingers fly. The scant yellow hair is curled and dressed until, with the addition of switches and puffs, it becomes a modish coiffure. The stays are laced, the boots buttoned, the garments fastened one by one.

Unwelcomed Admiration.

Finally it is over and the girl starts for her own room. In the hall she comes face to face with a man—a guest of the house. He blocks her way and eyes her admiringly from head to foot.

"D'ye know, I took you for a friend of Mrs. H—'s last night," he says, nonchalantly. "You needn't color, you look the part all right."

The girl glances about her hopelessly. The way is blocked. The man is a little—a very little—tipsy. He spreads out his arms.

"One kiss for toll. By Jupiter, but you're a handsome girl!"

She is a handsome girl. The gray eyes are wide open, the nostrils are dilated, the red lips apart. She flings her whole weight upon the outstretched arm, breaks through and runs panting to her room. She sinks on her knees beside her bed, buries her head in her hands and cries. It had never been so bad as this.

Two years ago, when she found herself alone with the problem of self-support before her, the way seemed easy. She would teach. But impoverished gentlewomen were not sought as teachers; one must be an expert in pedagogy. Pedagogy was not in the curriculum of the boarding school which she had attended. A hundred brilliant ideas which she had were abandoned one by one.

Comfortably Housed.

Finally she came here. She is a success. She pleases her mistress, she is comfortably housed, well fed and her salary is adequate for her needs—twenty-five dollars a month more than provides for her simple wardrobe. Her mistress is kind to her—after her own fashion. Occasionally she is the recipient of a gown, which brings a fair price from the clothes dealer. She must stay; she dare not try the outside world again; she cannot do it.

She dries her eyes and begins to sew. A torn flounce, a bit of chiffon to darn—she works steadily.

The luncheon gong sounds. She descends and enters the servants' dining room. The second man and the parlormaid, who are enjoying an amicable fracas over the feather duster, stop suddenly at her approach. The rest file in. She makes an effort to be pleasant and turns to the butler.

"It's a fine day."

"Yes'm."

"We are having a great many guests. You must be busy."

"Yes'm."

"Do you think the new car will come to-day?"

"Probably, m'm."

She gives up in despair, swallows a few and retreats. Arrived at her room, she hears ment and laughter from below. She must eat alone in her room! She is a damper upon

Plans have been prepared by Charles E. Shattuck for a brick and steel building fronting 1125 feet on the south side of East Sixth street, and two stories high over the central portion. This building will contain 216 stalls, which will face on a roofed driveway. The second floor will be used for offices, restaurants, etc. In the rear, or to the south of this, will be a space eighty-six feet wide, also roofed over, which will provide space for about 270 wagon stalls. The central driveway will be paved with cement, and will be as sanitary as possible. The spaces for the wagons will not be paved, because of the need for keeping the horses standing several hours. Another eighty-six-foot space will adjoin the covered wagon stalls, but will be left unroofed for summer use. It will have a cement paved driveway, with the wagon stalls facing on the causeway. Improvements planned for immediate construction will cost about $125,000. When completed the plans will be the most modern in the West.

From the time, twenty-five years ago, when the market wagons lined up against the curb on Main, between First and Second, at the old Mott market, to the magnificent, modern and sanitary plant now being planned at Sixth and Alameda streets, it is a far cry, indeed. Each move of the produce market marked an epoch in the city's life and growth.

When traffic along Main street became obstructed because of the business, the city granted the use of the old Spanish Plaza, and for years the latter was used as the produce market of Los Angeles. Old hands at the business can tell of more than one fight over preferred positions around the circle of the old Plaza. In time this became much too small for the needs of the growing business, and thirteen years ago the city leased the block at Ninth and Los Angeles street, erected a suitable building, and here the produce trade was carried on for another period. Six years since, the business, like the city, had grown to metropolitan proportions, and another move was necessary, this time to the present location at Third and Central.

With the last move, the Los Angeles City Market Company was organized, with a capital of $100,000 par. At the time of organization the stock sold at 25 cents a share, 80,000 being sold to provide funds for improvements. After being at Third and Central for a year, the brick building at the corner was erected at a cost of $18,000, a small allotment of stock being sold at $1 a share to provide for the expenditure, together with the surplus fund. Between sixty-five and seventy-five tenants are accommodated in the present structures. Last year a new building, increasing the capacity by fifty-six stalls, was added, 10,000 shares of stock being sold at $2 a share, this sum, with the surplus fund, providing all money needed for the building. Since the second year of organization the company has never paid less than 7 per cent. on its par value, and last year dividends of 20 per cent. were paid.

Need for more space has brought about a reorganization of the old company, and the stock has been increased to $500,000. Bonds have been issued for the purchase of the land, all being taken by the local banks, while stock will be sold for the erection of the necessary buildings. Fifty thousand shares were offered to members of the organization at par, the allotment was over-subscribed. Another block of the same size will be offered later, but as members have all applied for more stock, there is little chance for outside capital to get in.

Last year the business during the summer months was so great that many of the farmers who rented stalls for the season, and spaces in the yard, did not relinquish their leases, preferring to pay rent the remainder of the year rather than run the chance of not having space this season.

It is almost impossible to estimate the total amount of trade carried on through this association. Firms occupying only a small stall do an enormous business, shipping to all parts of the Southwest, as well as supplying the retail houses throughout the city and near-by towns. An attempt was made in the summer of 1907 to keep account of the business for one day, the Johnson & Musser Seed Company estimating it at $30,000. Taking this as an average, it would indicate a business of about $3,400,000 for the year. The managers of the company state that trade has increased fully 25 per cent. since the estimate was made, and this would make it about $4,250,000.

The new location will provide ample room for all purposes, and afford fine shipping facilities for the various produce firms. The Keystone Produce Company is already arranging for a location on or near the property purchased last week, where it can have a spur track. It is said that this firm's drayage bills alone exceed the rental paid for its location opposite the present market buildings. Others are in the same circumstances and are welcoming the chance for larger quarters, with better shipping facilities.

Arrangements have been made for spur tracks from all the steam and electric lines right onto the market property, and there will not hereafter be such a loss through handling.

Work will be rushed as soon as the land is cleared, and it is expected to have the new plant ready for occupancy by August 1.

Real Estate Today.

Now the writer turns to the record for Monday, March 15, 1909. He finds 229 deeds conveying real estate filed with the County Clerk for this day, and the money value would run into more millions than the thousands of thirty years ago. Trust deeds recorded on Monday of last week numbered thirty-four; mortgages sixty-six, and the amount involved $176,732. There were upon this day over seventy releases of mortgages recorded in the county. That is real estate in the year 1909 compared with the meager showing of a generation ago.

An Interesting Exhibit.

The readers of Fact and Comment will be interested in a little object lesson presented to their eyes in the following facsimile of the body of the Daily Transcript of Records of Los Angeles County in 1879. Remember, Orange county has been cut off from

W. A. McCALL.

Prominent men—men of keen discernment, who have visited Mt. Washington lately, have told the writer that this magnificent eminence will be Los Angeles's finest and most exclusive residence district in less than three years! At first thought this seems an unusually strong statement, but if you consider that when the incline railway is completed, Mt. Washington will be the only section of Los Angeles commanding 150 miles of ocean frontage, 100 miles of mountain ranges, clear vistas of three valleys and five cities, including the greater part of this city—and all within 20 minutes of down town, the prophecy doesn't seem so remarkable.

Mt. Washington, nearly 1000 feet above the level of the city, enjoys features that can never be duplicated elsewhere in Los Angeles. It is above the fog, frost, dust and noise line.

With its pure mountain air, its immunity from every undesirable element, the easy accessibility to down town (upon the completion of the incline.) the peerless panoramic views of mountains, city and sea, and the wealth of landscape work to be developed in the future—Mt. Washington stands in a class by itself. It has no rivals.

Although Mt. Washington is purely a high-class home proposition, the investment side is keenly realized by those who are buying and building homes on this lofty summit. Conservative authorities claim that property values here will increase three-fold within the next four years. Lots range in size from 75x150 to 2 and 3 acres, and in price from $1500 upward. Robert Marsh and Co., 140 W. Fifth Street (Security Bldg.,) are general agents for Mt. Washington.

LARGE TOTAL IS INDICATED.

NEARLY THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION FOR MONTH.

Building Report for Seventeen Days Shows Much Activity Throughout City—March Expected to End With Million-Dollar Mark Passed—Home Building Continues.

The building report shows an encouraging condition of affairs in Los Angeles. The total for the first seventeen business days of this month is $772,409, for 522 new building permits. This is compared with 427 permits, and a valuation of $498,680 for the same period a year ago. With a week and a half still to run, in this month the building total for March will be well above the $1,000,000 mark.

One feature of the report so far this month is two two-story reinforced concrete class A buildings, which will cost $46,000. There are also thirteen class C brick buildings costing a total of $177,851 included in the statement. Class D one-story frames number 208, and are valued at $264,053.

The Fifth Ward leads in the number of permits issued, and the total valuation of the same, with 140 permits at $214,619. The Fourth Ward is next in valuation with $181,723, for fifty-eight buildings. Following is the classified report, and the report by wards:

	Permits.	Valuation.
Class A, reinforced concrete	2	$ 46,000

Good Demand Is Reported for Houses, Lots and Close-in Acreage Properties.

The Edwards & Wildey Company reports an active demand for the various classes of property. The firm has closed the following sales:

For Adah B. Whomes, to George L. Louden, lot 50x130 feet, on the south side of Ninth street, between Hoover and Westmoreland, for a consideration of $2500. For Emma Wall to Wesley Wright, the six room modern bungalow at No. 4014 Harvard boulevard, on lot 50x150 feet, for a consideration of $3500.

For L. W. Stock to F. C. Morgan, lot 60x135 feet, on the west side of Mesa street, near Pico, for a consideration of $2000. For O. B. Hutchings to Isabella Fleming, the modern eight-room house, No. 1740 Lennox avenue, on a lot 50x125 feet, for $7500. For Lawrence C. Edwards to B. A. Whomes, lot 50x150 feet, on the east side of Tenth avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth streets, for $1200.

For O. J. Fast to H. C. Smith, lot 60x150 feet, on the west side of Cahuenga street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, for a consideration of $2350.

For William Bell to Michael Hughes, a ten-acre full-bearing orange grove in the Charter Oak district of Covina, half in navels and half in Valencias, with a good six-room house and outbuildings; for a consideration of $14,500. Mr. Hughes will make his home upon the property.

For I. S. Fleming to a local investor, 2 lots, 120x120 feet, on the north side of Thirty-fourth street, about 200 feet west of Figueroa street; for a consideration of $4500. Purchased for improvement.

IN BOYLE HEIGHTS.

Wilson & Emmons report the exchange of the property located at No. 1966 East First street to E. Zoberlein. The property is improved with a two-story brick store building, with rooms above. The property was owned by Henry Willard and associates, who took in exchange the store building and lease of the corner at Winston and Main streets. The valuation was $27,000.

LINDSAY GROVE AT HIGH PRICE.

Four Thousand Dollars an Acre Paid for Wonderful Produce.

The Lindsay orange district of Tulare county has been attracting much attention for the past four years, not only for its early production, but also for its thousands of acres of beautiful groves, but it now comes to the front by making a world's record for the highest price ever paid for an orange grove. This grove is located about one mile west of Lindsay and consists of eight and one-third acres of fourteen-year-old Valencias, and was sold Friday by C. O. Cowles to Arthur Wilfley of Denver for $4000 an acre, and considering there being no buildings on the property, this is undoubtedly the highest price ever paid for an orange grove in any district.

Mr. Cowles bought this grove in the summer of 1905 and, paying $1000 an acre the crop for 1906 was sold for $9577, or $1177 an acre. In 1907 the crop sold for $9181, or $1147 an acre, and last year it sold for $14,500, or $1812 an acre, making a total amount for the three years of $33,258, thus paying better than 400 per cent. on the investment. The remarkable advance in value of this orchard goes to prove the orange business as one of the best investments to be made in California, and while this is the first sale to be made in that district of such lofty prices, yet there are more and larger groves just as good as this one in all parts of the Lindsay district. Orange planting in Tulare county has been very extensive the past four years, it being estimated that fully three fourths of the orange trees planted in the State in that time have been planted in Tulare county. The Kiggens Land Company reports more than $200,000 worth of property sold in Tulare county since December 1.

Robert Marsh & Co. reports considerable activity in both improved and unimproved residence property. The following is its list of sales.

Helen E. Moody to Jennie M. Hynes, the property located at No. 1019 Beacon street on lot 75x150 feet, improved with a fine twelve-room residence for a consideration of $16,000 cash.

Thomas O'Neil to Mrs. Jennie M. Hynes, a vacant lot 50x150 feet, on the east side of Beacon street, 200 feet south of Ninth street, for a consideration of $7000 cash.

F. M. Hunt to A. E. Hull, the northeast corner of Orange and Wilshire Place, an unimproved lot 60x141 feet, the consideration was $6000 cash. Mr. Hull will improve the corner with a fine home.

Malcolm Campbell to a local investor, an unimproved lot 60x145 feet on Berendo street, near Seventh, for a consideration of $4500. It is understood the property is purchased for immediate improvement. E. C. Dimmick to Andrew Williams, the six-room bungalow at No. 2253 West Thirtieth street for a consideration of $4000.

Mrs. Nellie Smith to Charles P. Folkerth, an unimproved lot 60x150 feet on Gramercy Place, near Sixth, for a consideration of $1800. This lot is purchased for immediate improvement. C. T. Crowell to a local investor, the north fifteen feet of Lot 3, Wilshire boulevard Heights, on New Hampshire street, 150 feet south of Seventh street, for a consideration of $1125.

The Rimpau Heights Company to Arthur Pelt, an unimproved lot 50x125 feet, on Woolsey avenue, near Sixteenth for a consideration of $1100. This was purchased for improvement. J. A. Vaughn to Frank Winter, the six-room bungalow on a lot 50x150 feet at No. 2277 Third avenue for a consideration of $5500.

Henry Ayres to L. Olsen, a west front lot 55x135 feet, on Norton avenue, 600 feet south of Pico, purchased for improvement for a consideration of $1250. John Howze to Mrs. Crall, two east front lots 55x125 feet, on Norton avenue, 600 feet south of Pico, purchased for improvement. The consideration was $1500. H. A. Getz to H. S. Carroll, an east front lot, 55x145 feet, on Woolsey avenue, 550 feet south of Pico, purchased for improvement, for a consideration of $1500.

H. A. Getz to Effie Brainard, an east front lot 55x145 feet, on Woolsey avenue, about 600 feet south of Pico for $1500. H. A. Getz to Addie F. Dunn, an east front lot 55x145 feet on Woolsey avenue, 500 feet south of Pico for $1500.

E. A. Weber to William Huffman, the six-room bungalow on lot 50x150 feet, at No. 1721 Third avenue for a consideration of $4500. This firm reports a considerable demand for residence property in the west and southwest, and feels very much encouraged with the outlook.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY SOLD.

Mesquite Street Frontage Purchased at Sixty-three Dollars a Foot. Lease Made.

George M. SoRelle, manager of the industrial property department of the Erkenbrecher Syndicate, reports the sale of a large industrial site, consisting of 240 feet on Mesquite street by 140 feet in depth, just north of Seventh street, and across the street from the Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company plant. Sarah and Simpson McClure, James Irving, Robert T. See and W. T. Glassell are the sellers, W. S. Bullis is the purchaser. The reported consideration is $14,800, or about $63 a front foot.

The same firm also reports the leasing of an industrial site, consisting of two acres, on the east side of Hooper avenue, and on the south side of the Santa Monica line of the Southern Pacific. Mrs. Jennie B. Hooper is lessor and Albert H. Thompson the lessee. This lease was made for ten years, for a total rental of $9900. Mr. Thompson is now engaged in the mill, lumber and building business in this city, and will move his plant to the site just leased.

HANDSOME SUBURBAN HOME.

IN IDEAL HOLLYWOOD.
IN IDEAL HOLLYWOOD.

When it comes to selecting a site for building a country home, the first and most important thing is "LOCATION." This beyond any question of doubt is the "CREAM LOCATION" of the entire valley. View. It is simply unsurpassed. Mountains, yes, only a few blocks away. Ocean? Yes, can be plainly seen from almost any room in the house. Such points of interest as Catalina Island, Mt. Lowe, Old Baldy, in fact, the entire valley, is a perfect panorama from the front veranda. House is located on a beautiful southwest corner, 220 ft. square.

Veranda across entire front of house, some 25 ft. long.

Reception hall is a beauty, all in quarter-sawed oak, of good size, with a very nice open staircase of pleasing design, beamed ceilings, built-in seats, etc.

Living-room, 20x25, on south side where you get an unrestricted view of some 30 miles, all in selected mahogany; handsome oval bay window; mantel, some 14 ft. long, of Gruby tile; special nook for piano, and so many little things for comfort. Den adjoins living-room and such a cosy place it is. Library on opposite side of hall, dark oak, with built-in bookcases, built-in seats and just such a place as you would revel in.

Dining-room, (oh, what a spot;) large and well arranged; also in oak; specially finished to harmonize with its elegant tapestry and many built comforts. Buffet is perfect and 15 ft. long. From dining-room you step through a beautiful pair of French doors out upon a large veranda, or sun parlor, all of cement. Of its kind, the nicest than can be seen.

Kitchen, pass pantry and screen porch is all that you possibly would ask for; upper floor contains 5 very nice bed chambers; nicely tinted in harmonious shades. Spacious bath. Attic is all finished for billiard-room, servants' quarters, trunk and storage room.

The grounds are very highly improved. There is 2-story garage with driver's quarters. Laundry-room, etc. Price $25,000. We can also arrange terms.

WONDERFULLY ATTRACTIVE HOME.
MOST IDEAL CORNER ON WILSHIRE.

$50,000. —$50,000— $50,000.

We want you to understand what we say about this perfect home. The view is one of the most magnificent of any in the city. The lot has 150 feet front on Wilshire blvd. An important point in favor of the location is that it is close in and very near two of the city's beautiful parks. The exterior of the house shows the matchless skill of the architect and the interior reveals his choicest taste in its appointments. We are in a position to sell this fine home for less than cost, hence all the profit comes your way. You seldom have this kind of an opportunity, especially after the lawn is growing and the flowers are blooming and the birds are singing in the trees.

There are 12 large rooms, 3 elegant baths in this fine home. All the lower floor is finished in carefully-selected quarter-sawed oak, in elegant piano finish, with beam ceilings. The reception hall is 20x30, with grand stairway and landing in the rear, all of quartered oak, also beautiful art-glass windows, hall racks and seats, and built-in safe underneath stairway. Living-room to the left of entrance is exceptional, being 26x31, with art-glass windows and Gruby tile mantel 12 ft. long, with recesses and seats on each side, paneled and canvas, frescoing of unique design. Perfect model of a library, with every comfort and convenience. Dining-room to the taste of a queen, has relief frescoe, beautiful fireplace with French doors on each side leading to the porch. An ideal den. Large kitchen, lavatory, screen porch, pass pantry, all finely appointed for service. There are 5 beautiful bedchambers on the second floor, each one exceptionally large. Fine billiard-room and servants' rooms on third floor; 2-story garage, with servants' quarters. You will make a mistake if you do not let us show you this perfect home. You can only fully appreciate it by seeing it and we do not want you to miss the opportunity. So please call at once. Terms to suit purchaser.

We are closely in touch with the merits of most of the fine residences being erected monthly, and we consider it a pleasure to submit to the homeseeker this beautiful ten-room residence just being completed on one of the very best streets in this most popular section, near Wilshire blvd. The rooms are all large, cheerful, carefully arranged, well lighted with plate-glass windows, art panels, etc. Dining-room has exquisite buffet, walls hung with imported tapestries, oak floors throughout. The kitchen is large, convenient, and the large screen porch is equipped with heavy roll-top wash trays, etc. This home has five very large bedrooms, all enameled white, daintily decorated and papered, and each has a very large closet. There are two fine baths, two toilets, lavatories, etc.; in fact, a thoroughly modern home, on a fine, elevated lot, 60x150, and priced right. Terms can be arranged.

$14,000 $14,000.

AN ABSOLUTE BARGAIN.
WESTLAKE DISTRICT.

It is seldom we have a snap like this, a modern 10-room residence, completely furnished, with piano; furniture worth at least $1500; in the choicest part of the Westlake section, on one of its best streets; a house delightfully arranged, large reception hall, reception parlor, living-room and spacious dining-room, all well lighted and handsomely decorated. Five large airy bed chambers, 2 baths, extra large closets, 3 lavatories, etc. The attic is finished to allow for billiard room. The home is complete in every detail, on an east front lot 100x150 to an alley, beautifully improved, lawn, flowers, and rare shrubs. There is also a $1500 garage on the lot. We know it is a bargain, and you will when you see it. Any reasonable terms will be accepted. This home must be sold.

$30,000. $30,000.

AN ELEGANT RESIDENCE—EAST FRONT.
NEAR WILSHIRE BOULEVARD.

This is one of the most beautiful and carefully constructed homes in the city, finished in quartered oak and mahogany, rubbed to a piano finish. All floors ⅞-inch oak. The arrangement of rooms is most pleasing, artistic and serviceable. The broad reception hall leads to a very large living-room, beautifully finished, having a massive stone and Gruby tile fireplace, two 12-ft. heavy plate-glass windows, etc. Dining-room is a model of elegance, having an abundance of light, mellowed by an exquisite art-glass 12-ft. panel, large and convenient butler's pantry leads to a fine kitchen complete in the necessary equipment of this most important room. There are 5 very large, well-lighted and luxurious bedrooms, very large closets, with built-in drawers, etc. It would be impossible to tell you half of the merits of this place, we will say, however, that the foundation of this magnificent home alone cost $1500. All studding is 2x6, all floor joists 2x10 and 2x12, in fact, the construction throughout was under the personal supervision of the owner, and only the best of material used. The front of house is adorned by a wide and long cement porch, supported by Chatsworth stone foundation and columns. Lot is 80x217, finely improved. An uninterrupted view of almost the entire mountain range will always be possessed by this magnificent property. We will gladly give you complete details concerning this home.

OXFORD BOULEVARD EAST FRONT. $5500 $5500.

Here is just what you bargain hunters have been looking for, and you can take it from us. The only one on high ground for the money. Do not forget BUNGALOWS in this territory sell for $6500 to $7500. Eight-room two story house, east front; rooms are of good size and well arranged; finished in slash grain Oregon pine; upper floor contains four nice bedrooms and bath; splendid veranda across entire front of house; sleeping porch in REAR. Lot is set to good lawn and choice shrubbery.

TWENTY-FIRST STREET. EAST FRONT. $7350. $7350.

This pretty home of eight rooms, including hall, is just being completed and is in a delightful neighborhood among other nice homes on West Adams Heights. This house differs entirely from the usual homes in this class for this reason. The lower floor is finished in the following genuine hardwoods:

Dining-room is of genuine mahogany wood with a very handsome mahogany buffet, ceilings of mahogany beams, and side walls are paneled five feet three inches high, and above this are rich tapestries. The living-room is in select quarter sawed oak, the oak panels being of the finest grain obtainable and the handsome oak mantel with its Gruby tile, makes a stunning effect. The hall and stair are in solid quartered oak, the hall being paneled to ceiling. There are four sunny bedrooms with best quality of maple floors. The bath is tiled, and nickel plumbing is used throughout. Cellar is cemented and a fine furnace has been installed. Lighting fixtures are of the best quality and especially designed. The kitchen and pantry are models of convenience. The low price of this brand new house is $7350, for a quick sale.

HARVARD BOULEVARD. EAST FRONT. $7500. $7500.

Large attractive home on high ground, surrounded by other homes in keeping. Large veranda extending across entire front of house. All of cement. Entrance, which is very attractive, all in quarter-sawed, opens into a very pleasing reception hall of good size. Living room 15x25, with built-in brown sandstone mantel, large plate glass window, built-in seats and other comforts. Dining-room of very good size; special design in buffet with leaded glass doors; beautiful open fireplace and mantel of Scotch granite. Kitchen and pantry are very commodious and well arranged; all modern comforts. Upper floor contains four large and well lighted bedchambers, all finished in white enamel; splendid bath with nickel exposed plumbing and very nice outside sleeping porch, finished attic. If it is necessary we can arrange terms.

TOBERMAN CORNER. EAST FRONT $7500. $7500.

The above price buys you a nine-room two-story house, in one or two years the lot alone will be worth almost this much for flats or apartment house. Location is close in on a fine large corner. Toberman street, being 120 feet wide, and within one block of nine car lines; everything in its favor. If you are looking for a good investment at a genuine bargain, ring us up and we will be pleased to give you all the particulars. House is in perfect order and we can arrange very easy terms for good responsible parties.

WILTON BOULEVARD. EAST FRONT. $7650. $7650.

New, modern and highly finished nine-room two story house, located on beautiful Wilton Place, which is, as you know, high ground and a high class neighborhood. Reception-hall is nice. Living room is ideal. Dining room is superb, two built-in buffets, built-in seats, casement windows, etc. Pass pantry and kitchen are complete; very unique, saving of much work. Concrete cellar, piped for furnace. Out and inside entrance. Six very fine bedchambers on second floor, comfortable sewing room, good sized bath and exposed plumbing. All rooms tinted in very pleasing colors. Hardwood floors throughout entire house; handsome lighting fixtures; forced sale; reduced from $8500 to $7500.

CIMARRON CORNER. EAST FRONT. $17,500. $17,500.

This is without doubt one of the most perfect finished and arranged houses we have ever had the pleasure of advertising. New and the finishing touches just being put on; mahogany and oak, are finished just the same as your piano. Location is on southwest corner, being the double clean corner, and the lot 75x156 to alley. House contains 10 rooms, and we mean ROOMS, not CLOSETS. The front porch is exceptionally inviting, being much out of the ordinary for size; all of cement. The entire entrance being of selected quarter-sawed oak with beautiful design of bevel-plate glass laid in copper. Upon entering you are received into large reception hall, finished in the finest Tabasco mahogany that money could buy, with elegant gold-embroidered tapestry border that is pleasing to the eye. The living-room, 18x25, finished in quarter-sawed oak, with oval bay window containing 7 windows; front window 14 ft. long, of one piece. The open fireplace and mantel is a work of ART. The equal of any contained in $50,000 and $75,000 homes. Walls are hung with silk-finished tapestry paper. Dining-room, (oh, what a beautiful spot,) being 17x22, all in oak, with oval bay window containing 6 windows. Built-in buffet has no equal; beautiful in design and not one dollar left to make it perfect. Walls are hung with heavy imported tapestry. There are 2 large bed chambers on the lower floor, finished with beautiful embossed paper and special border. Bathroom on this floor is a show place; entire floor of tile and tile border; bath, toilet and lavatory running into hundreds of dollars. In fact, the plumbing bill alone in this house was $1151.50. It is impossible to describe the kitchen and its comforts, just let us show you. Back porch is 12x16, complete in finish. Basement is very large and contains laundry-room, furnace-room, wood and coal bins, heater, etc. No muss whatever on wash days. The upper floors contain 3 bedchambers, one of which is 18x20; large hall and a very commodious bathroom. The closets we will simply call them, women's delight. You possibly have seen good lighting fixtures before, but none that will make your eyes dazzle like the ones contained here. The lot highly improved with choice trees, some costing as much as $25 apiece. Garage is a beauty, being 2-story, with driver's quarters above. Sink, toilet, work bench, closets, pit, etc. In conclusion if you are looking for a PERFECT HOME, perfect in workmanship and material, perfect in finish, perfect in arrangement, all we ask is the pleasure of showing you. We have just exactly what we advertise. We can arrange terms if you wish.

GRAMERCY PLACE EAST. FRONT. $15,750. $15,750.

Of all the bargains you read about in today's papers this is the peer of them all. Such value as this cannot be found anywhere in the city. First of all the lot in itself has attractions, being 75x180 in depth. Think of the entire lower story of the house all in select quarter-sawed oak, no contract work, all day labor. Front veranda 12 feet wide, 56 feet long; all of cement and Chatsworth Park sandstone. Reception hall 15x20, oak, and oak staircase; beamed and cove ceilings, frescoed. Living room 18x28, all in oak, bookcases, built-in seats, mantel, etc. Front window 12 feet long. Lounging room a very delightful spot, also in oak. Dining room, largest room in the house, all in oak, built-in seats, DIAVAN, three separate entrances to dining room. Kitchen and pass pantry you will say are O.K. Servants' quarters are separate on lower floor. Laundry quarters are very convenient; furnace room; wine cellar; jelly and jam closets; everything perfect in stone basement. Upper floor has four bedrooms, smallest one being 15x20; two very fine bath-rooms, one tub alone costing $300. Front balcony and large sleeping porch; lighting fixtures are beauties. Yard is very fine and has two-story garage, chicken corrals, pigeon house, etc. If you are looking for a house built upon honor and $1500 less than it cost the owner. See us. We can arrange terms. We have good reasons for selling.

HARVARD BOULEVARD. EAST FRONT $18,250. $18,250.

10 large rooms and finished attic. Reception hall is one of the pleasing features of the house, being large and well arranged, with large open court and winding staircase, inclosed with 6 handsome art-glass windows of pleasing design. Built-in seats. Full-size mirror. To the left, living-room 20x26, with genuine sandstone open fireplace and beautiful mantel. Plate-glass window 10 ft. long; special nook for piano off from living-room. Corners the den and a DEN it is. Handsome pressed brick mantel, 7 ft. high and 10 ft. wide. Bookcases, window seats, casement windows, etc. To right of hall is the dining-room, 18x24, plate-glass window 8 ft. long, oval or bay window with 10 casement windows. Kitchen and pass pantry are O. K., adjoining hall you step into a beautiful billiard room, 18x22; walls are paneled 4½ ft. high, hung with expensive Lincrusta. Private entrance opening from driveway; hardwood floors and lighting fixtures are beautiful; upper floor contains 5 splendid bedrooms, 2 private bathrooms. Servants' quarters on third floor. Plenty of closets and all up to date conveniences. Basement of cement with furnace, Ruud heater, wood and coal bins, wine cellar, etc. Lot is 75x215 in depth, and "EAST FRONT," highly improved. 403 S. HILL STREET.

BARGAIN NEAR FIGUEROA.

$3100.

This is a seven-room cottage, located on one of those 100-foot boulevards just south of Agricultural Park and close to Figueroa st. This home wasn't finished yesterday, but it is in perfect repair. Is owned by one of the largest paint and wall-paper concerns in the city, so you may judge for yourself how nice it looks. They have recently gone over it very thoroughly. This property came to them in such a way that they can afford to sell it at a sacrifice. The lot is 50x160 and is highly improved with shrubs, lawn, etc. No bargain like this has come to our notice in a long time, and we have been given but ten days in which to dispose of it. Act quickly if you wish to take advantage of this opportunity.

BUNGALOW, SOUTHWEST.

$3800.

Terms $1000 cash. Terms $1000 cash.

At such a price you cannot afford to pass this by without looking at it. Located on a beautiful street, southwest, near the W. Adams and W. Jefferson-st. car lines. It has seven rooms, including a very pretty breakfast-room, hardwood floors, all the down-to-date built-in features, Flemish oak finish in all the principal rooms and white enamel in the three bedrooms and bath. The lot is large and well improved with lawn, flowers, barn, etc. This home is now vacant—has been used but a short time, and is $700 under value. It is a bargain.

SOUTHWEST CORNER BUNGALOW.

$5500.

This bungalow has seven exceptionally large rooms, built on a grand southwest corner lot, 50x155, close to car lines, churches, etc., and is located near Adams and Vermont ave. The home has every modern idea, such as beamed ceilings, paneled walls, massive mantel, hardwood floors, Flemish and golden oak in the principal rooms, and white enamel in the bedrooms, with a very artistic breakfast-room just off the kitchen. The main thing we wish to draw your attention to is the location and price. First, there is no home of this kind in the whole city that has a finer appearance from the street; set well back, with palms between the curb and walk along the entire 205 feet of frontage, growing 15 feet apart. The rear yard is red graveled and has an artistic lattice fence interwoven with vines. In the yard we find fruit trees, grape vines, roses, sweet peas in profusion, and many shrubs, and, last but not least, a $200 barn and workshop, set back 50 feet from the street. This property is less than a year old, and is $1500 under value.

$6000.

We have on West Adams Heights a splendid 9-room home that will be sold this week at a surprising bargain. It lies one block from Berkeley Square on a full sized fifty-foot lot surrounded by many of the best homes in the city. This house does not need a dollar spent on it. Its rooms are large throughout and fitted with every built-in and modern idea. Hardwood floors upstairs and down, furnace, 2 mantels and fire places, spacious living-room, paneled and beamed work, admirable lighting fixtures, separate den with outside entrance, four fine bedrooms in white enamel, and a closed-in sleeping balcony besides. This is your bargain. The price will not wait for next week. If you want a home at all, see this one today. Just $6000.

THE ONLY BUNGALOW IN BEAUTIFUL PALM PLACE TRACT.

$6250.

Terms $1000 cash. Terms $1000 cash.

If you are not acquainted with this beautiful location, we wish to say it's bound by Pico st., Alvarado st., West 11th and Hoover sts., in the best part of the Westlake district, and just across the street from the Westmoreland Tract. How this bungalow got in this highly restricted tract, we don't know and it's none of our business; it's there and has been for a year. Was built for a home and is now for sale at the above low figure, and almost any terms you may desire. The owner has vacated and, if we hadn't said so, you would take it for a brand new home. There are six large rooms and a full tiled bathroom, big cellar and a gas furnace piped to every room, hardwood floors throughout, two patent wall beds, beautiful lighting fixtures, and the rooms are paneled and beamed and hung with expensive hangings. The bungalow is very artistic and sets on a broad lot facing almost north. If you want a home in the beautiful Westlake district, surrounded by expensive homes, fine car service, at a low price on almost any terms, see this at once. It won't last.

WILSHIRE DISTRICT SUNSHINE HOME.

$10,000.

When we say "sunshine," we mean it. Overlooking the whole city, this home is built on an elevated lot 62½x150 feet, close to two car lines and only 20 minutes to Broadway. This beautiful property, with nine rooms, two baths and two sunrooms, has been completed about two weeks and must be sold at once. The above figure is away under value and won't last a week. So if you are looking for one of the swellest homes in the Wilshire district, act quickly. This house is built on a solid concrete foundation, and is so arranged that every room gets the sunshine. On the first floor, as you enter, you'll find an immense living-room, 20x40 feet, finished in mahoganized curly redwood, with a massive Chatsworth stone mantel at the west end. To the north end of the room is a broad winding stairway leading to the upper floor. Just off the living-room to the south is a grand dining-room which adjoins a glass sunroom or den; this opens onto a large porch, 20 feet square. The kitchen, pantries, maid's room and bath are complete and in keeping with this fine home. The upstairs rooms are finished in white enamel with pink hangings. With the four spacious bed chambers and sunroom, we are sure no fault can be found. There are three closets in the main bedroom and in each door is a large French plate mirror. The closets in the other rooms are very commodious and are provided with outside light. The bath has every down-to-date fixture and is conveniently arranged for the bedrooms.

Too much cannot be said of this beautiful home, which is $5000 under what it ought to sell for. Cellar is of good size, and the furnace pipes lead to every rooms. Call on us to show you this home. It will please you, and it is a bargain, in the right location.

WESTLAKE SACRIFICE.

This is the most beautiful property in the entire Westlake district, and the largest east-front lot intact in that very desirable section. Getting down to a "heart to heart" talk, let us first present it to you from a business standpoint. The lot is 125x150 feet, and highly improved with old trees, shrubbery, flowers and a large lawn. It is worth in actual money today $125 per foot, or $15,625. If the lot were vacant, it would make an excellent hotel or apartment-house site, and this section is rapidly filling up with that class of property. There is no question in our minds but this same piece of ground will sell for not less than $25,000 as a vacant lot within a very few years. Now, let us talk it over from a real home standpoint. The house is a very artistic home, and is more the substantial mansion than the usual stereotyped house of today. It has large and airy rooms with high ceilings and the many desirable and homelike conveniences which are not found in contracted houses—a most livable home of fourteen rooms; seven large bedrooms and several baths. We believe the house represents an expenditure of $12,000 to $14,000, and it is in perfect condition. It would be impossible to spend a dollar on it which would improve it in any way. There are hardwood floors throughout, ⅞-inch in thickness; some quartered oak and some very fine white pine, rubbed to a piano finish. The third floor has two servants' rooms, a cedar room for the storage of furs, bedding, trunks, etc., and another room suitable for cardroom or den. The cellar is large and is equipped with every modern appliance. There is a large garage on the property, which will readily accommodate three machines.

Now to get back to business: The lot is actually worth today $15,625 and the improvements $14,000; total, $29,625. Considered as a whole, the place is well worth the above amount, but for quick sale, the price is $19,500. The owner of the property can more than double the sacrifice he is making, in a business deal which is now pending and which must be consummated in the next thirty days, hence the marked sacrifice of a handsome property. If you are looking for a home which will also prove a good investment, do not fail to let us show this one to you.

BEAUTIFUL MISSION HOME IN THE WESTLAKE DISTRICT.

$37,500.

This palatial house contains fourteen rooms and three bathrooms. The lower floor is finished in selected oak and mahogany with seven-eighth inch oak floors throughout. The upper hall is also in solid oak while the sleeping apartments are in white enamel. The rooms are exceptionally well lighted. The walls are draped with rich tapestries and real leather on the first floor and rich papers upstairs. There is an artistic pergola in the court with bricked floor; this pergola is covered with beautiful vines and roses and is ideally suited for outdoor breakfasts and teas.

There are two complete heating systems; also Ruud water heater and electric ventilating system. The garage is large enough for three cars and has man's rooms above. The lot is 110x145 feet.

This is, without question, one of the best built and well arranged residences we have ever offered. It can be seen by appointment only.

WHY DOES EAGLE ROCK SUCCEED

in getting so many nice people to make their home there? Everything that Eagle Rock has accomplished in the way of modern improvements, transportation, etc., has been done under difficulties and against odds. Eagle Rock has no newspaper proprietors, or railway owners, to promote her welfare and boost her sales. But people keep on coming out, keep on buying property, keep on building homes. Why?

EAGLE ROCK HAS THE NATURAL ADVANTAGES.
NEARNESS TO THE CITY.
HIGH ALTITUDE.
PURE, SOFT, MOUNTAIN WATER.
FRESH BRACING AIR.
WONDERFULLY VARIED SCENERY.
FERTILE, EASILY WORKED SOIL.
GOOD NEIGHBORS.

HERE IS WHAT YOU CAN GET IN EAGLE ROCK

FOR THE YOUNG COUPLE.

Lots of young people now making their first start to establish themselves in a home of their own in Eagle Rock. For you we have well situated building lots from 50x140 to 100x240 at from $250 up. All street improvements, etc., included. Very easy terms, or if you pay cash for the lot, we will arrange to build for you without any further first payment.

FOR THE BUSINESS MAN.

Many prominent city business men now have their homes in Eagle Rock. There is no other suburban district so close to the city, and reached by two city street cars. Think of the joys in store for your children in such a beautiful and healthful environment. For you we have large building sites, from one-half to three acres each at from $500 up, all improvements, petrolithic oiled streets, etc. included.

FOR THE MAN OF LEISURE.

Eagle Rock especially appeals to those who have the time to appreciate and enjoy the fine scenery and magnificent, bracing climate. For you we have the choice of several of from six to fifty acres each. Several are well covered with live oaks and sycamores. Prices from $400 per acre.

EAGLE ROCK THE BEST.

You will find, after looking over the whole residence district, around Los Angeles, that you get more and more attracted to Eagle Rock every time you go out. This is the severest test and we desire you to make it, because we know the inevitable result.

A WORD ABOUT OURSELVES.

Eagle Rock is our hobby, we know every inch of it and have sold about half of it at one time or another. We live there ourselves wouldn't live anywhere else. When we ask you to put yourself in our hands, and let us show you over Eagle Rock we do so because we want to share our enthusiasm with you.

WE DO NOT PESTER YOU TO BUY.

Simply drive you over the district, that's the reason we sell so much property. Because after you have made your comparisons

YOU WILL WANT TO BUY.

We sell more Eagle Rock property than all other agents combined.

"IT PAYS TO SEE US."

FOR SALE—

$10 DOWN
SECURES AN ACRE HOMESITE
WHERE SOIL IS BEST AND WATER IS FREE.

Somerset offers more for the money than any other suburb of Los Angeles. It is on the electric line and only 30 minutes from the city. It is an ideal home climate. The soil grows everything. The water flows from artesian wells, through a system of large steel mains and does not cost a penny. The market car is loaded right there at the station and reaches the city markets in half an hour. An acre garden will supply the family table and leave something to sell. The land may be secured now at such a low price that aside from its producing qualities it is an investment appealing to the best judgment.

A SINGLE ACRE $350.
$10 DOWN AND $10 A MONTH.
TWO EXCURSIONS EVERY HOUR DAILY.
UP TO 2 P.M. SUNDAY.

BUSINESS INVESTMENT—
$1000 or More.

AN INVESTMENT THAT WARRANTS YOUR CAREFUL CONSIDERATION.

The value of the Lamb Weed burner as the most practical, economical and successful method of destroying vegetation on railroads has been proven to the complete satisfaction of every railroad manager in Los Angeles.

On Wednesday, March 10th; we began operations on the Los Angeles Pacific Railroad of this city, and in the first eight days we cleared about 10 miles of the thickest and rankest vegetation in the vicinity of Los Angeles; this work was done at about 20 per cent. of the cost of any other method, 40 times as fast, and in a more satisfactory manner than vegetation was ever removed from a railroad track. These are pretty strong statements, but the work is there and stands as absolute proof within itself.

The railroad officials are completely satisfied with this work, in fact, it is far better than we expected to do with the first machine put at work. If you are in doubt regarding these statements, go and see the work, it's there and enough to convince the most skeptical that Lamb Weed Burner stock is the best investment in Los Angeles.

Should you be interested in making an investment that is safe, will absolutely pay a handsome dividend, and always be on the increase in value, get full particulars regarding this wonderful opportunity to make your dollars grow. We can show unquestionable facts enough to convince the most conservative that within twelve months from now this stock will sell for double what it now costs, and pay a handsome dividend this year. Seeing is believing, and we have the facts to show you. Only a limited amount of stock for sale, and will be on the market but a few days at the present price.

OUR RESIDENCE PLANS
Are the most artistic and
Practical for our climate.

We have designed and built beautiful residences in Los Angeles for a great many years and know the needs and peculiarities of our climate.

—REMEMBER—

We get you out sketches, embodying your own ideas and make no charge for plans and specifications.

HOMES—
HOMES.
You don't need to own your own lot to get a home in the most beautiful southwest section of Los Angeles; 25 minutes from Fourth and Broadway. We will build you a modern bungalow, according to your own ideas, on a lot, 40x135 ft., all street work included, and sewers, gas and electricity.

Our plan of building you a home is unique, as all you need to do is to select your lot and pay down $25 and a small monthly payment until you have paid $250 on your lot, when we will commence your house without any extra payment, from then on, all you have to pay is $25 per month until your house is paid for. Fine car service, high ground, fine homes adjoining. Lots cost from $600 to $1000, on which we will build you a house for $2000. Investigate the proposition. It will interest you. Go out today. Office on the tract, Santa Monica and Western ave.

FOR SALE—

CUDAHY

RANCH

$400

UPWARDS.

READ THIS.

A special offer—Land seeded to alfalfa without cost to purchasers.

Your acreage is on an earning basis the minute you buy.

INVESTIGATE THIS PROPOSITION.

Buy an acre now—pay ¼ cash, the balance in one, two and three years.

A great opportunity for the man who wants an acre home place.

There's a reason for this offer. A part of the great Cudahy Ranch—(Lots V, X and Z) is one monster beet field. While this property is on the market we desire to keep it intact until the crop of beets is taken off.

OUR INDUCEMENT.

In order to make it worth your while to buy acreage other than that mentioned above we will agree to seed to alfalfa, without cost, any property not included in lots V, X and Z. The land we want to reserve constitutes but a very small part of the ranch.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED

We advise immediate action. A comparatively small acreage on the Cudahy Ranch planted to alfalfa, yields a comfortable income. The market price on baled alfalfa ranges around $17 a ton. The average yield per acre is ten tons.

Cudahy Ranch land is ideal alfalfa land. Crops are easily disposed of in the near-by Los Angeles markets.

Don't you want a piece of property that begins to earn money for you right away? Then take advantage of this unusual offer.

WATER ON THE CUDAHY RANCH.

A PERFECT SYSTEM.
AN ABUNDANT SUPPLY.
COST LOW.

The water situation on the Cudahy Ranch leaves nothing to be desired. With every acre goes a share of water stock, which entitles each acre to 77,000 gallons of water each month—more than enough for domestic use and irrigation.

The water plant is owned by buyers of land. It is not run for profit. The only expense is the cost of developing.

SO FAR THE COST OF WATER HAS BEEN LESS THAN 50C PER MONTH PER ACRE—in many other tracts a similar supply costs $1, $2 and even $5 an acre.

Water expense on the Cudahy Ranch is but nominal. In certain localities it is a serious problem—eating up a big percentage of the profits.

THE WATER PROBLEM IS SOLVED ON THE CUDAHY RANCH.

The Cudahy Ranch is twenty-five minutes away, on the Whittier car. It is the best country home location for the man who works in the city. It is the best place for the man who wants to make money raising fruits, vegetables, poultry, etc.

$400 UPWARD AN ACRE.
¼ CASH, BALANCE LONG TIME.

1840 ACRES AT $30 ACRE.
NOT FAR FROM CORCORAN.
This is a splendid body of land and is well adapted to various kinds of farming. Artesian wells are located on lands surrounding this tract and it is believed that artesian wells can easily be obtained on this land. Railroad runs through center of tract and good shipping station only short distance away. We are exclusive agents.

7000 TO 10,000 ACRES
ON LINE OF RAILROAD.
NO FINER LAND IN VALLEY.
PRICE $40 AN ACRE.

This comprises several parcels owned by different parties, which we control exclusively. The soil is of highest grade and is as level as a floor. Could not find any poor land in it if you tried. Located about 15 miles from Fresno. Water in greatest abundance from wells. Electric power can be arranged for for pumping purposes.

1280 ACRES, $35 ACRE.
TWO MILES FROM STATION.
This is excellent soil and well adapted to fruit growing, alfalfa and other crops. Water in inexhaustible quantities. A fine colonization proposition of moderate size.

320 ACRES, $15 AN ACRE.
CLOSE TO ANGIOLA.
This land is priced 'way below actual value and at less than half the price adjacent lands can be had for. The reason for low price is that it belongs to an estate and must be sold at earliest possible date.

FOR SALE—
J. GARNETT HOLMES,
ENGINEER OF SOILS,
912-13 Union Trust Building.
This is an age of the expert in almost every line of business involving the considerable expenditure of money. Those engaged in such business are able to avail themselves of the services of some one who has by years of study and close application familiarized himself with the difficult features. Many industries, formerly hazardous, and in a state of chaos, have been made orderly and comparatively stable through the efforts of the expert.

Hundreds of men have for years devoted themselves to the study of soils and agriculture. A mass of information has been accumulated. The information is widely distributed throughout government, State and scientific publications. Much of it is difficult of interpretation by the layman, and few have these publications at hand.

We assemble for you in the form of a brief all the information published upon any agricultural subject. We have had years of experience in work for government and individuals as a soil expert, and in the practical application of scientific principles to every day problems confronting the farmer and those interested in country lands.

FOR THE MONEY LENDER.
We make examinations of lands everywhere in the most approved scientific way, making appraisement based on agricultural values, and place the information before you by means of maps, plats, and concise reports. By this means you may always have before you the real value of your securities.

Let us explain to you our methods of examination and appraisal. You will never make a bad loan if we make your appraisements, and we can save you money in this appraisal department of your business.

FOR THE BUYER.
Did it ever occur to you that every one is interested in telling you of the advantages? We give you the exact truth about lands everywhere, including the disadvantages if they exist. You may be buying in a region new to you, and thus not be familiar with the new conditions. You may profit by our knowledge gained from years of experience in work for government and private individuals. We examine the soil, make analyses of same, and report upon everything that will affect the value. We have a great many well-pleased clients among the large investors. If you are thinking of buying farm or ranch property anywhere it will pay you to consult us concerning values. We have nothing for sale but our services.

FOR THE REAL ESTATE MAN OR SELLER.
You have no doubt recognized the value of photographs in selling city property. Our maps, and complete descriptions, in effect, place a picture of the farms or country lands you have for sale before prospective buyers. Place the truth in understandable form, from one who knows, but is disinterested, before the buyers, and note the results.

We furnish any number of copies desired, so that you can place your proposition with sub-agents, and correspondents at distant points.

FOR THE FARMER.
If you have alkali in your land, we will by an examination of same tell you the kind and amount, and can give you valuable advice as to the best way of getting rid of same. We can save you much time, labor and expense in deciding what crops are best adapted to your lands.

If your crops or trees are suffering from anything due to the soil conditions, we can render you valuable assistance in pointing out the cause, and recommending remedial practices.

We will be glad to have you call on us for consultation, and let us show you in more detail how we can be of service to you. If inconvenient to call, write.

Let us refer you to some of our clients.

240 ACRES.

$30 Per Acre.

180 acres of this land is the very best of soil for both lemons and oranges, or in fact, good for any kind of fruit raising; 80 acres of the above is fine alfalfa land. Irrigating water in abundance can be developed at not more than 40 foot lift. This property is only ½ miles from R.R. station and ½ miles from very fine full bearing orange orchards. Most of the land is in grain at this time, and purchaser will get one-fourth of the crop. Only two hours' ride from Los Angeles.

460 ACRES.

$30 PER ACRE.

A good stock and dairy proposition; 160 acres of very rich farming land, balance good pasture with clover and alfilaria in abundance. Plenty of domestic water developed, and irrigating water can be developed at nominal cost. All fenced and cross-fenced with three and four wires. Farm buildings are in fair condition. Only two miles from station, situated in Ventura county.

173 ACRES.

$9000.

All good land and in crop, which goes with the place, together with all improvements which goes with the place, together with all improvements, consisting of house, barns, good fencing, water plant, etc. Also good family orchard. This is situated in a good farming community and near a good town in Ventura county.

A SUBDIVISION.

$250 PER ACRE.

45 minutes from Sixth and Main.
Situated only one block from electric car line, every acre rich sediment soil, 300 inches of water developed for the land. This property is surrounded by lands in the highest state of improvement, mainly oranges, lemons and walnuts. This land is adapted to the same culture, which can easily be proven when seen.

There is no richer country in Southern California, one orange orchard having recently been sold for $2800 per acre. Three hours of your time is sufficient to look the property over, and I am sincere in saying that it is a proposition of excellent merit, and will readily net the purchaser 100 per cent. on the full purchase price, or in the neighborhood of 300 per cent. on the money actually invested.

BEAUTIFUL FRUITFUL

YORBA LINDA RANCHES.

Mr. Homeseeker or Mrs. Homeseeker, if you are looking for the cheapest in the real true meaning of the word go to Yorba Linda. There is only one price and that is the very lowest for which good land could be sold in that good locality. Yorba Linda is famed for bumper crops. The oranges grown there have a world-wide reputation. The home of the "Mission Brand," C. C. Chapman's famous ranch, said to be the largest and most valuable orange grove in the world, adjoins Yorba Linda ranches. Walnuts, fruits, vegetables of all kinds, alfalfa and all field crops, produce heavily there.

RAILROAD STATIONS ALL AROUND
YORBA LINDA.

Anaheim, Fullerton and Orange are within a radius of four to seven miles. Yorba itself is on the far-famed Kite-Shaped Track of the Santa Fe Railway. It is in the center of the great show spot, the orange grove section so well advertised in the leading magazines of the world. It is absolutely frostless. There is plenty of water. It is a bargain. You cannot afford to overlook at the price.

FOR SALE—
STRATHMORE (TULARE CO.)

Strathmore is a new town we have placed on the map. We locate it today by saying it is between Lindsay and Porterville; but it is not necessary to go to these towns to get here.

If, however, you start out for Strathmore and get held up at either of these towns, phone us (Farmer 137,) and we will send our teams for you.

Strathmore ought to have been a town long ago, but hitherto its development has been left in the hands of outside agents. You know how that works. They push their own towns first and last, and if they cannot please their customer, they would show him Strathmore lands as a last resort.

Why, would you believe some of the fellows actually wanted to buy up the whole townsite (40 acres,) and take it off the market; but the founders of this town won't sell town lots to speculators; if you buy, you must put up $1000 building within one year.

This is a lively little town. We have one large store here and P. O. I have heard the proprietor selling goods at 5:30 a.m., and keeps it up till 9 p.m. Why, he has hardly time to eat. Some days he takes in $100. The lumber man can't get lumber quick enough, the demand is so great. A builder here started a big barn Monday and finished it by Friday and put foundations in for a large ranch same day. We have got $3000 subscribed for a church, a large school and depot soon to be built. This is going some. We say, Reader, don't you think you ought to come at once? Yes, the time to come is right now. Get in on the ground floor. Don't get stuck on some of those old worn-out orange groves down south. The old experienced orange grower down south sells out and then comes and reinvests here.

Again we say come. Yes, come by yourself. You don't need to bring a L. A. real estate man with you. We have to show them. We prefer to show you and, dealing direct with us, you buy for less. We want to sell to the man who is going to live on the land and work it. If you happen to be back East when you read this ad., the most direct road to get here is U. P. Ogden and Sacramento. If you are in L. A. you can leave 5 p.m., get a through sleeper there for Strathmore direct, arriving here at 7:45 a.m. Railroad fare refunded land purchasers.

Now if it is a

Young orange grove you want, we can show you; if it is a full-bearing orange grove you want, we can show you; if it is orange land that produces perfect oranges you want, we can show you. If it is a fine town lot you want, we can show you.

FOR SALE—
MONEY GROWS
IN THE GULF COAST COUNTRY.

A few dollars saved each month by the industrious wage earner or frugal housewife means wealth, health, happiness and home comforts.

LET A SMALL FARM WORK FOR YOU.

Now-a-days a man cannot save enough from his labor during the productive years of his life to make him independent in old age. It is best for him to invest a portion of them in well selected land. One good investment of this kind is worth a lifetime of labor.

A 5-ACRE FARM FOR $5 A MONTH.

By our plan you can buy five acres or more of rich land at only $40 an acre, and pay for it $10 cash and $5 monthly. No interest. No taxes. Our special insurance plan insures you against loss in the event of sickness, accident or death.

Our land is located in the heart of the famous Texas Gulf Coast country. We are only about fifty miles from the city of Houston, having a population of more than 100,000. Our land is right on the line of the new Santa Fe cut-off, now in course of construction. A new railroad also to be built from near our land to Port Lavaca, on the Gulf of Mexico.

One of these five-acre farms, now selling at $40 an acre, properly cultivated, will be worth from $500 to $1000 an acre within the next ten years. More people going to this country than any other, and land values are increasing rapidly. Secure a farm now. Move on it immediately if you wish, and it w'l make you more money than California land. Or let it lie as a safe and sure money-making investment.

OUR GUARANTEE PROTECTS YOU.

Ask us about it. It protects you against misrepresentation of facts. It safeguards your investment. Write today for literature, or call.

WRIGHT & CALLENDER CO.

Are now handling country property, and invite your attention to the following list.

—$3000—

10 acres in beautiful Ontario, with water, not far below surface; ½ in apricots, 7 years old; a good location; cheap at $3000, but as owner is anxious to sell come in and make an offer.

—$2500—

20 acres in Cucamonga in the midst of fine homes and thrifty orange groves, with a good water right. This is the very cheapest place of orange land with water in a frostless and prosperous section.

—$10,000—

10 acres, solid to navels, in the foothills, at Glendora, surrounded by beautiful homes, with cheapest water in vicinity; 5-room house, barn, etc.; cement reservoir; a bargain if taken soon.

—$5500—

8 acres at Nordhoff, the gem foothill section of Ventura county, with a modern 9-room bungalow; garage, stable, artesian well, all surrounded by beautiful live oaks, ornamental trees, shrubbery, flowers, etc. The owner built this for a permanent home, but changes in business demand his removal, and will sacrifice for quick deal; this place cost over $3000 more than is now asked for it, and we do recommend this as a desirable buy for anyone seeking a nice home in a refined community.

—$6250—

320 acres of fine land, with good flowing well in Kern county; if you want cheap alfalfa land here it is.

—$7680—

640 acres, all level good soil; no hardpan; no alkali; no improvements; water at 250 feet to 500 feet; a fine section of good land that will grow anything.

We have good lands in all sections that are bargains. Come in and make your wants known and we can suit you both as to location and price.

FOR SALE—
TEXAS LANDS.
A few reasons why you should buy Texas lands of us. They are close to Corpus Christi, the county seat, and a flourishing town of about 12,000; good railroads and winter and summer resort. They are in the most productive section of Texas, near the bay and gulf, which means that the gulf breezes dispense life to vegetation and health to inhabitants; tempers the winter's cold and summer's heat. The high elevation permits no standing water to breed disease. Our land is wonderfully fertile and productive. Offers homes at moderate prices, investments assured good returns to holders. HOLLYWOOD—
For Sale, Exchange or Rent.

FOR SALE—10 ACRES OF THE CLOSEST in unsubdivided land in Hollywood. It is improved with good 6-room house and barn, splendid navel orange grove of 3 acres, many other fruit trees besides palms and other tropical trees for embellishment. It is absolutely frostless, and a real tropical place can be made of it. For a wealthy man's home site it cannot be duplicated, only two blocks from the cars, 4 blocks to the center; water, electric light and gas can be got on it as they are up to it now. It has magnificent view of the valley and mountains and ocean, and is above fog and dust, but easily accessible. Acreage on the first eminences of the hills is practically all gone, and you can't make a mistake in buying this either for investment or for a magnificent home site. A. W. CLEAVER, 214 Cit. Nat. Bank Bldg. 21

FOR SALE—

SOME REASONS WHY IT WOULD BE TO YOUR INTEREST TO KNOW US BETTER.

1. We have handled orange groves exclusively for three years.

2. We are sole agents only.

3. We have no cheap groves; there is no such thing.

4. All our properties are first class and worth the money.

5. We refuse more groves than we list.

6. All properties personally inspected.

7. We have sold $300,000 worth of property since October.

8. We have never sold a grove to a client which has not made him money.

9. A list of satisfied customers is on file in our office.

10. Our business is founded on the confidence of our former customers. It might pay you to join their ranks.

11. Every claim made by this office can be verified by an expert examination and by a report from the packing house or water company.

12. We have experienced local representatives.

13. We are the only Los Angeles agents handling orange groves exclusively, and give our undivided attention to the problems of the citrus fruit grower and aim to conserve your interests.

The following described groves are samples of our list of fifty choice properties:

2½ ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
Located on a corner, 2 blocks from electric line and considered the best paying small ranch in the district; 50 Valencia and 60 navels; all 16 years old; this small ranch will net $1500 to $2000 per acre. Best of cheap canyon water and soil. No improvements, but a beautiful corner to build on.
Price, including Valencia crop, $8000.

9¼ ACRES, HIGHGROVE, CAL.
Near Riverside. We can show you $2000 profit at once! Four acres in 16 year navels, balance cleared; good five room house. A nice home place which will cost you $4600 net.
$6500.

FIVE ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
16 year old navels, an A1 buy; just fertilized and fumigated; sidewalks and street work done; $1500 income; $2500 will handle this close-in grove. This is subdivision property at country price. A1 water. $8000.

5 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
Located on the electric line, and improved with a good 7-room California house; ½ Valencias, 6 years old, and ½ navels, 14 years old. This ranch will easily net $1200 to $1500 per year, and getting better every day; acre lots have been sold across the street from this place for $3500.
PRICE $9000.

19 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
6 acres navels, 1 Valencias, 7 years old; 3 acres Valencias, 2 years old; a fine young grove just coming into full bearing, and easily worth $15,000 in two years; 1-4 mile from car line; $4000 cash can handle this buy.
PRICE $10,000.

30 ACRES, HIGHGROVE, CAL.
2 miles from Riverside, 5 acres navels, balance sweets, all 16 years old, income over $3000; fertilized and in fine shape; 9-room $6000 house, in fine condition; hot and cold water under pressure; bath, etc., fine water right; and nice home place, for $5000 cash.
PRICE $30,000.

10 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
A very good bargain for some one; improved with a very pretty 5-room new house, barn, etc.; 5 acres Valencias and 5 acres navels; income $3000 and getting better as trees grow older.
PRICE $11,000—$4000 CASH.

6 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
4 acres Valencias; 2 acres navels, 16 years old; a fine little grove, on the car line; income $3000.
PRICE $12,000.

10 ACRES, RIVERSIDE, CAL.
Right in town, all matured trees; navels, Valencias, seedlings, $3500 income; 11-room modern house; owner will accept clear city improved for part of his equity, $4800; mortgage.
PRICE $12,500.

10 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
All 16 years old navels, 1-4 mile from electric line, seven-room California house, $3500 income; full water rights; the cheapest first-class grove in the district, $15,000.

26 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
Valencias, navels and lemons, all full bearing and in excellent condition; ranch should net $5000 per year; owner will take modern house in part payment, easy terms for balance.
PRICE $25,000.

20 ACRES, RIVERSIDE, CAL.
LOCATED NEAR VICTORIA DRIVE.
Absolutely the heaviest crop in the Riverside district is on this ranch. The income will net the owner this year over $8000.
2058 full-bearing trees, 8 to 10 years old; 8 acres Washington navels, 8 acres Thompson's Improved navels and 5 acres Valencias; Gage water, costing about $7 per acre a year.
Improved with a 5-room California house and barn.
PRICE, WITHOUT CROP, $26,000.

46 ACRES, GLENDORA, CAL.
Absolutely the finest foothill home on the market, adjoining the famous Judge Silent place on the west; 400 feet above main auto road; 1400 feet altitude; a home for a man of leisure who can appreciate a view for fifty miles in three directions. Twelve acres in full bearing navels, balance vacant but can be cultivated; good six room cottage; fine driveways, lawn, ferns, bridges, etc. Income from present orange crop will easily support this home.
$35,000.

20 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.
INCLUDING A $10,000 CROP
NOW ON TREES.
Half Valencias and half navels; all full bearing. This ranch has the heaviest crop in the valley. Could you live on $10,000 a year? Improved with a modern 8-room house, large barn, etc. Best of water rights and soil. Located between Glendora and Covina.
PRICE, INCLUDING CROP, $45,000.

FOR SALE—IMPORTANT SALE OF VALUABLE ORANGE GROVES, BY J. A. FITCH, POMONA, CAL. I'm in the main citrus belt of Southern California, Pomona, where for years I've been selling orange groves, ranches and Pomona realty. I've a big list of real estate for sale, many exclusive properties; orange and lemon groves in the best localities with good water rights. Thursday, 18th instant, there was placed exclusively in my hands for sale one of best and cheapest orange groves (location and water rights considered) in Southern California; location near Claremont, none better. I want to interest investors in this and other groves. I have for sale over thirteen inches Loop and Meserve water stock, estimated value $1500 the inch; "reservoir" capacity one and one-half million gallons, costing $6000. This grove comprises nearly sixty-eight acres, eleven acres of which is lemons, ten acres being Eurekas, 12 years old, in fine condition, with heavy crop, balance navel oranges, all in fine condition except about two acres; a large portion of this grove is 7 years old and large buds, balance 10 to 12 years old; part of orange crop has been picked, remaining crop —about 7000 boxes—to buyer if purchased soon. This grove should produce 20,000 boxes oranges coming season, and will materially increase each season. The owner, a wealthy and successful orange grower, is now approaching toward the end of life's journey, and having other large and extensive land and business interests has decided to close grove out; property clear; no trading proposition. Cash proposition only. At least $40,000 down, balance easy. Terms 6 per cent. Dwelling house, lemon house, barn, four horses, wagons, implements, etc., included. An opportunity for some one with money to buy a magnificent grove, which has never changed hands at a low price. Many other orange groves for sale. Get my late Realty Booklet at Times Information Bureau, 531 South Spring street, just issued.

10 GOOD LEMON ORCHARDS, 10.
1 IN SAN FERNANDO VALLEY, 1.
AND
9 AT SAN DIEGO, 9.
ALL FOR SALE CHEAP.

THE DUTY ON LEMONS will positively be increased at least ½ cent. per pound.

It is expected that the Senate will raise this duty to ½ cent per pound.

This will mean a large increase in earning capacity of lemon orchards, and prices of lemon orchards will necessarily advance largely in value.

If you want to make money, buy lemon orchards now.

The following properties have been investigated and recommended by the managers of one of our large fruit buying and shipping concerns.

The San Diego manager recommends the San Diego properties as being the best buys in his locality, either for speculation or investment.

FOR SALE—
AT SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA.

The Hale Ranch—20 acres in lemons, adjoining the city limits of San Diego, 2 1-5 miles from center of the city. This ranch is the greatest investment property that we know of in San Diego county.

This 20 acres in full-bearing lemons is in excellent condition, yielding over 10,000 boxes of lemons per annum. For years this orchard has been the most prolific producer of lemons in this section of Southern California, having had the reputation of yielding more summer lemons than any other orchard.

The lemons from this ranch can be contracted at $1.50 per hundred pounds for the next twelve months, which will guarantee more than a yearly net profit of $6000. A man of limited capital can purchase this property, knowing that it will pay for itself within a very few years.

Palms of twenty years' growth border the grounds, adding to the natural beauties of the location. The views are unsurpassed, as it lies high and level, with an excellent marine view of Point Loma and the Coronado Islands on one side, and a mountain view of rare beauty to the east.

AS A SUBDIVISION INVESTMENT
it is worth at the present time $1000 per acre.

The property lies high and level, and is absolutely frostless.

The water is supplied from the Sweetwater water system, and in addition to this, a pumping plant goes with the place.

PRODUCERS.

8½ ACRES, CORONA, CAL.

On Orange Heights, the orange district. 4 acres navels, 1 acre sweets and 4½ acres in lemons. This year's income $2500. Owner will accept clear city lots or clear improved for his equity. Mortgage $3000.

PRICE $11,000—A BARGAIN.

10 ACRES—SUNNYSLOPE, CAL.

Only 12 miles from Los Angeles on Monrovia car line. 700 navels, 95 Valencias, 3 rows seedlings; income $2000. The best buy in this subdivision district. Owner will trade for clear improved income property. This grove is clear.

PRICE $1800.

20 ACRES—WEST HIGHLAND, CAL.

In the famous Highland district. 7 acres navels, 6 lemons, 2 Sweets, 5 Valencias, all 12 years old. This grove is coming up; this year's crop $2500; next year close to $5000. This place was good enough to hold a $12,000 mortgage. Owner will trade his $9000 equity for city improved.

PRICE $21,000.

30 ACRES—COVINA, CAL.

Navels, lemons, Valencias; some vacant. This grove is just maturing and will pay a good income next year. New $3200 six-room bungalow, servants' house, team, cows, implements, gas plant, water under pressure; crop on trees included. Owner will accept modern city home, some cash, balance mortgage.

PRICE $25,000. CLEAR.

61½ ACRES—SPADRA, CAL.

Between Covina and Pomona. One of the finest young ranches in the State; planted to Valencias, navels, walnuts and alfalfa; alfalfa alone has paid over 10 per cent. net on price asked; fruit coming into bearing. A1 water right; modern six-room house, barn, horses, cows, chickens, implements. Situate on auto boulevard. Investigate this buy if you want a clean cut country property. Owner going abroad; will accept city improved, very small amount cash, balance mortgage.

PRICE $32,000. CLEAR.

20 ACRES—ORANGE, CAL.

Last, but not least, the show place of the county. Navels, Valencias. This place has paid 11 per cent. net for past ten years on price asked. 12-room house, 5 baths, strictly modern; beautiful grounds. Fireproof garage, cement tennis court. The exclusive home of a Los Angeles business man. Will take city improved, Hill, Olive, 6th, 7th, 8th or 9th sts., up to $75,000, and will assume or pay cash difference. FOR EXCHANGE—ORANGE GROVE.

Eighty acres within one mile of railroad station in the Porterville Early Orange District; improved as follows:

Seven acres of Washington navel oranges, bearing heavily, two acres olives, 10 years old, ten acres alfalfa, ten acres ready for alfalfa, ten acres ready for oranges, and forty acres of orange land. Gravity water for the alfalfa, three water wells 75 feet in depth, with water standing within fifteen feet of surface, one vertical centrifugal pump, and gasoline engine, one windmill and large tank, one two-story house, one large barn, chicken houses and yards.

The location of the house and grove is high and beautiful, and just the place for any person who wants to grow oranges. Will accept a nice bungalow at Glendale, Highland Park or near the ocean as part payment.

With ordinary care the present grove will pay interest on the whole purchase price. Price $12,500.

1000 acres of the best alfalfa or sugar beet land in the San Joaquin Valley to exchange for city property. This land is in a great artesian water belt, where they raise many crops each year, and near a good town and sugar beet factory.

Price from $65 to $100 per acre.

One business lot on Main street near Washington to exchange for an orange grove. The privilege of offering Main street frontage in exchange for anything is one seldom enjoyed by any agent. The price is $25,000.

$18,000 worth of income property on Figueroa street, free and clear, and some cash for an orange grove.

$30,000 worth of a corner business lot on one of the best business streets of Pasadena and cash, or two business lots on Colorado street and one fine residence lot in Pasadena with cash for an orange grove.

160 acres of the best Valencia or Washington navel orange land in the Porterville district so near the foothills and so free from frost that it would be an ideal place for grapefruit. Requires no leveling. Every ten acres on the tract has a fine building site. The whole 160 acres now in wheat. The property is free and clear. Will accept good property in Los Angeles, Pasadena or any pleasant town near Los Angeles for one-half the value of the land, and give three years on the balance. Will release any forty acre tract when sold. Price $100 per acre.

EDWARD MACDERMOTT'S SPECIALS.
Great News from 29 Palms District.
It is proving as I predicted.
One of the greatest gold camps of the world, bar none.
Watch the camp the next few months.
The nearest producing gold camp to Los Angeles. Have you any interests there? If not, get some. Like every good camp, it will have its wildcats, but if you are fool enough to buy them when you can get out and see for yourself, as it is only 180 miles from this city due east. The only companies of merit at present operating in the district are The Mohawk Herald, The Gold Palms Mining, Mercantile and Transportation Co., The Gold Park Consolidated, The Hexadron, The Italic Co., The German-American Co. But if you want information about any company there, see me. Do not buy stock in the 29 Palms Consolidated Co.; for reasons see me. But a good stock to buy is Gold Palms M. M. & Transportation Co. This company has all the elements of success; owns nine claims surrounding the Mohawk Herald; has fine showing, good management, clear titles, no debts; so buy Gold Palms M. M. & T. Co. at 22c per share.

Help us make another success; be our partner in legitimate mining. When such stocks are offered to you there is no need of buying bad ones. I will trade jewelry or other stocks for Gold Park Consolidated.

To brokers—The Probate Court has made me special appraiser for the following stocks of an estate. Make me cash offer on the same:

FOR SALE—
STOCKHOLDERS ANTI-FRICTION JOURNAL BOX COMPANY.

Did you buy your stock with the understanding that the company have a patent on a roller bearing? Are you aware that the large and small rolls, and the inner and the outer members, which are the fundamental essentials alone responsible for the results I secured on the Buffalo fan and the locomotive, are, and have for years been, public property? Have your board been honest with you and informed you that all you have a patent on is a slight differentiation, and not a roller bearing? Have they informed you that your so-called Flemming patent can be nullified at any time, owing to the existence of evidence that it is based on fraud? And that I, and not Flemming, was the originator of the convex and concave formation of track and ring, and the elimination of the shoulder on the track which was embraced in the faked Flemming application? And that I withdrew my own application in the interest of harmony and speed in the patent campaign? Have they also told you that the Green Lyons and Garey patent will not bear the spot light? And that it went to pieces in 12 hours' service under R. R. equipment? Have they told you that every dollar taken from you for stock with the understanding that they have a patent on the rolls which is all there is to Anti-Friction, constitutes the actionable offense of obtaining money under false pretense? Have they informed you that the bearing on which I have a good patent will do everything theirs will, and can be made for less money, and which I had always intended turning over to the company whenever you elected the right kind of a board, but refused to surrender under their grand-stand bluff of legal action?

There does not appear to be sufficient sense of justice among the entire lot of you to grant my reasonable request for a hearing, so I am compelled now to see that my friends in the East are advised of the actual situation. You should know that all royalty contracts employ the stability of patents for their corner stones, and you can rest assured the Standard Steel Car folks will never close with you. If you think this a bluff, call it.

STOCKS AND BONDS—
And Mortgages.

PARTNERS WANTED IN A NEVADA GOLD MINE. Legitimate mining is a business, not a gamble. We want the privilege of convincing you that our company is doing a legitimate mining business, developing a mine in one of the richest mining districts of this Golden State. We own a splendid property, well equipped with machinery; all paid for, and patented direct to the company. 2000 feet of underground workings in which a large tonnage of gold ore is now in sight. We need to put up a milling plant to treat our ore, and for that purpose are offering some treasury stock at 25 cents on the dollar. The company is managed by reputable business men; we want you to know who these people are and why they have confidence in this proposition. We want you as a partner on a fair, square and equal basis with the rest to join us in this meritorious enterprise, which promises great riches for all. This is no fake or wild-catting; our mine and our people will stand the closest investigation. Send for our illustrated booklet: "The Absolute Truth About a Nevada Gold Mine." Correspondence solicited. O. M. PUDOR, Secretary, Olinghouse, Nev. 21

WILL SELL FULLERTON OIL.
I advise the purchase of all of the well-known oil, industrial and bank stocks and other securities that have a ready market on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. The recent depression in local investments of value, makes it possible for purchasers to secure bargains. We are on the eve of an upward movement in all of the well-known stocks and bonds that are standard in this market.
Buy Union Oil on every break. The stock will have proved itself remarkably cheap at these prices during the next three months.

SECURITIES AND INVESTMENTS,
718 WRIGHT & CALLENDER BLDG.

BUSINESS TRANSFERS AND SALES AGGREGATING $26,000 WERE MADE DURING THE LAST SIX DAYS. THERE IS A REASON. ANYBODY DOING BUSINESS THROUGH ME IS GUARANTEED A CLEAR TITLE, AND IT IS A WELL-KNOWN AND ESTABLISHED FACT, THAT NOTHING BUT ABSOLUTELY LEGITIMATE PROPOSITIONS ARE EVER HANDLED IN MY OFFICE. BANKING AND CREDIT REPORTING AGENCY CONNECTIONS AFFORD ME OPPORTUNITIES FOR SECURING INSIDE INFORMATION, AND I CAN FIND OUT ALL THERE IS TO KNOW ABOUT ANY MAN, BUSINESS OR ENTERPRISE IN LOS ANGELES.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR SOME SAFE INVESTMENT, OR A BUSINESS OPENING OF ANY KIND, EITHER LARGE OR SMALL, SEE ME ABOUT IT, AND IF I HAVEN'T SOMETHING THAT YOU WANT, I WILL GET IT FOR YOU.

YOU ARE PROTECTED AGAINST MISTAKES IN EVERY INSTANCE, AND, IF YOU HAVE A PURCHASE OF A BUSINESS IN VIEW, IT WILL PAY YOU TO GET MY OPINION AND ADVICE BEFORE YOU CLOSE THE DEAL.

I HAVE SCORES OF CLIENTS ON MY LISTS WITH READY MONEY TO INVEST IN STORES, FACTORIES AND OTHER ENTERPRISES, BUT THEY DO NOT WANT TO, NOR WILL I ALLOW THEM TO, SPECULATE IN MISCELLANEOUS STOCKS, OR COMPANIES OF DOUBTFUL STANDING. A MAN HAVING $10,000 WOULD LIKE A PARTNER WITH THE SAME AMOUNT OF MONEY TO INVEST IN A BUSINESS WHICH WILL SHOW ENORMOUS RETURNS ON THE INVESTMENT. THIS IS A PERFECTLY LEGITIMATE DEAL, IN WHICH AN ACTUAL ASSET IS SECURED FOR EVERY DOLLAR EXPENDED.

HAVE YOU A DRUG STORE FOR SALE THAT WILL INVOICE ABOUT $5000? IF A GOOD ONE, AND IN THE RIGHT LOCATION, I HAVE A MAN THAT WANTS IT.

HAVE YOU A HARDWARE STORE THAT WILL INVOICE FROM $3000 TO $4000? THERE IS A CUSTOMER WAITING FOR IT IF IT WILL STAND INVESTIGATION.

HAVE YOU A FURNITURE STORE IN A SMALL TOWN NEAR LOS ANGELES? I CAN FURNISH A BUYER WITH $2500 OR MORE THAT WILL BE INTERESTED IN KNOWING ABOUT IT.

HAVE YOU A MANUFACTURING BUSINESS THAT IS A MONEY-MAKER? A WIDEAWAKE PROGRESSIVE MAN IS READY TO INVEST $2000 TO $2500. LET ME HAVE FULL PARTICULARS.

HAVE YOU A MANUFACTURING BUSINESS IN WHICH A FIRST-CLASS ANALYTICAL CHEMIST CAN INVEST $1500 WITH SERVICES? IF IT IS ALL IT SHOULD BE, WE CAN TALK BUSINESS.

HAVE YOU A MACHINE SHOP? IF SO, THERE IS A PRACTICAL MACHINIST WHO HAS $500 TO PUT INTO IT WITH HIS SERVICES. AUTOMOBILE SHOPS DO NOT INTEREST HIM.

DO YOU WANT A PUBLISHING PLANT? ONE OF THE LARGEST PRINTING AND PUBLISHING PLANTS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA CAN BE SECURED ON EXCELLENT TERMS. APPROXIMATE PRICE $35,000. ABOUT $9000 WILL HANDLE. THIS PLANT MADE $1800 NET IN THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY. ESTABLISHED SEVERAL YEARS. EVERYTHING PERTAINING TO IT OPEN TO THOROUGH INVESTIGATION.

DO YOU WANT A CLOTHING STORE? $15,000 IS THE PRICE ASKED, BUT HALF CASH WILL HANDLE. $12,000 NET WAS MADE IN THIS BUSINESS LAST YEAR. LONG LEASE.

DO YOU WANT AN AUTOMOBILE RENTAL BUSINESS THAT WILL PAY 100 PER CENT. ON TOTAL INVESTMENT THE FIRST YEAR? $12,500 IS THE PRICE, BUT $7000 WILL HANDLE. IT DOESN'T COST ANYTHING TO INVESTIGATE.

DO YOU WANT A DRUG STORE THAT IS DOING ON AN AVERAGE OF $1300 PER MONTH? IT WILL TAKE ABOUT $5000 TO BUY IT. GREAT CHANCE FOR A REGISTERED PHARMACIST.

DO YOU WANT A FIRST-CLASS GROCERY STORE LOCATED IN THE CENTER OF A THICKLY-SETTLED RESIDENCE DISTRICT IN SOUTHWEST PART OF THE CITY? SALES APPROXIMATE $3000 PER MONTH. WILL INVOICE FROM $3500 TO $4000.

THE FOREGOING ARE ONLY A FEW OF THE MANY EXCELLENT PROPOSITIONS LISTED IN MY OFFICE, AND IF I TELL YOU A THING ABOUT A BUSINESS, I KNOW, AND IT'S SO.

HIGHEST BANK AND COMMERCIAL REFERENCES.

ELEGANT— DRUG STORE.

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST CHANCE IN THE STATE. WILL SELL AT INVOICE, PLUS 10 PER CENT. FOR CASH, ONLY ABOUT $3600. BEST LOCATION, LEASE AND BRILLIANT FUTURE; $70 A DAY; BUSINESS CAN BE INCREASED TO $50. ADDRESS O, BOX 195, TIMES OFFICE. 21

WANT ONE OR TWO PARTIES WHO WILL invest from $2500 to $5000 each, to join in purchasing machinery and plant and to organize a company to engage in a new manufacturing business to be established in Los Angeles, which promises extraordinary and almost immediate returns. Parties will be guaranteed and secured 50 per cent. profit on their investment within one year. One position as manager at $150 per month, and another as secretary and accountant at $100 per month, is open to satisfactory parties who can invest money for the purpose of enlarging present plant. Business is of most staple character, and by reason of certain new developments an unusual opportunity is here presented. Over $100,000 net profit can be made within the next 6 months. Business is to be extended over the entire United States; practically a monopoly, and will appeal at once to the most conservative business man. Best of city references. No agents. Will deal with principals only, and only those who can make themselves known by reference to persons living in or about Los Angeles. For personal interview, address owner, O, box 88, TIMES OFFICE. 21

FOR SALE—
A REAL BUSINESS.

This is not a gold mine, not a get-rich-quick scheme, but a plain, plodding, legitimate manufacturing business.

Its product is used by every one, everywhere, and the demand for it is certain and constant. This business was founded by its present owners five years ago, and is fully equipped and established; a developed trade is offered, not a business "chance."

This business is not a monopoly, nor is it fabulously profitable, but as an example of its earning power under the poorest conditions the books show that it paid its owners good wages all last year, and, in addition, dividends of 1½ per cent. monthly on the invested capital, and as you doubtless know, last year was HARDLY a banner business year.

This business can be handled by one person, but it is finely adapted to a partnership, under which principle it is now being operated.

For reasons that will be given to those really interested, and who are able to buy if found as represented (and those unable will please not bother,) this business may be had now at practically invoice. $8000. This price includes lot, factory, machinery, tools, stock and accounts, entirely free from debt of any kind. Address L, box 194, TIMES OFFICE. 21

New Money

It is time the people of every community awoke from their Rip Van Winkle sleep and realize that the business of the immediate future must be drawn from co-operations with those who are developing the natural resources of the country. After all, the Mine, the Farm, the Sea, and the Forest are the only sources of real wealth, and the Mine supplies the only imperishable brand of such wealth.

Every dollar in gold and silver had to be mined in some way or other, and every dollar put in circulation helps to keep the wheels of this great nation turning. Every dollar in gold and silver that is mined is new money.

Would you like some new money? If so, help the Cal. Gold & Copper Co. build their new reduction plant on their property at Vontrigger, San Bernardino county, Cal. They have the goods. Office 319 San Fernando Bldg., 4th and Main sts., Los Angeles, Cal.

Respectfully,
CAL. GOLD & COPPER CO.

TARIFF.

HINTS OF WAR IN PAYNE BILL.

Continuation of Treaty With Cuba the Cause.

Foes of Measure Call This a Fatal Defect.

Other Difficulties in Way of Present Plan.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 20.—That the Payne tariff bill would bring about a great international tariff war if enacted, because of the section which continues in operation the Cuban reciprocity treaty, is one of the arguments that is being made against the measure.

It is urged that foreign countries which would otherwise agree to give the United States the benefit of their most favored nation clause in return for the minimum scale of duties provided for in the Payne bill, will contend that the Cuban reciprocity provision is the most favored nation clause of the American tariff, and will therefore refuse to enter into a low tariff agreement with this country.

There are other difficulties in the way of operating successfully a maximum and minimum tariff. Most European nations have special trade relations on certain products with their neighboring countries and it would be inconsistent for the United States to expect these nations to abrogate these agreements in order to get the benefit of our minimum duties.

OTHER DIFFICULTIES.

On the other hand, the framers of the Payne bill have designed the maximum tariff provisions in such way that virtually every country in Europe will be compelled to seek our minimum duties in time.

France is one of the countries that will be most affected by the maximum scheduled. The duties imposed by the present law on wines, liquors and spirits, are increased 40 per cent. in the maximum of the new bill, and this advance would seriously affect the importations from France of wines, principally on the low grades.

Italy and Spain, also, would feel the effects of these duties.

Germany now gives the United States nearly all the minimum duties of her tariff under the provisions of the German trade agreement; but unless she should offer to abrogate the agreement, and give this country all of her favorable duties, the maximum rates of the Payne Tariff Bill would apply. The German agreement provides that six months' notice of its discontinuance must be given by either country, but it can be abrogated by mutual consent.

DIFFERENCES IN RATES.

The Payne bill places a maximum duty of 20 per cent. additional on these articles: Chemicals, tobacco, agricultural products; silk and paper schedules, with the exception of coal-tar dyes and extracts for dyeing in the chemical schedule, for which there is no maximum rate of duty. The rates of the Dingley law are retained as maximum duties on pig iron, structural steel, steel billets, iron and steel plates, steel wires and numerous other iron and steel products. The maximum duties for the pottery schedule are 25 per cent. more than the minimum, and for the sundries schedule the increase is an addition of 25 per cent., ad valorem.

The flax and wool schedules have no maximum duties prescribed.

The principal articles on the free list, for which a 20 per cent. ad valorem is provided in the maximum schedule, are coffee, crude natural camphor, drugs for dyeing and tanning hides; iron ore, oils, including petroleum; tallow and tobacco stems.

BUSY WITH EXCHANGES.

Henley, Halfhill & Nicklin report the following list of exchanges: For W. H. Young, ten-acre improved ranch near Santa Ana, value $4500, to C. W. Bateman for the property at Nos. 3716-3718 McClintock avenue, consisting of two five-room cottages, on lot 45x140 feet, value $4500. For Ambrose F. Fishering, four lots in Huntington Park, improved with a modern six-room cottage. Ground space 200x150 feet, value $6500; also five acres at Moneta avenue, value $2500, for ten-acre walnut ranch near Anaheim, valued at $7500; difference was paid in cash. The Orange County Realty Company assisted in the deal. For Miss Eva Wilson, a six-room modern cottage, located at No. 3764 East Fifth street boulevard; lot 40x130 feet, value $3500, to T. K. Hulme for three lots in Grider and Hamilton's Hollywood tract, 50x150 feet each, valued at $2400.

For William R. Windheim, a ten-acre partly improved ranch at Hansen station, on the Santa Ana line, valued at $3000, to James L. Griffin, for new model H Cadillac, 1908, valued at $2250, even trade. For McMannon Investment Company, a modern ten-room residence at No. 1000 East Adams street, on lot 65x150 feet to fifteen-foot alley, and also the five-room cottage in rear, rented at $15 a month, value $13,500, to W. H. Young for the Hemlock Apartments at No. 772 Hemlock street, containing twenty-eight rooms, two stories, on lot 40x120 feet, valued at $13,500. An even trade was made on this.

WINTER RHUBARB PLANTING.

The Joseph R. Loftus Company is going ahead with work on the Perry Villa tract, and is making contracts for grading some forty acres nearest the station for the purpose of putting in crimson winter rhubarb. The object is to get this crop planted in time so that the rhubarb will be large enough to market next winter.

This company's greatest success has been along the lines of improving country lands by putting in crops that will bring the purchaser good substantial returns rather than subdividing and selling raw lands. At its Monrovia Acres tract it has sold all of the improved land which includes something over fifty acres of crimson winter rhubarb. The purchasing public does not seem to be interested until it sees the land in crop with the prospect of securing returns at an early date.

SALES AND EXCHANGES.

To Myron W. Holcomb, thirteen lots in Lewis Figueroa Street tract, between Figueroa and Hoover, at Forty-ninth Place, consideration reported at $750 each. Mr. Holcomb will erect modern bungalows on these lots at once. To Josephine Goldenbee, the modern five-room cottage at southwest corner of Twenty-ninth and Walton, on lot 67½x125 feet, for $4500. Adolph C. Scheske takes the residence formerly belonging to Mrs. Goldenbee at No. 950 East Pico, containing six rooms, on lot 40x150 feet, in exchange for his equity. To an eastern investor for Dr. Henry Schmitt, the northeast corner of Pasadena avenue and Avenue 26, an irregular shaped lot, with nominal improvements, consideration named $9500. To De Forrest F. Tuttle, lot on Sixty-fifth street near Moneta avenue, in Winton McLeod's tract, for $575.

"TIMES" AD. SELLS.

The Sayer-Thompson-Irons Company reports sales as follows: Mrs. Adelle Kreader, of Vinton, Iowa, from Mrs. Ada Rowe, an eight-room frame house, with 50-foot lot at No. 1113 Burlington street, in the Westlake district, for $5500. Mrs. Kreader will occupy the property as a home. The same firm also sold a two-story modern house of nine rooms, on Kingsley drive, in the Wilshire district, for D. M. Bushey to Winifred D. Beall for $5300. Mrs. Beall bought this house for a home. As evidence of the demand for such property in this location, it was advertised in Wednesday's Times and sold on Thursday.

SALE AT INGLEWOOD.

Sales reported by the Inglewood Rancho Company as follows: Two acres on Grevellia street, Maud Biegler, $1100; six acres on Eucalyptus avenue, William L. Register, $3150; one acre on Fir street, Fred Wilcox, $550; two acres on Inglewood avenue, Jennie Newton, $950; three acres on First street, J. H. Beatteay, $1575; four acres on Eucalyptus avenue, James H. Murphy, $2000; one acre on Grevellia street, Myron Murgittroyd, $550; five acres on Cedar street, Freeman Bloodgood, $2300; one acre on Market street, John I. Lorentz, $600; two acres corner Palm and Oak streets, George Dellistone, $875.

BUYS CLOSE-IN ACREAGE.

T. L. O'Brien & Co. report the following sales: T. E. Cleland to Revel J. Noyes, twenty acres on Western avenue, one and one-fourth miles north of Moneta, being part of the Dunn ranch, for a consideration of $7500. Warren Wilson to Maggie Stewart, the property at No. 121 West Thirty-third street, consisting of a five-room cottage, on lot 48x70 feet, for a consideration of $2000. Peter W. Muller to E. A. and W. A. Bradley, the property at No. 118 West Fifty-third street, consisting of a five-room cottage, on a lot 50x130 feet, for a consideration of $2800.

BUYS LA VERNE GROVE.

The following sales are reported by the W. T. Michael & Son Realty Company: R. A. Rominger of Long Beach to B. L. Barnett of Whittier, fourteen acres of oranges and lemons at La Verne, no buildings, for a cash consideration of $15,000. For W. M. Mabry of Colorado to S. H. Bell of Whittier, ten-acre orange and lemon grove near San Dimas, with small house, for $10,000. C. E. Greaser of Pomona to R. E. Newbarth of Chico, eleven acres of 2 and 41year-old trees at La Verne for $11,500. H. R. Schisler to S. C. Rees of Pasadena, ten-acre full-bearing navel orange grove, no buildings, for $15,000.

BIG PRICE FOR ACRE.

Edwin G. Hart Co. has sold a lot on the south side of Huntington Drive, opposite the new H. E. Huntington residence, for $3500. The lot, over an acre, is planted to Valencia oranges, with small buildings in the rear. T. N. Stitt of San Diego is the seller and A. M. Morgenthaler the purchaser. Mr. Morgenthaler is the western representative for a large eastern house dealing in tapestries, etc.

The McCarthy Company is just finishing up more than half a mile of street work in the Florence Avenue Heights tract, cement sidewalks and curbs on Seventy-third, Seventy-fourth, Vermont avenue and Hoover street now being completed.

HIS STRANGE CAREER.

Eventful History of a Massachusetts Man Found in Want on Street in Los Angeles.

Daniel Driscoll, 66 years of age, of Brockton, Mass., who was found wandering about the streets of Los Angeles, Friday morning, was given temporary home at the County Poor Farm, yesterday.

Local authorities are trying to arrange for his transportation to his home in the East. His relatives were communicated with by wire, and replied that they are unable to pay his fare.

The old man's wife, Mrs. Carrie Driscoll, is seriously ill at the home of her son-in-law, in Brockton, and has not been told of the predicament of her husband.

Driscoll's history during the past few years has been eventful. Joseph Albert Driscoll, his son, says that, seven years ago, while working in Brockton, as a lineman, his father suffered from a sunstroke and fell from a telegraph pole, injuring his head.

Since that time, Driscoll, senior, has wandered all over the country, and has lived in various places under different names. At intervals he forgot all about his past, but when memory returned he usually went back to his home and family.

About three years ago his son found him standing, lightly clad and shivering, on a street in New Bedford, Mass. He was taken care of but soon again disappeared. He was next heard of in Mexico, where he was wounded in a shooting affray. Later, he lived in Midland, Tex., where he was employed as a watchman in the City National Bank.

"I don't see how we can help father," wired the son yesterday. "We have all we can do to look after ourselves."

GUARDSMEN DISAPPOINTED.

Share of Circus Proceeds Not Equal to Expectations—Need More Cash for Armory.

Both the National Guardsmen and the owners of the Greater Norris and Rowe show were disappointed at the financial outcome of the four days' benefit performances which closed last night. The guardsmen did not lose anything by the venture, but their share of the proceeds fall far short of their expectations.

Assistant Adjutant-General Follmer, who devoted much of his time to boosting the enterprise, said, last night, that he could not account for the small attendance at the performances. In a letter to H. S. Rowe, he acknowledged the efforts put forth by the owners of the show to make the Los Angeles engagement a success and expressed his appreciation of the fact that they had lived up to their contract in every respect.

The guardsmen are not discouraged and will continue their efforts to get the money needed for an armory. The sum appropriated by the Legislature will not pay for the furnishings and equipment needed by the various organizations that will occupy the building.

The Norris & Rowe show left, early this morning, for San Diego where it will remain two days for the benefit of the Knights of Pythias. It will then visit San Bernardino and Riverside, under the auspices of the Elks' lodges of those cities.

TROWEL GOING SKYWARD.

Celebrated Masonic Traveler to Be "Guest" in Chicago Man's Balloon. Ascent at Hollywood.

Having tried the climate at Salton Sea and on the summit of Mt. Lowe, the famous traveling trowel, which is now in the custody of Los Angeles Masons, will make an aërial voyage tomorrow.

It will be a "guest" in the balloon "Chicago," owned by Col. Charles A. Coey of the "Windy City," who, with his wife, will be a passenger. Capt. Bumbaugh of Indianapolis, one of the pilots of the Aëro Club of America, will manage the big bag, which, when filled with gas, stands as high as a ten-story building.

The ascension will be made from a vacant lot in East Hollywood, near the corner of Prospect avenue and Rosetta street, and the trip will not end until nightfall, according to the plans of the aëronauts.

Col. Coey shipped the balloon to this city with the intention of trying to make a transcontinental journey in it, but in the two weeks he has been here conditions have not been favorable, and he is soon to return East because of pressing matters of business. In the autumn, however, he expects to again visit Los Angeles, and sail the bag to the Atlantic Coast, wind and weather permitting.

PAPER FLOWERS CASE.

Alleging that the Auditorium Amusement Company owes her $115, Miss Martha Taylor yesterday swore out an attachment against the box office and the papers were served in the afternoon. The constable collected $150, which will be held by Justice Summerfield, pending the settlement of the case. Attorney H. H. Roser represents Miss Taylor, who is a flower manufacturer. She says she made 5000 paper flowers, which were used in the production of "Babes in the Woods" and that she has never received a cent in payment.

RETAIL DRUGGISTS FEAST.

The fourth annual banquet of the Los Angeles Retail Druggists' Association will be given Wednesday evening at 8:30 at the Delmonico restaurant, No. 351 South Hill street at $1.25 a plate. The druggists look forward to this occasion each year for a good time to see their friends and meet their salesmen, and learn to know each other better. The Entertainment Committee consists of G. A. Lewis, chairman; B. C. Ansley, B. E. Porter, W. Deithead and H. Talbut of the salesmen's auxiliary. There is expected to be a number of druggists from the neighboring cities and towns.

NORMAL BIBLE CLASS.

Under the auspices of the Church Federation, Prof. John C. Hill of the University of Southern California will commence, on the first Saturday in April, the instruction of a class of Sunday-school teachers at the Young Women's Christian Association. The class will meet at 3 p.m., and will be free to all teachers.

WILL DRILL FOR OIL

At Bairdstown.

The O'Kell Core Drill Company have a rig on the property belonging to Mr. Evans, they having obtained a lease on 160 acres. Drilling operations will begin Monday, and they look to encounter oil at a depth of 1500 feet. It is claimed that this drill, which is patented and manufactured in Los Angeles, will revolutionize the oil business, as their patent core barrels will cut the hardest shales or granite at the rate of three feet per hour and bring up the solid cores of rock. It is claimed of this combination machine that but one string of casing is used, thereby saving vast sums of money, both in time and material, to do this class of work, over the methods now being used with standard rope tools.

Piano for Prominent Church.

The Musical Committee of the Broadway Christian Church, after testing many other high-grade standard makes, purchased the Frank B. Long piano for exclusive use in their edifice. Score again for the "the unequaled in tone."

COUNTRY SALES ARE NUMEROUS.

Demand Active Throughout Southern California.

Redlands Groves Attract Wealthy Tourists.

Pomona, Azusa and Monrovia Also Represented.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

REDLANDS, March 20.—The sale of land, orange acreage being in the lead, and the buying and building of homes continue to be active. Building operations are steadily on the increase, according to reports of lumber dealers and of contractors, despite the fact that building materials are also on the jump to top notch prices. The retail price of lumber has increased from about $4 to $5 per thousand feet, rough lumber now selling at $29 per thousand feet, base price. However, the dealers report that they are figuring on many more structures, most of which are dwellings, and that every day inquiries are received requesting the price of wood stuffs. Most of the houses now under headway and being planned for are of unusually high class.

One of the largest real estate deals of the year was closed Wednesday when C. B. Hoadley sold his thirty-acre grove at the corner of Church street and Colton avenue for a consideration of $30,000. The name of the purchaser has not been made public. The grove is one of the finest properties in the entire Redlands district, the trees being uniform and heavy bearing, the crop for several years having ranked with the best bearing groves. There are about ten acres of Valencias, three of St. Michaels and the remainder is set to navels. There is a small cottage, good ranch barn, cement flumes and the property is in excellent condition. It faces on Colton and Brockton avenues, Church and Post streets, and is valuable for residence sites at any time.

J. Halles has sold to Theodore O. Johnson of the City Transfer Company his twenty-six-acre grove at East Highland for $20,000. The grove is known as the L. H. Cooper grove, having been bought by Mr. Halles from Mr. Cooper only recently. It is a choice property. Fifteen acres are planted to navels, two to seedless grapefruit and the remainder is all ready for planting to citrus fruit. With the property goes eight shares of Bear Valley water. Mr. Johnson will at once begin planting the remainder of the tract to orange trees. He already owns a fine grove in Redlands.

F. G. Smith has sold to Hale Grettenberg ten acres of Valencias on the Williams tract. The trees are 4 years old and are in perfect condition. The property carries a double water right. The consideration was $12,000. Mr. Grettenberg came to Redlands about a year ago from the East and he now owns three fine groves, having purchased last fall the Cutts place of eleven acres on East Citrus avenue, and the Fisher grove of ten acres on West Olive avenue. The Valencia grove just purchased will be held as an investment.

A. J. Wilson has sold to S. L. C. Hall a ten-acre orange grove on West Citrus, the price received being $12,000. The ranch is known as the "old Mansfield place." Seven acres are planted to old navel trees in good bearing and the remainder has younger trees also in good bearing. There is a house and barn and other buildings.

Lots are selling rapidly in Alvarado Terrace addition. The plat was filed only Wednesday of this week, and several lots already have been sold. Good homes are to be built at once. Every lot is sold with an alignment clause of thirty feet and building restrictions of $3000. Poles for wires of all kinds will be in the alleys and the street will be made as attractive as possible. I. G. Davis has purchased two lots, on which he will erect a handsome home. A. H. Holgate has purchased one lot, and another was bought by C. W. Miner. Charles H. Hawkins purchased a lot on the corner of Cypress and Alvarado. Mr. Wilkins will erect a splendid house, and Mr. Holgate already has the plans for a $3000 residence to be put on his lot.

WANT COUNTRY HOME.

NEWCOMERS BUY AT MONROVIA.

MONROVIA, March 20.—A brisk demand for attractive homes has been a notable feature in the real estate market for the past week. More than $18,000 has been invested by home seekers in Monrovia holdings in that period.

Real estate men report as follows:

G. S. Stone has sold for P. E. Hatch to Mrs. John F. Henry of Brooklyn, N. Y., a lot 122x307 feet, on North Primrose avenue, improved with a modern five-room bungalow for a stated consideration of $5000. The same dealer acting for L. P. Miller, sold a lot 51x172 feet on South California avenue, improved with small California bungalow to Henry Scott of Los Angeles, for a consideration of $1100.

F. N. Hawes sold to James M. Petrie, a lot 100x150 feet, on North Encinitas, improved with an eight-room residence. The consideration was [illegible].

W. C. Ramsey sold to Miss Down of Los Angeles, a lot 50x150 feet on South Charlotte avenue, improved with a five-room bungalow, for a consideration of $2500. C. J. Jacobs sold to R. C. Jenkins, a lot 50x150 feet on Concord avenue, improved with a six-room residence, for a consideration of $2700. Harvey Williams sold to J. A. Miller, a lot 50x150 feet on East White Oak avenue, in the Oak Park tract, unimproved, for a stated consideration of $500. John Bardill of Los Angeles, has purchased a lot 50x150 feet, on East orange avenue, improved with a six-room residence for a stated consideration of $2000.

FINE GROVE SOLD.

NORTH CAROLINA MAN BUYS.

AZUSA, March 20.—H. E. Bonner reports the sale of a ten-acre Valencia orange grove and a ten-room house near Azusa for C. C. Peters to R. L. Bonner of Washington, North Carolina, who will move to Azusa as soon as he can arrange his business affairs. The consideration was $22,000.

J. C. Durrell has traded forty acres of land at Corcoran, with J. H. Scott of Los Angeles, for a house and lot, two blocks from Slauson Junction. J. R. Eldred reports the sale of a ten-acre orange grove for Mrs. E. E. Burdick of San Dimas, to W. E. Sitton of Los Angeles.

IN NEAR-BY SUBURB.

BUILDING LOTS IN DEMAND.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 20.—The A. C. Ong Company reports the following recent sales: S. E. Sturgis of Los Angeles to George Graham of Berkeley, lot 50x150 feet, on Rollins street, between Fair Oaks avenue and Fremont, for $1100. Mr. Graham will improve this property with a modern six-room bungalow.

O. A. Blattner to William Kerr, an eastern man, who is spending the winter in Pasadena, a lot 60x110 feet, at No. 1620 Mission street, improved with a modern eight-room house, for a consideration of $4600.

A. B. Paddock of Rialto to Ida A. Brainerd of Los Angeles, a lot 60x140 feet, at the corner of Hope and Park streets, for $1250. Miss Brainerd will improve this lot later in the spring. A. E. C. Lanning of Boston to Frank E. Burk of Pasadena, a lot 56x150 on Oxley street, between Park street and Marengo avenue, for $900. Mr. Burk will improve with a modern house immediately.

Another large real estate deal has been closed in the sale of the corner of Mission and Fair Oaks avenue. William Everett has sold the northeast corner, with a frontage of 52 feet on Fair Oaks avenue, and 162 feet on Mission street, to Charles W. Manwaring for $6000. Mr. Manwaring will not improve this property at present.

NORTHERN GROWER BUYS.

BIG DEAL IN RANCH.

SANTA ANA, March 20.—In the last two weeks there has been much inquiry for real estate, and more cash sales have been made than there has been in three or four years for any like period. Realty men say this indicates a steady forward movement in the real estate market here. Along with the increased interest in realty there is a very decided increase in building.

One of the biggest deals in ranch property this week was the sale of the eighty-six acres north of Tustin by George Nay and W. R. Hillyard to Charles Bordston of Porterville. The price paid was $43,000. Bordson is a prominent orange grower at Porterville. The ranch he buys here has forty acres in oranges and lemons. Most of the remainder is grain land. Bordston will put in a large pumping plant.

C. C. Collins, a fruit packer, sold his twenty-acre orange orchard, south of Olive to Reed & Breenmead. Jesse Densmore of Santa Ana has bought a twenty-five-acre walnut orchard north of Santa Ana from Mrs. Martha Shaffer. Dr. Robinson of Riverside, who is locating here, this week paid $6000 for Rev. C. A. Young's residence on North Main street.

Three contracts for handsome residences have just been let. C. M. Jordan has the contract for building a $4600 story-and-a-half bungalow at No. 708 Spurgeon street. N. Beaumont has the contract for a story-and-a-half frame residence at No. 311 Cypress for Mrs. L. G. Kendall to cost $3900, and C. R. Davis has the contract for a $3000 residence for L. Eckley, at No. 1012 North Broadway.

DEMAND AT POMONA.

WEEKS SALES ARE NUMEROUS.

POMONA, March 20.—The demand for realty in and about Pomona continues active. In the last week numerous sales have been reported. On Monday, Luman Rutty sold his thirty-acre alfalfa ranch on South Garey avenue to M. Fox, a recent arrival from Iowa, through the agency of Hewlett & Son for $12,000.

J. A. Fitch, has sold his house and three lots on West Eighth street to J. W. Cropper, who will occupy the property as a home as soon as Mr. Fitch and family move into their new home on Holt avenue.

The J. A. Fitch agency also sold to Thomas Rattray of Hollywood the five-acre orange grove of H. W. Hawkinson of Upland for $7700. To the Baptist Church the property of Mrs. Cyrus Burdick, 82x200 feet on Garey and Holt avenues for $12,500.

E. J. Collins has sold his twelve-acre orange grove to John Ditty through the agency of W. M. and C. K. Short for $18,000. Mr. Ditty will build a home on the property.

Mrs. M. O'Neill and W. A. Johnson have purchased five lots on Huntington boulevard, in the Ganesha Park tract, and Arthur L. Wright has sold to A. J. Charle, a house and lot on East Center street for $1550.

The Pomona Implement Company is preparing to build a business block at the corner of Third street and Garey avenue. A new block also is talked of for the corner of Third and Thomas streets and the erection of two new business buildings on Second street are contemplated.

G. M. Simpson has bought of R. S. Persons the lot on Third street, east of the Fraternal Aid Theater and plans erecting a two-story building there.

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY.

NEW TROLLEY LINE REASON.

CLAREMONT, March 20.—There has been unusual real estate activity in this vicinity during the past week, many transfers having taken place. The activity in city property is ascribed largely to the proposed trolley line, connecting Claremont with Pomona, and eventually Los Angeles, upon which it is expected that work will be begun within a few months.

The following sales were made by C. C. Johnson & Company. Stoddard Jess to J. Bacon, three lots at the corner of College avenue and Eighth streets, for a consideration of $1500. O. W. Lloyd to Prof. F. A. Bacon, a lot at Eleventh and Columbia streets for a consideration of $455. C. M. Fenner to J. N. Roof, a lot on North Harvard for a consideration of $475. Lewis C. Lloyd to L. J. Bacon, two lots on Eleventh, between Harvard and College for a consideration of $475. O. K. Lloyd to J. N. Roof, a lot on College and Mesa for a consideration of $525. E. D. Bradley sold one lot on First street for $350. Dr. G. E. Hopkins, who recently purchased from Mrs. F. A. Bacon three lots on Columbia near Eighth, plans to erect two residences upon the property at once.

APPLE LANDS SELL.

Planting of Trees Is Keeping Pace With Selling at Beaumont—Agricultural Experts Praise.

Through extra effort on the part of the sales department, deals aggregating $8300 for Beaumont lots and lands were closed during the week. Two excursion parties were taken to Beaumont on Sunday and Thursday and, despite a heavy rain on the latter date, several important transactions were concluded.

J. W. Lambert of Arizona took twenty acres in Cherry Valley West for $2750 and will plant apples. H. W. Dusenberre of Pittsburgh bought twenty acres at $3600 and will set out trees at once. J. C. Church bought twenty acres in section 28 for $1400, and will use the land for diversified farming. Each of the buyers expects to make substantial improvements in the way of buildings in the near future.

Planting is keeping pace with land selling. During the week two carloads of eucalyptus trees were received by the Van Velzer Nursery Company. G. L. Reed finished planting fifteen acres to apples and peaches. Horticultural development has been greatly encouraged through the Southern Pacific demonstration train, which stopped to give lectures on Wednesday. The assurances given by the experts in the party regarding Beaumont's future as an apple-growing center have greatly stimulated this branch of development. The lecturers gave positive assurances that Beaumont was the best apple-growing section in this part of the State.

A large amount of cement sidewalks are now being laid on Eagan avenue and Fifth street.

ARIZONA.

FILES FULL AS SESSION ENDS.

Legislature Adjourns After All-Night Bout,

Many Pet Schemes Fail to Become Laws.

Appropriations Big Despite Heavy Pruning.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 19.—While the clocks marked ten minutes to midnight and the members' watches said it was 7 o'clock the next morning, the Twenty-fifth Legislature of Arizona adjourned and the members wearily went downtown and had breakfast. For about twenty-two hours there had been almost continuous session, yet with relatively little done for the time expended. But the enrolling and engrossing clerks had been working overtime for days and scores of bills had been hustled down to the Governor, far more than he could consider and digest. Yesterday afternoon the houses, with the committee files full of bills and the Speaker's desk overflowing, made a desperate plunge and indefinitely postponed all matters not already before them.

The night was spent almost wholly in a quarrel between the two houses over a bill for improvements in the various public institutions. The Council cut it down and the House at one time even threatened to adjourn without any appropriation rather than approve of the iniquitous pruning that had been done over in the south chamber. But the bill finally was agreed upon, with cuts in most of the appropriations asked for, including $40,000 from the Benson Industrial School, $15,000 from the Flagstaff Normal and $6000 from the university building fund.

PLANS AWRY.

A number of the members were sore over the failure of pet schemes, and about the sorest was Councilman Weedin. Weedin had one bill on which he had set his heart and which he believed would transform his home valley into a garden spot. This was to be done by applying the provisions of the Carey act to Arizona. The bill failed of approval last night, the Governor finding that no legislative foundation had been laid on it, though he approved in general of the purposes.

Then it was that Weedin's pent-up wrath burst forth, in a fiery speech about 5 a.m. He denounced the Executive bitterly, though he said that respect for the Council forbade full expression of his views. He then introduced a resolution condemnatory of some report which stated that a large majority of the people of Arizona wished the retention of the present Governor, and he thought that the resolution was passed by five Democrats of the eight votes represented in the chamber at the time. Then Weedin was invited over to the Assembly to watch for the appearance of the resolution there and President Hunt and the Council proceeded to expunge it from the records.

WHAT IS A DEMOCRAT?

The Democratic caucus throughout the session has been very captious in its definition of what constitutes a Democrat. It even sought to read out of the party J. J. Riggs, citizen member of the Territorial Board of Control—whom it yesterday confirmed in his office, after a session of adverse threats. Yesterday it objected to the Bourbon brand on Judge Henry T. Andrews of Prescott, who had been selected by Gov. Kibbey to be attorney and Democratic member of the newly created Territorial Railroad Commission and his nomination was rejected by a vote of 6 to 6. The Governor, accepting the judgment of the Council on what constitutes a Democrat, then sent in the name of George J. Stoneman of Globe, son of ex-Gov. Stoneman of California, and all became serene for a brief space of time.

It is notable that not an anti-railroad bill got through the Legislature, though many were introduced cutting down rates and otherwise harassing the common carriers. On the contrary, almost the last bill that went down to the Governor provided for tax exemption for ten years for railroads which should commence construction within fifteen days. This move was stated to be in the interest of a Southern Pacific line to Buckeye, from Phoenix, but now is assumed to also favor the Southern Pacific extension from Winkelman to San Carlos, in which a survey party has been started. There is some suggestion, as well, of a Phelps-Dodge line from Benson northward into the Mammoth and Pinal county copper fields and, possibly, to Phoenix.

JOKERS NIPPED.

Several mild little jokers appeared in the course of legislation, but it is believed that all were spotted in the many vetoes with which the Governor honored the Legislature. One act authorized the Randolph or other roads to control branch lines in foreign countries. Apparently by inadvertence, in this bill was left out a little paragraph of the present law, of which the elimination would have served as Territorial authority for the acquisition of the Phoenix and Eastern railroad by the Southern Pacific—a material point in view of the scrutiny lately made of this transaction by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Something not intended by a majority of the legislators is an act which lifts all municipal and county taxation from telegraph and telephone lines, leaving taxes only to be paid to the Territory. This will give the Territory a little larger share, but will save the companies about half their present tax costs.

The appropriations, despite the pruning of the Council, will amount to about $650,000. In a nutshell, it will become necessary for the Territory to levy a tax of about 1 per cent. on the assessed valuation, an increase of 25 cents on the $100 over the present rate. This is in addition to the county and municipal taxes, which now amount to as high as 4 per cent. in some places.

IN THE SCRAP PILE.

Of keenest interest to the liquor dealers of Phoenix was the segregation bill, which permitted separate local option elections in towns. Gov. Kibbey vetoed one segregation bill and a second promptly was passed along the lines he suggested. This he signed last night, after the saloon men had passed a most uneasy day. A local option election is to be held soon in this county of Maricopa and without segregation the balance of the county would have forced prohibition upon the capital city.

Home Tonic for Old People

After reaching the age of forty the human system gradually declines in virility and strength and becomes less able each year to combat sickness. It is then that the accumulated poisons in the blood make themselves manifest by rheumatic pains in the joints, muscles and back.

Wonderful results, eventually restoring full physical vigor, are obtained from the following: To one-half pint good whiskey add one ounce syrup sarsaparilla and one ounce Toris compound, which can be procured from any druggist. Take in teaspoonful doses before each meal and before retiring.

Lady Washington 20 CENTS

The most commendable Oil Stock of the year. A favorable opportunity to make a safe, sane, sure, quick and profitable investment in a "PROVEN GROUND" OIL COMPANY

In Oakland, California, there is a man who used to be a railroad brakeman. His income was less than one hundred dollars a month. This man invested a small portion of his savings, less than two hundred dollars, in California oil, and today he is one of the most influential citizens of that city; not only is he influential, but he is a millionaire. Money made his influence. With money he was able to travel, able to absorb an education and become the prominent member of society that he is today. This same opportunity is open to any man with the earnest desire to become better situated in life. Any man or woman with a little courage and a little cash can conscientiously invest in a good oil stock and have open before them just the same identical opportunity that this Oakland multi-millionaire had when he first invested. Not that every man who invests a few hundred dollars in oil will become a millionaire, but the chances are greater in an oil investment than in any other industry known. Every man or woman who reads this advertisement, if he or she will stop and think for a moment, should readily call to mind a number of acquaintances, or people they know by reputation who have made their start in life or whose fortunes were founded on the oil industry of California. It is a reasonable wager that in your very block, or in the very building in which you may have offices, that there is some one who has at one time or other invested in the magic money-making possibility of oil and who is today reaping the rewards of their forethought and courage. The very building in which you are housed may have been paid for by oil profits.

Most merchants and manufacturers, most men who are successes in mercantile lines, are men who do not invest in outside enterprises as a rule. They leave the cotton market alone. They do not speculate in Wall street. But in California it would be hard to find a successful merchant or manufacturer who is not at present or who has not been in the past interested in oil. The success of his business is not wholly due to his acute business ability in his given line, but to the fact that he was able to utilize more capital than his competitor without borrowing, and this money that made his business, and made his success, was gained by his investment in oil. These are facts not generally known, but it would not take much effort on your part to determine the truth of this statement. Just ask your banker or anyone acquainted with the doings of California finance, and they will coincide with these statements to the letter.

Investment in oil stocks in a proven territory, in a company that is actually operating and drilling wells on proven ground carries no element of chance. It is an out and out investment that is bound to and will result in a profit to the investor, and this profit will be no mean one. The Lady Washington Oil Company offers today a possibility that is seldom met with in life. Let us set forth a few of the facts regarding this progressive company, and then let you reason out for yourself why this company offers a better opportunity for investment than any property yet promoted in this State. Here are the facts:

1. A company's capital stock is only $500,000. This is, for the acreage, about one-fourth of the size of the capital stock of the average California company. That means that your returns will be four times greater per share than were you in a company of two million capitalization, and six times greater than a $3,000,000 company.

2. Probably the most reliable and experienced men in the oil industry, especially those acquainted with the details and advancement of oil in California, are at the head and management of the Lady Washington concern. Of all the men operating in California probably no others could have been chosen to better fit the positions which they now hold.

3. The location of the 80 acres under operation by the company is ideal. It is in the Sunset District, the oldest field in the country, and its recent production and development speaks for its great and magnificent future.

4. The particular location of the Lady Washington Oil Co.'s property in this prosperous and productive district is also ideal, located at an elevation sufficient to permit the transportation of the oil direct to the railroad close by by gravity. This means no pumping, thus saving this expense generally borne by other producing companies. Then, too, the oil on the adjacent properties flows freely from the well without pumping; this means another saving of about 15 cents per barrel, all of which makes it possible to pay greater dividends than those companies in other districts. Combine these facts with small capitalization, and the answer is larger dividends.

5. The production of the Lady Washington Oil Company can be sold right at the property to either the Standard Oil Co. or the Associated Oil Co., and an average of 60 cents or better can be had for it. This is a market condition, not a statement put forth by us for the purpose of selling this stock. Three hundred barrels a day from two wells—with comparatively no cost—at sixty cents a barrel will pay over 40 per cent. dividends at the present selling prices. Each new well will add 20 per cent. more and 30 wells are possible.

6. Transportation almost at hand—the Southern Pacific line being but a few hundred yards away—makes the selling of the oil absolutely assured, and also guarantees the low cost of materials purchased to develop the property. That's an immediate benefit already enjoyed.

7. The owners of this valuable 80 acres have given a 20-years' lease to the Lady Washington Oil Company without one dollar's cash consideration, and not one dollar can be realized from the ground except from the royalty on the oil produced. This conclusively proves that the owners have a great faith in the management of the Lady Washington Oil Company, and their faith is not misplaced, because the hundreds of feet of development that have been steadily going on will yield to them in royalty sufficient to pay out big dividends on their early investment in this property. A 20-year lease is a long lease, and by that time as many wells as the property will stand will have been put down. The Lady Washington Company under its lease will also enjoy all of the oil, less its royalty after 20 years, from all the wells it has sunk, a condition very seldom met with in the oil industry. All of which means a life annuity of generous proportion for each and every stockholder.

8. The Lady Washington Oil Company has not only a small capitalization, but every share of stock is on the same basis. There was no promotion stock in the beginning, nor will there be any in the end of this company. Every investor will share alike. Stop for a moment and endeavor to appreciate what this really means.

It is difficult in this advertisement to actually make you fully understand or comprehend the real importance of the development of this valuable property. It is hard to describe the truthful situation without what might seem exaggeration, and it is for this reason that the Lincoln Mortgage and Loan Company, the fiscal agents of this property, make the liberal offer that they do, i. e., they will take any interested person to the property of the Lady Washington Oil Company, let them examine it for themselves, let them see the rapid development now going on, let them talk with and meet face to face the operators and field men on the property, and in this manner let them convince themselves that no more meritorious proposition has ever been put before the American people, especially one that has the great opportunities of great profits, and these profits to be enjoyed in the very near future. These very field men and operators have purchased stock in the company, but will enjoy no other privilege than any other stockholder. Every one has an even break.

This report was made by Mr. A. G. Nichols, field superintendent. Ask any oil man in California about Mr. Nichols. We will abide by what he has to say. It covers Well No. 1.

Well No. 1, with a 12½-inch pipe, is now down 846 feet, and Well No. 2, with a 10-inch pipe, is down 1363 feet. And there is oil, and great quantities of it, waiting below the surface of these wells, waiting only for a few hundred more feet to reach it. Then two wells will come in that will mean that the stock of the Lady Washington Oil Company will immediately jump to one dollar or more per share, and this for your benefit. 20 cents a share is the price now. But let us not linger on the merits of this property. Let us put the proposition up to you. Do you want to go to the property, do you want to personally examine it? Do you want us to pay every dollar of your expense there and back without an obligation on your part? We will take you there, let you examine as you please, then when you return, if you are not satisfied don't buy one dollar's worth of stock in this property. No obligation on your part; we pay all the way. Pretty fair. Do you want to go? The following report should at least convince you of the sincerity of our words, and further convince you that it would be worth your while to take this trip at our expense:

"On No. 1 work is going steadily at something like 846 feet. I hope to get the 12½-inch pipe to at least 900 feet, and possibly 1000, in this well. This will insure us a well with the eight, and possibly with the ten. As we go deeper there, the formation looks more favorable all the time. It is identical with the formation in the big wells further up in the field, except that each stratum is somewhat thicker. For instance, it is a little deeper to the surface water and we get a little more surface water. The top stratum of clay was a little thicker than in the Fulton wells and the bottom stratum will probably be still thicker. It is therefore entirely reasonable to suppose that the oil-bearing stratum will also be thicker and that the oil will be lighter and probably contain more gas, so that where the Fultons get from 200 to 300 barrels, there is no reason why we should not get from 300 to 400. However, as I told you before, I will be entirely satisfied with 100, as a well that will produce 100 barrels of oil every day will more than pay dividends on the entire capital stock of the company for one well, but we will have two wells there probably within two months, and knowing the formation, as we will then, it will not take us anywhere near as long to get down other wells as it does these first two."

Here is what Mr. L. A. Rose, drilling superintendent, has to say about Well No. 2.

"We have 1363 feet of 10-inch pipe in the hole now and everything working fine. We have not had to drive as yet, the pipe is hanging free and going easy."

"The formation is the same as in the wells west of us, and I would not give any one a dollar to insure our getting oil."

NEW HOMES TO BE BUILT

Many Plans For Mt. Washington Homes Are Now Being Drawn

Although home building development has been exceptionally brisk on Mt. Washington during the past few months, plans for nearly a dozen more fine residences are now under way. This activity in building even before the completion of the incline railway is a strong testimonial to the residential merit of Mt. Washington. The new homes will be exceptionally attractive from an architectural standpoint. All will be two full stories high.

Answers to Recent Inquiries

How long will it take to reach Fourth and Spring streets via incline cars and city cars?—W. A. L.

It is safe to say that the trip can be made in 20 minutes—and perhaps less. This is less time than it now takes to reach nearly all of the residence sections of the city. Twenty minutes to mountain air is rather extraordinary, isn't it?

—o—

What are the prices of lots and building restrictions on the top of the mountain?—B.L.D.

The prices range from $1500 to $3000 and the building restrictions are $4500. All houses on the summit must be two stories high.

—o—

What are the winter climatic conditions on Mt. Washington? Is it colder than the city below? A. C. Smith, Colegrove, Cal.

The winter and summer temperature of Mt. Washington is as nearly perfect as can be found in Southern California. The winter sun radiates warmly down on this grand old rise of ground, and in summer the ocean breezes temper the warmest days to a degree of absolute comfort.

—o—

Is the soil of Mt. Washington of adobe composition? W. A. McCall, 4423 Benefit Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

No—a thousand times no! Nearly all of the hills in and around Los Angeles have black adobe soil — the "meanest" soil in Southern California. Mt. Washington soil is sandy loam of exceptional fertility.

AUTOMOBILES WILL ATTEMPT ASCENT OF INCLINE RAILWAY

Big Event Will Take Place In the Near Future—Will Be Supreme Test—Many Cars Planning to Participate

An event of great interest to the local automobile world, and also to auto people in general throughout the country, will be the attempt of the various machines to climb the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Incline Railway. This event is scheduled for the near future. The results will be eagerly looked forward to by the automobile fraternity, inasmuch as the ascent will be the supreme climbing test for modern high power machines. The incline is 3000 feet long with a grade that averages about 37 per cent.

The first car to attempt the ascent will be a forty-two horse power Franklin Greyhound. R. C. Hamlin, local agent for the Franklin cars, believes that his machine can successfully reach the summit although he does not claim that it will positively do the trick. All entries must be recorded within the next two weeks.

Complete details of the try-out will be published in an early issue of the EAGLE. All manufacturers, local agents and owners of machines who desire to enter cars, or who desire specific information relating to the contest, should address all communications to Mgr. Mt. Washington Incline Contest, 140 W. Fifth street.

INCLINE RAILWAY NEARING COMPLETION

Finishing Touches Are Now Being Made on Novel Little Railroad

Excellent progress has been made during the past week on the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Incline Railway. The powerhouse, an interior view of which is shown on this page, is now ready for electric current. When the incline cars are completed, the new road will be thoroughly tested in every way, and a few days later, opened to the public. The opening of the road will be the occasion of a celebration to which the entire community will be invited. Watch for the announcement of the opening in an early issue of the EAGLE.

How to Reach Mt. Washington

Mt. Washington is now reached by L. A. Ry. yellow Garvanza car. Off at Mt. Washington Drive (formerly Ave. 41,) thence by boulevard to summit one mile by easy ascent. Incline railway in operation in April, direct to property.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The surprise of the past week has been the egg market. Dealers are beginning to wonder just what will happen to eggs this year, and are commencing to figure that prices will remain up throughout the entire season. Last year at this date, eggs were selling down to 17 cents a dozen, and were in good demand at that price. Storing had already started, while at the present time, scarcely any eggs have been placed in the coolers, on account of the small receipts. From the outlook at present egg receipts are not going to increase very rapidly. Yesterday only 120 cases were brought in, and the first car of eastern stock eggs was also received. The eastern eggs were held at the same figure as locals, and apparently are intended only for storage purposes. The coming month is the month when eggs, to retain their goodness, must be stored. It is April eggs which have better keeping qualities than any others, owing to the solid green feed that hens are able to obtain throughout the country.

The April eggs, which are placed in storage in Los Angeles, will this year be branded storage eggs, as will all others that have gone through the coolers. This has been caused by the recent act of the Legislature, requiring eggs to be sold as fresh or storage. It was thought that this would decrease the demand for storage eggs, but most of the large egg dealers think it will mean real education for the public, and will make eastern eggs better sellers than they are at present. It is a well-known fact that April eggs gathered in the Middle West and properly stored, are better than eggs produced in this locality and stored. Then, without eastern eggs, it would be impossible to obtain eggs in Los Angeles after September at less than $1 a dozen, for the output here is exceedingly small when compared with the consumption. Last year the output for the season was a trifle more than 11,000 cases. Twelve thousand cases would supply Los Angeles with a normal demand, about twenty days, so it can readily be seen that eastern eggs must be shipped here.

The egg producers of this section, who have formed an association, will soon open their business at Ninth and Los Angeles street, in the old market, which has been leased for that purpose. The movement of the organized producers will be watched with interest by grocers and jobbers alike. The jobbers declare at present that they have never come in direct contact with the producers, but that they have always bought and continue to buy their local eggs through the country merchants.

Butter has been moving along well, and there is a great deal of it going into storage. It is with the storage butter that dealers are greatly disturbed. They have promised the city sealer of weights to cut nothing but 16-ounce butter. When this is placed in storage it is bound to shrink, and the shrinkage in three months will easily amount to an ounce. There will be considerable trouble when this is taken out for use, after the shipping season is over. Arrivals of butter were 17,932 pounds. Eastern butter is beginning to arrive in quantity.

Cheese is active and firm in most varieties. There were several slight advances during the week which continue in force. Arrivals were 2052 pounds.

Potatoes, which have been weak throughout the week, became a trifle more firm toward the close of that period. Arrivals were small, and the demand for fancy stock excellent. Arrivals yesterday were about five cars. Onions were weak and in little call. Receipts were a car yesterday. Bean arrivals were light, and the market on several varieties active. Sweets are selling a trifle better, but are arriving slowly.

Vegetables are still shy in receipts, and there is a big call for fresh stock. Prices all remain very firm in nearly all varieties of bunch goods as well as the varieties that sell by the dozen or pound. Fruits are fairly firm and apples have been on the rise. Wild geese and pigeons are more than plentiful.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

HOME ISSUES AGAIN ACTIVE.

ALMOST MONOPOLIZE TRADING AND PRICES SOAR.

Common Leads With Sales of Three Hundred and Ninety Shares, But Declines After Advance—Preferred Very Strong—Three First Refunding Bonds Change Hands.

Yesterday, as on Friday, the Home Telephone securities were the center of interest during the short session on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, and trading in them occupied almost the entire attention of the brokers. A further advance in prices was scored.

Home common was the leader in the business and 290 shares were handled at between 17.00 and 18.25. Sales opened at 17.50 and the price advanced to the high point of the day and then dropped to 17.00 on the execution of several heavy orders. The close was at 17.25@17.50, up 2¼ and 1½ points, respectively. That common should sell off so quickly after the advance is taken as a bad sign. The natural supposition, with the announcement that telephone rates had been advanced, was that the issue would be in line for a dividend. The selling yesterday seemed to show very little confidence in the stock.

Preferred was very strong and closed firm and in demand, after sales of 30 shares at 62.50@62.87½. It was quoted at 62.00@65.00, up 2 and 5¼ points, respectively.

Three first refunding bonds of the Home company changed hands at 75¼. The close was at 75@75½, up 1 and 1½ points, respectively.

Trading in the oil stocks was almost at a standstill. No Associated Oil was handled, and the stock closed at 37.25@38.00, up ¼ and ½ point, respectively. Union was quoted at 103.00@104.50, off ⅝ point in the bid and up ⅝ in the asked price. Provident was ⅛ point higher in the asked price, and United Petroleum was offered at 106.50, off ¼ point.

Globe was firm on sales of 1000 shares at 22¾, and 25 shares of Reed Crude changed hands at 20.

The bank stocks remained practically as on Friday.

Five hundred shares of Clark Copper were sold at 22, and the close was at 21¼@21½, off ⅝ and 1½ points, respectively.

During the week 31,000 shares of stocks, valued at $91,000, were handled. Nineteen bonds were sold for $26,000, and bank stock sales (40 shares) amounted to $12,000.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE.

CLOSING PRICES DISCOURAGING.

PREDICTION OF WEAKER MARKET IS FULFILLED.

Leading Goldfields Especially Lacking in Firmness—Combination First in Trading, But Loses Points—Oils Unusually Active—Two Associated Bonds Sold—Deals in Home Issues.

The prediction made on Friday afternoon that the mining prices would go lower was fulfilled yesterday on the Los Angeles-Nevada Exchange and final quotations, especially on the leading Goldfields, were anything but encouraging.

Combination Fraction closed at 93@95, after sales of 900 shares at 94@96, regular, and of 100 shares at 95, seller ten. The stock was several points lower than on the preceding day.

Five hundred shares of Daisy sold at 50, regular, and the same amount at 49, seller ten days. The close was at 49@51, one point lower in each quotation.

Florence was not handled, but on unfavorable reports from the mine, the price broke and it closed at 2.90 bid, a ten-point decline. It was offered at 3.10. Goldfield Consolidated also was inactive and final quotations were 7.65@7.75, off 5 points in the bid.

Rawhide Coalition was firm, and closed in demand after sales of 200 shares at 70. Great Bend sold at 16, Mayflower Consolidated at 15 and Francis Mohawk at 11.

There was light trading in California Hills at 5⅜, Consolidated Mines at 1¼, Eureka at 3 and North American Mining at 5.

The oil stocks were unusually active. Associated Oil sold, to the extent of 30 shares, at 37.50. Columbia Oil changed hands at 1.05, and Rice Ranch at 1.38.

Home Telephone Preferred sold at 60.00 flat, and fifty shares of the Common at 17.50.

Two Associated Oil bonds went at 89½.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE QUOTATIONS.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

MARKET CLOSES AT LOW POINT.

FLORENCE IS WEAKER ON MORE NEVADA SELLING.

Still Lower Prices Expected on Unfavorable News from Mine—Goldfield Consolidated Loses Heavily, But Daisy Holds Its Own and in Demand—Bullfrogs Lack Firmness.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 524 Citizens' National Bank Bldg.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—The market was quiet and weak today, and closed at the low point.

Florence was specially weak on continued selling from Nevada, and it looks as though it should be sold for 20 or 30 points on the bad reports from the mine. No support was given to Goldfield Consolidated, which sold off to 7.67½, 10 points lower than last night. Fraction sold down to 95 and closed at 96 bid. Daisy held its own and buying orders were in the market for all the stock that was offered.

The Tonopahs remained practically unchanged. Rawhide Coalition was up four points from yesterday, and two from the opening bid. Bullfrogs were inclined to show some weakness.

Nevada stocks were weak on the New York curb, Consolidated closing a sixteenth below the opening bid price. Florence was off the same amount. Daisy lost one point.

Advices received from New York today were to the effect that when Wingfield came, on Wednesday, he thought he saw a large short interest in Goldfield Consolidated and in this he appears to have been mistaken, as the brokers had been selling stock for their clients. After bidding the stock up to $ 1-8 and finding no trouble in the deliveries, he withdrew all support, and prices have eased off.

The bull news which was sent out from Goldfield about the big strike on Combination No. 1 has not yet soaked into the minds of the buying public to a sufficient extent to create any legitimate demand for the stock.

As compared with last Saturday's close, Consolidated is up 17 1-2 points; Florence off 27 1-2; Daisy, Great Bend, Jumbo Extension and Combination Fraction break even. The Tonopahs hold their own, and Coalition is up 17 points.

SHARES AND MONEY.

SEEK HINT ON MARKET MOVES.

PROFESSIONALS WAITING FOR AN OUTSIDE LEAD.

Position Reversed and Fluctuations of Price Are Confused and Changeable—Trading Reduced to Tentative Operations of Speculators. Heavy Outgo of Gold Expected.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—The lack of settled conviction on the speculative outlook by the professionals was shown by the alertness with which they watched the day for any sign of outside initiative, or, indeed, for any lead in the operation on the market. Such signs were sufficient to cause a quick and direct reversal in the market position, so that when prices moved at all, the fluctuations were confused and changeable. The result was to reduce the day's market practically to the tentative operations of the professionals without developing any evidence of awakening interest from outside.

The sustained strength of the foreign exchange market leads bankers to expect next week will see a further large outgo of gold both to London and Argentine. An engagement of $2,500,000 for the former country was announced. It is intimated that the sailing of a suitable steamship is all that is wanted to make a large gold shipment to Buenos Ayres.

The unresponsiveness of the money market to the gold export movement is explained by the showing of the banks, the cash holdings of which are unaffected, partly by reason of some apparent redeposits from the trust companies to keep pace with their scaling down of loans. The banks also reduced the loan item during the week quite materially. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,386,000.

United States 2s registered have advanced 1-4 per cent. on call during the week.

GENERAL EASTERN.

CAUTION ALONE HALTS BEARS.

DEMORALIZATION THREATENS THE WHEAT MARKET.

Disinclination on Part of Heavy Sellers to Carry Their Transactions Over Sunday Prevents Prices from Falling Out of Sight—July Is Chief Sufferer.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—Only the caution of the bears who were not disposed to extend operations over Sunday, prevented the wheat market becoming demoralized today. The principal selling pressure was on July, which showed the greatest loss. During the day that option sold between 1.02 7-8 and 1.03 3-4@1.03 7-8, while May ranged between 1.15 1-4 and 1.15 7-8. The market closed weak with May at 1.15 1-4@1.15 3-8, and July at 1.03.

The price of cash corn declined one cent. The market closed at almost the bottom with May at 65 3-4@65 7-8, and July at 65 1-4.

Weakness of wheat and corn induced a weak tone in oats. May closed at 54 1-8 and July at 48 1-8@48 1-4.

Trade in provisions was active. At the close prices were 5 cents higher to 12½ cents lower.

Cash quotations were as follows:

Flour—Steady; winter patents, 5.25@ [illegible]; straights, 5.10@5.25; spring patents, 5.35@5.90; straights, 4.15@5.25; bakers', 3.05@4.25; No. 2 rye, 79; feed or mixing barley, 64@65; fair to choice malting, 65½@67; flax seed, N. 1 Southwestern, 1.56; No. 1 Northwestern, 1.66; timothy seed, 3.75@3.80; clover, 9.00; mess pork, per barrel, 17.37½@17.40; lard, per 100 lbs., 10.00; short ribs, sides (loose,) 8.82½@9.12½; short clear sides (boxed,) 9.37½@9.50.

New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 113 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—Bulls gave the market some support around the opening, but prices failed to hold and there was enough liquidation to cause a gradual sagging tendency. The visible supply showed a somewhat large decrease over last year, but spinners' takings were about 20,000 bales less than last year. Sentiment still is bullish, largely on the belief that the public will buy, no matter how large the crop may be.

The Logan & Bryan cotton letter follows: "Final ginning figures showed 13,408,901 bales, of which 344,970 were linters, leaving a net of 13,063,971 bales of spinnable cotton. The promise for the new crop thus far is poorer than last year because of the absence of winter moisture in Texas and on account of excessive rains east of the Mississippi. Bear forces are, however, disposed to exaggerate the size of the crop, and no one seems willing to admit the increasing demand for cotton. Even should conditions be as unfavorable as those the balance of last year, the minimum consumption would prove 12,831,000 bales, while an improvement of 10 per cent. over last year would carry the consumption for a season's total up to 13,300,000 bales. Under conditions such as these, and remembering that the world's spindles are increasing at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, we are confronted with the necessity of a crop in excess of 14,000,000 the coming year. We have no prospect for an acreage as large as last year, and not one chance in one hundred of the yield per acre being as large as last year. On the weakness and at these prices we believe in cotton."

The Journal of Commerce says: "There are two ideas in the market which divide the switchers into two classes. There are a number of interests that are long near and short distant, and others that are short near and long distant. There are some big people, however, who seem to be long both of the May and October and July, and it is these people who are being watched with the greatest interest."

The New York Commercial says "The movement into sight for the week was surprisingly small, the New Orleans estimate was light and if spinners were disposed to hold aloof from the spot markets, dealers on the other hand were apparently just as averse to selling except at their own price. With the passing of the census report, the weather will perhaps be the most important factor in shaping the course of the market, though the action of the spot markets and the attitude of prominent spot people will also have no slight influence in moulding sentiment."

Hill says: "The visible supply figures this morning are very bullish; they show a visible supply 173,000 smaller than two years ago. The total mill takings thus far this season 8,612,000, against 7,768,000 last year, and 8,592,000 in 1907. These figures should give ample denial to all the pessimism afloat. A new short interest has been recently created which will have a hard time covering."

ROMANCE OF A BANK.

Employés of the First National Bank are rejoicing with their companion, Carroll Johnson, in the arrival at his home of a daughter, who has been named Sarah Garriett Johnson, and weighs ten pounds. The young mother was formerly an employé of the First National, and the pretty romance which culminated in the marriage more than a year ago, had its beginning in the big institution.

HAS WATER TO SPARE.

The new sixteen-inch well, just completed at Monte Vista, produces over 100 miners' inches of water. The pumping plant installed on well No. 2 is pumping forty-seven miner's inches. This, in connection with well No. 1, assures an ample supply. Another large well will be bored as soon as the rig can get on the ground.

Emil Firth has sold fifty-four acres in the tract to the following purchasers: Charles A. Marks, nine acres on Central avenue, south of Howard avenue, for $2442; Mrs. Ava Hillier, five acres on Oaks avenue, south of Fifth avenue, for $1500; William Asbury, nine acres on Magnolia avenue, south of Fifth avenue, for $2598; Mrs. Bertha L. Junkin, five acres at the corner of Monte Vista avenue and Howard avenue, for $1500; Claude Norton, five acres at the corner of Vernon avenue and Howard avenue, for $1625; Mrs. Edna M. Ellis, five acres on Central avenue, south of Howard avenue, for $1500; John E. Monahan, five acres on Vernon avenue, south of Howard avenue, for $1250; W. E. Finney, five acres on Oaks avenue, south of Fifth avenue, for $1500; Joseph W. Lithgow, six acres on Fifth avenue, east of Monte Vista avenue, for $2280. This is Mr. Lithgow's third purchase in Monte Vista. Mr. Lithgow is a Chicago merchant. He will plant his holdings, consisting of forty-five acres, to Washington navels and Valencia late oranges, and make his winter home there.

EXCHANGES FINE RANCH.

Alfalfa Acreage Near Corona Traded at Three-Hundred-Thousand-Dollar Valuation—Other Sales.

W. A. Francis of the C. M. Wooster Co. reports the exchange of the well-known Premier alfalfa ranch six miles north of Corona, Riverside county, owned by C. E. Groat of this city. The ranch is perhaps the most complete of its kind in this locality and contains 321 acres. It has two large pumping plants which produce over 400 inches of water and there is a good set of ranch buildings.

Mr. Groat exchanged this for the Cynthia Apartments at Long Beach, owned by Col. M. E. Schroeder. The building is of concrete mission style, centrally located on Ocean Front. This is considered one of the best family hotels in Long Beach. Each property was held at a valuation of $100,000.

The same agents report the exchange of a thirty-acre alfalfa ranch three miles southwest of Anaheim, with pumping plant, and usual ranch improvements, buildings, etc., owned by C. L. Bentley and Phebe Allen, for an eight-room two-story modern house at No. 1514 South Vermont avenue, on lot 50x150 feet, owned by Dr. W. E. Simpson. Each property was valued at about $8000.

To F. A. Irwin, ten acres in three-year-old walnuts, with ten shares of La Puente Water Company stock, at El Monte. There are no improvements. The consideration was $3000. The grantor is C. L. Gregg.

To F. B. Hopkins of Pomona, six-room bungalow at No. 1027 West Fifty-first street, on lot 50x150 feet, for $2500. It was sold by A. Hitz.

VALLEY CITIES GROWING FAST.

Ceaseless Building Activity in Imperial.

Artistic Reconstruction of Hotel Brawley.

Business Blocks and School Rise at El Centro.

Imperial Valley cities have been making substantial progress the past year. Every one can show fine brick business blocks or modern public buildings, besides many new homes, as the result of the building activities of the past few months.

At Brawley, the most notable achievement was the rebuilding of the Hotel Bungalow. This was a one-story picturesque structure of adobe, with wide-spreading porches, and roofed-over passageways. The front section of this building, which was the pioneer hotel in the northern end of the valley, has been torn away, and in its place stands the new frontage, shown on this page. The style of architecture is an ideal one for the climatic conditions prevailing. All rooms open directly on to porches, and have ample window space. An observation tower on the southeastern corner of the structure is reached by a winding stairway, and will be provided with powerful glasses, so that guests may have a fine view over the valley. On the Main-street front will be heavy concrete pillars, reaching to the second story, and a deep porch. The building is being erected by H. C. Oakley of Los Angeles.

Brawley has also completed plans for the erection of one of the handsomest school buildings in Southerstern California. It will be one-story, of a modified Mission style, with the main body 160 feet in length, and with two wings, each 88 feet long. B. M. Morris of Los Angeles is the architect.

Rooms will be finished in the towers for the school library and principal's office. There will be eight classrooms, each 24x31 feet, and an auditorium which will seat 400 people. A bond issue of $25,000 has been made to carry through this improvement.

W. F. Holt has had plans prepared for a one-story brick business block on the northeast corner of Sixth and Main streets, and Hovley & Cady have completed a two-story brick block. Within the past few months a Catholic Church has been completed. In every part of Brawley new homes have been built, and many more are now under construction.

Imperial has also made a fine showing, with the erection of a two-story brick block by S. B. Zimmer, the completion of a two-story bank block, several one-story brick structures, and the Auditorium, a building modeled on Egyptian lines of architecture. The city is to have a $10,000 Carnegie library building this year.

Holtville has added three substantial brick blocks to its business district, and Calexico two.

El Centro's building activities have never ceased since the town was started, about three years ago. The entire business district is of brick, and at present three substantial blocks are in course of construction. The Thomas Beach Block is one of the handsomest in Imperial Valley. It is two stories, of buff and salmon-colored hollow terra cotta, with tile roof. It is to be the home of the new First National Bank, the postoffice and several business concerns.

The Times, on this page, shows a view of the new grammar school for El Centro, which will be completed in time for the opening of the next school year. A bond issue of $25,000 provides for this improvement. The plans are by Architect S. B. Zimmer of Imperial. The ground dimensions of the building are to be 70x80 feet. Eight classrooms will be provided, a principal's room, teachers' rooms and ample closets. The first story walls are to be of brick, and the second story will be of wood. A deep arcade will extend around three sides of the first story, and the top of this will form a porch for the three sides of the second story. Four-foot extension eaves will give shade to the second story. The building will cost about $20,000.

ON THE CHINO RANCH.

Several Important Sales of Acreage Made There the Past Week—Alfalfa Land Wanted.

The report of sales by the Chino Land and Water Company shows an exceptionally steady market for acreage property. Alfalfa land in the Chino ranch is in demand, and many sales have been made to buyers for immediate improvement. Following is the list:

V. L. Ames of Pasadena purchased 3000 acres for consideration of $31,000. The property is located about four miles south of Pomona, and is part of the hill portion of the Chino ranch. Mr. Ames expects to use this for the purpose of raising horses and other live stock.

Lorenzo H. Haskin of Pomona bought eighteen acres for $1400. This land is located between Chino and Pomona, and will be immediately set to eucalyptus trees.

O. P. Lowry of Whittier purchased ten acres for $2000. This land is located one and one-half miles north of Chino, and is under the water system of the Chino Water Company. Mr. Lowry expects to set this land to lemon trees in the near future.

A. J. Leavitt of Los Angeles has purchased thirty-six acres for $5500. This land is located about two miles southeast of Ontario. The purchaser will improve the same with a pumping plant and seed to alfalfa.

Mary O. Chapin bought ten acres for $1500. This land is located three and one-half mile southeast of Chino, and will be improved for a home in the near future.

A. Allen Smith bought ten acres for $1250. The land lies two and one-half miles southeast of Ontario. Mr. Smith expects to seed it to alfalfa. The George Junior Republic has located a permanent home on the land recently purchased by them and is now improving the property.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

The Pioneer Investment and Trust Company reports the following sales: To G. E. Snidecor, twelve-acre orange grove in Corona on Tenth street and Grand avenue, for a consideration of $12,500. To D. W. Malone, house and lot in University Place tract, on Dalton avenue, for $3100. To J. L. Kroeger, lot in Windermere Park tract, for $1500. To Robert S. Carter, house and lot on Verbena street, Windermere Park tract, for $3600. The same company is now erecting several bungalows, ranging from $1500 to $2500, on the Cresta del Arroyo tract, Boyle Heights.

REPORTS FINE BUSINESS.

Good Prices Prevail for Fine Homes in the Better Neighborhoods—Many Buying.

Giles & Kells, managers of the house and lot department of the Wright & Callender Co., report the following sales of residence properties in the last two weeks:

O. W. Childs estate to Harry E. Dillon, C. Bruckman and John A. Burton, five lots in the Southern District Agricultural tract, for $12,500. This property is situated at the junction of Vermont avenue and Santa Monica avenue, and is occupied with a coal, wood and cement yard.

Frank E. Hartigan sold to Edith J. Raiff the modern seven-room residence at No. 1614 Western avenue for a consideration of $6500. The buyer is a recent arrival and will make this city her home.

The Morris State Bank of Pony, Mont., has sold to Jeannette W. Baruch, 174x165, on the east side of Harvard boulevard, near Twenty-first street, for a consideration of $15,000. Mrs. Baruch will improve this lot in the near future with a handsome residence to cost $25,000.

Guy E. Harrold sold to George W. Goode the modern seven-room house at No. 2165 West Twenty-ninth Place for a consideration of $4250. Mr. Goode is a retired rancher from Pomona and bought for a home.

George W. Frey sold to E. W. Smith the northwest corner of West Sixth street and Miami, 100x100 feet, for $7000. Mr. Smith will improve with a two-story pressed brick building to cost about $15,000.

Thomas Stovell has sold to Richard Green the northwest corner of Bonnie Brae and Eleventh streets, 100x150 feet, for a consideration of $9850. Mr. Green will improve with three residences.

J. J. Mann and Marie Mann have sold to Andrew M. Chaffey the southeast corner of Jasmine and Wilshire boulevard, 60x140 feet, for $5100. Mr. Chaffey bought for an investment.

Herman C. Eckermann sold to Elizaeth A. Smith a lot in the Normandie Square tract for $1900. Mrs. Smith will improve at once with a residence to cost about $7000.

The Mesa Land Company has sold to Morgan Waybright, a lot 50x150 feet, on the west side of Tenth avenue, 200 feet north of Twenty-fifth street. This lot will be improved with a modern residence. The price was $1000.

Ellen P. Burns has sold to a local investor the property at No. 2642 Vermont avenue for $7000. This is a 50x150 foot lot, improved with an old nine-room house, in good condition, and was purchased for an investment.

The same agents have sold for Marie E. Morse to Frank A. Vickery and Alfred E. Gwynn the north 60 feet of lot 24 of the West Adams Heights tract for $2050.

EASY TERMS ATTRACT.

Many Sales Reported at Lomita—The Consolidation Bill Results in Greatly Increased Business.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. report buyers are taking advantage of easy terms, and that sales have been brisk at Lomita for two weeks. Lomita lies near San Pedro, and adjoins the shoe-string strip at Wilmington. The passage of the Consolidation Bill had an immediate result in the increased number of sales.

The following have been made since the bill passed: To Ed P. Miller, five acres on the corner of Narbonne avenue and Elgin street, $1875; D. A. De Cook and Frank De Wit, five acres on the west side of Narbonne avenue, for $1875; N. S. Southmayd of Gardena, four acres on the northeast corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Chestnut street, $1680; W. W. Ross, four acres on Chestnut street, $1500; J. R. White, three acres on Flower street, $1155; P. B. Perry, two acres at the corner of Western street and Pennsylvania avenue, $825; Mrs. Mary E. Le Peohon of Salt Lake City, four acres on Pennsylvania avenue, just north of Weston street, for $1600.

Robert Howard of Salt Lake City increased his holdings by buying five acres on Weston street for $2000; J. H. Beckham, two acres on Flower street, $765; Henry Haltkamp, two acres on Walnut street, $700; Edward Nelson, 2.63 acres on Weston street, $832; C. E. Arkell, one acre, Chestnut street, $390; C. W. Arkell, one acre, Chestnut street, $375; John E. O'Neal, one acre, Flower street, $400; John Flynn, one acre Chestnut street, $390; Joseph O. Stanford, three lots in townsite of Lomita, for $500.

All of these sales are in the new subdivisions, adjacent to the townsite of Lomita.

WESTERN WILSHIRE DISTRICT.

Excellent Demand for Homesites Throughout Section—Many Buy Intending to Improve.

The Victor C. Kleinberger Company reports the following sales in the Western-Wilshire Heights tract made during the past week:

Frank Hazzard, a lot 60x145 feet, on the south side of Ingraham street, about 300 feet west of St. Andrews Place, for a consideration of $1750.

Mrs. Sarah A. Potter, a lot 60x150 feet, on the north side of West Seventh street, 240 feet west of St. Andrew's Place, for a consideration of $2000. Mrs. Potter will start the erection at once of a two-story nine-room modern home to cost $5000.

G. Phillips, a lot on the north side of West Seventh street, 60x150 feet in size, about 300 feet east of St. Andrew's Place, for a consideration of $2250.

The same agency reports the sale for Margaret A. Goddard to E. L. Petitfils of a lot 69x150 feet, on the east side of Harvard boulevard, about 225 feet north of Sixth street, for a consideration of $3000.

W. M. Berkman, to a local investor, a lot 60x150 feet, on the west side of Oxford avenue, adjoining the corner of Fifth street, for a consideration of $2500.

Mr. Kleinberger states that there is an excellent demand for good home sites anywhere in the Wilshire district.

NEAR TENTH AND BROADWAY.

Seventy-five Thousand Dollars Is Price Paid for Close-in Property by Investor.

W. B. Merwin & Co. last week reported the sale of the property at No. 206 West Tenth street to I. N. Van Nuys for Eudora H. Cadagan for a consideration of $75,000 cash. This is the most important sale reported during the week.

The property consists of a lot with a frontage of fifty feet on Tenth street and a depth of 150 feet. It is improved with a three-story brick and frame apartment-house, and a smaller two-story frame residence. The apartment-house contains eighteen four and five-room apartments, and the old residence has been remodeled to contain four five-room apartments. The property brings in a rental of $400 a month. There is a mortgage of $27,500. Mr. Van Nuys purchased for an investment.

The property is one of the best located for ultimate increase in valuation there is in the south end of the business center. With the spread of the city toward the south and west this property will be right in line for future enhancement in value. It is only thirty-nine feet from the southwest corner of Tenth and Broadway, which is owned by the Rindge estate.

LEASE BROADWAY STORE.

The Los Angeles Desk Company, recently organized, has leased the premises at Nos. 117-119 South Broadway from the Braly estate for a term of ten years, on a graduated lease, which figures up to about $44,000 for the period. The location has forty feet frontage, and is 105 feet deep, and the lease includes the basement. W. H. Willebrand made the lease. The company will absorb the business of the Los Angeles Desk Exchange, and open up a modern office furniture establishment, putting in a number of improvements in the new location.

ANOTHER ONE PASSES.

La Sierra Rancho Near Riverside Will Be Subdivided for Orange Groves and Alfalfa Ranches.

The great ranch of 17,000 acres, known as La Sierra, between Corona and Riverside, is to be cut up into farms. For fifty years or more this property has been owned by Abel Stearns or his heirs. Abel Stearns died many years ago.

His heirs have been selling for some years, and the acres of La Sierra Rancho were among the last which had belonged to shrewd old Abel Stearns to go.

A company of Los Angeles men several months ago bought about 8000 acres of La Sierra Rancho lying near Riverside. A little later another company of Los Angeles men bought 5500 acres of the La Sierra Rancho. This purchase has now been placed on the market under the name of Riverside Orange Heights.

For fifty years the rancho has been producing great crops of barley. Other land thereabouts has been planted to oranges and lemons, but La Sierra Rancho could not be purchased, and the owners would not subdivide.

The new owners have cut up the rancho into five, ten and twenty-acre parcels, for home makers and fruit and alfalfa growers. A supply of water for irrigation has been provided, and water rights at the rate of one inch to five acres, the Riverside standard, will be deeded with each five-acre tract or multiple thereof.

The opening of this great rancho to settlement means the further growth of such prosperous places as Riverside and Corona. Hundreds of families will be located on the property. It is said to be the largest single colonization project undertaken near Los Angeles within recent years.

The land is but two miles from Corona, ten miles from Riverside, and fifty miles from Los Angeles, on the Santa Fé road. The property is being handled by Blades, Long & Co. of this city, with an office in Corona.

EAGLE ROCK ATTRACTS.

The Edwards & Wildey Company reports a brisk demand for suburban sites in Eagle Rock. They report the following sales: To Richard Maynard, three lots on Adams avenue, in the Glenwood Park tract, 150x130 feet, for a consideration of $750. To William Freeman, three lots in the Oakmont tract on Glen Eyrie avenue, containing about one and one-half acres, and well covered with live oaks, for $3000. To Mary E. Gibson, lot in Ellenwood Heights tract, 60x185 feet, for $600. To C. J. Nicoll, two lots in Windermere Heights, at the southwest corner of Hill and Windermere avenues, 90x150 feet, for a consideration of $1150. To Elsa Morisco, a lot in Eagle Rock Acres tract, 140x270 feet, on Park avenue near Central, for $1000. To Jessie A. Gee, a lot in Windermere Heights, 50x145 feet, on the west side of Windermere avenue, near Hill, for $450. To T. A. Morrison, a lot in Eagle Rock Acres, 140x270 feet, on the northwest corner of Park avenue and Hill, for a consideration of $1100.

FACT AND COMMENT.

Los Angeles, and the record of deeds for last Monday in that county would certainly number not less than fifty, and the total transactions as regard to real estate would be more than one hundred.

—o—

Look Ahead.

When the sheet just above was published the grazing lands of the county, embracing nearly the whole area not rough mountain, could be bought generally for $5 to $10 an acre. In the San Gabriel Valley, for land without water, $10 an acre would have been regarded as a high price, and land with a fair amount of water going with it could have been bought in large slices for $20 an acre. The late J. DeBarth Shorb in the early part of 1880 offered the writer 2000 acres covering the territory now occupied by Dolgeville and reaching down to Shorb Station, for $20 an acre, half cash, half in ten years, and agreed to pipe water from the Shorb place above Alhambra sufficient to irrigate the land. The same year, in July, in partnership with an associate, he bought the Volney E. Howard ranch at San Gabriel, about a net township of 640 acres, for $25,000, half cash, half in five years, but the interest was 12 per cent. per annum. This is just a fraction less than $40 an acre. But there went with the land an admirable water right, and it had very valuable improvements, including several acres of bearing orange trees, a few acres of full-bearing walnut trees, twenty acres of vines twenty years old, from which the second crop sold at $1600, and the third at very considerably more, as the vineyard had been neglected somewhat in years of low prices for grapes. Upon these particular years Mission grapes sold at the Rose winery for $20 a ton. There is no land in the San Gabriel Valley today to be had with water for $1000 an acre, unless it be low, damp land not suitable for orange or lemon culture and not near large cities, such as Pasadena and Alhambra are now. The advance in the value of the land is startling, but not more so than that in the aspect of the country. Pasadena scarcely existed. Alhambra was altogether country. Those who live to see Los Angeles county thirty years in the future will see transformations as startling as the country today shows in comparison with 1879.

—o—

What Will It Look Like?

Looking at the waste plains of thirty years ago when nearly the whole country was pasture land for sheep and cattle, and looking at it today, with its thousands of acres of rich orchard in full-bearing condition, its beautiful and rapidly-growing towns and cities, we have a sharp contrast in the two pictures. Those who can imagine what will come at the end of another thirty years will conjure up a transformation scene quite as surprising. When this little transcript sheet was issued the population of Los Angeles city was not over 9000. Today it is 300,000 or more. Alhambra consisted of a few scattered homes of orange growers with groves of from five to thirty acres each, and the only place of [illegible] munity a blacksmith [illegible] was very similar. [illegible] had just been planted [illegible] there was no other [illegible] valley around Pomona [illegible] erside, a hamlet, and [illegible] an unimportant town. [illegible] a hamlet at El Monte. [illegible] from now the population [illegible] geles, which has increased [illegible] in the past thirty years [illegible] much greater increase. [illegible] Los Angeles is sure to [illegible] lion in less than the [illegible] There will be no sign [illegible] between Los Angeles, [illegible] Alhambra. They will be all [illegible] populated city and this [illegible] tion will spread out up [illegible] Burbank way into the San [illegible] Valley. Beyond Pasadena [illegible] hambra it will take in [illegible] the whole country [illegible] rovia and the river. In [illegible] see a consolidated city [illegible] Los Angeles reaching [illegible] in the mountains where the [illegible] briel River breaks through [illegible] lowing the stream to [illegible] running to the northward [illegible] mountains to Santa Monica [illegible] and the whole area so [illegible] lated that it will be [illegible] one city in fact, if not [illegible] under a single name. With [illegible] ough system in force, it will [illegible] central government, with [illegible] for the different boroughs.

The Picture It Will Make.

What a picture that [illegible] city and county will make! [illegible] Harbor will be full of ships [illegible] all parts of the world. [illegible] shipbuilding plants there [illegible] mington, and from the [illegible] the railroads into the city [illegible] geles, and up along both sides [illegible] river into the country [illegible] there will be hundreds of [illegible] industries. If we build [illegible] out streets and roads [illegible] way and building them [illegible] to be built; if we take [illegible] proper planting of trees [illegible] ways and the caring for [illegible] have here not only the [illegible] lation of any similar [illegible] try, not only the most [illegible] munity in this or any [illegible] try, but also in every [illegible] beautiful, and with the [illegible] we have the most [illegible] live that the sun in [illegible] will look down upon.

No Romancing.

The writer who, [illegible] sied half what exists [illegible] been laughed at as a [illegible] doubtedly there are some [illegible] think this prophecy of [illegible] romancing a little bit. [illegible] used to it. He has been [illegible] romancing about [illegible] for over twenty-five [illegible] lic prints, and has [illegible] all times somewhat [illegible] the only inexactness [illegible] of in all this past [illegible] was that his prophecies [illegible] matter of 100 per cent [illegible] anything he ever [illegible]

WITH SUPERFLUOUS HAIR ON THE FACE, ARMS, HANDS, NECK, EYEBROWS AND BUST.

We make a specialty of removing superfluous hair, moles, warts, birth marks and guarantee our work absolutely.

REMEMBER—We use the latest scientific FIVE NEEDLE method so extensively used in the East, and remove 250 to 300 hairs per hour, while no operator using only one needle can remove over 60 per hour and do good work. We have tried it for years.

REMEMBER—We guarantee to kill every hair we treat, and should any return we will gladly remove them FREE OF CHARGE and thank you for the privilege of doing so. Try it; it's your only hope.

REMEMBER—The same number of hairs we remove, costing you $10, would cost you $25 elsewhere. One treatment will convince you how quickly we do it. NO PAIN, NO SCARS—this we guarantee.

REMEMBER—Your face is getting worse daily. Pulling, cutting and depilatories only increase the growth. A talk with us will do no harm. Consultation free.

"THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT GOES on;" that is, the fight to subdue rheumatic pains with plasters, belts and liniments, which at best are only temporary relief. Poison urea is an insidious foe and when aided by an excess of uric acid, handicaps the kidneys and blood; the result is muscular rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, kidney and bladder troubles, pericarditis or heart trouble, and dropsy. Why not try Kinney's Rheumatic and Kidney Remedy, "K.R.K.R.," a pure distillation from the pine, fir and juniper trees; the dose being small because it is an essence, at once releasing the blood and kidneys so that the latter shall again resume that wonderful operation of secretion and excretion without handicap. Many genuine unsolicited testimonials from persons permanently cured. No monumental press advertisements being employed, this little remedy has been placed into the hands of the sufferer through its merits. The women have been instrumental in placing it on the market. A fair trial will prove to the sufferer our claims. Miners, railroad and street car men, horse-shoers and all others who have used this Remedy are speaking in its favor. Mailed everywhere for $1; also at your druggist's. Will deliver by mail or messenger ½ full size bottle for 50 cents. Drop a postal or telephone Broadway 7098.

PROF. W. E. KING, Los Angeles' celebrated psychic, is permanently located here. His honesty, test of time and 23 years' continuous practice as a psychic have proved beyond all doubt that PROF. W. E. KING is the leader of his profession.

LIVE AND LET LIVE.

Never before in the history of occult science has a man of PROF. W. E. KING'S professional standing consented to place his services at the disposal of the public for such a nominal consideration. Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders and that many of its citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic PROF. W. E. KING has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.

EXTRAORDINARY PSYCHIC POWER, combined with his superior knowledge of occult force, enables him to read human life with unerring accuracy from infancy to old age; his powers are wonderful and indisputable; his advice is reliable, his information clear, concise and to the point; will tell you every hope, fear, ambition, better than you could tell it yourself.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?

As the best is always the cheapest in the end. Better consult no psychic at all than one who is unable to help you, as false prophets do more harm than good, as they leave you in a worse condition than before by their false advice, based upon guesses; but PROF. W. E. KING has an established reputation; testimonials and credentials from thousands of your own citizens and friends.

"Arise! Throw off thy shackles!" Exchange sorrow for joy, darkness for light. "Be master of your own destiny."

SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS, pointed out to all. The grand results obtained by those who have consulted W. E. King is positive proof of his superior power to reveal the mysteries of the future. When truth is revealed, as it always is when they consult the peer of all life readers, the universal expression is, I am satisfied and happy since I consulted W. E. King.

Call and he will guide you with certainty higher than human power; tells you the truth, good or bad.

STANDING CHALLENGE:
$5000.
FOR HIS EQUAL.
$5000.

Others may come and others may go, but W. E. KING always remains.

"If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap, clap-trap methods, start from the beginning and consult PROF. W. E. KING. He will tell you frankly your condition, and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. W. E. KING FORETELLS MANY GREAT EVENTS.

Some of the prophecies made by PROF. W. E. KING and which were fulfilled to the letter and day were:

The explosion of the United States warship Bennington at San Diego, Cal. It was predicted that on that day the government would lose a ship in the Pacific.

PROF. W. E. KING, Psychic, had warned the public of San Francisco's earthquake of 1906 for years.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the Japanese-Russian war. The day of the month and year was predicted on which hostilities would be begun and the victory of the Japanese.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the late President McKinley's assassination at "Buffalo Exposition."

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the assassination of Carter Harrison the elder three weeks before the weak-minded Prendergast fired the fatal shot at Chicago's chief executive.

PROF. W. E. KING predicted the earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica, W. I.; the earthquake in Chile; the Thaw-White tragedy; also predicted the Galveston flood.

PROF. W. E. KING, Psychic, has foretold many great events that took place on the day set.

Recommended by a New York Judge; August 20, 1905—I cheerfully recommend Prof. King as a gifted psychic. He predicted my election. JUDGE F. B. CROWELL, Supreme Judge.

FROM LILLIAN RUSSELL, THE WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS.

I was greatly impressed with PROF. W. E. KING'S reading. His powers are truly marvelous. He develops in one a force that enables them to attract people, to interest them and to please them to their good and to your advantage without the least effort on one's part. His advice and assistance have been of great benefit to me.

FROM A PROMINENT MINISTER.

I desire to bear evidence to the genuineness of PROF. W. E. KING'S work. God gives to us an intuition whereby we may guide our lives. That PROF. W. E. KING possesses this guiding power to a marvelous degree is evident. The fact that his clients are his warmest and truest friends is alone a tribute to his sincerity and honest methods in dealing with all. He has rendered me immeasurable assistance. Rev. W. C. Jessup.

FROM M. ROTHSCHILD, THE WELL-KNOWN FINANCIER.

For the past five years PROF. W. E. KING'S advice and assistance has been of great benefit to me. I have tested nearly every psychic in this country, and find PROF. W. E. KING'S advice reliable and far superior to any that I have ever met.

To Whom it May Concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. W. E. KING, as a psychic of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychicship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his services.

Dr. John Westerfield,
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.
Chesterfield, Ind., September 4, 1894.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE.

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 25 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environment; tells about children, when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE—telling everything about one's self worth knowing, being in truth one of the best guides in life that the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of others—showing how best to deal with those you come in contact—and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read s. H. Sothern, Florence Roberts, Paul de Longpre, Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, David Starr Jordan, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Caruso, Josef Hoffman, Huntington, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Sembrich, Jefferson, Lillian Russell, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Fritzi Scheff, Schumann-Heink, etc. He stands at the very head of his profession, and his skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers.

LOUIS JAMES says: "I wish to say that your reading was entirely SATISFACTORY."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings—from the HOROSCOPE AND HAND —were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

Highest grade of work given; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED. PRICES within the reach of all, but no cheap 50c humbug readings by PROF. ALTHOUSE. Daily and evening, Sunday 10 to 2.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 332 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

DRIED MILK.

What pure, sweet milk is for the babe, this dried, or evaporated, product of pure, sweet milk is for the chicks. How they like it, too. Don't feed too much, though, for while most wholesome it is very rich, almost 50 per cent. pure protein.

It is also an excellent food for the grown fowls. Our State chemist, who analyzed it for us, says so. It is a fine egg food, highly nitrogenous, hence economical to feed even at our regular price of $3.50 per cwt. We want many more to try it and will make the price for short time $3.00 for 100 lbs., 30 lbs. for $1.00, 7 lbs. for 25 cents. Delivered anywhere in Los Angeles.

NEVADA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA CORporations organized. Laws of NEVADA and ARIZONA permit offices, books, meetings, business anywhere; permit stock paid in property or services—absolutely non assessable; directors' valuation conclusive. Supervise organization meetings, complete every detail—articles, bylaws, resolutions, options, leases, deeds, agreements, proxies, calls, waivers, minutes, etc. Complete organization record, bylaws and forms drawn under laws of State in which corporation will do business; no worthless "ready-made, stereotyped" forms permitted. Laws of mining. Largest incorporating business in California, incorporating laws fully explained without charge. Highest references. My fee reasonable. A7868. THOMAS COONEY, Lawyer, 716 Merchants' Trust Bldg. 21

TUNGSTEN. DID YOU EVER PASS UP a fortune by kicking over Wolframite as worthless dark rock or by chucking away Scheelite as common white quartz or spar? Don't know, do you? Might have wealth looking you in the face every day anywhere around you and not know it. Tungsten assays cost three dollars and I don't blame you for not sending in every old likely-looking piece of rock. The common and accurate test with acid will cost you about one cent and the outfit consists of two little bottles of acid from the druggist and a saucer from the cupboard. I'll tell you how to do it and send you enough Wolframite and Scheelite for a dozen or so tests to get your hand in and see how easy it is, for only one dollar. C. M. PAYNE, P. O. Box 774. 21

INCORPORATE UNDER ARIZONA LAWS. Most liberal and cheapest in the United States. No franchise or annual tax of any kind. No public statements. Members exempt from all corporate debts. Hold all meetings, do business and keep books anywhere. Stock non-assessable and can be paid up for cash, property, services or anything of value. Charters cannot be repealed by subsequent legislation. Capitalization does not affect cost. COST VERY SMALL. We give by-laws, corporate record and corporate management free to each company. Incorporate direct and save attorney's fee. Forty-page "Book of Information" on Arizona corporation laws, blanks, etc., free upon request. SOUTHWESTERN SECURITIES AND INVESTMENT CO., Box X488, Phoenix, Ariz. •

BALKAN CLOUD.

RED WAR PLACARDS POSTED IN HUNGARY.

Army Is Being Mobilized, Schools in Many Towns Are Closed and People Are Warned—European Powers Humiliated.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BUDAPEST (Hungary) March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Huge red placards have been posted throughout the country warning the people of possibility of war. Five army corps will be mobilized and placed on a full war footing for service in Servia and Bosnia. Six Danube monitors are ready to sail for Semlin, on the opposite side of the river from Belgrade. They are commanded by Capt. Gustave Nanta. The guard boats, which are manned by about 75 per cent. of Croatians and Italians, have been fitted up with new benzine engines. The Seventh Army Corps has also been placed on a war footing and the men called up for active service.

At Arad, Nagy-Varad, Kasa, Eger, Heves, Szentes and Miskolsz the schools have been closed. In Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, all males over 16 years of age are armed and ready for action. Italian and Russian officers have arrived to instruct the Montenegrins in the use of the new quick-firing guns.

Today one of the most prominent statesmen of Hungary said:

"England encouraged the Balkan hopes which it knew never could be fulfilled. The speeches of Sir Edward Grey and Premier Asquith, following the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, were incautious and unwarrantable. Grey was particularly aggressive as to the Austrian policy. The British politicians are badly mistaken if they imagine that their voices are of paramount influence in European affairs. If England had a military system similar to Germany's the situation would be different.

"The present outlook is especially grave owing to the fear of the Servian war party which the King and Cabinet in Belgrade entertain, believing their own throats are in danger. Another peril lies in the possible sudden coming of spring. Servia must fight or back down. We have no idea that Russia will intervene. The Czar has plenty to look after at home. It is impossible, however, to say what Servia will do."

ENGLAND BACKS DOWN.

NO MORE INTERFERENCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Resentment in government circles against the uncompromising attitude of Austria in the Balkan entanglement is intense, but nobody suggests a warlike protest. All admit that British support of the sacredness of treaties must not extend beyond diplomatic measures. It is also admitted that this country, as well as Russia and France, is not cutting a heroic figure in the situation. Indeed, few deny that the western powers are likely to emerge from the controversy with painfully little dignity.

Foreign Secretary Grey and Premier Asquith, immediately after the treaty of Berlin was torn to shreds, took strong ground against the "outrage upon international law." Russia and France, if less publicly, strongly took the same ground in private. This triple entente demanded that a European conference should be called to "regularize" the situation.

Austria's reply verged upon insolence, and Germany rallied menacingly to the Austrian standard. Now England, Russia and France appear to be willing to accept any face-saving formula that may be available, leaving the Servians either to accept the Austrian heel on their necks or plunge unaided into war.

This morning's Daily Telegraph, while exhibiting extreme bitterness against Austria, says, pathetically, to that country's foreign minister, Baron Aehrenthal:

"Take what you want, but recognize that the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina is a European question."

This looks much like an admission that the voice of England is no longer what it was in the councils of Europe.

The prevailing terrific scare on the subject of the navy suggests that the uppermost thought in British minds today does not reach out to relatively remote matters, but is concentrating on the great problem of how to make the British empire secure against attack.

HUMILIATION IN RUSSIA.

EMPIRE DISINTEGRATING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Russia's attitude in the Balkan imbroglio is causing unspeakable humiliation. The pan-Slavists, the press and Parliament are enraged. Even the conservatives condemn the government, and the speeches in the Duma against the authorities are the fiercest ever heard in that body. The conviction is growing widespread that the empire is disintegrating. People of all shades of political opinion, the newspapers, and members of the Duma, constantly point out the danger of national dismemberment. Prof. Milyoukov places emphasis on this tendency of the times. With so much strife prevailing at home, Russian influence in the Balkans is for the moment practically nil. Herein is the explanation of Austria's arrogance. The Slav spirit is deeply wounded, and one hears serious men on every hand predicting that the day of reckoning will soon come.

CHASM IN BODY EXPOSES HEART.

PRINTER SHOWS VITAL ORGANS FOURTEEN MONTHS.

Bakersfield Man Minus One Lung and With Side of Chest Cut Wide Open Enjoys Life for Over a Year and Does Light Chores Around the County Hospital.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With one lung entirely removed and the right side of the chest cut wide open by a severe operation, John A. Clark, a Washington, D. C., printer died here yesterday after enjoying life for fourteen months after having his vital organs exposed to the exterior during all that time.

Clark was afflicted with empyema, and a necessary operation was performed. He recovered and regained sufficient strength to be around on his feet. The surgeons were unable to close the large orifice left when the lung was removed, and Clark was forced to go about with a chasm fully a foot long and several inches wide in his body. The workings of the heart and lungs and diaphragm were thus exposed and his case was the marvel of the physicians. Twice daily the opening had to be filled with fluid. Clark used to do light chores at the County Hospital and walked regularly over a mile to attend divine worship at St. Francis Church. However, his strength failed, the weakened body could not withstand what his indomitable will demanded, and death resulted.

LOSES ROLLING STOCK.

Fresno, Monterey and Eastern Electric Railway Suffers from an Incendiary Fire.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WATSONVILLE, March 20.—A fire supposed to be of incendiary origin completely destroyed the car barn and storage warehouse of the Fresno, Monterey and Eastern Electric Railway here shortly after midnight this morning.

All the passenger rolling stock, with the exception of one car, was burned, and several cars outside the building were destroyed, with tools and electric wire to the value of $3000. Besides the property of the railway company, a number of packing cases belonging to the A. W. Tate Fruit Company, stored in the warehouse, were destroyed. The railway does not run during the winter and practically all its rolling stock was stored in the building.

There were no lights or fire in the house, and it is generally thought to have been of incendiary origin. The company is insured for $25,000.

WRECK DELAYS TRAFFIC.

Three Freight Cars Derailed and Smashed on Tehachepi Mountain. Cook Caught.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 20. — A freight wreck which occurred this morning on the Tehachepi Mountain, a mile and a half this side of Cable, delayed traffic all day. It was late tonight before the overland passenger trains got past.

Three cars were derailed and smashed.

William V. Dougherty has been arrested on a San Francisco warrant, charging him with grand larceny. Dougherty worked as a cook for the Home Supply Company in the Midway oil fields and is alleged to have stolen thousands of shares of mining stock. Dougherty admits taking the stock to a Los Angeles broker for disposition, but says he did it for a chance companion who claimed to have made a race track follower a $500 loan on the shares.

TULARE.

TULARE, March 19.—The Japanese boarding-house and the Japanese pool hall were entered early this morning by a burglar. About 4 o'clock the owner of the boarding-house was awakened by a noise and found himself confronted by a pistol. He was told to keep quiet or he would be shot. The robber helped himself to all the money he could find and went over to the pool hall. In attempting to get in he awoke the proprietor and his wife, but before they could give an alarm he got into the room and covered them with his gun. He secured money and a gold band ring, and made his escape. The robber wore a white handkerchief over his face, but the Japanese know him to be a white man, and are sure they could identify him. The money secured at the two places totalled about $30.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church gave a largely-attended social at the parsonage last night.

The Visalia Methodist Baraca basketball team and the Tulare High School boys' team played a strenuous game this evening which resulted in a score of 19 to 8 in favor of the Baracas.

RIVERSIDE.

MANY HOMES ARE BEING ERECTED.

RESIDENCES MARKED FEATURE OF BUILDING ACTIVITY.

Iowa Woman Will Erect Eight-Thousand-Dollar House on Sightly Lot—Thousand Acres to Be Planted in the Wineville Section—New Water Company Incorporated.

RIVERSIDE, March 20.—The erection of new homes, in all sections of the city, is a marked feature of the building activity prevailing. Work is to begin soon on a residence for Mrs. Harriet S. Daniels of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on the sightly lot recently acquired on the corner of Orange Grove and Prospect avenues. The home will cost in the neighborhood of $8000.

The contract was let today by C. H. Lewis for an attractive two-story nine-room residence to be built on the north side of Fourteenth street, between Lemon and Lime streets, at a cost of $5200. The porch pillars and butresses will be of blue granite and remainder of the house will be frame. Lester Moore of Los Angeles is the architect.

WINEVILLE DEAL.

The sale of 160 acres of unimproved land near Wineville has been made by Dugald McRae of Los Angeles to Dr. W. F. Stevens of La Center, Ky., who has been visiting in Riverside for a few weeks. It is the intention of Dr. Stevens to improve the land by planting it to alfalfa, as there is plenty of water on the tract for irrigation. The price paid was $10,000, and the deal was made through the agency of C. C. Pond. Including this tract, over 1000 acres will be planted in the Wineville section.

BUYS HOME FOR SON.

W. E. Johnson has sold his home place at No. 441 Mulberry street to A. P. Littleton, who buys it as a home for his son. Mr. Johnson has purchased the Wright property at No. 359 Mulberry street, with seven-room residence. The consideration is not made public.

Another sale made yesterday is that of the C. E. Week place on the corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets, which is purchased by T. E. Saunders of Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Mr. Saunders will occupy it as a home when he returns next fall.

FILES ARTICLES.

The Vista Grande Water Company, which is organized to sink wells and install a pumping plant on the Vista Grande tract, in West Riverside, filed articles of incorporation in the County Clerk's office today. The company has a capital stock of $14,000, fully subscribed, the largest stockholders being A. D. Bell and the Empire Fruit Company, the principal owners of the tract. The directors named are E. N. Hillegas, Frank W. Parsons and A. D. Bell of Riverside, Milo Baker of Los Angeles and N. J. Kellam of Schenectady, N. Y.

SEEKS DAMAGES.

Action for $1000 damages was begun in the Superior Court yesterday by A. H. Lloyd of Coachella against J. H. Griffin and J. L. Rector, who, it is alleged, unlawfully moved a desk, chairs and stock of wall paper from an office in Coachella and deposited them in a public street in front of the building. Lloyd alleges in his complaint that his wall paper business has been ruined in consequence.

TROWEL RECEPTION.

Riverside Masons of Evergreen Lodge, No. 259, gave a big reception to the traveling trowel, which arrived yesterday, accompanied by a large delegation from Los Angeles. It was taken to San Bernardino in the evening, to continue its trip around the world.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, March 20.—The Pacific Electric Railway Company has added a car to Azusa's service. It leaves Los Angeles at 9:30 p.m., and, returning, leaves here for Los Angeles at 10:52 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis and Mr. English friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morris, left England on March 12 for Azusa, where they will make their home.

F. W. Hueatt of Forest City, Mo., is visiting O. P. Blackburn, and expects to locate in this city.

Road Overseer W. T. Barker had the County Surveyor and his men out this week on the Azusa bridge and Puente wagon road. The survey will be finished in a few days.

Misses Maud and Mabel Wendell of Minnesota, who are spending the winter in Southern California, are guests at present of the family of their cousin, I. D. Roach.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Curtis and family of Red Rock, Neb., who are visiting Mrs. Curtis's brother, S. H. Dorning, will locate here.

Iva Purviance, wife and children of Los Angeles were guests one day this week of the family of F. A. Carpenter.

HEMET.

HEMET, March 20.—A Sunday-school institute was held at the Baptist Church this week, attended by representatives from all the local churches. The speakers were Rev. and Mrs. Anderson of the Christian Church of Riverside, Mrs. Collins of Riverside, superintendent of Sunday-school missionary work, Rev. Mr. Loofboro, Riverside, and Miss Strang.

Miss Lorna de Vannah entertained the senior class of the High School with a party at her home on Florida avenue last evening.

Seven cars of lumber were received here this week. A great deal of building in town, as well as on the tract is going on.

Work on the ostrich farm northwest of town is making rapid progress. The pumping plant will soon be installed, and the grading finished, so that the alfalfa can be seeded.

HELPFUL.

BISHOP'S VISIT CHEERS MADAME.

CONATY CALLS ON MODJESKA, WHO RALLIES SOMEWHAT.

Physician Says She Looks Better Than at Any Previous Time in Two Weeks—Dislike of Detective Evidence Leads to Not Guilty Verdict in Yung Case.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mme. Modjeska is today more cheerful and looking better than any day in the last two weeks, reports her physician, Dr. J. P. Boyd, who visited her late this afternoon. Bishop Conaty of Los Angeles spent yesterday with her and her husband, Count Bozenta, at Bay Island, and Dr. Boyd thinks the visit had a good deal to do with cheering up the patient and causing her to rally somewhat.

YUNG GOES FREE.

After three and a half hours' deliberations the jury that tried George Yung on a charge of keeping a tippling house, found the defendent not guilty. A dislike for detective evidence seems to have been a factor in bringing about the result.

There are five aspirants for the position of Supervisor from the second district which will be vacated by Geo. W. Moore, on June 8, to take a $2400 a year job with the Celery Growers' Association. The men out with petitions are J. H. Edwards, Jacob Walton and S. R. Herren, all of Westminster; T. B. Talbert of Huntington Beach, and Jerome Fulsom of Garden Grove.

IMPOSITION.

TRY TO MAKE 'EM PAY TWICE.

OXNARD AND VENTURA COUNTY QUARREL OVER JAPS.

Each Charges, and in Some Instances Collects, Poll Tax and Some of the Disgusted Orientals Are Leaving District, Much to Consternation of Employers.

OXNARD, March 20.—There is a contest between the city of Oxnard and the county of Ventura in regard to which shall receive tre poll tax money from the Japanese and Mexicans who are at present at work in the beet fields near here. The city claims the money from the Japs on the ground that they reside in Oxnard though they at present work in the county.

Both sides to the controversy admit that there is no contest about the State poll tax of $2 and this amount is being paid by the Japanese. All residents of an incorporated town, however, are exempt from the payment of the county poll tax of $2, being held for their city poll tax of that amount. In accordance with this view, Marshal W. E. Kelley has collected the $2 city tax and on top of this the county deputy assessors have attempted to collect for the county.

The Japanese refused this latter demand and as a result Sheriff McMartin, deputy assessors and others have seized horses and other property of the Japs and so forced them to pay the county tax whether or not they held city poll tax receipts.

JAPANESE ARE QUITTING.

As a result of the determination of the city of Oxnard and the county both to have their poll taxes from the Japanese, a number have quit their jobs and as labor is scarce the contractors are becoming worried. Sheriff McMartin this afternoon admits that the county is wrong in its fight, however. As some of the money that has been collected by Assessor Barry's deputies has been paid by Japs who have been residents of Oxnard for several years, he is of the opinion that those men should be exempt, despite the anxiety of the assessors to secure their collection commission.

CLAREMONT COMEDY.

CLAREMONT, March 20.—An amusing three-act comedy was given yesterday evening by the Pomona College Literary Society, at the annual open meeting of the organization. The acts were each written and acted out independently of the other two, by members of the society. The dramatists and actors in the different acts were Rosamond Norman and Vesta Sturges (Act I,) Lloyd Lorbeer and Sarah Atsatt (Act II,) Katharine Norton and Harle Ferris (Act III.) Dexter Rau was stage manager.

These Pomona delegates will attend the annual Y.W.C.A. conference at Capitola next week: Bess Adams, Alice Anderson, Martina Case, Lollian Dickson, Jeannette Durbin, Amanda Fairchild, Bess Fredendall, Ruth Garlock, Helen Ham, Mary Hill, Katharine Jones, Mary Maynard, Florence Moncrieff, Anne Nutt, Bessie Pendleton, Grace Platt, Hope Potter, Lucille Reed, Gladys Stevenson and Ela Sugg. It is expected that with this delegation of twenty, Pomona will have a larger representation than any other college.

C. H. Arnold, recenly of Pomona, has purchased from Dr. W. L. Grant of Upland the well-known ten-acre Grant orange grove of full-bearing trees, located on Tenth street, between Claremont and Upland. There is a residence on the property. The sale was by W. M. and C. K. Short of Pomona.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, March 20.—A mothers' meeting was held yesterday at the Bank Hall. Owing to the absence of the superintendent, Mrs. William Davies, Mrs. C. P. Macy had charge.

Although cloudy weather continues no measurable amount of rain fell today.

Mrs. F. C. Roberts, who spent the past five months here, occupying a part of the Haworth residence on Sumner avenue, left today for her home in Long Beach.

Mrs. M. E. Rawlins, who resides on Washington street, left today for Los Angeles, where she will spend several weeks at the home of her sister.

Arrivals at the Bundy Hotel are V. L. Pastridge, L. F. Lowe, C. W. Sahland, J. B. Robinson, Lewis Jereme and wife, F. B. Henderson and party, Mrs. D. L. McFarland, Los Angeles; John S. Wilson, wife and boy, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Omar Thorp, Riverside; F. E. Clark, L. H. Foster, C. S. Haig, A. Britton, San Francisco.

Among arrivals at the Lakeview Inn are C. J. Blair, Mr. Shedd, president of the Marshall Field Co.; John Mitchell, president Illinois Trust and Savings Bank; J. C. Hutchinson, attorney of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank; George R. Thorn, all of Chicago; J. M. Gilbert, J. E. Sterns, Burt Blackburn, Los Angeles; Miss Broadhead, Miss M. Broadhead, William Broadhead and chauffeur, Jamestown, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Thorn and maid, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Marcy, Chicago; George B. Shattuck, Pomona.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay, who says her ambition is to break the "sheet of crystal" between the rich and poor.

DEMOCRATIC.

SUFFRAGE TO UNITE WOMEN.

MRS. MACKAY LAMENTS DIVISION OF RICH AND POOR.

Society Leader Says Members of Four Hundred Are Not Frivolous, But Want to Work for Social and Civic Betterment—Sheet of Crystal Separates Classes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, leader in the woman's suffrage movement, has found a "sheet of crystal" separating rich and poor women, and it is her ambition to break the barrier.

"It is pathetic," she declares, "to think that there should be any division of feeling between the women who have leisure and the women who have none.

"Here they are, divided, as it were, by a great sheet of crystal. They are near together and yet they are so separated that while those on the one side can see those on the other side, they cannot hear them, or speak to them, or rightly understand them."

Mrs. Mackay, who is president of the Equal Franchise Society, has written an article about her reasons for actively taking the field for equal enfranchisement.

"Why," Mrs. Mackay says, "to my mind the real importance of giving women votes would be found in this—that a multitude of practical questions now left unheeded would be taken up and solved.

"We must see our opportunity. There are filthy streets and frightful tenements to be made clean and wholesome. There are schools which educate the children of the women of today, and these need constant care. There is the injustice and the oppression suffered by those women who have to make a living for themselves.

"It is such a mistake to fancy that women who have leisure and money are indifferent and frivolous. Nothing in the world could be less true."

Mrs. Mackay not only defends the women of the "Four Hundred," but points out many ways in which women of all classes can work toward civic betterment through the agency of the ballot box.

REUNION AT REDONDO.

Nebraska Tourists and Former Residents of State Enjoy Picnic at the Beach.

REDONDO, March 20.—More than 800 members of the California Association of Nebraskans and tourists from that State attended a basket picnic and reunion here, today.

A meeting was held at 11 o'clock on the picnic grounds on Pacific avenue, at which W. H. Morris of Los Angeles, president of the society, presided. G. W. Wattles, a multimillionaire of Omaha, who is spending the winter in Los Angeles; C. O'Gara of Los Angeles, and Dr. W. J. Jeter of the same city, made addresses.

In the afternoon, dancing in the pavilion, fishing and ocean bathing were enjoyed.

AVALON.

AVALON, March 20.—Ex-Congressman Conn of Elkhart, Ind., today closed a deal with G. Burnham of this place for four cottages and his house on Crescent avenue. The price paid is not announced, but it is believed to be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Nolan of Salt Lake City and Miss M. Wessley of Erie, Pa., are guests at the Grand View.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES.

COL. TUCKER IN REPLY TO WIFE.

SAYS HER INCOME IS LARGER THAN HIS OWN.

Alleges That She Has Done Everything Possible to Disgrace Him and Cut Off His Income and Maintains She Has no Claim to Support or Fees.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. William F. Tucker, retired, filed an answer, denying the charge made in the bill for separate maintenance filed by Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Tucker, daughter of Gen. John A. Logan. He asserts that his wife has no right to maintain her action, and asks the court to dismiss the bill. He charges that she has been doing everything in her power to disgrace him since May 3, 1907, when he refused to enter into an agreement with her by which she was to obtain a divorce.

They were married November 27, 1877, and Col. Tucker says his wife abandoned him long before April, 1907, and still refuses to live with him. He charges that she is living apart from him without any fault upon his part of her own free will and volition, and of her own fault.

He charges that she has devoted her time and attention and has laid out large sums of money in the payment of attorney's fees, in an effort to have him dismissed in disgrace from the United States Army, and has done everything within her power to curtail his income. If she had been successful in these efforts, he says, he would be possessed of no income whatever except from such real and personal estate as he is possessed of, which is not sufficient for his own support.

Col. Tucker says his wife possesses more than four times as much real estate and personal estate as he owns, and that the value of her real estate he believes to be upward of $100,000. He asserts also that her annual income is four times the amount of all his income except his salary as a retired army officer and states that she is abundantly able to take care of and support herself and to employ counsel to prosecute her suit.

CONTINUOUS BREAKFASTS.

Electric Lights Used to Deceive Birds Into Eating an Abnormal Number of Meals.

[Pearson's Weekly:] Inside the new small bird house, at the London zoo, there has just been completed an arrangement of incandescent lamps, the object of the installation being to induce the tiny feathered inmates to take breakfast a couple of hours earlier than they otherwise would do.

It is controlled by a switch outside the building, and each morning at 6 o'clock a keeper turns on the lights. This, of course, arouses the birds, who commence feeding forthwith, under the impression that day has dawned.

The same dodge has been used from time immemorial for fattening quails for the London market. These birds feed only in the early morning, so, after being caught, they are kept in underground cellars, fitted with electric lights, which are periodically switched on and off. Every time the lights are raised, the quails start eating, going contentedly to roost when they are lowered. In this way a bird can be induced to eat as many as twenty-four breakfasts in one day, the meals being sandwiched in between as many naps.

In the Berlin Zoölogical Gardens certain species of bears have been induced to hibernate by a similar arrangement. Their dens are kept continually illuminated, for six or seven weeks preceding the approach of winter, by means of powerful acetylene motor lamps, and the animals are, at the same time, supplied with practically unlimited quantities of food of the kind they are most fond of.

As a result, they grow enormously fat, and when the lights are finally extinguished and their dens barricaded, they go contentedly to sleep for two or three months on end, precisely as they would do in a state of nature. They wake up in the spring very lean, and ravenously hungry, but enjoy splendid health during all the rest of the year.

Angeleños here to spend Sunday include Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Noel, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Foster, Sr., Frank Foster, Jr., R. Ingersoll, E. E. Chace, William L. Collins, E. R. Longley and family, J. E. Pinkham and party, Alston Seielstad, Miss Lena Hansen, Miss Volta Haddon, Miss Florence Rasmunson, Mrs. K. L. Kay, Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Sherman.

GRAND CHARITY BALL.

The Jewish Sisterhood of Los Angeles and Ladies' Auxiliary to the Consumptive Relief Association will give a grand cotillion ball in the Goldberg-Bosley Assembly Hall, Sixteenth and Flower streets, on Tuesday evening.

Convicted Himself.

"The constable seems wonderfully certain about the details of my case," said a defendant with a sneer; "but how is it he doesn't call his fellow officers to corroborate what he says?"

"There's only one constable stationed in the village, sir," exclaimed the policeman.

"But I saw two last night," indignantly asserted the defendant.

"Exactly," the policeman rejoined, smiling broadly, "that's jest the charge against you."—[Punch.

STRANGE MALADY.

GRIEF FORMS POISON IN WOMAN'S BLOOD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most remarkable cases of that rarest of maladies, auto-toxic poisoning, is interesting the house staff and consulting physicians of the Fordham Hospital in the person of Mrs. Ida Perazzo, widow of a steamship captain who perished in a marine disaster on the Mediterranean two years ago. The woman's condition is extremely critical.

The strange feature of the case is that today was to have been the occasion of Mrs. Perazzo's second marriage, but apparently her unrest of mind was such that her hysterical condition and overwrought nerves converted her blood into virulent poison by auto-suggestion. To such an advanced stage had her malady progressed that yesterday afternoon she was seized with convulsions.

Tests for epilepsy failed to result in a confirmation of the first diagnosis and Dr. Reilly, the house surgeon, concluded from various marked symptoms that the woman had been poisoned. Inquiry into the history of her case speedily convinced Dr. Reilly and his staff that they had on their hands one of the first cases of auto-toxic poisoning ever recorded in New York.

Investigation showed that Mrs. Perazzo came to this country from Italy three months ago. She was bowed down by incessant grieving over the tragic death of her husband, and in nightmares constantly saw him on the bridge of his sinking ship, the Regent, plying between Genoa and Marseilles.

Almost nightly these visions had recurred and from a cheerful, normal woman Mrs. Perazzo became a morbid, hysterical creature—a prey to hallucinations and fantasies.

GENEROUS HEARTS.

THE ITALIAN RELIEF BOARD'S STATEMENT.

Grateful to the People of Los Angeles—Full List of Contributors to Fund. Account of Disbursements for Earthquake Sufferers.

THE Italian Colony, the members of the Italian Relief Committee, together with the Italian Consular Agent in this city, beg leave to extend their most heartful thanks and to express their appreciation to the people of Los Angeles, for the wonderful promptness and liberality of their contributions for the relief of the distressed in Southern Italy. The terrific disaster unmercifully swept cities and villages, cost an appalling number of human lives. It combined in its blind fury of destruction the powerful and uncontrollable forces of all elements, earth, sea and fire. It awakened in all the civilized world in general, and in the United States in particular, such an impulsive generosity, that Italy will never forget, and which will remain forever in its history as the most eloquent and sublime proof of the tenderness and brotherly disposition of the human heart, in spite of the miserable racial, political or religious prejudices which sometimes prevent us to love and to respect, and to help each other as real brothers and members of the same great family.

We are proud to notice and to state that even in the midst of this wave of sympathy, that swept throughout this country, Los Angeles stands among the first for the size and promptness of its contributions. Because the people in this Land of Sunshine have promptly realized the awful calamity befallen to what is now the land of death and of distress, and we will hereafter associate in our minds the horror of the disaster with the spontaneous generosity of the relief, and we shall think that the latter is the silver lining of this cloud of sorrow that overwhelms our native country.

[Signed]

MAY SUCCEED VON BUELOW AS CHANCELLOR.

Prince Radolin,

German Ambassador to France, for whom great promotion waits, according to report.

Swiss in Washington.

A shipload of what is to be a colony of 29,000 Swiss has just arrived in Mason county, Washington. Land is being assigned from an immense tract purchased by a Berne capitalist. It is said that by April several shiploads will have arrived. The colonists will bring fifteen shiploads of blooded cattle and other livestock.

The Swiss farmers will engage in fancy stock-raising, make butter, cheese and sell all farm produce, together with fruits, such as prunes, cherries, pears, peaches, figs and nuts. A boat line will be operated along the Pacific coast by the colonists.

Didn't Know Everything.

"I well remember," said H. K. Adair, a San Francisco detective, "a walk I once took down Market street. As I strode along, proud and happy, a drunken man had the impudence to stop me. 'Ain't you Mr. Adair, the detective?' he said. 'Yes,' said I, 'what of it? Who are you?' 'Mr. Adair,' said the untidy wretch, as he laid his hand on my shoulder to keep himself from falling. 'I'll tell you who I am. Mr. Adair, I'm—hic—the husband of your washerwoman.' 'Well, what of that?' said I. 'You see, you don't know everything, Mr. Adair,' he replied. 'What don't I know?' I demanded. 'Well, Mr. Adair,' said he, 'you don't know that—hic—I'm wearin' one of your new white shirts.' "—[Exchange.

Strange that in industrial development men were so slow. For 10,000 years they drew heavily their wretched carts over roads hub-deep in mud or sand before they learned to lay a rail and lessen the friction 95 per cent. or more. With the invention of the steam engine and the discovery of electricity, in 100 years industrial development has made greater progress than in all the 10,000 years before. The accumulated wealth of today is 75 per cent. greater than sixty years ago, and this in two generations of men. The annual production of wealth this year is 90 per cent. greater than 100 years ago. The comforts of life are as much greater than when Abraham Lincoln was born.

And now mankind has only begun to live. Only in our day have the real problems of life been discussed in an earnest and practical way. Medical science has made less progress in 3000 years, in 2000 years, in 1000 years than any other science. Less has been done in recent years to ascertain the root of physical, mental and moral disease than to perfect machinery in our mills, or implements to sow and harvest our crops. The quality of the potato crop, the abundance of the wheat crop, have commanded more study and thought than how to get the most mentally and spiritually or even physically out of our own offspring.

Today for the first time mankind is turning its best thought and most earnest efforts from the creation of a more effective reaping machine or cotton loom to the making of better men and women. From the best ration and care to raise the finest steer or the fattest pig we are just beginning to ask how our children should be fed with the proper physical, mental and moral ration. Instead of devoting all our time to the devising of a furnace which will get a greater coefficient of power out of a ton of coal we are asking how our sons and daughters shall be brought up so as to eliminate from their systems the germs of physical, mental and moral disease.

Boys and girls are not blocks of stone to be put through the same machine and run through all in the same shape. They are not all the same clay to be pressed and burned into the same bricks. They are not seed potatoes to be dropped on the same hills. Each child is a microcosm capable of infinite development.

We are making marvelous progress along these new paths. The great white plague is to be attacked. Backward children are to be the subject of special, careful, earnest study. Crime is being considered as much an abnormal development as overshot teeth, or feet that "toe in," and remedies are being sought for the moral obliquities about as for the physical.

Perhaps the most astounding of these new "waves of thought" is that the saying "Not what goeth into a man defileth him" must be taken with a great measure of reservation. In very fact that is in a way what does defile. Eating is older than humanity, and the fact that we do not know how to eat is more astonishing than that it took 10,000 years to learn to lay rails for wheels to run over to lessen the friction.

The life depends on the liver. Not on the person who lives the life but on the liver that digests his food and makes him a good man or a bad one.

Moses lived the simple life, and knew much about diet. The people of the days of Sophocles spent most of their time out of doors. Their houses were as simple as their life. The Greeks were athletes and lived mostly on fruits, nuts and vegetables, and their drink was water from the springs, or a very simple form of fermented grape juice. Their bodies were wholesome, their livers active, their minds clear, and their temper good. As we become less gross feeders, we shall have more healthy bodies, and our minds will be clearer while our spirits will be more joyful and pure. Life with good livers will be better than when the organ is clogged and full of corrupting juices of food that cannot be digested. The man with a clean liver will be one of pleasant manners, of clear thoughts, bright hopes, high aspirations, and a clear conscience.

MY BIG BROTHER.

Who makes me smile
Every once in a while?
Who brushes the cobwebs away?
Who soothes the pain
In my nerve-racked brain
At the close of a tiresome day?
My Big Brother!

Who gives me hope
So I do not mope,
When things go awry sometimes?
Who makes me stronger
To bear yet longer
My life of discordant lines?
My Big Brother!

Who is so forceful,
So quick and resourceful
When questions of import arise?
Who is compassionate,
Who is dispassionate,
Who is so pleasingly wise?
My Big Brother!

The Yesterdays of Nations
By Wilbur D. Nesbit

The burden of Damascus: Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.—[Isaiah xvii, 1.

Broken pillar and crumbling stone
Tell of her yesterdays,
Tell of the time when she stood alone
Mighty in all her ways.
Trackless stretches of heaping sand,
Red in the wasting heat,
Breathe of sinuous saraband
Tripped by the joyous feet.

Fallen temple and shattered tomb,
Tumbled and gaping wall,
Tell of clambering vine and bloom—
Beauty that covered all.
Silent, solemn and echoless,
Under the brooding sky—
Where the profit to them that guess,
Asking us when and why?

Once the trumpet in brazen glee
Sang at the palace gates;
Once the masters of minstrelsy
Babbled of loves and hates;
Once the sword in the jeweled sheath
Clamored along the way—
Dead today, with the crumbled wreath
Worn in that yesterday.

So the glamour and so the pride—
Marble and brass and gold—
Dust of ages to come will hide
Tombs of the years will hold.
We, unknowing and overvain,
Strong in our sweep and sway,
Hug the baubles that mark our reign—
Living our yesterday.

THE KEY.

One dry, brass-tinted afternoon, when day trailed slow in travel,
Lying across from a mirror's length, this thing did I unravel:

My eyes, passing idly o'er objects near, encountered themselves in the glass,
And I was possessed of an inward sight—how like fragrance it did pass!

I saw through my own soul's windows, from which streamed rainbow lights
That were braided rays of hope and faith, with a strand of hearts' delight.

And in the dwelling of my soul were caskets regal and strong
They held my desires; I'd find the key, though the search be fierce and long.

My heart within me was weak and still, as I searched the rose-leaf walls,
And scanned the jewel-tinted floors and the fragile crystal halls.

I found the key in life's red cup; it was deep in the dregs of the bowl,
It was diamond clear and diamond strong, and ah! it was self-control!

BESS MARJORY MUNN.

Caught on the Rebound.

The old man was lecturing his more or less wayward son on the evils of getting up late in the morning.

"Remember," he said, "that it was the early bird that caught the worm."

"But how about the worm, dad?" queried the youth, who thought he had his sire up in the air. "Where did his reward for getting up early come in?"

"I am informed," replied the old man, gravely, "that the worm was on his way home—hadn't been in bed at all."

And there being nothing more to say, the young man said nothing.—[Chicago News.

Japan's Commercial Plans. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE TRADE OF THE PACIFIC.

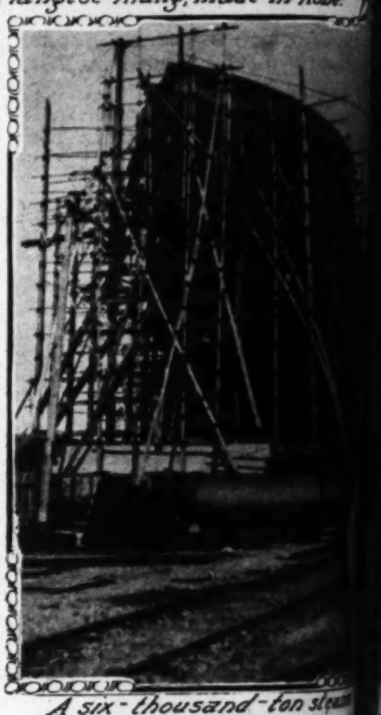
THE JAPANESE ARE SCHEMING TO GOBBLE THE ORIENT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KOBE, 1909.—Will Japan gobble the trade of the Orient? She is laying her plans to do so, and from now on will strain every nerve to that end. I have just returned from an investigation of one of the lines along which she is working. I refer to shipbuilding. Since her war with China Japan has established great shipbuilding yards in different parts of the empire, and she has now tens of thousands of men making steel vessels for her foreign trade. Coming into this harbor of Kobe, the most striking things I saw were two huge unfinished steamers just launched from the Kawasaki dockyards. Each was of 9000 tons and is intended to form a part of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha line, plying between Japan and Europe by the Suez Canal. These vessels will be completed within a few months, and they will be among the biggest steamers going to Europe. In addition to them a half-dozen 6000-ton ships are now being built for the same line here and at Nagasaki, and there are many other steamers under way. This country has over 1100 steamers of various kinds which she has built at home, and of these 173 are of steel. She has 4000 home-built sailing craft, and the total tonnage of her steam merchant marine aggregates more than 1,100,000 tons.

American typewriters in Japan.

Boat, on the Yangtse Kiang, made in Kobe.



A six-thousand-ton stea building in Kawasaki ya

In the Kawasaki Shipyards.

Some of the best and biggest of the home-built steamers have been made here at Kobe, and the largest in the Kawasaki shipyards, which I visited today. These yards are on the left of the harbor as you come in. They front the west shore and they cover more than forty acres. The waterfront is a forest of scaffolding surrounding the ships now under construction, and the berths include two for 5000-ton vessels, one for 8000 tons, another for 14,000 tons and one for 20,000. There are also berths for ships of from 500 to 3000 tons each, and for ships of every kind, from torpedo boats up to great ocean liners. Out in the harbor a 150-ton steel crane is being erected.

The Kawasaki company has lately constructed ten gunboats for the Chinese navy. It built a yacht for the late Empress Dowager and something like thirty of its steamers are now plying on the Yangtse Kiang and other Chinese rivers. It has built one destroyer and three torpedo boats for the King of Siam. These have just been delivered and three more have been ordered. A 6000-ton ship for the Pacific trade will be completed this month and there are other vessels under way. Altogether since its organization the Kawasaki company has built more than 300 vessels of different kinds. Its works have had in their employ during the past year on the average between 9000 and 10,000 men. This force has been somewhat reduced on account of the hard times, but the prospects for improvement are good, and the managers tell me that they will be soon running full again. The company has a capital of $5,000,000 and it pays dividends of 12 per cent.

How the Japanese Handle Machinery.

In going through the works, I was interested in the up-to-date machines and in the masterly way in which these almond-eyed laborers handle them. The 10,000 employés are paid from 12½ cents to $1.25 a day, the average wage being about 40 cents, or not more than one-sixth that of our men. For these wages these Japanese mechanics are doing all the work that you will see done in such shipyards as Cramps, or in our big naval gun factory in Washington. The men were dressed in European clothes and, at a distance, they looked not unlike our American machinists. Here they are working at the lathes, planing iron like paper; there punching holes in a boiler plate at one or more per minute; and in another mighty shop acting as blacksmiths at a score of blazing forges. I saw them handling cranes, some of which were carrying twenty-five tons of metal at one time. The cranes ran on overhead tracks, and the turn of a screw lifted the load. One such crane was carrying sixty tons and near by, steel planers, which take in an area as large as a good-sized parlor, were operating.

All of these machines are of the latest invention, and the most improved style. Many of them came from America, and many are electrical. The works are run by electricity, steam and water-power, and the central power-house is equipped with machinery made in Schenectady, N. Y.

The managers of these works are the three sons of the famous financier, Count Matsukata, the president being Kojiro Matsukata, one of Japan's best-known business men. These men have all been educated in the United States and Europe. Mr. Goro Matsukata, who showed me through the establishment, is a graduate of Yale; one of his brothers was graduated at Harvard, and another has spent eleven years in Belgium and Germany. I mention this to show the kind of training possessed by the men who are doing the big things of Japan.

Made by Government Subsidies.

I am told that the Kawasaki Company could not have grown to its present proportions had it not been for the government subsidies. This is so with the other shipbuilding companies; and the home-built ships of today are all due to government support. As it is now, there is a bounty of $6 a ton on all vessels of from 700 to 1000 tons, and one of $10 per ton for vesssels of more than that. There is also a bounty of $2.50 per horsepower on the engines used. Sums like these run into big figures when the ships are large. At $10 a ton, the two 9000-ton ships in the harbor will each receive $90,000, with a large rake-off for their horse power. These bounties have been given since 1896, and, as a result, Japan is now able to build about as good vessels as any other nation. Other bounties are awarded to all ships in the carrying trade; and Japan's mercantile marine now amounts to more than a million tons, the greater part of which has been created within the past few years. The nation has now a half-dozen big steamship companies which cover all parts of the Pacific and Indian oceans. Most of its big liners are run by Japanese captains and there is a nautical college at Tokio whose graduates furnish the principal officers.

Japan's Ocean Liners.

The largest steamship company here is the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. It has ninety-three steamers with a tonnage of more than 300,000, and its vessels trade regularly with America, Bombay, Australia and Europe. The company also does business on the Asiatic rivers, and it has ships to Siberia, Formosa and Siam. The length of its service is altogether about 45,000 miles. This company has a capital of $11,000,000, and it pays dividends of 12 per cent.

Another big corporation is the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, the Osaka Merchant Company, which has a capital of over $7,000,000, and a third is the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, whose capital is a little over $1,500,000. The latter company has a regular service to San Francisco, and it will eventually ply to South America as well. In addition there are the Mitsui Bussen Kaisha, which has a large number of coasting ships, and the Japan-China Steamship Company, which is running steamers on the Chinese rivers. All of these companies are paying dividends and all are heavily subsidized.

A Patriarchal Government.

Indeed, the government of Japan is decidedly patriarchal. It is nursing industries of all kinds, and is doing all it can to stimulate trade. There is a higher council of agricultural commerce and industry. This is composed of twenty members, five of whom are government officials, and the other fifteen well-known business men. This council investigates all matters of foreign trade, and schemes as to how Japan may take advantage of them. Its discussions deal with such things as international banking, the encouragement of certain exports and the tariff.

In addition to this, the government has been sending out special students and others to look up foreign markets. These go not only to the Orient, but Europe and the United States. In the eight yea ing 1901, 124 agents were sent abroad.

Another method of encouraging trade is by young men to be trained in the factories and cial establishments of other countries. These are under the control of the Japanese consuls they send back regular reports concerning the ments and localities where they are stationed are probably 100 or more such men abroad large number of them are in America and many are in China; and some in the Straits Set Java and the Philippines.

The government is encouraging the formation dustrial guilds and the various classes of have their own combinations. There are over guilds in Japan, and also 600 guilds devoted merce.

In the Commercial Museums.

Japan is establishing commercial bureaus seums throughout the far east. There are forty of these, including many in Japan cated in Korea, another at Singapore, and Bombay. Similar museums have been started kow, Chungking, Shasi and elsewhere in China was recently opened in Bangkok. Of the tions, the largest are in the big cities of Osaka. I visited the Tokio Museum the takes up the better part of a large three-story and it has about 25,000 samples of foreign made goods. It is somewhat like the Com seum in Philadelphia, save that it is larger like an exposition. It contains all kinds raw materials and manufactured products by side with those of Japan. There are of machinery and electrical works of home turers, and of all sorts of metal articles from to iron. There is Japanese lacquer made side by side with the beautiful native is worth its weight in gold and which artist can copy. There are Japanese watches, and even Japanese pearls. The magnificent, and they are home-made. They by introducing grains of sand or other cles into the shells of the oysters while has now sixty chambers of commerce, and it is sending commercial commissions abroad. During year it has been inviting American merchants this country, and there have been several large from the Pacific Coast, which have been through the factories and entertained generally. has also many commercial schools, and it is technical schools in which all branches of are taught. In Tokio I found one industrial for young women with more than 1000 students learning embroidery, sewing and the making flowers and other articles for export.

Foreign Commerce.

of such efforts, Japan's foreign commerce increasing. It is now more than double what 1900, and it has greatly increased since the War. It made a jump at the close of the China War, and until our last panic occurred its and imports were larger than ever. Today it more business with the United States than other nation. a big opening for our cotton underwear. In ordinary Japanese has never worn anything under his kimono, and a strip of wadded cotton was all that shielded his bare legs from the blasts of winter. He is now beginning to buy knit stuffs, and the whole nation wants drawers. The men here often wear these without kimonos, so that a union suit forms full dress. This demand is bound to grow and our exporters should study it.

The prices of all things are now high. Cotton elastics which retail at home for from 3 to 5 cents a yard are selling in Tokio for 30 cents, and all foreign goods are high-priced. Biscuits, or crackers, as we call them, which bring 5 cents a pound at home sell here for 30 cents. They are imported from England and are sent out in tins tightly sealed to keep out the moisture.

I see a great deal of California canned fruit and Columbia River salmon in the stores, and also imitations of them. Japan is now canning salmon herself, and she is experimenting in making canned sardines out of the herring from the shores of her new possession of Saghalien. Many trade marks are imitated, and one has to watch carefully to protect his goods. This is also the case with merchandise intended for Manchuria and Korea. It should all be marked with Chinese characters, as well as with the American trade marks.

Our Machinery in Demand.

I find there is a great deal of American machinery coming into Japan. Most of our big exporting firms have agents here and many machines and machine tools are sold. Steam turbines are being introduced, and with the electric possibilities of the country there is bound to be a big demand for electrical goods in the future. The various kinds of American typewriters are for sale in all the large cities, and our sewing machines, graphophones and phonographs are to be had everywhere. In my trip through the Kawasaki dock yards I saw many American machines in operation, and in the planing mills and carpenter shops found the men working on Oregon lumber.

One of the big openings of the future and a big market of today is in window glass. In the past all the windows of this country were of paper, and the inner walls of every house were composed of hundreds of paper panes. In the towns these are now being replaced with glass; and as a result Japan will soon use more glass than any other country of the far east. The new school buildings which are now being erected are almost walled with glass, and every large structure is a blaze of light. Indeed, the conditions are changing so rapidly in this part of the world that if our manufacturers and exporters would take advantage of them they should keep men on the ground to study the markets and to push their goods in accordance with the demand of the times.

Currency Was Elastic.

ADVENTURE OF AN ITALIAN SAILOR IN BUENOS AYRES.

From New York Sun.

THE actual sensation of enjoying the wealth of a Carnegie or a Rockefeller does not come to very many poor fellows. Peter Comella, a fruit dealer of Macon, Mo., had it. He tells the story thus:

"I was first gunner on a cruiser of the Italian navy in 1897. While in the harbor at Buenos Ayres I went ashore with half a dozen mates, intending to have a modest blow-out with a gold ten-franc piece.

"At a bank I requested its exchange for native currency. The teller consulted a tape and looked thoughtful for a few moments. Then he went to the vault and brought out a large box. He began counting bills until I thought he had forgotten my request. I intimated that I was in a hurry, but he only smiled and went on counting. When he had stacked up about four inches of native currency he pushed it through the window, first having secured my gold piece.

"'Is all that mine?' I asked in surprise.

"He bowed in pleasant acquiescence.

"I stowed the bills away in various pockets, and when I got outside I reared back and said to the boys:

"See here, fellows, I told you that I was going to give you a blow-out in honor of my birthday, but since I've seen the looks of the town I have made up my mind to do better than that. You just follow me, and whatever I do you say 'Yes;' the thing's on me today.

"I hailed a native and asked him to direct me to the most bang-up restaurant in the town, some place where we could get wine on ice and see a vaudeville while we were enjoying the meal. I don't suppose that a crowd of jack tars ever had as much quiet enjoyment in all their lives as we did in that high-tone Buenos Ayres café. When we finished, I presented to each of the waiters a couple of my shin plasters and sauntered over to the cashier, wearing a toothpick and my cap tilted gracefully on one side.

"The gentleman behind the desk had a beautiful waxed mustache and was good to look upon. He bowed courteously as he handed me the bill, which was Greek to me. I laid down a handful of my money of the republic and waited for the change.

"The cashier smiled deferentially as he put the money in the drawers and held out his smooth, white hand for more. I laid another stack of bills in his hand, which went the way of the rest, and the white hand came out again. By this time I began to feel a little funny. Still I came again and the process was repeated. Finally I emptied my pockets of my cargo of native currency and said with some indignation:

"There is all I have got and I am not going to pay you another cent. I have already given you enough to buy a block of stone-front houses, and I don't intend to be swindled. You can do what you like about it, but you are not going to impose upon this crowd.

"The cashier looked distressed. He stepped into an adjoining room and came back with a gentleman to whom he apparently explained the situation. The gentleman said at that particular time native currency was off a bit, and that it required virtually a wheelbarrowload to get a square meal. He said there were six of us, and as representatives of the Italian government we had been served with exceptional consideration; the bill was only 40 francs, a very modest price, he assured me, for the character of service we had had.

"He wasn't at all angry, but merely discussed the matter as one that might be of interest to us. He said that the purchasing power of native money fluctuated like a weather vane in a time of storm. It had been pushed down that day by the exchange until it was hardly worth the paper it was printed on, but tomorrow it might be 'way up, and if I stayed over the money I had tendered might pay for the meal and there be something left.

"He kindly suggested that we should wait the action of the market if our ships remained in the harbor. In speaking of the curious shifting of money values, he told us that a man might start to work in the morning on an agreed wage of two pesos a day and that by nightfall the money might have dropped off so that his day's wages would not buy a nickel cigar; the government was trying to straighten out the matter, but the manipulators liked it best as it was.

"The gentleman, who it afterward turned out was the proprietor, invited us into his private room, and while there related to us this incident:

"A burglar broke into the residence of a wealthy broker, and was helping himself to the money in a private safe when the owner of the house heard the noise and came in. The burglar had a sack full of paper money and was loading up his pockets with more. The broker turned on the light and smiled as the burglar presented a pistol at his head.

"'My friend,' said the broker to the burglar, 'do you know the quotations of the market when it closed today?'

"The burglar growled that he didn't bother his head with such things.

"'I should think a man in your business would keep posted on such matters,' said the broker; 'you deal in money, same as I do, and you ought to know what you are getting. Now, this cartload of plunder you have here is not worth lugging away according to today's quotations. There is hardly enough here for you to get on a first-class drunk. But now, as long as you are here and need some money, as I presume you do, I have got a plan to suggest that will beat this all hollow.'

"The burglar lowered his gun and looked suspiciously at the broker. The broker pulled out his cigar case and tendered a cigar to his companion. Then he went on to explain his scheme to the burglar.

"'You take all the currency you can find here,' said the man of finance, 'and then we'll go over to Señor Cortez de Valparaiso's residence down the boulevard and hit his safe. I think he has on hand now several hundred thousand bills of this kind.

"'Perhaps you'd better let me use your mask; I know how to get in better than you do, and you stand outside and I'll pass the money to you. No, you needn't be afraid of me playing you any tricks; I'll tell the Señor all about it in the morning and he'll make several barrels of money—good money—by the scheme and will very likely reward you handsomely for the part you've taken in the matter. You see you are not a man of finance, like the Señor and myself.

"'Money on the exchange will open very low in the morning. A little gold will buy an armful of it. Well, I'll hit the market right on the jump and gather in everything that's offered at the ruling price, tendering gold.

"'Then we'll tell the police that my residence and the Señor's were burglarized last night, and they of course will give it to the newspapers. That will mean something like a million pesos withdrawn from the circulation of the country and the public will gather the idea that it is in the hands of—er, a gentleman who works at night.

"'That will send money up nearly to par, and then you and I will unload our swag. We ought to make several millions before this time tomorrow night.'

"The burglar admitted that he was but a kindergarten student in the art of making money. He appointed the broker as captain and humbly agreed to follow his lead. It is said to be a fact that the three of them cleared a fortune apiece before the market closed the next day on that little scheme, and the burglar was enabled to retire from business with his honestly-earned wealth.

"We listened in amazement. None of us had a story in mind that was worth the telling after that. The proprietor looked at his watch and then excused himself for a few moments while he went into the office. He returned with a pleasant smile upon his features and said:

"'Gentlemen, the quotations just received from the stock exchange indicate a rapid rise in money. According to the rate at this hour you have overpaid your bill by something like 400 pesos. Would you like the change in native currency or gold?'

"I told him that I would take it in gold, and that I wished he would rush it along before the market changed again."

By a Special Contributor.

CONGRESS' voting national medals in gold to Orville and Wilbur Wright "for their ability, courage and success in navigating the air," is a signal honor conferred on but a dozen previous occasions as a reward for meritorious acts of a peaceful nature.

Our national medalists belong in the innermost sanctuary of the national temple of fame, where they can be placed only by joint resolution of Congress, approved by the President. The first of their number was Washington himself, whom the Continental Congress in 1776 voted a gold medal and the nation's thanks for his causing the British evacuation of Boston. Since then, upward of forty joint resolutions of Congress have conferred this great honor upon the conspicuous heroes of our various wars, whose stories we already know by heart. But this is now an era of peace, and what interests us more is to recall the deeds of civilian glory which Congress has rewarded with national medals in gold.

How Francis Won His.

The Wrights are the first civilians to receive this reward in more than twenty years. Of previous recipients of this category the last was Joseph Francis of Boston, inventor of the life car. Congress in March, 1887, passed a joint resolution thanking him for his "lifelong services to humanity and to his country" and voting him a gold medal to be presented by the President. Cleveland withheld his signature from the resolution until too late after adjournment, but in 1888 it was passed again, and the medal was pinned upon the inventor's breast by the President in the east room of the White House. This medal was the largest which the mint has ever stamped for any one save Grant. It was four inches in diameter—considerably larger than a butter plate—and is said to have cost $5000. It is now on exhibition in the National Museum.

Francis was a remarkable man in many ways, and, like many geniuses, he was a precocious youth. When only 11 he exhibited a fancy boat at a fair, and when only 18 received from the Massachusetts Mechanics' Institute the first prize for a fast rowboat. This was back in 1819. Then the Secretary of the Navy sent him to the Portsmouth Navy Yard to build modern lifeboats for our men-of-war, and he fell to inventing life-saving apparatus of surprising design.

Some of these are said to have been the world's first iron floating vessels. His life car was given to the world as far back as 1838, and one of these was placed on the New Jersey coast, near Long Branch, in 1849. The following year, when the British immigrant ship Ayreshire, was wrecked off the beach, Francis's life car was given its first trial and saved 200 of those on board—all save one, who insisted upon riding outside the car while his family were inside. The government, which thirty-seven years later was to vote the nation's thanks to the then obscure inventor, had taken small stock in the "crank invention" and had allowed Francis to install it only at his own expense. Today this same car is on exhibition in the National Museum as one of the nation's sacred relics. The first four years that Francis had this and other lifeboats in use they saved 2150 lives. He was 78 years old when the nation gave him his long-merited reward. Thirty-two years before Napoleon III had presented him with a diamond-studded snuff box of gold, valued at $2500 and twenty-seven years before the Czar had given him the knighthood of St. Stanislaus, with a medal and diploma. He had also received medals and awards from various foreign, American and international institutes.

Melville's Heroism Rewarded.

Two years after this award to Francis, Congress had, however, voted a gold medal to a national hero who, although not a civilian, had rendered these rewarded services upon a mission of peace. This was George Wallace Melvile, who until recently was engineer-in-chief, United States Navy. He was a veteran of the Civil War when he sailed for the polar regions with De Long in the Jeannette in 1879. They had been gone from San Francisco two years when their vessel was sunk in the ice. When Melville and De Long succeeded in reaching land with a portion of the crew they were 150 miles apart, and De Long and all but two of his men perished. Melville never gave up until he had found the bodies of De Long and his companions, four months later, returning them to the United States, where they were buried with honors in 1884. When Congress voted him his gold medal for this great exhibition of bravery, it also advanced him fifteen numbers.

Saved a Hundred Lives.

The next civilian, before Francis, to receive such an honor was John Horn, Jr., of Detroit, whom in 1874 Congress voted a gold medal in recognition "of his heroic and humane exploits in rescuing men, women and children from drowning in the Detroit River." This man had saved more than 100 people at odd times, and often had had to pay for his heroism by remaining bedfast for weeks following exposure to the water filled with ice. During the great conflagration of the Detroit railroad depot in 1866 he rescued nine persons, one after the other, continuing to swim until he collapsed from exhaustion. At another time after a long struggle in the ice to save a woman he had been carried home by four men who had to work over him four hours to restore his blood to circulation. The same day that this medal was awarded to Horn Congress voted its first general appropriation for life-saving medals, which have since been awarded by the executive, without the need of specific Congressional action. The year previously Congress had voted special medals to Capt. Jared S. Crandall, lighthouse-keeper of Westerly, R. I., and his volunteer crew of nine men who pulled couple of small boats and saved thirty-two from the wreck of the steamer Metis, in Long Sound, August 31, 1872.

The Man Who Saved Seward.

A gold medal and $500 was voted in 1871 to Robinson, the man who so heroically saved the Secretary Seward from the assassin Payne. then 33 years old, had fought in the war with a regiment until severely wounded in the leg by shot at Bermuda Hundred. After having hospital nearly a year, and before his wound tirely healed, he was detailed from the hospital as sick nurse to Secretary Seward, who was fined to his bed with a broken arm and jaw, his having been thrown from his carriage. o'clock on the night of Lincoln's assassination while he was at the bedside of Mr. Seward, was startled by a disturbance in the hall sickroom. He opened it and on the threshold athletic man brandishing in one hand a pistol the other a bowie knife.

Catching the gleam from the knife, now aimed own throat, Robinson struck at the off the weapon, although receiving a which knocked him to the floor. rushed to Seward's bed and striking the Secretary's throat already had to the bone when Robinson, unarmed wound and long suffering, seized Payne was about to bury itself in Mr. Seward's dragged Payne off the bed, but while two stab wounds in his own back from ward became partially paralyzed. He, onto Payne and saved Seward's life. the blood which was filling his shoes, pressed upon the severed artery of the Secretary of State until the arrival of eral. Then having saved Seward's life, carried off to the hospital, where nearly proved fatal. The House report ing the joint resolution for his medal for displaying "a bravery never surpassed of any country." Following his recovery, a clerkship first in the Treasury, and quartermaster-general's office.

Peabody, "Carnegie of His Time."

Two distinguished civilians were voted and the thanks of Congress in 1867. W. Field and George Peabody. Field was "for his foresight, courage and determination lishing telegraphic communication by lantic cable, traversing mid ocean and Old World with the new." The award to made "for his great and peculiar a large sum of money, amounting to promotion of education in the more southern and southwestern States." 1795, was the Carnegie of his time. in a store in Danvers, Mass., when only 11, build up the largest dry-goods business

Keeping Lent.

THE HOTEL CLERK ON SOCIETY'S AMUSEMENTS.

By a Special Contributor.

"ARE you keepin' Lent?" inquired the House Detective of the St. Reckless.

"I am," said the Hotel Clerk. "I've given up barefoot dancing. Until after Easter Sunday you'll not see me doing a single step of the barefoot waltz or polka, as the case may be, no matter how great the temptation."

"Have you gone plum dippy?" asked the House Detective.

"I have not," said the Hotel Clerk. "Why don't you read the papers? Don't you know barefoot dancing is the latest Lenten diversion of our best society. So far it's been confined to the ladies, but any minute I'm prepared to hear that Edisha Lyer, Jr., had been leading a barefoot cotillion with one-night corn plasters for the favors, the ladies wearing interfering boots and the gentlemen thumb stalls on their toes.

"'Twas a great idea all right. Society demanded a new diversion. Grand opera was over. The divorce season wouldn't open up good for a couple of months yet, and anyhow so great was the desire for change that merely changing wives and husbands wouldn't satisfy as it had frequently done in the past, for months or even years, at a time. A momentary flurry of interest, yet when all's said and done, only a flurry, had been created by young Mr. Biddle, of the reigning house of Philadelphia, a great clubman among the pugilists and a great pugilist among the clubmen, who desiring that most priceless ornament of the devotees of the manly art of self-pretense, a cauliflower ear, induced Mr. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, also of his native city, as the name would imply, to don the gloves with him, thereby securing in a few hurried but painful rounds, not only a cauliflower ear, but a peach of an eye and a boiled-dinner nose, with tomato sauce; the whole constituting what might be called a four-course face.

"It was at this juncture that the Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson took off her shoes and stockings and came to the rescue. In England, where she comes from, I suppose the name is pronounced Constantly Stewed Ryxn, or something of that sort, but in this country we sounded it like it was spelled and let it go at that; which was wrong of course, but the best we could do with our own inferior knowledge of the mother tongue. The Lady Constance, who is a noted sportswomen and very daring, as she proved, was over here on a visit to some of our leading dynasties and in the name of Charity which, as the poet says, covers a multitude of shins, but hadn't uncovered any up to that time, she consented to oblige at a semi-private feet recital given at Sherry's, tickets $10 each, and no rain checks.

"Just the mere announcement created a sensation the like of which had not been known since the memorable year when Mr. Harry Lehr robbed a zoo to strengthen the intellectual pitch of a Newport dinner function. And, you can take it from me, there was a notable assemblage of notables present on the auspicious day when the Lady Constance came forth dressed in the costume worn by the ancient Greeks during an ancient Greek hot spell, and tripped the light fantastic toe, some say tripped it and some say stubbed it; but anyhow she was there with the light fantastic toes ten in number. The performance started after several outsiders, including newspaper photographers and a chiropodist, had been ejected.

"I read the accounts of it very carefully myself. Wearing draperies of a diaphanous but economical nature, this gifted young noblewoman, who had gone to such ends, such ends indeed, for sweet Charity's sake, appeared before simple chaste draperies of long, dark green, and with her locks bound flat to the brow with a fillet, the ancient Greek substitute for the modern headache bandage, she gave a programme which ranged from Ostermoor's Springs Song to something from Bach, who in my opinion was all right as long as he stuck to beer, but fell down hard when he closed up the brewery and began to write music. Opinions of the performance seemed to vary. There was apparently a disposition in some quarters to intimate that if they had not been the property of a person of rank, the limbs in question might have belonged to a hired girl without subjecting her to the importunities of theatrical managers looking for members of a beauty chorus, while some surprise was caused by the feet seeming to fit on at right angles, just as in the case of a common person. One carping critic, belonging to the metropolitan school of carp, went so far as to say that the ankles which he saw twinkling hither and yon, and occasionally twinkling up against each other with a quaint knocking sound, were either Ionic tree box in design or else Doric nose bag, he wouldn't care to state which until he'd consulted some standard work on the earlier forms of Greek architecture.

"But these were merely the hypercritical remarks of interlopers. In the charmed inner circles of society, Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson's dancing was generally accepted as charming in the extreme and, besides, after paying the necessary expenses, a sum amounting to nearly $8.50 was realized for charitable purposes. So they put it down as a success, and now barefoot dancing has a vogue that hasn't been equaled since Father Kneipp announced his discovery of curing cold in the head by walking in the wet grass of a morning with nothing on the feet except generous Nature's chilblains.

"I'm glad the Lady Constance happened along when she did, dressed like a fireman coming down the brass pole with his boots and things over his arms to answer a midnight alarm, and that she gave the jaded soul of society such an inspiring fillup. Only I'm afraid it won't last. It's distressing to think of a bright spirit of society, leaning wearily up against something all Lent with nothing on his hands but cuffs, and nothing important pressing on his mind except the part in his hair, yawning from sheer onwe until a full-face view of him is like looking down a megaphone.

"I'm a loyal American, Larry, but I'll admit they manage these things better abroad. Over there where the upper classes have been cultivating repose of manner for a thousand years or so, an aristocrat can be idle for months at a time and feel rested enough at the end of it, to continue right along the same line indefinitely. But with us, even in our most exclusive society, the national restlessness which a desperate effort to the contrary has not yet succeeded in entirely eradicating, drives our society people on and on, until after awhile they fall down on their foolish maps.

"It's that same craving for sensation that makes our society women old before their time. I don't know exactly what their time is, but I know they are old before it. I've seen 'em. Think how earnestly some of them espoused the cause of woman's suffrage this past winter. Why, if the wardens of the State penitentiary would only be considerate enough to have Paquin devise a becoming costume for lady convicts, done in the empire mode, and provide bridge prizes of golden handcuffs with turquoises set in the links, I'll bet you that there's plenty of our society suffragettes would stand willing to martyr themselves for the cause and go to jail in defense of a great principle, the same as their courageous English sisters have done.

"And before Lady Constance came along with her talented feet some had even been driven into settlement work among the poor, although that really ceased to be the correct thing as far back as three seasons. But I wouldn't like to speak disparagingly of settlement work. It was a treat for both sides, giving the rich a chance to see the poor and the poor a chance to see the rich, and nobody the worse off for it. Picture yourself, Larry, living in a restricted residential slum district. It is a neighborhood typical of your class. There are four saloons on the corners just below your own cosy slum, all flourishing and doing well; but the delicatessen store in the middle of the block closed up for want of business last week. The street below resounds with the cheerful clamor of ambulance gongs, cops beating the heads of the peasantry and babies falling off the fire escapes, mingled with the prattle of the children as they chase the blithesome duck to the lighted side door. So much family linen is being aired from the windows, that a stranger might thing there was an unhappy married member of the Gould family living on every floor. You have just licked your wife and lighted your pipe for a peaceful evening, when the door opens, and, with the subdued jingle of a diamond stomacher rubbing against a pearl dog collar, in comes a patrician representative of one of the oldest Knockerbicker families, forsaking all her social obligations and even forgetting to collect the alimony, in her desire to carry hope and cheer to such as you. Would you not feel honored and proud to have her freely interesting herself in your most private family affairs without even being asked? Wouldn't you feel, for a time, that a great spirit of uplift had come into your life?"

"I'd feel for an ax," said the House Detective, "and do a little upliftin' myself. Can't society people find no better way to amuse themselves than dancin' barefooted and messin' in poor people's pussonal business?"

"The trouble with society people is that they can amuse everybody but themselves," said the Hotel Clerk.

Guillotine Show.

The proprietor of a café at Essonnes, in the Seine-et-Oise, thought of an ingenious way to increase his income. He had a miniature guillotine, worked automatically, constructed and "executed" at a penny per head.

The model of the "Widow" is four feet high, and the steel knife weighs two pounds. It cuts off the head of the wooden model with the same precision as M. Deibler's machine cuts off that of a criminal. But whereas M. Deibler has not been called upon recently to cut off more than four heads in the same day, M. Siroteau, the owner of the model, has been carrying out something like 150 executions a day for the last three weeks, which at a penny a time makes 15 francs.

The wooden victim is shown with hands and legs bound, and the hair cut from the neck, while M. Deibler, in miniature, stands by in his overcoat with fur collar, attended by a priest and a gendarme, the latter apparently keeping back the crowd.

The police have now interfered, however, and M. Siroteau has been forbidden to show the instrument at work. He thinks he has been badly treated. It may be recalled that during the revolution a number of the more violent partisans of the popular movement had miniature guillotines, with which they severed the heads of chickens, etc., afterward eating the birds.—[Paris Correspondence London Leader.

THE PYRAMIDS.

Colossal, silent, and alone, they rise,
Above the desert of the glaring sands,
Where pass the babbling tongues and wandering bands,
And nation after nation reigns and dies.
Inscrutable they hear unmoved the cries
Of rude ambition, bane of many lands,
The prayers of human slaves, the cold commands
Of tyranny that every age defies.
And then anon from far come those who seek
The curious things of earth, and travelers climb
Their steep and rugged sides, as if for play,
Nor do they think that could these stones but speak
They would a tale unfold of ancient time
With passions like the passions of today.

THREE DAYS IN THE SADDLE IN WILDS OF THE WEST INDIES.

By a Special Contributor.

HAVING heard so much of the beauties of the Leeward Islands, and armed with a pressing invitation from an Anglo-Indian planter, who owned a large estate in Dominica, I left Kingston, Jamaica, in company with young Bullen, for Barbados, from which port we took passage in one of the intercolonial steamers for Roseau. As smallpox was raging at Bridgetown, the capital of Barbados, we were quarantined for two days. Leaving that island on a Monday, we arrived at Castries, the capital of St. Lucia early the following morning. Although it was only 6:30 a.m. when we landed, it was then very hot, and as there was little of interest outside the magnificent botanical gardens, we were glad when it was time to sail.

St. Pierre, the then commercial capital of Martinique, was our next port of call. This is a most beautiful island, and previous to the late terrible visitation, St. Pierre was a flourishing city. Having landed the mails, we steamed away to Roseau, which port was reached at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Roseau looked very pretty from the sea. The Anglican church, the Catholic cathedral and the Wesleyan chapel, all built on commanding sites, nestling at the base of rugged mountains and surrounded by dense tropical foliage, made us feel that the long, hot trip from Kingston had not been in vain. On landing, however, we received a severe shock. The streets, if such they could be called, were unkempt and paved with large cobble stones, which made walking and riding difficult. This, coupled with the awful stench from the boiling sulphur lake, made us feel uneasy; as, until we knew where this odor came from, we imagined that the drains were neglected. So overpowering are the fumes at certain periods that an American tourist and his guide who ventured too close were suffocated and their bodies recovered only after the greatest difficulty.

Roseau, as the name implies, is typically French. French is the language spoken, and the negroes have not only adopted the dress, but the courtly manners of the French people. At the time of our visit, there were about twenty whites, a great number of creoles and half-castes, and some 6000 negroes. The Hon. Hesketh Bell, the then administrator of the island, now Governor of Uganda, invited us both to dine with him at Government House. The following day we accompanied him to Sylvania, his mountain retreat, where we spent the day inspecting the new road and the Lancashire coffee estate. In the cool of the afternoon we rode back to Roseau and accepted an invitation to a fancy dress ball at Government House that same evening.

As my friend had, on a previous visit, purchased an estate on the northern side of the island, he was desirous of paying it a visit, so we determined to go overland. This meant three days in the saddle, through some of the wildest portions of the island. On the first day we had considerable trouble with the carriers, so much so that, instead of arriving at our quarters before dark, we did not reach Rosalie until after 9 p.m. After leaving Roseau, we passed through some of Rose's lime and lemon estates, where we witnessed the process of converting the fruit into lime juice and concentrates. Our path led us into the interior of the island, where, at an elevation of some 4000 feet we rested on the banks of the fresh-water lakes. Here it began to rain, and, to add to our discomfort, a thick fog enveloped us, so that we were soon drenched to the skin.

It was 5 p.m., and several hours' hard riding still lay before us. As we did not wish to spend the night on that bleak mountain top, we agreed to separate, I riding ahead to make arrangements for our accommodation and to send out men with lanterns to meet Bullen and the carriers.

So dark was it that it was with the greatest difficulty that my horse was able to pick his way down the steep and slippery mountain path. On reaching the plains a light was seen gleaming from a charcoal burner's hut in the forest. After much delay, its occupant opened the door in a half-hearted manner, but seeing that the visitor was a white man, he became profuse in his apologies. He pointed out the way to Rosalie, saying that it was only one hour's ride. After what seemed an interminable time, another hut was reached. In broken English an old negro replied that Rosalie was not "too far," only one hour. It was then pitch-dark, and the rain was coming down in torrents. I came to a river with a village on the opposite bank, and as it was impossible to see the ford, I allowed my horse to get me across the best way he could.

So afraid are West Indian negroes of "Obiah men" that it was with reluctance the villagers opened their doors. Upon making inquiries, it was found that Rosalie was still two miles distant, so, nothing daunted, I started off once more. As I approached the village, the surf, beating upon the beach, could be distinctly heard. As ill-luck would have it, the village was on the opposite side of a large river, now swollen to twice its usual size. My horse was again given its head, and after sundry splashings and much floundering, the bank was reached in safety. Seeing a light burning in a near-by house, I made straight for it. It turned out to be the constables'. After routing out the guard, which consisted of a negro corporal and one solitary private, the situation was made known to them.

Having fed and made my horse comfortable for the night, the private helped wash up the few cooking utensils. The corporal in the very thoughtfully paid a visit to the village, with a number of garments, chief of which his mother's skirts. These I donned, being glad to get into dry clothes, even though they made an appearance, the private made the village and engaged the services of several practically everywhere, especially in in such minute quantities as to be almost power of recognition.

fact about radium is that it has the all objects near it luminous. In the and clothes of a person handling it will glow, while phosphorescent substances will become brilliantly luminous. When a microscopic portion is placed against certain materials and greatly magnified it is seen to bombard a neighboring substance with thousands of flashes of light in a particularly weird manner.

The wonderful thing about radium is that it is always about 2¾ degrees Fahr. warmer than its surroundings—that is to say, it is continually giving off a slight amount of heat.

A peculiarity is that its powers diminish so slowly that it will retain its efficacy for a thousand years. Not only this, but it imparts its properties to everything with which it is brought in contact. For instance, if a tube of radium be placed in water, the water will issue rays. Not only this, but so will the vessel, while any object put in the water will also become charged.

Radium has most peculiar effects on the human system. It causes horrible sores, which are difficult to heal, while it will heal some of the most malignant. The man of science who was the first to experiment with radium was rendered so that the skin peeled off certain parts of his body, while he became unable to dress without assistance.

It will cause complete blindness, yet it is probable that it will enable certain of the blind to see. A long course of exposure to its rays will cause paralysis of the spinal cord, ending in death, yet it is possible to prolong life indefinitely by its aid.

Some wonderful experiments have been conducted in which the lives of certain creatures have been prolonged for over three times their natural span. Actually it seems that it will indefinitely suspend all development.

Advice to a Son-in-Law.

COL. SNEED TALKS ABOUT GETTING ON IN THE WORLD.

By a Special Contributor.

"YES, that's all right, Bill," said Col. Sneed to his son-in-law as they smoked their after-dinner cigars; "that's all right. I'm mighty glad to hear you've been promoted and got a raise. I'm mighty glad to see you climbin' up the ladder of success. I like to see a man with ambition and pluck and ginger, and I glory in your spunk, my boy; I certainly do. But you haven't been home much of evenings lately, have you?"

"No, Colonel, I haven't. Work's been pretty heavy the last few months, and it's kept me at the office almost every night. I don't like that part of it much, but a fellow's got to hustle if he gets along in the world these days."

"Uh, huh! That's about the way I'd sized it up, and, as I was just tellin' you, I like to see that kind of a spirit in young man; but, son, if government bonds were quoted at ninety-six, and a man was to go around town buyin' all he could get at a dollar ten, what would you think of him?"

"I'd think he was a fool, of course."

"Uh, huh! So would I. So would everybody. I don't reckon there's anything better than government bonds. They make the finest kind of waddin' for a safe deposit box, and as works of art they're mighty hard to beat; but any man who pays more than the market price for 'em is a bigger fool than Thompson's colt. It's a good deal the same way with this thing you call gettin' on in the world. It's fine; it's worth a whole lot; but there's such a thing as payin' too much for it. And, William, my boy, when a man gives up all or nearly all that makes life worth living in order to win financial success he's sellin' short on happiness with a mighty slim chance to get hold of the stock for delivery.

"Yes, I know what you'll say; you're workin' to get a start, to lay the foundation of a little fortune, to provide the right kind of a home for your wife, and I'm pattin' you on the back all the time and sayin' 'Bully boy.' That's the sort of stuff thot makes men! that's the power that makes the world go 'round. But a man wants to be mighty careful that he doesn't keep on runnin' around the track after the finish, and he wants to look out that he doesn't lose diamonds while he's scramblin' for pearls. My old father was a country doctor, and he always carried his quinine and calomel and such like in a big pair of saddlebags. I remember one time he had to get up in the middle o' the night and ride ten miles to see a patient. It was an urgent case, and the old gentleman went down the road like Satan beatin' tanbark, his saddlebags bouncin' up an' down at every jump. When he got to the place he found a strap had broke, and every bit of his medicine had been scattered along the road.

"Many a man goes lopin' along the road to riches with his nose to the ground like a hound chasin' a fox. He doesn't see anything but the tracks of the fellows who've gone that way before him, and he's so doggone anxious to catch up with 'em that he don't know he's got holes in his pockets, and is losin' things a whole lot more valuable than the one he's runnin' after. He don't know that he's dropped his wife's love here, and his children's affection there, and his home and his health a little further along, while his happiness has been trickling out of the hole all the time. And when at last he gets up to the front and grabs the bag of gold he finds that he's lost everything that makes its possession really worth while, and it turns to dust in his hands. For his pockets are empty, and his heart is empty, and his head hasn't got anything in it but stock quotations and regrets.

"It ain't just figures of speech I'm givin' you, my boy. I've seen 'em do it time and time again, an' nearly every one of 'em started out with just one desire—to do something big and fine for the woman he loved. The purpose was all right, you see, Bill, but they let it run away with them. That's what I want you to avoid, my boy, and that's why I'm givin' you this kind of a talk now.

"You've married the sweetest little girl this side of the pearly gates, if I do say it myself, and if you want success to be worth anything when you get it, go down the long road with her arm linked in yours, and don't go so fast but what she can keep up with you. You remember the Lord said: 'It ain't good for man to be alone,' and it's a good deal worse for woman to be alone. When a man begins to leave his wife to fret out her evenings by herself, he's layin' the foundations for trouble. That old sayin' that absence makes the heart grow fonder is all poppy-cock. It don't do anything of the sort, and if you become so engrossed in the struggle to get on in the world that you can't get home to dinner more than once or twice a week, and have to spend most of your evenings at the office, you're pretty sure to find the keen edge of love wearin' off in her heart or yours after a while. The dullin' process may be so slow that neither one of you may know it's goin' on until it's too late, but, sooner or later, son, you'll find it out, and then you might as well shut up the shop. For no man and no woman can be really happy without love, and love won't stay long in any home unless it's fed. A woman's love will starve under neglect, and a man's love will shrivel up if he gets so full of business that he has no time to think of anything else. Getting on in the world is a great thing, a very great thing, if love lights the way, but if it doesn't—well, you take an old man's advice, my boy, and keep your ambition down to union hours. You may not get there so quick, but you'll get there, all right, and when you do there'll be some satisfaction in the arrival. And, now, let's go out and take a look at the baby."

Hats at £2000 Apiece.

The cardinal's hat, which a recent death has placed at the disposal of the Pope of Rome, will cost, whoever may be its recipient, certainly not less than £2000.

This includes a variety of disbursements to all sorts of people, but the whole of them center round the all-important hat.

Thus custom decrees that the officer of the Papal Guard, who is responsible for its safe custody while it is in process of delivery to the new cardinal, shall be presented with £200 in cash, and a gold ink pot worth £40.

The actual bearer of the hat receives £400 in money, and a cross and missal of the value of £40. The secretary of the mission which accompanies it gets £60.

The cost of the registration of the patent is £880. And between £200 and £300 has to be distributed in compulsory presents, when, at the Pontifical Court, the recipient balances it on top of his head for the first and only time.

For a cardinal's hat cannot be worn like any ordinary piece of headgear. Indeed, it is not really a hat at all, but a flat, pancake-like square of red cloth, destitute alike of either brim or crown.

The first thing the new cardinal has to do, therefore, after paying out the £2000, is to go out and buy himself a hat which he can put on. Even this one is pretty expensive, for there are only about half a dozen shops in Europe which stock them, and the proprietors naturally keep up the price to a remunerative level.

It is, too, exceedingly heavy and uncomfortable, being composed of a kind of thick cardboard material, covered with the fine cloth used for billiard tables, but dyed, of course, a brilliant red, and it is ornamented with gold cord and tassels. It costs about £8, and four or five of them are needed by the cardinal every year.

The £2000 hat hangs above the altar in the private chapel of His Eminence during his life, and at death is buried with him.—[Pearson's Weekly.

SUPPOSE.

Suppose it does rain and skies look dull—
The roses are fresher when comes the lull.

Suppose it is winter and the wind is cold;
We enjoy much better old Sol so bold.

Suppose our home were in the wilderness wild,
The loneliness would vanish at the laugh of a child;

Or, maybe in a cave in the mountain crag—
Nature is beautiful: time wouldn't drag.

Suppose Death calls for one that is dear—
God's promise of reunion is made quite clear;

Or, we're stricken down with a living woe—
He knows best why it should be so.

He allows to exist the false and the true,
As even among roses we plant the rue.

The monotony of life is broken by change,
And He is wise, its course to arrange.

ALLIE M. HARRIS.

Ship Saved by Bread and Butter.

A vivid tale of shipwreck is told by George Harding in the April Harper's. The author sailed with the sealing fleet off Newfoundland, and was wrecked in the ice. Among other incidents, he tells how a neighboring sealer, the Ranger, was saved by her captain's ingenuity. The Ranger, rammed by the ice, was badly leaking, when suddenly the captain shouted: "Up with all the butter and twenty bags o' hard bread!" The men shoveled the butter into the forepeak and pressed in the bags of bread, ramming them down with planks. The moistened bread swelled, and the ship righted and floated, and was kept dry with little effort.

Rebuilding of Stanford.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE TOWARD RESTORING THE BUILDINGS.

By a Special Contributor.

IN the spring of 1906 the last of the great buildings of Stanford University were rapidly nearing completion, since the laying of the corner-stone in 1887, the work of construction had been practically unceasing. First came the inner quadrangle, upon the completion of which the university was formally opened to the public. Then the outer quadrangle, an imposing array of buildings completely surrounding the first structures, was gradually brought to completion. Meantime, the corner-stones were laid for those buildings which were to be the crowning glory of the university, the gymnasium, the library, and the rich Memorial Church.

Each successive entering class witnessed the gradual but steady progress in the construction of these various buildings, though few of them were entirely completed within the four years which mark a college generation. During this time the museum, the central portion of which was constructed in the early days of the institution under the supervision of Gov. Stanford himself, was enlarged until it entirely inclosed an open court of considerable size. The chemistry building was also completed during the years between 1900 and 1902.

The two architectural triumphs of the university, however, were those which marked the front and center of the quadrangles—the Memorial Arch and the Memorial Church. The former, rising 100 feet above the entrance to the quadrangles, and bearing the heroic frieze by St. Gaudens portraying the "Progress of Civilization in America," was a memorial to Leland Stanford, Jr., whose name is perpetuated in that of the university. The church, the most wonderful structure of its kind in America was erected by Mrs. Stanford, as the legend above its doors stated, "To the glory of God and in loving memory of my husband, Leland Stanford."

Beneath the golden cross which rose nearly 200 feet above the marble floor, the great chimes of the tower, tuned to those of Westminster, pealed out their tones at each division of the hour. In front, above the wonderfully-carved arches of the entrance, the brilliant mosaic, which pictured Christ preaching the Sermon on the Mount, covered the whole of the north gable. Within, the eye was fairly bewildered by the marvelous mosaics, the richly-stained windows, and the costly marble statuary.

And then in the gray dawn of that memorable April 18, 1906, the campus writhed and shuddered in the grip of the terrific earthquake, and the splendid buildings which had cost years of time and millions of money to construct were ruthlessly shattered in a moment. The spire of the church, flung forward by the terrific shock, crashed through the roof in a vast chaotic mass, while

GRUESOME CRYPT IN VALLETA, ON THE ISLAND OF MALTA.

By a Special Contributor.

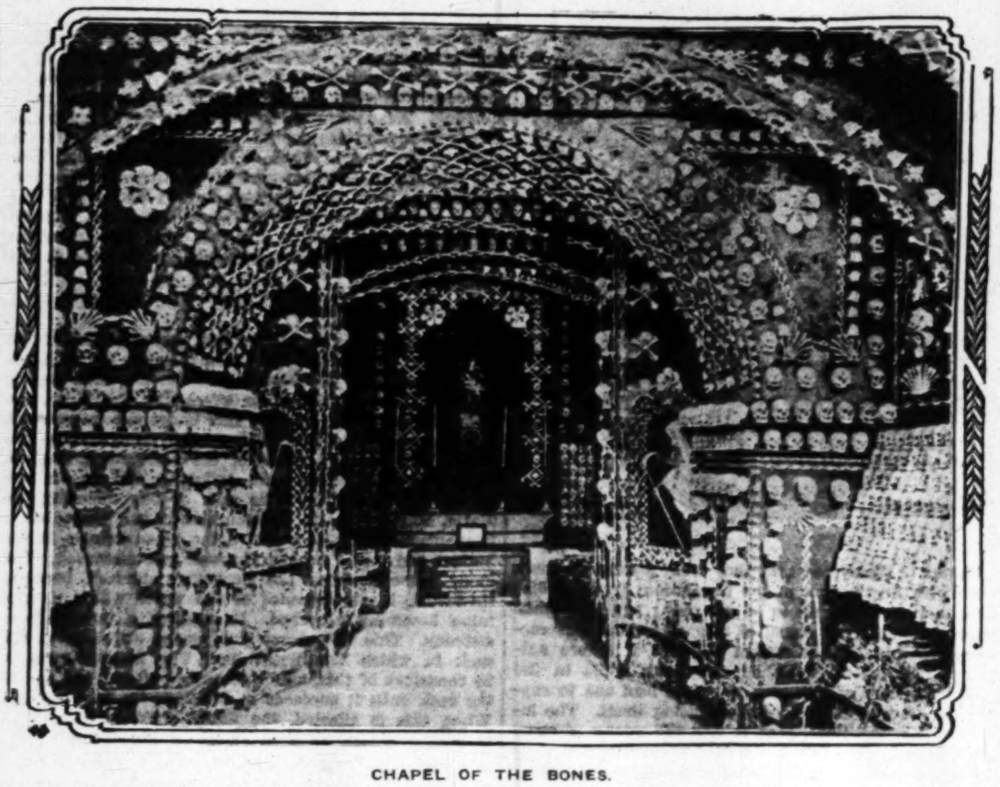
NOT far from the Cathedral of St. John, in Valleta, on the Island of Malta, is an exquisite little church, built in the form of a Maltese cross, called the Chapel of the Monks, belonging to one of the Catholic orders. Connected with it is a small underground chapel, a most weird, gruesome place, called the Chapel of the Bones.

Not far from the Cathedral of St. John, in Valleta, on the Island of Malta, is an exquisite little church, built in the form of a Maltese cross, called the Chapel of the Monks, belonging to one of the Catholic orders. Connected with it is a small underground chapel, a most weird, gruesome place, called the Chapel of the Bones.

It was a lovely May morning when we visited it, and the sunlight streamed through the opened doors in a flood of light, touching with radiant fingers the rows upon rows of human bones arranged all over the walls and ceiling in geometrical designs.

At the back and facing the doors is an altar draped in black with a framed inscription in Latin of which the following is a translation:

> "The world is a stage.
> Our life a tragedy.
> All is illusion, all a fiction.
> Death the close of all things.
> It unmasks and salves all.
> Thou who livest ponder on this.
> Pray that perpetual light may shine
> On those who rest herein.
> Go in peace, remember thou shalt die."



CHAPEL OF THE BONES.

A Maltese who was present gave us a brief history of the place. These are the bones of 1600 people, who perished in two of Malta's many sieges. In a pit outside 80,000 more were burned, and these are but a tithe of countless thousands whose life blood has laved this rocky isle of the sea all down the centuries. For so long a time that history is lost in dim age, it has been the center of such conflict and woeful carnage as no other known spot on the earth's surface can recount, unless it be Sicily, which lies just north of it. For two and a half centuries it was the hardly held home of medieval chivalry. The very air is redolent of history.

As we gazed and pondered a great gorgeous butterfly fluttered in and out on the stream of sunlight, a gay, frivolous life among these silent mementos of death.

At the doors stood a young monk, who sold photographs of the interior. So thin and pale was he, and so depressing the atmosphere of the surroundings, one might almost take him for a companion of these his many brethren, save for his wan smile and black habit.

In orderly precision and in serried rows rest these bones of slain thousands, and here they will remain until Gabriel blows his trumpet, and what a goodly throng they will make.

One who can visit this spot unmoved must be stolid indeed, and devoid of all sense of the heroic in human action.

Discovery of Titian's Will.

A number of valuable Titian relics, including the painter's will, have been discovered in the possession of a poor widow at Schöneberg, a western suburb of Berlin. These relics consist of forty-three documents and letters, which are entirely authentic.

The most interesting document, which has been deciphered by two experts, Prof. Hildebrand and Prof. Ludwig Justi, is a letter written by the Emperor Charles V to Titian. This letter informs Titian that he has been raised to the rank of Count of the Oberpfalz, and that certain curious privileges have been conferred upon him. The imperial letter is countersigned by Titian himself.

Another interesting document is Titian's last will and testament, covering eight pages. Two pictures have been found, together with these documents, but it is not yet conclusively proved that they are genuine Titians. These relics were obtained by the present owner from a descendant of Titian, who still lives at Pieve di Cadore, the birthplace of the great painter.—[London Standard.

Tapping the Earth for Heat.

Sir William Ramsay's recent suggestion that the interior heat of the earth might be tapped by means of a bore hole, is not exactly new.

Indeed, experiments have actually been undertaken with that end in view.

One of the most important was carried out some years back by the German government at a place called Paruschowitz, in Silesia, when a depth of 9572 feet was reached. Of course, the bore is of very slender dimensions, three feet six inches in diameter at the top, decreasing gradually to two feet six inches at the depth of one mile, at which it remains for the rest of the distance.

At La Chapelle is a bore of a similar kind, and nearly as deep, constructed by the French government for experimental purposes; and another similar one exists near Stavropol, in Southern Russia.

In each case, it was the original intention to carry the bore much lower, but the expense was found to be prohibitive, when contrasted with the prospective results. That is the worst of such works. After a certain depth, the cost increases by leaps and bounds, and the time occupied lengthens proportionately.

Thus, the Hon. Charles Parsons, of turbine fame, who has made a special study of the question, estimates that to drill a hole ten miles deep through the earth's crust would cost £5,000,000, and take eighty years.

The job is a stupendous one. Yet it may be necessary for us to undertake it. Our coal supply will not last forever, and, when this is exhausted, the greatest industrial communities will be those that have the most direct means of access to the stored-up heat of the earth's interior.—[Pearson's Weekly.

Veteran of 120 Years.

Probably the oldest soldier in the world, Andrei Nikolaievitsch Schmidt, who is aged 120 and fought in the Russian army during the Napoleonic wars, recently arrived in St. Petersburg with the object of seeing the Czar, says the Daily Mail St. Petersburg correspondent.

Though the newspapers here have heard nothing of it, I am told by a palace official that Schmidt was granted a private audience of the Czar. Schmidt was extremely proud, and despite his immense age he bore himself with a martial air.

He was introduced into the Czar's study, and His Majesty received the veteran with extreme kindness. Schmidt answered several questions, but finally, overwhelmed with emotion, he broke down and burst into tears.

The Czar made the old soldier some valuable presents, and presented him to the Czarevitch and to one of the little grand duchesses.

"After this happiness," old Schmidt declared, "I can die in peace."—[London Evening News.

The Deadly Mosquito.

A FAMOUS SCIENTIST'S ACCOUNT OF HIS INVESTIGATIONS.

By Sir Patrick Manson.

IN 1874 I came to London, and there for the first time I heard that Timothy Lewis, who had done so much in the study of tropical disease, had discovered that in the blood of a proportion of the inhabitants in certain districts of India there was to be found an organism, which he called the Filaria sanguinis hominis. This is a microscopic animalcule, eel-shaped, and inclosed in a loose sac, or sheath, within which it wriggles about in the blood very actively. It is sometimes present in enormous numbers—hundreds in every drop of blood. These parasites Lewis had found in more than one instance in association with elephantasias, or elephantoid diseases. On my return to China in 1876 I endeavored to ascertain if these parasites occurred also in China. I discovered that they were present in some districts in 10 per cent. of the population; in other districts they were present in 50 per cent.; while in other places they were not found at all. One thing was certain—that this little organism was not a mature animal. It showed no evidence of growth while in the blood, or of any organs such as would lead one to suppose that it was capable of reproducing itself. The inference was, therefore, that it was the young of some other animal. For this I searched many times, and at last found such to be the case, although my discovery had been anticipated by Bancroft, and by Lewis himself.

On the Parasite's Track.

The parental worm was quite a big animal, from about 3 inches to 4 inches in length, and of a thickness of a strand of fishing gut. It lay in the lymphatic vessels. But between this mature animal and its young actively-wriggling progeny in the blood no intermediate form could be discovered. The problem naturally suggested itself—How does this parasite, for such it is, contrive to pass from one human being to another? As I have told you, it is inclosed in a loose sheath, free to wriggle, just as a cat or a dog would be, if tied up in a flour sack. Although actively moving about in this sheath, it could not escape from it. It was never found in any of the natural discharges from the body. Therefore, it could not escape spontaneously, so as to pass from one man to another.

Now, it occurred to me that, if it could not pass by virtue of its own effort from one human body to another, and if such a passage were necessary, as it obviously is, some other agent must intervene, and that that other agent must be one which is capable of piercing the skin of the human body, and also one which absorbed the blood of the human body, and with the blood the little wriggling parasite which it contains. Such a translation was, in my opinion, a first and necessary step for the parasite to take when it would quit one human body and get into another. Now, the agent which occurred to me as being the most likely to effect this necessary step in the translation of the filaria was the mosquito.

A Nightly Wanderer.

About this time a striking fact was revealed to me which tended to confirm this view of the role of the mosquito. I had made up my mind to examine the blood of a thousand Chinamen, with a view to determining the frequency with which the filaria occurred in the human blood. It is an easy task to examine the blood of half a dozen people, but when it comes to be the blood of a thousand people—a smaller number would not give reliable results—it requires a more considerable amount of time than is usually at the disposal of a medical practitioner. So to help me in the proposed task I trained two Chinese medical students, and with their assistance I managed to wade through the blood of a thousand natives. To stimulate the enthusiasm of my assistants I offered them a reward. Both were very eager to get this. They were occupied in hospital duties, one working during the day and the other during the night. I found that the man who had leisure to work during the night brought me many positive results, which I took care to confirm. But the one who worked during the day seldom found a case of filaria. I thought this a peculiar thing, and I proceeded to investigate the matter.

I found that the filaria was not always present in the blood near the surface of the body; and further, I found that it had peculiar habits as regards its appearance and disappearance there. I found that in ordinary conditions of health filariae came into the blood just about sunset, gradually increasing in numbers toward midnight, and then gradually decreasing in numbers toward morning. Thus, an examination of the human blood at midnight might reveal 500 filariae in every drop, while an examination at midday might quite possibly not reveal a single one, or at most only one or two. This remarkable phenomenon was maintained practically in every case of filarial infection which I came across. It looked as if this, what I call filarial periodicity, was an adaptation of the habits of the filaria to the nocturnal habits of the mosquito.

Mosquito-Borne Ailments.

Thus encouraged, to test this mosquito doctrine, I persuaded a Chinaman, for a small consideration, to sleep below what is called a "mosquito house"—that is to say, a large framework covered with mosquito netting big enough to accommodate a bed. This was erected in a room in which mosquitoes abounded. The Chinaman went in there in the evening, and kept the door of the mosquito-house open for half an hour, until plenty of mosquitoes had entered it. Then he closed the door and slept as comfortably as he could until morning. Next morning, I entered the house and found dozens of mosquitoes gobbed with blood clinging to the walls of the house. These I transferred to small bottles and examined them serially at intervals of a few hours or a few days, endeavoring to find out if the filaria was ingested with the blood which the mosquitoes had imbibed, and, if ingested, what changes might occur in the way of developments, or perhaps in the way of digestion.

Early Life of the Parasite.

I shall not easily forget the first mosquito I dissected so charged. I tore off its abdomen, and, by rolling a pen holder from the free end of the abdomen to the severed end, I succeeded in expressing the blood the stomach contained. Placing this under the microscope, I was gratified to find that, so far from killing the filaria, the digestive juices of the mosquito seemed to have stimulated it to fresh activity. And now I saw a curious thing. The little sack or bag inclosing the filaria, which hitherto had muzzled it and prevented it from penetrating the walls of the blood vessels in the human body, was broken through and discarded. The blood, when it enters the mosquito's stomach, becomes thickened, in consequence of the water which it contains becoming absorbed. It acquires a tar-like consistency. This now tarry fluid seems to cling to the sack in which the filaria lies. The filaria seems to be conscious of this, and vigorously butts at one end of the sack until it succeeds in breaking its way through. When this is effected, the filaria wriggles away in a definite direction, as if in search of something.

When I saw this for the first time I believed I had stumbled on an important fact, with a distinct bearing on human pathology. I followed it up as best I could with the meager appliances at my disposal, and after many months of work, often following up false scents, I ultimately succeeded in tracing the filaria through the stomach wall into the abdominal cavity, and then into the thoracic muscles of the mosquito. More than that, I ascertained that during this passage the little parasite increased enormously in size. From measuring about one-hundredth of an inch in length it grew to about one-sixteenth of an inch, and was now just visible to the naked eye. It developed a mouth, an alimentary canal, and other organs which I need not specify. Manifestly, it was on the road to a new human host.

At Home in the Human Body.

I conjectured, perhaps wrongly, I now see, that when the mosquito died the little organism which it contained escaped into water, and by that road might reach the human body. Later, probably influenced by discoveries in connection with malaria, I set to work again—this time in England—with better appliances, to see if I could trace more precisely the exact route by which the little animal left the mosquito. I obtained infected insects from Dr. Bancroft of Australia, and I set Dr. Low to "section" them at the London School of Tropical Medicine. Dr. Low succeeded in making beautiful "sections," which clearly demonstrated that the filaria, after it leaves the stomach and reaches the thoracic muscles of the mosquito, continues, after a certain period in which it increases in size, its journey toward the proboscis, that for a time it lies in the head of the insect, that then it creeps down the labium or sheath of the proboscis, where, in properly prepared sections, it can be seen lying outstretched, and evidently waiting an opportunity to escape. This opportunity doubtless occurs when the mosquito next proceeds to feed on the human subject. That this is so has been unmistakably demonstrated by Lebredo and Fulleborn. The latter, by very ingenious electrical arrangements, contrived to kill instantaneously infected mosquitoes while in the act of sucking blood from the body. The "sections" prepared from the skin with the mosquito actually in situ, display the filaria in the act of passing through the proboscis of the mosquito, and actually entering the body through the little hole made by the biting parts of the mosquito's proboscis. Thus we are now absolutely sure that certain kinds of mosquitoes are the means for the transmission of the filaria of the blood, and therefore of those diseases to which th gives rise.

Safeguarding Seafarers.

Little Known Perils That are Encountered by Ships.

By a Special Contributor.

THE ordinary student of geography pictures the oceans of the world as so many unchanging bodies of water that have for the seafarer only the physical features that hydrography has made plain to the sailor by means of some thousands of carefully-delineated charts. Except for an occasional earthquake and its reactions, the popular belief is that there is nothing more to learn and nothing more to be guarded against except the violence of ocean gales and the sweep of the rushing billows. It would probably startle the average person to know that there are physical conditions that change from day to day upon the trackless seas, and these changes are of a material nature which may send any ship to her sudden doom. Each week, the United States Hydrographic Office issues a record of icebergs, derelicts, and other floating obstructions, and from day to day the various branch hydrographic offices give to the seafarer the latest news published from the reports of incoming ships. For a captain to put to sea indifferent to this information would be as hazardous as the deliberate ignoring of storm signals. In addition to this record which is gathered from every source and by every means of modern communication, the hydrographic office issues monthly for the guidance of outbound craft a pilot chart of the North Pacific and the North Atlantic oceans showing the drift of derelicts between dates and their probable positions. Each ship becomes a new gatherer for these various publications, and thousands of dollars are spent each year in thus making more secure the life and property ventured in oversea traffic, and yet with all of this care and outlay, mishaps still happen. The average passenger aboard an ocean liner realizes little of the responsibility borne by the captain and his staff, and, as a rule, the voyage may seem uneventful where, in fact, it has bristled with unsuspected hazards.

During the past fifteen years there have been more than fifty-odd collisions with drifting wrecks, and a startling percentage is given of sinkings in consequence, while other injuries have ranged all the way from partly-crippled propellers to total disablement. The mysterious loss of the steamship Naronic of the White Star line some years ago was most probably due to stumbling upon a waterlogged derelict, and one can easily see how vital it is to navigational safety to know approximately at least when these dangers are drifting down upon the frequented tracks of ocean traffic.

Icebergs are still more feared by the seafarer, because they come from the little-known northern seas and drift unheralded down upon the shorter routes of the northern courses between America and the neighboring continents, and this is why our steamships follow a more southerly course when winter loosens its grip upon the Arctic ice packs and the ghostly bergs drift southward in the sweep of the ocean currents. Next month, these menacing wandering mountains of ice begin their southern drift, and then the ocean liners will be forced southward in turn and obliged to follow the longer routes from land to land. Each day, perhaps, the hydrographic office will receive by cable, by wireless, and by the reports of incoming ships notice of these dangers, and beginning with the first of May, the office will issue weekly a chart showing the locations and the direction of drift of these shifting masses. This particular work ceases in November when the Arctic winter holds its ice packs in a firm grip, but the danger from derelicts still continues, and a frequent record must be published of them that they may not escape notice during the tempestuous months of winter.

All wrecked vessels are not ultimately driven ashore, as is commonly imagined, nor because a ship was reported sinking at the time she was abandoned does it necessarily follow that she does in fact sink to the bottom after her desertion. They may continue to float in a waterlogged, half-submerged condition for many months; and where loaded with lumber, they have been known to drift about for years until either scattered by storms or deliberately destroyed by governmental efforts and the employment of vessels kindred to our derelict destroyer Seneca, of the revenue cutter service.

Some idea of the risks run by man upon the sea may be gathered from the fact that there are annually reported in the neighborhood of 2000 floating wrecks bound wherever wind and ocean currents may sweep them. As a rule, most of these derelicts do not survive for more than a month, but there are dangerous exceptions to this general average and it is not possible to prescribe the danger zone or drift of any one of these threatening waifs of the deep. In some cases they are more influenced by the winds, while again they may be guided by ocean currents, and still again they may be swept by the alternate force of first one and then the other of these elemental conditions.

Observations over a period of a quarter of a century show that by far the greater number of derelicts have been reported in the Gulf Stream north of St. Augustine, Fla., and what is, indeed, a blessing, is that the majority of these disappear before reaching the northern tracks of the ocean liners. A great many of these derelicts that remain afloat longest circle backward and southward into the Sargasso Sea. Between 30 and 40 per cent. of these ocean waifs drift bottom-upward, which makes them harder to detect and likewise more dangerous obstructions, because the strongest part of the derelict is thus opposed to the colliding craft. From Cape Hatteras north to the upper end of New Jersey we have what may be called the graveyard of shipping on this side of the Atlantic, this section of backwater or ocean eddy, so to speak, being formed by the departure of the Gulf Stream eastward from the coast and the southern sweep down the New England coast of the Labrador current which dips below the Gulf Stream off the coast of North Carolina.

In some particulars, the "Flying Dutchman" of tradition has been pretty nearly rivaled by the persistent wanderings of some of the more noted ocean derelicts. The lumber-laden schooner Fannie E. Wolston of Bath, Me., was abandoned October 15, 1891, off Cape Hatteras, and was finally seen three years later in latitude 39 degrees north and in the neighborhood of longitude 62 degrees west—having been reported nearly fifty times and having drifted approximately 9000 miles in the interval. She was a good-sized craft of about 300 tons, and would have been a dangerous obstacle to strike. Another lumber-laden vessel, the W. L. White, was abandoned about eighty miles to the south and east of Absecon Light, New Jersey, on March 13, 1888. She drifted into the Gulf Stream and was carried north and east—from June to October, wandering about in the "Rolling Forties," and thence floated eastward, stranding finally toward the end of January of the year following on one of the Hebrides. During the period of her drifting she was reported nearly fifty times by passing vessels, and her wanderings covered a distance of about 6000 miles. The history of the abandoned ship Fred B. Taylor stands quite alone in the annals of ocean derelicts. In June of 1892 she was cut in two by the Trave of the North German Lloyd, the collision taking place about 370 miles east of Sandy Hook. The bow and the stern halves drifted in entirely different directions. The stern section being more out of water was naturally more influenced by winds than the nearly-submerged bow, which was acted upon more forcibly by the currents. The after end was blown northward and landed two months later on the coast of Maine, while the bow section did not disappear until September. The bark Vincenzo Perrotta was abandoned in September, 1887, nearly 1500 miles east of Cape Hatteras. Early in April, 1889, she stranded upon Watling Island, West Indies, where Columbus is supposed to have made his first landing. She drifted about for 536 days, and covered a distance of 2950 miles.

January 26, 1899, the British bark Siddartha, loaded with lumber, sailed from Jacksonville, Fla. On February 22 she was partly wrecked by a storm and abandoned in the region of the Azores. She was reported by passing vessels no fewer than fifty-nine times, and finally, on July 6 of the same year, she was picked up off Bantry Bay, Ireland, and towed into port by a British man-of-war. Her drifting carried her directly across the paths of the trans-Atlantic liners, and she would have proved a dangerous body to strike. It is said that she was one of the very few instances of the successful salvage of waterlogged craft. Vessels of this sort are too much of a strain upon tow lines, and but few ships can spare the time or run the risks involved in bringing such hulks into port. The Lucinda G. Potter of Greenpoint, L. I., is another exception to this rule. This vessel was anchored off Sandy Hook December 25, 1890, and during the heavy gale which blew for three days, she was blown adrift and driven to sea. On December 28 she capsized in a heavy squall and was found bottom-upward January 15 following, about 200 miles southeast of Delaware Breakwater. A big ocean tug towed her back to the shelter of the Breakwater, where she was subsequently righted and towed to Philadelphia.

There is another form of derelict which, in some ways, is even more dangerous than the nearly-submerged wreck that floats bottom upward. This is the waterlogged ocean waif which is just too heavy to rise to the surface and still not waterlogged enough to rest firmly upon the ocean bottom. Derelicts of this sort often are hidden just below the surface and supported by just one point of the hull—either the bow or the stern—resting upon the water bed, while the opposite end slants upward toward the surface. They have no abiding-place and may turn up almost anywhere, storm currents and the sweep of strong tides being enough to carry them into the paths especially of coasting vessels, where they appear as dangerous obstructions in waters otherwise known to be safe. As recently as December, 1893, the schooner Manitou struck a derelict of this character near Five Fathom Bank Lightship and sank, while nearly every week reports are received of damage of one sort or another being occasioned by unknown obstructions. As far as possible, the frequent issue of these special charts shows just where these dangers last were as well as the tracks they have followed since being encountered.

The destruction of derelicts is essentially a task for government vessels, and both the ships of the navy and the vessels of the revenue cutter service have divided honors in this field. Generally, derelicts are destroyed, either by setting them on fire or by blowing them up with gun cotton, but once in a while the wreck is rammed and thus scattered. This is something of a risk, although a waterlogged lumber schooner was broken up in this manner a few years ago by one of our unprotected cruisers. As an experiment in naval tactics it was suggestive of what might be done by unarmored ships in time of war, but this proving involved a good deal of risk and is not apt to become a common practice in doing away with derelicts.

The sailorman looks with no little superstitious dread upon these weird waifs of the sea, and his awe is not unjustified. There is something extremely ghost-like and morbidly suggestive in these abandoned hulks, which once felt the guiding spirit of man and are now in the merciless grip of the mysterious sea, carried here and there by wind and wave, and the temporary abiding-places of screaming sea birds. They will never carry into port the hopes fulfilled of those that once bravely started forth in them, and today they drift abandoned with the winds moaning through their shattered spars and the waters groaning through their broken bodies—a menace to every unwatchful seafarer.

A Cup of Coffee.

TERRIBLE REVENGE OF PAUL VERDEAN, THE FISHERMAN.

From London Sketch.

THE little pearly clouds were all gathered round the setting sun just over the wood of Haumont. Above the sea the sky was quite clear, a tranquil blue growing slowly darker. Gulls were chorusing noisily from the cliffs and the abrupt gray rock islets which studded the bay.

Renée Barbelle sat crouched near the edge of the cliff, her back to the sun, her face to the growing darkness of the sky, her hands clasped round her knees. She had sea-green eyes, beautiful, magnetic, melancholy, and they seemed held by the mystery of the deepening purple dusk. Her heavy brown hair falling round her shoulders left her face in shadow. Sitting hunched and still she suggested Fate brooding over the world.

A man coming quietly over the short grass of the uneven plateau that crowned the cliff paused when he saw her. The pause was undramatic. It was evident that he expected to see her. He had at once looked in her direction when he had breasted the last yards of the hill that led abruptly to the plateau.

His thin lips smiled at the sight of Renée, his eyes softened. He walked forward to her side with quiet, quick movements, a tall, lithe, thin man. It was unusual that a man should move so quietly in heavy sea boots. His approach suggested subtly the stalking of a feline animal.

Renée heard him when he was some yards away, but she made no movement. She sat crouched and impassive, staring at the sea. She spoke without moving her head or her hands.

"The sea is very still tonight," she said. She had a low, full voice that had a hint of mystery in its cadences. She frequently spoke long sentences on one note, but her voice never grew monotonous. "There is hardly a ripple out there where the sky darkens, Jacques."

The man's face changed suddenly. At the first sound of her caressing voice his smile had grown. Now he frowned, and an angry light showed in his eyes. He clenched his thin hands, and his lips parted a little, showing a gleam of white teeth.

"It is I—Paul," he said. "Not Jacques."

Renée sat quite still for a moment without speaking.

"You, Paul Verdéan?" She spoke slowly. "I thought you were still at sea——"

"The Saint Joseph made the harbor on the top of the tide this morning. You might have known easily, Renée. They knew on the quay, in the market. Just a question, Renée—but it was not worth while, eh?" He spoke slowly, as though he had some difficulty in containing himself.

Again she was silent for a few moments before she spoke.

"Why should I inquire?" she asked at length.

"Why? Because you are affianced to me."

"That is not so, Paul Verdéan." She had no hesitation now.

"All but affianced to me, Renée. You have led me to expect it. All my life is bound up in you. It is your mother's wish, it is my desire. Last week, I went aboard the Saint Joseph happy. You had promised when I returned——"

"To give you an answer," Renée interposed hurriedly.

"An answer. You smiled. I could not doubt what your answer would be. I could not. I was in a transport. The winds blew fair. It was an omen. We had a big catch. It was an omen. We carried to Cherbourg and sold at big prices. It was an omen. I never had such luck. And every moment I thought of you and happiness, Renée; and when I sold the fish, it was the more for our home and wedding feast. Ma foi! The wind carried us back to Cardeaux nearly as fast as my heart wished. It was an omen. And then, on the quay, there is no Renée. I ask. She is on the cliff, I am told. She looks out at the sea—she looks for me, I whisper to myself, and climb joyously up the long, dry, white road. And you call me Jacques!" He used his hands in graceful gesticulation; he was caressing, dramatic, severe in turn. He spoke earnestly, pleadingly, but there was an undertone that menaced.

"You have cheated yourself," she answered. "It has not been my work."

"You smiled at me, Renée. It must have meant something."

"You were, you are my friend."

"That is not so. I may love you, I may hate, but friendship—bah! I have come for my answer, Renée." He tried to look into her eyes, stooping over her, but she gazed steadily out into the darkening purple dusk. "For your mother's sake, for mine——" He paused, and continued in a lower tone, "for your own."

Something in his tone prompted her quick, alarmed question.

"What do you mean, Paul?"

"For your own sake," he repeated.

"I do not love you," she answered at length. "I will not marry you."

"Jacques Bournais!" he cried. "The chemist, the pillmaker, the pallid, white-blooded chemist! Mon Dieu! he can bleat, he can wear Paris clothes at mass, he has dandified airs—and you like that! I spit on him, Renée! Look out then, Renée! The night is coming. Do you see it—the night, purple, mysterious? And whisper to your soul! 'The night is coming!'"

"Paul, do you think I fear you?" she asked contemptuously. "You have always tried to bully me—you and my mother. But I am Breton, too. I love where I love and I hate where I hate. It is nothing to you."

"It is everything to me!" he cried passionately. "You have cheated me!"

"I have not. You know that you have never really hoped," she answered.

"Before Jacques came——"

"Your friend, Paul," she interposed.

"My friend! I told him my hopes. He sympathized. See how great a scoundrel he is! Renée, you cannot love him!"

"I do!" she answered steadily.

"You do!" he shouted.

"He has spoken—we are to be married," she said gravely.

"Ah!" The exclamation was like the cry of a wounded animal. "You were waiting for him?"

"He comes sometimes—when he can. It is too late now."

"He comes here—where I have found you so often!"

"It is my favorite spot."

"I know—I know," he answered. Then he drew himself up and looked round at the wood of Haumont, blood-red now from the wounds of the dying sun.

"It is a red sunset," he said.

"That means a good day tomorrow."

"Who knows?" he answered. Something in his voice made her turn quickly toward him. She could not see him very well from her crouching position upon the grass. She rose to her feet in her graceful, unhurried manner, and gazed at him intently with her curious sea-green eyes. Standing back from her, his face turned to the sunset, Paul Verdéan was bathed in red light. It laved him, his face, his long, slim hands, like a sea of blood. And then suddenly the last rays dropped behind the curtain of the wood, and he was in shadow.

Still staring away from her, still speaking in the strained, hard voice of one who holds himself in leash, with that undercurrent of something infinitely menacing, he continued: "You have decided—nothing will change your mind? Nothing that I can say, or your mother can say? No consideration?"

"I have decided. Why do you ask?"

"I must be quite sure—quite sure. There must be no doubt."

"There is no doubt," she answered. "It is Jacques I love. Nothing can alter my love for him."

"There is one thing—death."

She shuddered; the pupils of her eyes dilated.

"Is that a threat?" she cried. "You are a coward, a mean coward, to threaten a woman."

"It is no threat," he answered slowly. "I am a fisherman, and death is always a near and familiar thing to us—Jacques is my friend."

"He is—he is!" she protested vehemently.

"I know that; I have cause to know that."

"You speak bitterly."

"I am not conscious of it. There is nothing more to be said." He moved slowly away from her. She watched him go, and shuddered again. Then in a few swift steps she was beside him with outstretched hands.

"Paul, if I have given you cause to think hardly of me, think it only of me. I have gone too much in fear of my mother, perhaps, to be honest with you."

"That is all done with."

He did not appear to see her outstretched hands. He pushed on his slow way. Watching him go over the edge of the plateau, and so on to the white road that was now almost indefinite in the twilight, his deliberate, heavy steps suggested to her the odd fancy that he was being led—that (so different were they to his ordinary lithe, quick, silent movements) he was half-reluctant to be so led.

In a few minutes she ran to the edge of the plateau in a sort of panic, and peered after him. The white road ran into darkness, and some way down it a deeper shadow moved slowly away from her.

In the main street of Cardeaux was a little chemist's shop. Paul Verdéan came toward it slowly, but less heavily, and paused outside. His eyes were bright with some purpose; the rest of his bronzed face was impassive, a mask. His long, thin hands moved nervously, were never still—suggested, indeed, the tentacles of some marine animal seeking its prey. Standing inert before the little shop, he passed his tongue over his thin lips as though they were dry.

It was quite dusk now, and the powdered stars showed clearly in the sky. A little wind moaned quietly up the street. It sounded like the cry of a wandering spirit, low, complaining, lost. Paul suddenly turned and stared back over the road he had come. Then slowly he looked at the shops, the cobbled road, the sky overhead a lingering, comprehensive, dispassionate look. His eyes shone with a red light, baleful, disconcerting. He slipped one long, twitching hand into his pocket, dragged out a handkerchief, and wiped his lips. Then he opened the little door of the shop and entered.

Jacques Bournais, behind the counter, stood with his back to the door, searching among the bottles.

"I heard that the Saint Joseph was in, Paul," he said. "You had a fair run and a big catch."

"Yes."

"As owner that will mean something to you." Jacques spoke heartily, but watched his friend in a curious, wondering manner.

"Yes——" Paul blinked at the shining bottles. His eyes—he was conscious of their strangeness—were turned away from Jacques.

"You look ill, my friend," the chemist said—"restless, gray. What is the matter?"

"There is nothing the matter," Paul answered dully.

"But you look as though you had not slept for nights." Jacques spoke with some sympathy in his voice.

"I am tired," Paul replied. He stared as though fascinated by the brightness of the bottles. Then a sudden intelligence crept into his face; his eyes shone, if Jacques could only have seen them. "I have had toothache. It has been bad, very bad. It is better now."

"I am sorry, Paul," Jacques answered.

But I could not, I could not. Like the pungent aroma of rosemary itself, the remembrance clung to me. I would dream of you as I saw you, with the autumn sunset on your hair, and the autumn leaves round about you as you stood in the arbor that day."

He paused, and his hand tightened over the arm of the seat. Then, as if shaking himself from his reverie, he laughed harshly and looked at the girl.

"What is the confession, Kenneth?" she asked softly.

The man sighed heavily and looked away.

"I told you I came to Tombstone for solace, because it was all that remained in the world for me, all that I cared for. I had forgotten ever to think of Tombstone as other than it was when I left it—the Tombstone of my boyhood. That it had changed in all these years had never occurred to me." He smiled cynically. "It's the same with all ideals: to realize them is to shatter them. I might have known, but so much did I hunger for something to hold to, that I lost sight of the possibility of any change."

He paused; a look of pain came into his face.

"And it HAD changed. With an awful shock it came to me. It was not the same. The people, too, had changed. All the old friends were gone. New faces, strange faces, met me coldly, at the old places where I had found the smile of friendship. No one knew me there. Think! a stranger in my own town, of which I had once known every house, every turn. The Tombstone I had known, I once had loved, was no more."

His voice died away, and a tense look came into his eyes.

"It was overwhelming, this shattering of the last faint hope, and it made me weak. You cannot understand, Olive. It made me hate my life, the things I should have loved. The misery of it, the suffering, made me hate. You have never suffered as much as that and you cannot understand. And when a man has hate, he has weakness—it's an attribute—and I was weak. I let myself go unrestrained. I did wrong. I sank to the depths. I perjured my manhood. But why am I telling you—why am I telling you!" He looked at her, startled at his own words; and as he looked into her eyes, he knew she was reading his soul, that its turbid leaves were plain to her—as plain as any book.

"How you must have suffered!" she said.

For a moment he could not speak. He only gazed at her, transfixed. An emotion he had not felt for years swept over him, flooding every dark place in him with its glory. Something within him that he thought dead was resuscitated by those simple, human words, and it fought for the dominance of his heart again.

"Olive," he exclaimed suddenly, "you don't think I blame you for—for my wrong! No, no. It was all my fault, Olive. I was a fool to let myself care for you as I did, to let you mean so much to me; but somehow I thought you cared, too—I felt you did—and when I learned the truth, it seemed too much. . . . I shouldn't have told you. . . . I see now."

The girl looked away and was silent a while.

"You never learned the truth, Kenneth," she said.

"Never learned the truth?" he repeated vaguely. "Then why——?"

"Listen." Her voice trembled. "It is such a simple story, and so old—of a woman, a mother, who lived a life of sacrifice for her children whose father had died when they were very young. Every longing and hope that springs from a mother's love she centered in her three children, and every prayer of which a mother's heart is capable she poured out for them. When two of them were taken from her with the harvest of fulfillment almost at hand, all that she had left in the world to comfort her, to care for her, was a daughter. Her youth was gone now, Kenneth, and her strength was giving way—oh, can't you see my reason? It was the duty I owed her, a child's duty in which self must be forgot. Can't you understand? I did care; oh, so much; and the sacrifice was hard, almost more than I could bear. That is why I didn't tell you. I knew my grief would pain you, and I hoped you would forget, that I alone would suffer."

"Olive, Olive," the man was repeating huskily.

The girl turned toward him.

"Kenneth, that duty has been fulfilled. The awful heart agony was too much for her, and she grew weaker and weaker. I brought her West, but the change did no good. That is how I happen to be here tonight. I am going back to the old home, to the roses and the scarlet leaves—alone." Her voice faltered and she stopped.

"Olive"—a tense look came into the man's face, and he plead fiercely—"you mustn't care—do you hear me?—you mustn't care. It can't be, I tell you. You must see how unworthy I am and forget. You must know that I have done wrong because I have not fought, because I have been weak; that I have let myself go in the environment of that old wild life simply because I thought you didn't care. That alone shows you what clay I'm made of. If I had been worthy, it should have made me strong, my love for you; but instead it made me weak. I tell you this because you must know the truth; you must know and forget me, forget that you ever cared, for I am not worthy. I desecrated the love I held for you because I was a coward and gave up the fight. It won't be hard for you now, knowing this, and you must not, you must not care." He leaned over and laid his free hand upon her arm.

The girl did not speak. She was looking out into the great hot night.

The man at the window had taken out his watch and was holding it up to the light.

"We're nearly there," he said gruffly.

The girl glanced toward him, and, as he returned the watch to his pocket, she caught sight of a badge shining on the lapel of his vest.

An incomprehensible horror passed over her as she realized what it meant. The younger man's pleading, his words, held a new meaning for her now. She had not understood them before, and, as the truth broke in upon her, a great new sorrow entered her heart.

"Kenneth," she spoke at length, her voice broken, "have you any regret for these wasted years, for the life you have led?"

His hand moved quickly down her arm until it rested upon her own hand, and her fingers closed about it. It was as if to strengthen himself against the overwhelming stress of emotion.

"I'd give my life to live them over." It was his soul that spoke. "I see it all now—the cowardice, the selfishness, the weakness of it all. Somehow I don't quite understand how I could have let myself drift so. It was the hardest test, but even in the face of everything I should have been a man." He stopped and sank deep into his seat. "I would again, I know. I'd be a man. But it's too late now."

Lights began to flash by outside. Ahead, the engine's whistle shrilled through the dark.

The girl did not heed. She was leaning forward, her eyes in those of the man.

"Your sorrow is my sorrow," she was saying. "For your weakness I, too, must suffer as you have suffered. But sometimes out of the depth the man is born."

The brakes had been thrown on, the train was slowing down; but even this she did not heed.

"Nor is it too late," she hurried on. "Kenneth, tell me, do you love me?"

"Don't, don't!" he cried. "I tell you it IS too late. You must forget."

The man at the window turned and motioned the other to rise. The two stood up. The girl also rose.

"Answer me," she repeated softly. "Do you love me?"

"You don't understand." His voice was like that of a child. "I have lied to you, Olive." He raised his shackled hand. "I——"

But she placed her hand upon his lips.

"Don't tell me," she said, "for I know."

She drew nearer.

"I'll wait for you, Kenneth."

For a moment he could not comprehend.

"Come," demanded the other man. "We'll be carried by."

"We'll forget the weary days, Kenneth; we'll start anew."

Of a sudden the meaning burst in upon him, and so scared was the profundity of the love it bespoke, that he was silent before the holiness of it.

"Now kiss me," she said. And the older man turned away and waited as the other bent and touched the girl's lips with his own.

She sank into the seat, covering her face with her hands. When she looked up again the two men had disappeared.

THE SHEPHERD'S TOWER.

I saw it when the dawn was first declared—
His tower, whose body generations reared,
Its soul the Shepherd's own.
Not blue the ambit of the twilight sky,
But clear and warm as ancient ivory,
Enshrined that flower-like stone.

As ivory unstained, and then there flowed
Through the wide eastern heaven rays that glowed
Into the upper white.
With delicatest fire and gentle fawn,
The campanile's summit answered dawn
And heralded the light.

Upsoaring from the silence, where still kept
Blue shadows while the lily city slept,
Child of the morning sky,
You floated into flame, yourself a flame
Above all wonder and beyond all fame—
A glorious mystery.

One with the firmament and not with earth,
Melting into the very morning's mirth,
To heaven's high self avowed,
Wrought of the roseate dayspring, pierced with shade
Of pearly eves, night fluted, rainbow rayed,
Windowed with purple cloud.

Thy colors echo morn and night and noon.
Moonrise on earth and sunrise on the moon,
White Venus and red Mars;
The deep green shadows of a mountain grove,
The foam that glimmers and the waves that rove
Under the setting stars.

Pillar of fire! Symbol of the Re-birth,
Lifted forever on this radiant earth
By Tuscan Giotto's might,
Laud we the dust he piled in Arno's plain
To beckon Italy, ere yet again
His own dust sank to night.

The Remorseless Meter.

The young couple sprang from the vehicle and hurried up the steps. A moment later they pushed open a door and appeared before the startled justice.

"Sir," gasped the young man, "will you kindly marry us as quick as possible?"

"Ah, an elopement," quoth the wise old justice.

"Yes, yes. Please hurry!"

"I see," chuckled the old official, "you are pursued—the infuriated parent is close behind."

"Nothing of the sort," cried the exasperated youth.

"Eh! Then what's the rush?"

"I'll tell you!" shouted the young man, "there's a taxicab waiting for us at the door, and we're losing money every minute!"

Then the justice got busy.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mt. Wilson to Mt. Lowe.

PERILOUS BUT INTERESTING TRIP RECENTLY TAKEN.

By a Special Contributor.

MOUNTAIN climbing is becoming each year more and more a feature in the recreation of residents of Los Angeles and vicinity. Gradually the dwellers in this favored region are beginning to realize what an advantage they have in the accessibility of their mountains, not only in the pleasure of getting close to nature, but in the wonderful climatic change from a semi-tropical region to the stimulating influences of a mile and more above the sea.

Many who live here, however, do not realize what an opportunity to get acquainted with the wilds of nature is knocking at their very doors, and that less than a day removed from their breakfast tables are mountain fastnesses, where not even the thought of civilization need intrude, and man seems as out of place as a deer would on Broadway.

The first degree in real mountain climbing, away from beaten paths, for Los Angeles enthusiasts is the trip between Mt. Wilson and Mt. Lowe, and this year for the first time it has grown to be something of a feature, eagerly discussed by the guests of the hotels on the two mountains.

A number of parties, including some women, have crossed over, and so far as is known, these women are the pioneers among the fair sex in accomplishing this feat.

Women have not only crossed the rough country which separates the Mt. Wilson Hotel and the Mt. Lowe Tavern, but in a number of instances, instead of taking the easier route of crossing the head of Eaton's Cañon, lying between the two ridges, have scaled precipitous San Gabriel, which with its 6154 feet of altitude is the highest peak of the Sierra Madre coast range.

Our party, which found itself awakened to the possibility of a real mountain adventure, included tenderfeet from the East, who had never met with a real mountain, and strange to say, long-term residents of Los Angeles, who had lived years beneath the summit of Mt. Wilson without ever attempting its conquest.

It would seem that a mountain is not without honor save in its own country, and it is a question whether, comparatively speaking, there are not more native sons than tourists, who have never enjoyed the wonderful extent and variety of views to be had from the top of 6000-foot Mt. Wilson.

Our first day was devoted to a leisurely negotiation of the seven-and-a-tenth-mile trail leading from Sierra Madre to the summit of Mt. Wilson, where we arrived in time to enjoy the magnificent glories of the sunset over the Pacific, and the very acceptable, if more material, joys of a good dinner.

We learned that the shortest route to Mt. Lowe by way of crossing the West Fork of the head of Eaton's Cañon was estimated at about eight miles, and that though there was no beaten trail the entire distance there was no good reason for any one losing the way, as the objective point would be in plain view practically all the time, and the route for the cañon dip lay along well-defined ridges.

In the morning, besides a plentiful supply of provisions, we carried with us an ax, brush clippers and a pick for the making of a trail to aid those who should come after us.

The first two miles of our course lay along the beautiful, level Deer Park trail of the hotel property, with the deeply-hewn valley of the West Fork to our right and north, and picturesque, romantic-looking Barley Flats sleeping in the soft light of the morning sun.

A band of horse thieves operating between San Francisco and the Mexican line, in the days of Ramona and Allessandro, are supposed to have made the high tableland with its spring of water a feeding station, the grain which spilled from the nose bags of the horses sowing the cloth of green or brown, according to the seasons, which now delights the eye.

After leaving Deer Park, we had good use for the brush clippers and the ax in clearing the mere suggestion of a trail along the high backbone of the ridge, which falls abruptly to the beautiful valley of the West Fork of the San Gabriel on the north and into Eaton's Cañon, leading straight toward the glistening buildings of Pasadena to the south.

The valley of the West Fork, with its rush of tumbling water, was 3000 feet below us, while in the sheer precipices and slides reaching into Eaton's found our first nervous thrills of real

To the south we had a hundred-mile and ocean, with orange grove, vineyard, and marking a great checker board of natural the smoke of a score of cities and towns dustrial activity, and the twin peaks of distance.

Having devoted considerable time to trail, we were not more than four miles when we halted for luncheon on a high ridge, with loosened rocks crashing from feet into the depths of Eaton's Cañon. We look eastward down the great length of the Valley to where San Gorgonio ("Grayback") its shining whiteness of snow in the knew that we had discovered the mountain south which is distinctly worth while.

Leaving the hogback, we skirted the the peak toward San Gabriel, treading a of leaves and threading a forest which were adorned with a beautiful

Reaching the base of San Gabriel, that formidable peak instead of dipping of Eaton's Cañon, and were launched ships of our journey. We could find trail through the thick brush about the mountain, and cut and dragged our way we could, not having time to make a would sleep at Alpine that night.

After getting through the brush we slope of Gabriel so steep and rough have found rougher mountaineering a precipice. It was a case of picking way, and the rocks rolled beneath as At one point we picked our way foothold on the slope of the wash cañon, and some of the women balked when told that a quick run across the them in safety. They declared that possible that they would slide back Eaton's Cañon.

With one man perched on the ridge another secured a sort of foothold reached down the pick handle to the them and boosting them to the safety above. All went well until the the last girl was in transit, when she became panic-stricken and insisted on sliding into Eaton's Cañon then and there.

Her connecting link was safe enough, even though his foot had slipped, and as the girl was fortunately not the heaviest in the collection, she was hoisted willy-nilly to the top floor.

Reaching the peak of San Gabriel just in time to see the sun lose itself in the ocean, the grand view of the vast world of mountains, valley and sea outspread beneath us was well worth the scaling of San Gabriel, arduous as it had been.

The tattered remnants of an American flag fluttered fiercely in the cold wind which swept the peak, and reminded us that we had much to accomplish if we would not spend the night in its chilliness. We were unable to spend the time which the magnificent view and the sunset were worthy of, but faced the problem of descending the rough southern fall of San Gabriel before darkness should close upon us.

There was not a semblance of a trail nor indication of the proper route to use in descending. We tried different leads while the dusk gathered, and finally trusted our chances to what appeared to be a ridge, leading into the saddle between Gabriel and Markham, which in turn connects with Mt. Lowe.

We knew that the great wash and precipice giving into Eaton's Cañon was immediately to our left, its location made uncertain by the darkness and thick brush, and there was a deep cañon on our right which we were continually bearing into, as the easier courses sloped that way.

The descent was impossible of description. Each man would take a woman by the arm, and while bolstering her courage with brave words would launch himself and partner on a dust slide of fifty to 100 feet, with securely anchored in the soft disintegrated granite. At other points the grade was so steep that the two sat on a fair-sized piece of rock and slid on down in the midst of a gathering collection of stones.

At last just when the fortitude of some of the women was frayed into tatters, and several were threatening to camp right there on the rough mountainside all night rather than take another blind chance, a voice in the lead announced that the saddle had been gained.

Strips of uncooked bacon were soon curling in the flame, and if you have never eaten bacon cooked in this manner when you were tired out and hungry, you have little idea of how good it tasted to us. We rested and warmed ourselves by the fire for over an hour, while waiting on the moon to reach a height that would shed light on the west side of Markham where our trail lay.

In the bright light of the moon we were filled with awe at the white steepness of the mountainside we had just descended, and how close we had been to that immense chasm. Indeed we had hard work persuading ourselves that this narrow ridge we were looking upon had been our course.

The trail we now took up was built up with granite along the steep side of Markham almost like a road, but was so overgrown with brush that we were not on it more than half the time, and had a merry time fighting the brush, making frequent use of our brush clippers.

At last the trail seemed to end, and we attempted to climb the side of Markham, which was so steep that at every step a portion of the mountain slipped from under us.

Our plan was to follow the ridge until we struck the Lowe trail, but one of the women became so frightened at the steepness of our course that she refused to go farther, and a scouting party found that where we lost the trail a section had been carried out by a slide.

Descending to the Mt. Lowe side of this gap, we proceeded until we were on the Mt. Lowe trail, which led along a most welcome down grade to the good cheer of the tavern, which we reached about 10 o'clock. We were content to take the Mt. Lowe railway back to civilization in the morning.

The trail along the west side of Markham, which we had so much trouble with in the uncertain moonlight, has since been put in good shape by the forest rangers. By the trail we brushed along the ridge from Mt. Lowe, and crossing the Eaton Cañon gap to the saddle between Gabriel and Markham, the trip can now be made by any fairly good climber in a half-day.

Correct English.

A college professor who prided himself on his correct English heard his wife remark: "I intend to call Jane to bring a fresh bucket of water." "You doubtless mean a bucket of fresh water," corrected the professor. "I wish you would pay some attention to your rhetoric; your mistakes are curious." A few moments later the professor said: "My dear, that picture would show to better advantage if you were to hang it over the clock." "Ah," she replied, quietly, "you doubtless mean you want to hang it above the clock. If I were to hang it over the clock we could not tell the time. I wish you would be more careful with your rhetoric, my dear; your mistakes are curious." And the professor all at once became very much interested in the book he was reading.—[Dundee Advertiser.

Crocker's Spyglass.

NOTABLE CHARACTER AT WESTMINSTER BRIDGE.

By a Special Contributor.

CLOSE to the Houses of Parliament, London, at the entrance to Westminster Bridge, stands a man with a telescope. His name is George Crocker, and he might properly be called the "Parliamentary astronomer royal." Most of the old members of the House of Commons and not a few noble lords who attend the upper legislative chamber have peeped through Crocker's star gazer. For more than fifteen years he has held his post. The police have, on one or two occasions, tried to oust the astronomer, but Crocker is not a man who is easily moved, and his "pull" with members of Parliament has been so strong that the police have had to let him alone. Crocker is one of the few interesting "types" of character left to London in these days of modernity. He is a ruddy-faced, jovial-looking man of 60 whom communion with the stars has provided with a fund of philosophy all his own.

"Yes, I have seen a good many changes in my time," he said recently. "I have stood for many years at the entrance to this bridge, and you would be surprised at the number of well-known folk who have come to my telescope to have a penny peep at the stars, or else, on cloudy nights, to have a look at the face of 'Big Ben'—the largest clock dial in the world.

GEORGE CROCKER AND HIS SPY-GLASS.

"I have made a fair living from my telescope since I started fifteen years ago. In fact, this is my second instrument. It cost me $200—all saved up from pennies collected here on the bridge. I was encouraged to buy the new instrument by Sir Robert Ball, the famous astronomer royal. He came to the bridge one night, and had a look through, paying his penny in the usual way. He had a good long look through, and I thought of charging him extra. Then he began to move the machine around and find stars for himself. You know I don't usually allow customers to work the instrument. However, I didn't say much, and after a while, he began to tell me a lot about certain stars. He spoke of 'distances' and 'diameters' in a way that soon showed me that he knew all there was to know about astronomy.

"When he left, he gave me some cards to a lecture which 'Sir Robert Ball' was to deliver at the Royal Institute. I did not know at the time that he himself was Sir Robert, but when I got to the Royal Institute I saw that the famous scientist and my customer were one and the same person. He laughed at the joke, and then he talked to me about my telescope. He said it wasn't up to much, and advised me to get a new one. I attended a lot of his lectures and I became so interested that I took up the study of astronomy seriously. As soon as I got well into it, I saw that my old instrument was indeed a poor one, and I began to save up to buy a new one. I managed in the course of a few years to get together the necessary cash. Sir Robert told me where to buy my new instrument and the best kind to get for the money. Thus I set up the present one.

"I have had a lot of people besides astronomers to look through my machine. The Rt. Hon. John Burns often stops and has a peep through on his way home from Parliament at nights. Though a Cabinet minister, he often walks home across Westminster Bridge at night all the way to Battersea—a good hour's walk. He likes to have a peep at the stars, and a chat.

"Then, again, I have had Sir Benjamin Stone, Lord Rosebery, Balfour and lots of others to look through. They always have a word or two with me, and pay their pennies like the rest of folks—sometimes a little more.

"When the nights are overcast, as I said, I turn the instrument on the face of Big Ben, and Londoners come to have a peep at the big clock. You would not think that people would pay to look through a telescope at a clock they were so near to, but such is the case. As a matter of fact, I get more money from the clock on Saturdays and Sundays than I do from the moon or stars. There are a lot of decorations, and also the signs of the zodiac on the face of the clock which one cannot see with the naked eye, and people pay for the use of the telescope to see them.

"Since I began standing here new Scotland Yard has been built and the trams over the bridges have come. It seems to me the old city is changing a wonderful lot. Modern skyscrapers are going up along Victoria street; new buildings everywhere. All the old landmarks are disappearing.

"No, I never take cold standing here just beside the river. I suppose there is nothing like getting used to a thing. When you have stood on a bridge over the river for nearly fifteen years it takes considerable of a cold spell to bowl you over. But cold nights don't worry me, as the stars can be seen better when it is cold than otherwise. I have only one enemy, and that's the fog. When a 'London particular'—one of those yellow ones—sets in, I'm done."

Our Deceptive Eyes.

The eyes we brought with us at birth do not see a tithe of the beauties of nature. But with a microscope not much better than this, Leuwenhoek, in 1675, frightened the world by saying that more animals lived in the human mouth than there were people in Holland! With object glasses of high power we are said to see things magnified 200, 500, 1000 or 2000 diameters, which only means that different objectives, as they are called, bring our eyes within one-fourth, or one-eighth, or one-twelfth, or one-fifteenth, or one-twenty-fifth of an inch of the object.

And what have these mechanical devices of ours for helping our eyes to see, not done for the human world? So important to all life is that living world about which our native eyes would never have given us the least information, that it is evident no physical instrument can suffice for man, because he is so much greater than anything physical. All eyes made of protoplasm, including the eyes of the anthropid apes, belong only to low origins and levels; but this human-fashioned mineral microscope belongs to the Andean heights of mind.

However, we have still other reasons for dissatisfaction with our eyes. They see the star Capella as no larger than a bright jewel in a lady's necklace, though we know that because that star has no proper motion, as astronomers say, and yet shines so splendidly, in reality, it must be at least a hundred thousand times larger and a hundred thousand times brighter than our own sun. But our poor eye can now answer, You know that I do not report the whole truth to you about anything. You should not trust me so, because, owing to radical defects in my make-up, I tell you that a man six feet high is only six inches high when he is a mile off. And as to the stars, you have had to make a telescope to help me out; but even with it the fixed stars remain beyond me, for I then see them merely as shining points. It is not by me, but by that greater power than mine in you, your reason, that you learn not only how large Capella is, but also, through another of your contrivances, that Capella abounds in earthly materials.—[Everybody's Magazine.

How to Prove Coins.

The lady behind the counter at one of the winter drapery sales in Oldham street wrote out the bill for my purchases (writes "B") on a little manifolding book, which reproduced her writing by means of a carbon paper on the page below. Then she took the half-sovereign I tendered in payment, and, placing it on the upper page, pressed it hard down with her thumb. I asked the reason. "We have instructions," she explained, "to take the impression of any coin received by means of the carbon paper in the book. See (turning to the duplicate of my bill) there's the impression of your half-sovereign. You couldn't very well think you'd given me a sovereign after seeing that, could you? You'd be surprised," she said, "how often we have to show our books to people to convince them we've not made a mistake."—[Manchester Guardian.

Out of Date.

The manager looked the play over regretfully.

"I hate to give this back to you," he said. "It's so well written, so hopeful, so appealing."

The young dramatist nodded.

"That sounds good," he said. "And yet you hesitate?"

"I must," the manager replied. "Some day this sort of thing will be in fashion again—at least I hope so."

The young playwright frowned.

"I wish you would tell me frankly just why you can't produce my work."

The manager sighed.

"My dear boy," he replied, "I can't produce it because it is so hopelessly clean and wholesome."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Little Eva's Handicap.

After a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in a small town a kind-faced old gentleman found his way behind the scenes and complimented Little Eva on her beautiful ascension through the pink clouds.

"Ah, my child," he said, affectionately, "just keep up your talented acting, and some day you may be a second Sarah Bernhardt."

"That's impossible, sir," laughed the child.

"And why?"

"Because I am a little boy."—[Chicago News.

A Righteous Uprising.

Old Peleg Circumvents Meddling Relations.

By a Special Contributor.

"IF you're done tålkin' nonsense, Henery, Ma'll give you a bite 'fore you start fur home!" Peleg Willette declared, his ill-concealed wrath venting itself in his desire to hasten his son's departure. "Eatin's a good med'cine, an' you're in powerful need o' some."

"I don't see no 'casion fur you to take it so hard, Pa," Henry said deprecatingly, his mild, middle-aged face twitching in knots. "I'd be glad 'nough to take you both home," he went on slowly, filtering a dry cough through the fingers of the great hand he held before his mouth, "but you see Laury, she thinks—seein' Sam left Ellen so well-to-do, she ought to do her part, an' so long's she offered to take Ma, an' give her a good home fur the rest o' her life, why! seems like flyin' right in the face o' all gumption fur Ma not to go."

Peleg's sharp, blue eyes snapped under their heavy thatches of grizzly eyebrows. "When your ma goes to live with Ellen Willette it'll be after you plant me deep, an' pile all o' the rocks in creation on top o' me to hold me down," he snorted, with an emphatic gesture. "Ellen, she cooked this thing up, she's slick's hot grease, an' she talked Laury inter it, 'n' they sent you, like the willin' fool you be, to break it easy to us. Fire an' tow! Ain't you got enny sense, Henery?" the old man asked with quick passion. "Don't you know you can't break folks's hearts, or poke their heads in hornets' nests 'n' tell 'em to keep cool, an' there's no 'casion fur 'em to feel bad! Jupiter! Bad!"

Mrs. Willette left her rocking chair and trotted across the room to her husband. "There now, Pa," she said soothingly, patting his gnarled old hand, "you know Henery don't mean enny harm; he's jest fearsome like fur us to stay here this winter, seein' we're so sort o' pinchin'. Ain't that so, Henery?" she asked, nodding her white head until its stray locks fluttered in a ring about her placid old face.

"Pitchforks, Ma! we could stay here till jedgment day far's Henery's consarned, if it warn't fur Laury an' Ellen! They gits 'round Henery by tellin' him we're too poor, an' too old, to be 'lowed to stay here by our lone; so Laury, she'll take the hoss an' wagon with me throw'd in, an' Ellen wants you an' your things, with the cow throwed in fur good measure!" Peleg cried angrily, straightening his thin figure, and snapping his fingers in rapid succession. "No! 'tain't Henery's fault!" he declared, overcome by the sight of great tears rolling down his wife's soft cheeks, "fur he ain't got sense 'nough to know what it means to us to be parted, an' give up the home we worked so hard to git, an' go live where we ain't got enny rights, or are overly wanted. Keep still, Henery!" he insisted, as his son mildly protested. "I know jest how 'twould be, better'n you ken tell me; your ma'd git shoved in that little room off the kitchen at Ellen's, an' all o' her ol' things go in that big front chamber, the one that's saved fur fine company. I took notice o' Ellen's measurin' the big chest o' drawers the very last time she was here, my 'spicions waked up right then an'——"

"Oh, Pa! Peleg! I ain't never goin' no place to live 'way from you!" Mrs. Willette wept with the abandon of an affrighted child. "I didn't know that was what Henery wanted! I won't! I jest won't go to Ellen's to live!" she wailed, wiping her eyes on the brilliantly-colored mat she snatched hastily from the table. "Why, Henery! you knowed I could hardly stand it there when Sam was 'live, an' now——" her sobs overpowered her as Peleg led her back to her chair.

Henry, realizing that he had found a chance to escape, hurried to the door. "I'll be back Tuesday mornin' with Laury an' Ellen," he paused long enough to say, "an' mebbe they'll manage better'n I ken. I wanted to bring you a few loads o' stuff an' let you weather it out, but Ellen, she——" He stopped abruptly, then bolted out of the door, his mother's voluble grief convincing him he had failed to present the case clearly, allowing his sympathy to get the better of Ellen's judgment.

Evil days had overtaken Peleg Willette and Priscilla his wife; their small provision for the future, saved by painful, pinching economics, had been utterly lost in a bank failure. Peleg, for Priscilla's comfort, kept reminding her of all that she had left, including himself, while back of all his banter the vital question of existence held him in the bondage of fear.

Henry Willette's offer came like a thunderclap; not even in their deepest stress had the thought of a separation presented itself to the old couple. Fortunately, Peleg, who possessed a strong stratum of hard, common sense, understood the entire case, and resolutely determined to accept the consequences of going his own way. "Don't you fret 'nother mite, Ma," he said decidedly, as soon as their son left them, "fur I ain't goin' to let Ellen give us enny kind o' divorcement, you ken jest make your bet on that; but I've got to study the thing out a bit 'fore I make up my mind how to use her own rope to hang her."

He gazed at his wife's tear-stained face with a look shrewdly tender. "Say, Ma! ken you make me an apple pie?" he asked, with a chirping little laugh. "I've been kinder longin' fur an apple pie with coriandy seeds in it, an' if you'll come out in the yard we'll pick the apples. Then you ken show me how you want the chicken-house fixed; I'll tinker at it whilst you make the pie, fur we're goin' to stay here an' keep our feet together under our own table, if we have to live on crab apples an' pig nuts."

Mrs. Willette's face brightened by degrees, as her smiles rolled over it like streaks of sunshine breaking through fog. Following the habit of years, she dropped her cares into the stronger hands always ready to save her. "If our Mary'd lived," she began, "I 'most know she'd got Robert to help us. Don't you mind how much they did fur me that time, when I was so sick? Why! what ails you, Pa?" she asked curiously, as Peleg met her astonished look with a series of triumphant nods and jerks of his white head.

"Nothin' ails me bad, fur I've found a bright idee an' they're most mighty scarce," he chuckled, "most as scarce's good sense when you need it. Come to think—Ma, did you tell me that Mr. Ross wanted to borry the hoss fur a few days?"

"Yes; an' he said he was willin' to pay fur usin' him fur he wants to go visitin' his children. He's got a bag o' nuts an' a cheese to take 'long, fur he says he likes to carry somethin' to sort o' ile up his welcome an' make it smooth. I was goin' to tell you 'bout his wantin' the horse 'fore Henery came 'n' made me furget it," Mrs. Willette added abstractedly, intent on her preparations for supper, her mind concentrating itself on apple pie.

A little later, Peleg came into the house, a queer smile quivering among the wrinkles about his lips. "We don't have to fall in Ellen's clutches jest yet," he laughed. "Ma, I seen Mr. Ross, an' he's comin' fur the hoss an' wagon after dark tonight, but I don't want you to tell a livin' soul 'bout it or ennythin' we do fur the next few days. Them that keeps their eggs ken set hens!"

Tuesday morning had just lifted the curtains of night when the Willettes closed their house with unusual precaution. Priscilla, dressed in her best, an ancient dress of changeable blue silk, and a gay paisley shawl, followed Peleg with growing curiosity, while he made fast every door and window. "It's jest as tight as the jail!" he exclaimed at last, dropping the front-door key into his pocket and picking up a plethoric, long-throated carpet bag.

"Now, Ma, Tim Jones'll look out fur your chickens an' the cow, so you ain't got the least 'casion to worry," he said earnestly. "We'll let Ellen an' Laury do that when they come. Jupiter! I'd like to linger here like an' onvisible spirit an' watch 'em stew."

Priscilla trotted contentedly after him, carefully lifting her skirts to protect them from the heavy dew, her seldom-used finery lending quaintness to her roly-poly person, and filling her soul with the delight reflected in her satisfied, beaming face. "Now, Peleg, where at be we goin'?" she questioned, quickening her steps to keep pace with her husband's as he left the road to the village and hurried into a by-path through the timber.

Peleg's wink, with its accompanying dry chuckle, held the hint of a delightful mystery.

"Fur liberty sake!" Priscilla exclaimed, "seems to me, Pa, you're feelin' most mighty frisky. I'm jest a mite timorous, fur I know Ellen an' Laury'll look to git dinner to our house, an'——"

"Pitchforks, Ma!" Peleg cried, with mock fierceness, stopping in the road to shake the carpet bag at an inquisitive squirrel, "you've jest got to furget all 'bout Ellen an' Laury. They won't find no mince pies a-waitin' fur 'em when they come to talk over how they're goin' to divide us an' our things. Now, don't cry an' spile all o' your beauty," he added uneasily, as the slow tears gathered in the old woman's eyes. "You could cry if they dragged you off to Ellen's, ten long miles from me, with no way o' our seein' each other but me leggin' it, an' then havin' Ellen listenin' to every word we say! Jubiter's horns, Ma! it makes me seventy times madder'n ordinary jest to think o' the way they wanted to treat you! Best thing we ken do is to furget it all now we're out larkin' fur a good time."

Mrs. Willette's face reflected his smile. She dried her eyes carefully, folded her handkerchief with great precision and tucked it into her pocket, then slid her hand in Peleg's, with the confidence of a child willing to be led. "It's a most powerful sweet mornin'," she said softly. "Where at be we goin', Pa?"

"We're goin' to the junction first," he laughed easily. "It's a long time since we've been to Fairfield, Ma, so I thought we'd take this 'casion. The country's got sort o' thick, so we'll 'scape to the town," he chuckled, placing her hand comfortably on his arm.

The walk to the junction, in the soft flush of early morning, held the excitement of an elopement. Peleg exerted himself to entertain his old wife with quaint reminders of the days long past, when his advances in her affections were marked by a series of gifts ranging from butternuts to a young calf, as he helped her over the rough places and showed her all the courtesy and tenderness of a young lover.

"It's full five years since I was a-ridin' in the steam cars," Priscilla laughed nervously, as they seated themselves in the train. "I'm sort o' troubled at what may come o' it."

"Nothin' ken, if you duck your head low when we come to town, so folks can't see us," Peleg said quietly, keeping his face well out of sight as they passed through their home village.

Priscilla's extreme enjoyment of the ride, and efforts to share each novel sight with Peleg, kept her in a constant state of ferment. She bobbed, beamed, and gesticulated like a great, precocious baby; her bonnet awry, her face shining. Peleg alone felt the responsibility of the undertaking. His quaint old face wore a look of anxiety his indulgent smile failed to hide; his trembling fingers furtively twitching at his stiff collar, in a vain effort to alleviate the sense of oppression that seldom-worn article gave him. He felt relieved when they reached the city and hurried from the station into the busy streets.

"Pa! Pa! where at be we goin'?" Priscilla asked clutching the tail of Peleg's worn, sun-faded coat.

"You keep calm, Ma, an' we'll git 'long well's the next ones," he reassured her, busily spelling out the names of the streets on the passing cars. "I ain't jest lost," he murmured at last, "but I ain't got the right start on this furrow. Ma, you keep right nigh me whilst I talk a bit to this perliceman."

"You want to go to Washington avenue? Well, this's your car!" the policeman responded, helping Priscilla up the steps, to her infinite delight.

"My, ain't he perlite!" she exclaimed. "Mis' Jones said all the perlicemen she saw in town was dirty scamps, an' I mean to tell her 'tain't true, fur this one was so clean he even smelled o' good soap."

As they jingled their way down a beautiful avenue the old lady's excitement grew. Peleg had all that he could do to answer her questions and watch the numbers. "Here we be, Ma!" he cried stopping the car, and assisting his wife from it with the air of a courtier. "Seventeen hundred! This must be the 'dentical place. It's pretty fine here, ain't it now, Ma?"

"Yes; but, Pa, where at are we?" she asked tremulously. "I can't sense where we're goin'!"

Peleg tried to straighten her bonnet by altering its cant. "Your clothes become you fine, Ma," he assured her gravely, "an' in my true 'pinion you look good 'nough to go 'mong the very richest o' the upper crust."

"If we're goin' a visitin' I wisht I'd dyed your coat," she whispered. "I never noticed it much home, but it's faded kind o' stripy."

"It's all right when I'm in it," Peleg laughed, pushing open a great iron gate near them. Priscilla held back and required much encouragement before they reached the beautiful house set well back from the street.

"Oh, I can't never go up them!" she cried convulsively, pointing to the flight of marble steps leading up to the front door. "I never heard tell o' usin' tombstun fur steps 'fore!"

"I don't s'pose it's the real thing," Peleg comforted her, "it's jest board painted marbly like." He marched up boldly with Priscilla tiptoeing carefully after him.

"We've come to see a girl named Nellie—Nellie New," Peleg said pleasantly to the maid who answered his ring.

She glanced at him, half-afraid. "I—oh!" she giggled, closing the door in his face.

"Well, I vum! She must 'a' been in the cellar when manners was passed out!" Peleg said wrathfully, "an' since there weren't nigh half 'nough to go 'round, she didn't git none!" He stopped, and gazed in astonishment at the fashionably-dressed, bright-faced young lady ascending the steps.

"I'm very sorry that the maid was so rude; perhaps I can be of some assistance if you'll tell me what you want," she said kindly, with a curious glance at the odd couple, as a wondering thought in regard to their mission crossed her mind.

Peleg lifted his old hat with a jerk. "I'll be most thankful if you'll find Nellie New fur me," he said eagerly, his eyes lingering with keen appreciation on the girl's brilliant face.

She gave a quickly surprised start. "Nellie New!" she exclaimed, controlling her desire to laugh as she caught sight of a fleeting look of anxious fear on Peleg's face. "I am Nellie New!" she smiled, throwing open the door. "Walk right in!"

She led the way into a room so utterly bewildering to his simple ideas that Peleg's wonder betrayed itself in his unusual hesitation. A great bearskin rug gave him his first sense of familiarity. "It's jest like one I [illegible] when I was young," he muttered, stooping to rub its fur; the pride of past prowess reviving his failing old age.

Priscilla's trot assumed a funny dignity. She stepped cautiously around the rugs, with a dim wonder at the ways of people who spread their best bed covers on the floor; and gazed at the rare baskets adorning the walls, perplexed by their numbers and use, until she decided that they were placed there for sale. "It's one o' the tiptop stores fur fine folks." She found comfort in the thought, and settled herself among the fluffy cushions, in the great chair that Miss New insisted upon her taking, with every appearance of being at home.

Peleg wasted no time in making his errand known. "Miss New," he began abruptly, "are you goin' to marry Robert Miller?"

A flush of indignation flooded Miss New's face. "I don't see how that can concern you," she began. "I——"

"Jest wait," Peleg interrupted, realizing that he'd placed himself in an awkward position. "I ain't done right. I ought to told you we're his first wife's folks. You knew he had a wife that died?" he asked, his [illegible] eyes on the young face before him.

"Oh, yes," Miss New gasped, "Robert has told me about her. There," she laughed nervously, "but I might as well tell you the truth; I am going to be married to Robert very soon."

"I'm as glad fur him as ken be," Peleg said, with a funny bow, stepping forward and taking Miss New's soft, white hand in his great, work-twisted one. "I ain't told Ma 'bout you, but she'll be glad, too. Ain't you, Ma?" he asked, turning to her for confirmation.

Priscilla amazed him. He had purposely kept from her the purport of Robert's last letter, fearing her objection to one who she might feel was in a degree taking her daughter's place. That thought never entered her mind. Nellie New was in everything, excepting [illegible] girlhood, so diametrically Mary's opposite, Priscilla accepted the fact of her becoming Robert's wife with rejoicing. Miss New found herself folded in a warm embrace, with the paisley shawl, and realizing their genuineness, accepted the old woman's kisses and congratulations, in a way that won her heart.

"We ain't come jest to talk 'bout Robert," Peleg laughed, a little later, "but what I come to see you about, Nellie, is—what are you goin' to do with the children? Robert wrote that his aunt that's been keepin' 'em since Mary died, was 'bliged to give 'em up on 'count o' sickness; an' as you was goin' off fur a long trip, he was unsettled what to do. Now, I come to see if you'd be willin' fur Ma an' me to take care o' Mary's babies." His face grew wistful. "We've jest longed fur 'em since Mary had to go, an'——"

"Oh, Nellie, if you'll jest coax Robert to let us [illegible] fur our Mary's children, I'll love an' thank you forever!" Priscilla cried, her voice shrill with excitement.

ever knew Pa come here fur that, or I'd begged you to 'fore this on my bended knees!"

"I can't tell you what Robert will do, but I feel very sure that you ought to have little Robert and Mary," Nellie New said most energetically. "Why! my heart has ached for the poor little dears; they're too small to be put in a school, and they need the loving care you are willing to give them. I'll telephone to him that I want to see him, without telling him why. Coax Robert? Why, I'll insist upon his letting you have them!"

Robert Miller's utter astonishment when he met them and the Willettes. The warmth of his greetings showed his regard for them, while his quick acceptance of their offer to care for his children, and the liberal recompense that he promised, assured their future in the old home.

Then, while Priscilla wiped away her thankful tears, Peleg told the story of Henry's visit, and Ellen's arguments for their separation. He told it quietly, for the sting of its bitterness was a thing of the past for him now, dimmed by the visions of the child-blessed days before him.

Robert's anger burned deep as he listened. "Why didn't you send for me?" he demanded. "You ought to have come to me at once, for you know I'd never let Mary's parents suffer."

"We did come to you, but we come first to the half I thought would understand quickest," Peleg chuckled, looking with open admiration at Nellie's rosy face. "You see, Robert, we're too proud to take help without earnin' it, so I thought you'd give us a chance in a way we'd be mighty thankful fur."

Nellie New insisted upon the Willettes staying and making her a little visit, and with Robert's help gave them the greatest treat of their lives. They went home as glad as children after a lovely holiday, and found that they had raised a hurricane.

Tuesday morning, upon their arrival at the Willette cottage, after repeated, wrathful demands for admittance at every door and window, Ellen and Laura Willette conceived the idea that the old people had been foully murdered and worked themselves up into a frenzy of excitement. Disregarding all of Henry's efforts to bring them to a more reasonable state, they determined to force their way into the house.

"I tell you they're gone 'way on a little jant," he insisted. "The hoss an' wagon's gone, an' the house locked up; Pa's right sharp, that's all there's in it."

"If you ain't got enny more feelin's 'n that you'd better start fur home!" Ellen cried scornfully, refusing to believe that she had been outwitted.

A neighborhood requisition for keys resulted in the finding of one that successfully opened the front door, and Ellen and Laura finding the house empty, took exulting possession, intending to give the truants a warm welcome upon their return. Consternation reigned when night failed to bring them. Even Henry was infected with fears of many kinds. As the next day wore on without a sign of the old people, Ellen's fears reached a hysterical state. She indignantly decided Peleg had taken Priscilla away to escape her, and after much spiteful disputation, brought Laura to the state of thinking that such a course merited severe punishment, and their best method of inforcing it was by dividing the contents of the house and carrying it away.

A spirited argument with Henry delayed their work, making them oblivious to all else, and giving the old couple a chance to walk in unannounced.

Priscilla dropped moaning into the first available chair, while Peleg gazed about his dismantled home his heart beating fast with righteous wrath. "I've a notion to have you both " 'rested!" he hissed. "Give up every blessed thing you've stolen, or I'll send right off fur the Something in his voice frightened both of the women. Ellen dropped a trail of small articles, then sobbingly aided Henry's efforts to restore the house to order. Laura sullenly relinquished a choice collection of Priscilla's treasures, then shaking her shoes at the door, in vindictive violence, departed.

"That's just the fling o' a bilin' pot," Peleg chuckled; "keep calm, Ma, she'll simmer down when she wants somethin'. Now take off your bunnet," he added, patting Priscilla's plump cheek, "an' Laury'll help you fix up 'fore Robert gits here with the children."

"I'm so thankful-happy I hardly know where at I be," Priscilla said later, reaching across the little bed she was making to bestow the kiss of complete forgiveness on Laura. "Mebbe, as Ellen says, I ain't very smart," she laughed softly, her old face sweet with love's tenderness, "but goodness! what does that matter so long's I ken stay with Peleg, fur he's got all the sense we both need."

Football as Played in Labrador.

You must not imagine it is all work and no play with the Labrador Eskimos, writes Clifford H. Easton, in an article on "The People' of Labrador," in March Recreation. Much to my surprise, I found that our good old game of football had taken hold in Ungava. The game is played with a ball of sealskin stuffed with grass. The goals are placed much the same as in our own game, and each player is armed with a short-handled sling made of several thongs of seal hide bent in loops and attached to a wooden handle. The ball may be either tossed in the sling, kicked, or should opportunity offer, picked up and carried. Rough tactics are not barred. I have seen a man tossed in the air and pitched head foremost into a snow bank, while pushing, tripping and blocking are freely indulged in.

A Farmer for a Day

THE VERY TRYING EXPERIENCE OF THE DENVER KID.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE is a period in the twenty-four hours of a summer day when a San Joaquin Valley ranch appears to the best advantage; it is the time between sundown and dusk. The heat vanishes before the cool breeze which rarely fails to spring up at that hour and the peaceful, silent hymn of evening settles like a cooling mist over the land which an hour before was hot, dusty and uninteresting. Night with her master touch redraws Day's garish canvas in broad, flat tones, eliminating all that is displeasing to the beauty-seeing eye.

It was at this hour that the Denver Kid, sniffing the tempting odor of freshly-cut hay, turned from the Santa Fé track and rested elbows on a farmer's fence. Before him, wilted to a restful tea color, lay half a dozen swathes in the windrow; beyond, deep, green and cool, stretched some twenty acres of alfalfa, as yet untouched by the mower. Over its gently-undulating surface, harmonizing exquisitely with the delicate purple bloom, scintillated myriads of yellow butterflies.

The Kid knitted his brows in indecision, then, as the spell of the summer twilight stole into his blood, he struck the post sharply with his hand. "Here goes!" he exclaimed.

Making his way to the farmer, who still toiled in the farther side of the field, the Kid addressed him: "Say, Governor, wat's de chance o' gettin' work?"

The farmer regarded him suspiciously, but help being scarce, he scratched his head thoughtfully. "Reckon yeh 'n pitch alfalfa?" he finally asked. The Kid diplomatically thought he could, and the farmer, noting his anxious look, closed the bargain. "Well," he said, "I'll try yeh. Come up to the house an' git supper—reckon it's about knockin-off time anyway."

As they passed together through the sweet, half-slumbering fields, the most indifferent observer might have been struck by the contrast. The farmer, typical of a fast-disappearing school of farmers, was bewhiskered, hook-nosed, pinched of face. His shoulders stooped and his body inclined forward from the hips as he walked. He wore a faded felt hat and a gingham shirt, stained with sweat and dust. His leathern suspenders supported overalls which had once been of a uniform blue, but were now merged into a dun color on folds and seat; the waistband bore the inevitable picture of two mules engaged in a fruitless endeavor to pull in twain a pair of overalls to which they were hitched from either leg.

The Kid was his antithesis. His clothes, too, were old, but they had that peculiar rusty appearance by which one may so easily distinguish the hobo's dress from the worn, threadbare garments of the laborer. His face, though shaven, gave the impression of being ungroomed, and from his eye there looked forth a devil half-insolent, half-shrinking.

After supper, the Kid lay down upon the warm breast of Mother Earth, first to think, for he belonged to the susceptible fraction of the human family, and then to sleep when sleep might come.

It is difficult to trace accurately the succession of physical sensations and experiences which bring about the fertile mental state in which a man's brain gives birth to a good resolution. However, for several days things had so shaped themselves that the Kid saw the side of hobo life least attractive. The week before, he had escaped death under the car wheels only by a miracle—even now it gave him goose flesh to think of it; work was plenty, which made it difficult to get food without working; and finally, the "brakie," after pocketing his last quarter, had kicked him off the train at Selma, when, by the ethics of the road, the quarter should have carried him to Bakersfield.

Standing disconsolately in the shade of the Selma depot, the Kid's eye had lighted upon a young ranch hand transferring bales of hay from a wagon into a box car. He had laid aside his jumper, and the Kid watched with admiration the play of the long, clean muscles as they rippled under the close-fitting undershirt. This fellow had "hot scoffin's" three times a day and plenty of tobacco. There was no brakie to kick him off the train. By——!

The idea had been too tremendous to immediately shape itself into definite thought, much less to solidify into resolve; but it lingered, and the witchery of twilight, combined with opportunity, did the rest.

The Denver Kid fell asleep and dreamed that he was a gigantic farm hand moving whole wagon loads of hay at a lift.

Next morning, after that most unsatisfactory of meals, a ranch breakfast, he was ready for work. The farmer, who would be busy for some time getting the milk ready for the separator, sent the Kid to the field with his son Charlie, to shock hay.

"Say, what's yer name?" demanded Charlie.

"J. Pierpont Morgan," rose to the Kid's lips, but he checked himself in time—one should be tolerant with the boss's son—and gave the alias which he reserved for kind old ladies, with whom he often chatted as he ate their food.

"K'n you ride a buckin' horse?"

"No."

"Ever drive eight mules?"

"No," repeated the Kid, struggling with his instinctive dislike of being questioned.

"Gee! you ought to see Rube Smith do it. I k'n skin four myself, but Rube's had experience." And the man who had beat his way from Maine to California listened in silence to a further exploitation of Rube Smith, the man of experiences.

Soon they reached the field and began their task of "bunching" hay—hay which had been raked none too clean and lay in tangled windrows of Charlie's making. At last the Kid was at it; no longer a bum, but a farm hand working for an honest living. He could hold up his head now with the handsome teamster, and no "bull" had the right to eye him suspiciously. But how weak and awkward his arms felt! It was like starting a machine long unused to running, and a shadow of doubt crossed his mind as to his ability to keep it up till night.

Soon Charlie announced that it was "goin' to be hot," and with a glance at the sun, which was now well above the horizon, the Kid became aware of the sickening effect which the sun's first rays always cause when a man is unused to field work.

After the perspiration started, however, it was like putting oil on the machine. He felt less stiff and the heat distressed him less than before. Glancing with admiration at the number of shocks he had made, he wondered if he were not setting the pace too fast—the farmer had seemed to be working deliberately the night before.

On this point he was soon to be disillusioned. The farmer, who had finished his dairy work, approached, pitchfork in hand, and without a word began work. He worked without the least appearance of exertion or hurry, but the way his fork piled up bunches was a revelation. It seemed that half a dozen had been made almost in the time it takes one to turn around. Yet this was the farmer, the "jay," whose very calling had been to the Kid and his kind synonymous of all that was unskilled and undesirable.

The next hour witnessed the tumbling of most of his preconceived notions of farms and farming. He had always supposed the occupation to be one of unskilled labor, which any one could, as a last resort, take up at a moment's notice; but he saw now with a sense of shame that he had looked at the farmer from the wrong point of view, and had judged in supreme ignorance. Farming, like other work, takes time and experience to do well, and the green hand who tries to work for a day alongside of a seasoned veteran is not likely to forget that experience for many days.

The Kid's body was less warped than the farmer's and better formed, but the farmer's muscles had far greater endurance. Also, the farmer was highly skilled in the art of forking hay; he was setting a faster pace than the Kid could follow and with much less exertion.

This and other things annoyed the Kid. Having no gloves, his hands became blistered after an hour's work, and the foxtail found his ragged woolen trousers a more convenient lodging-place than the firmly twisted overalls of the farmer. It was terribly warm. The water in the canteen had long since become lukewarm, and the Kid speculated wildly as to what he would give for a cold drink. Hunger was to him a familiar sensation, but this feeling of gauntness and emptiness was new and terrible—and it yet lacked some minutes of 10 o'clock.

Throughout the remainder of the forenoon he suffered as only a "soft" man working in the broiling sun can suffer. For the first time it was made known to him that things are appreciated only by contrast. All his life he had been resting—if living without toil may be so termed—yet, until this moment he had never come to the point where he could appreciate an hour's rest; just to lie upon his back in the cool shade—that was as near heaven as the Denver Kid ever wanted to get. Dimly the law of compensation was made known to him. It isn't rest or luxury or position that count, so much as appreciation of them, and real appreciation comes only through contrast.

For a time after dinner the Kid felt refreshed and rested, but only for a time. In place of the keen suffering of the forenoon, there came a dull, heavy weariness. The reaction was setting in. He had been drawing too freely on his sadly depleted reserve force. He no longer pretended to keep up with the others, but plodded on in a slow, dispirited fashion. His arms ached and his feet felt like lead.

It seemed that the limit of his endurance had been reached. Several times he framed his lips to: "I'm all in. I've got to quit," but each time the sight of the grim-visaged farmer kept him silent.

All this time the farmer worked with the regularity of a machine. He perspired, but was in no way distressed. Subconsciously the Kid regarded with amazement the power generated in that lean, worn body. And this or its equivalent was but the farmer's daily routine.

Out of the Kid's own suffering there was born a tremendous respect for the men who had taken upon themselves the task of feeding and clothing the world—and who did their task so well that the world was more often oversupplied than the reverse.

All things have an end, however. Finally, after what seemed ages, the sun touched the horizon, and the farmer "reckoned there was another day comin'." The Denver Kid found that he was lurching like a half-drunken man as they started for the house.

After supper the farmer took from his wallet a silver dollar which he handed to the Denver Kid, saying:

"Yeh done pretty well for a green hand, but I reckon yeh ain't had hardly experience enough to stack—reckon maybe I k'n git the Smith boys to help me."

The Denver Kid had reformed and had been a farm hand for a day, but the sun had now set and the last streaks of red were fading in the summer twilight.

"I complimented Paderewski on his fame at the time of the accident. He laughed and told me modestly a story that depreciated his fame.

"He said that he takes a great interest in live stock. On his estate in Poland he has the best varieties of pigs, cattle, sheep and chickens. While touring he never neg-lects an opportunity to add to this fine collection.

"In the West, once, he got an agent to buy him fifty pigs of a breed that had taken a lot of firsts and blue ribbons. A week or two after the purchase he unexpect-edly went West himself, and of course motored out to the farm where his new pigs were. He wanted to look them over.

"The farmer, somehow, didn't catch his name. But he showed Paderewski his prize pigs, and he pointed out with a good deal of pride the fifty that had just been sold.

"'Fine pigs, them,' he said, heartily. 'As fine a lot of pigs as you'll see in a month's travel. I've just sold 'em, by the way, to Mr. Paderewski, the famous pig dealer from abroad.'"

Difficult Advice.

CHARLES W. GATES, the well-known financier, was discussing at the Calumet Club in Chicago the $8500 bulldog that he had recently bought.

"Can one make money by breeding such valuable dogs?" a Chicagoan inquired.

"Perhaps one can," said Mr. Gates. "To do so, though, would be as difficult as to follow Mrs. Rayce's advice.

"Mrs. Rayce, you know, was talking to another young woman at a tea.

"'How much better off a man would be,' said the other young woman, 'if he would only take his wife's ad-vice!'

"'Quite true, my dear,' said Mrs. Rayce. 'I've advised my George time and time again not to bet on horses that don't win, but he will do it.'"

The Emotional Jury.

THE REV. ANNA SHAW was discussing playfully her contention—raised at Mrs. Clarence Mackay's house—that man, not woman, was too emotional to vote.

"Why," said the learned lady, "take all these ex-traordinary jury stories. They show the most intense emotionalism. And yet they have nothing to do with women.

"For instance, there's the story of the Tin Can murder. The jury remained out thirty-four hours. Then it filed back into the courtroom, very stale and ill-humored.

"'Gentlemen, what is your verdict?' said the judge.

"'Wall,' said the foreman, 'eleven on us is for hangin', Jedge, Yer Honor; but the twelfth man sticks out for acquittal, and there ain't no arguin' with him. He's a low-down, no-'count rooster any ways, and so we've de-cided to make our verdict unanermous by hangin' 'em both.'"

A Compromise.

"ALEXANDER HARRISON, the noted sea painter, talked about art students at a tea in his Concar-neau studio," said a picture dealer.

"Mr. Harrison said that the struggling student was usually very proud. He instanced one of his own pro-tegés.

"This youth, a native of Pont Aven, went to Paris to study, and occasionally visited an uncle there—an elderly shoemaker on the Rue Vaugirard. The shoemaker was to be counted on for a square meal and sometimes even for a small loan.

"Well, one morning, the uncle welcomed the student far more warmly than was his habit.

"'Just in time,' he said, rubbing his hands. 'The kitchen door wants painting and I was about to give the job to the commissionaire for three francs. But you can have it now. I'll pay you five.'

"The student flushed and bit his lip. Hard up as he was, he could not so degrade his art as to paint a kitchen door. Yet he needed money badly.

"'Uncle,' he said, smiling as a happy thought came to him, 'I'll tell you what to do. Let the commission-aire paint the door for three francs, as you had intended, and give me the two francs difference.'"

Less to Do.

"THE late Russell Sturgis," said a New York archi-tect, "continually marveled at the swift passage of time. This great architect and critic continually found new examples of the swift way men grow old and ugly while still believing themselves young.

"He repeated to me one day a remark he had heard in a barber shop.

"An old chap, with hardly a hair on his head, snapped at the young barber, on the completion of a hair-cut:

"'You are not the thorough workman your father was, my boy. He used to take a good half-hour to cut my hair.'"

Circumstantial Evidence.

THE late A. J. Cassatt, at a dinner at the Philadelphia Country Club, was asked his opinion of the fashion of women riding horseback astride.

"I don't altogether favor it," said Mr. Cassatt. "It sometimes leads to confusion.

"I was driving one afternoon on Lancaster Pike when a rider was thrown violently from a spirited bay horse. Luckily, the accident happened in front of a pharmacy. The proprietor ran forth with his clerk. He propped up the head of the unconscious rider and, seeing a gold cigarette case lying on the ground, he took it up and read 'P. S. Browne, 1838 Walnut Street.'

"'Jack!' he shouted to his errand boy, 'telephone to Mrs. Browne, 1838 Walnut street, that her husband——'

"But just then a tiny gold hand mirror with a pow-der-puff attachment fell from the rider's trouser pocket and the pharmacist called:

"'Jack, I mean telephone Mr. Browne that Mrs. Browne has fallen—'

"But at this point the clerk, who had been burning a feather under the rider's nose, tickled her lips with it, and she smiled and murmured 'Jim.'

"And then the pharmacist shouted:

"'Telephone Mr. and Mrs. Browne that Miss Browne has fallen off her horse.'"—[Everybody's Magazine.

Young America.

ONE day I took my little sisters and brothers for a walk to Cedar Grove. We go there every day to play our little games. We were going up the drive when a herd of cows came along and my little brother, who is 4 years old, was very much afraid, and said:

"Oh, dear, my heart is in my mouth!"

Little Martha, who is 5 years old, was very much alarmed and cried: "Peter! Spit it out quick so I can see it!"

Mrs. Simmons, who had been spending the day with Mrs. Mayes, was preparing to go home. Susie, who had been very troublesome all day, begged her earnestly to stay to supper.

"Why, dearie," said Mrs. Simmons, "I did not know you were so fond of me."

Helen, aged 6, was telling Mary, aged 7, of her plans for the future. "I'm going to be married," she an-nounced, "and have eighteen children."

Still another minister had a little daughter who was extravagantly fond of her papa. One night she was greatly grieved because he could not carry her up to bed as usual. She cried; she would not be comforted. "I want my papa, I want my papa," she said again and again.

"But dearie," said mamma, "papa is very busy now. You must wait; he is writing his sermon." Finally the little one quieted down and the mother was about to leave the room, when she heard a sobbing little voice say: "Mamma, I'm sick; I want the minister." The minister came.

It was long past 3-year-old Norton's bedtime, but he still stood in his crib, looking out of the window and talking to the people below, when a lady living next door called up to him: "What, aren't you in bed yet?"

"Ess," he called back, "my feets is, but my head isn't."

One day he had been greatly impressed by a story told him by his mother of a wonderful black cow, Topsy, that broke her leg, but was cured by the doctor. When daddy came home, Norton ran to him to tell the great story, and he ended it by saying, as he fairly danced with delight: "And Daddy, Topsy dot well, and s'e was so happy s'e blew her horns."

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

THE CACTUS FAMILY.

ONE OF THE MOST VARIED FORMS OF PLANT LIFE.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE cactus family is one of the largest and most varied of any in the vegetable kingdom and has, in combination, more grotesque and curious forms with beautiful flowers than any other group of cultivated plants. In size they vary from little gems less than an inch in height and diameter to giants of sixty feet high and three feet through the trunk. Some species spread over the ground, covering in area a hundred times their height, while others, not climbers, are but two inches through the trunk and will run up to fifty or more feet if supported to prevent their breaking off.

The natural order Cactaceae, to which family all cacti belong, numbers about a thousand species, natives alone to the Americans except a single parasitic genus known as the Mistletoe Cactus (Rhipsalis) found in South Africa. People are apt to look upon all cacti as curiosities, but there are more States in which cacti are native than those where none has ever grown. In the eastern half of the United States the plants are not common, and are confined to somewhat depauperate forms of the flat-leafed opuntias of which O. vulgaris and O. Missouriensis are good examples. The family ranges from Canada south to the lower part of South America and including the West Indies and other islands both in the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans.

So widely distributed have the cacti become that in many countries where it has been introduced, it has run wild and become a pest. Australia's is a pathetic instance, for there they have been forced, in some States, to legislate for its extermination. This extensive dissemination led some one to paint a beautiful picture of the parting of Ruth and Naomi wherein the two are standing beside an extensive cactus patch. Many other pictures portraying scenes of centuries ago present the same mistakes and the writer remembers hearing a Los Angeles D. D. who had traveled in the Holy Land, describing the trials of the children of Israel in the Desert of Sinai "journeying through a dreary waste with no vegetation save here and there a forbidding cactus." No cacti were ever seen outside of the Americas until the Spaniards discovered South America and took plants to Europe from whence they were introduced to the Holy Land.

The early introductions were nearly all of the "tuna" class, the large, flat-leafed, generally spiny plants so common around our old missions. Some of these are spineless, though scores of magazine writers have said Luther Burbank bred off the spines, and we believe that Mr. Burbank has made a like statement in print. The fact is that spineless cacti existed thousands of years ago, and in 1892 the writer obtained some from Mexico, some of which he shipped to Luther Burbank for experimental purposes. In spite of all statements to the contrary, the "spineless cactus" craze is largely a fake so far as commercial value is concerned. These tunas, both spined and spineless, are now distributed in all tropical and semi-tropical countries, and some foreign countries, notably Germany, possess more and finer cactus collections than does the United States.

Mexico contains more species of cacti than any other like area, but the largest of all, the Giant Cactus, is also found in the United States and extends but a short distance across the Mexican border. In our own State we have a great variety that ranges from our eastern boundary to the Pacific and out into the coast islands and from the Mexican line up to Bakersfield. Our own county of Los Angeles contains but one species outside of the flat-stemmed and round-stemmed opuntias, and that is Cereus Emoryi, found sparingly on the mainland north of the city, but somewhat more abundant on Santa Catalina and San Clemente islands. Other counties farther south and east are more favored(?.) These grotesque "denizens of the desert" are by no means useless, as aside from their ornamental value some species furnish food, others shelter, clothing, baskets, wine and other drinks, and still others furnish medicines, poisons, etc. Aside from food and drink obtained from the plant itself, many species bear edible fruits much relished by some people, and from these are made palatable drinks and delicious jellies. Few who make a study of the family are proof against its charms, and many who come to scoff remain to pray that they may take home a few cuttings, "just to get a start."

Dignified Date Palms.

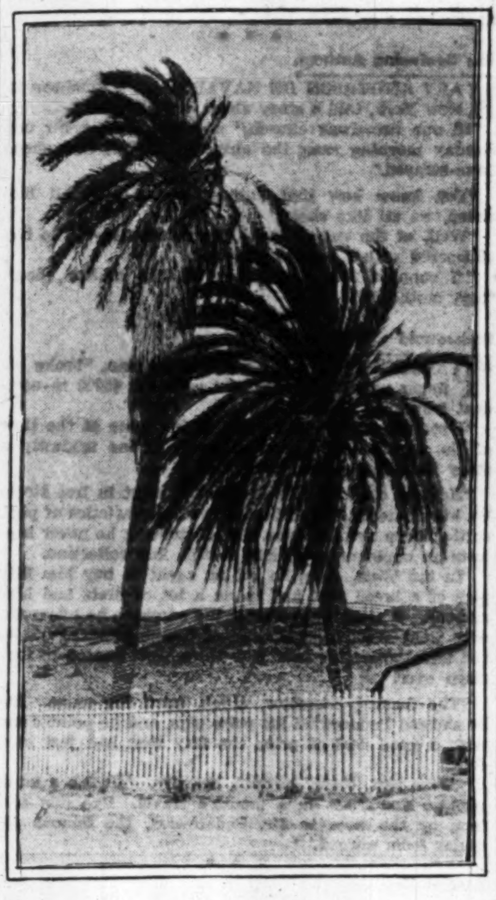
In a young state the palm which furnishes the dates of commerce is not very attractive. Its leaves are narrow and sparsely pinnated and the leaf stem is too stiff to gracefully droop. As the plant grows larger it assumes more of character, and with old age becomes a dignified-looking object. The date palm was the first one planted in Southern California, and we have a few scattered representatives that are the most striking members of our palm family.

Ppopular Ferns—The Ptris.

Of all the Pteris group of ferns P. tremula is the most popular as well as being the quickest growing and one of the hardiest. In Southern California it is used both as a pot and as a bedding plant. P. cretica albo-lineata is a tough little plant of almost leathery texture, and will stand more sun than the first named. This plant has two sets of leaves; the infertile ones are very low in growth while the fertile ones shoot up to a foot in height. P. adiantoides is a beautiful plant and much resembles a giant maidenhair fern, and this resemblance gives it its specific name. P. serrulata is one of the hardiest so far as withstanding low temperatures is concerned, and is generally thrifty under any conditions of soil and treatment. There are many fancy forms of the last-named and all are worthy of a place in fernery, pot or pan. We have rather a large-growing species known as the Silver Pteris that is beautifully variegated or margined with white. With all its beauty it has a "drawback" in the name of Pteris quadriaurita argyraea, though the nurserymen generally leave out the middle name, which certainly makes the plant more attractive to the prospective purchaser.

Carnation Planting.

The season for planting carnations is now upon us, and all planters should see that they procure young, thrifty cuttings rooted during the early part of winter; do not buy old potbound plants—they are valueless. Keep the newly-set plants well cut back or pinched, allowing no buds to form until October; good blooms will then be obtained in November and December. When it comes picking time, cut all flowers with long stems; the young plants will be the better for such treatment.



AGED DATE PALMS.

The Active Mole.

Just now every mole in our gardens begins to take on most unusual activity, and unless some sly feline captures the wary one in your garden, he will be a perpetual curse until the cold of next winter. It will be exercising the strictest economy if you will repair to the nearest seed store and buy a mole trap. While moles are insect-eating animals, they burrow under and uproot many shallow-rooted plants, and sometimes gnaw their way through a mass of resisting roots but they seldom eat vegetable matter.

Rooting Araucaria Tops.

One of our readers has a Norfolk Island pine that has been broken off near the ground and sent up five new shoots. He wishes to know how best an amateur may root cuttings from these tops if such methods of propagation are possible.

While not an amateur's job, it is possible, by the exercise of eternal vigilance, to root every one of the tops. With a sharp knife cut two-thirds of the way through the stem where it is neither very hard or woody nor soft and herbaceous. This may be anywhere from the third to the sixth tier of branches from the top. Bend the stem slightly backward from the cut, just enough to open the cut for the insertion of a small, thin, wooden wedge (this to keep the cut open.) Then all around the cut bind florist's moss or sphagnum. This ball of sphagnum should, in our dry climate, be six inches in diameter. This ball must never be allowed to get dry. As soon as roots show through the moss sever the rest of the stem and pot up; keep cool and protected from wind or draughts until well established.

Some men spend so much in organizing Mother's Day clubs that they have to shut off the maternal allowances.

The City Beautiful—Its Avenues, Streets, Parks and Lakes.

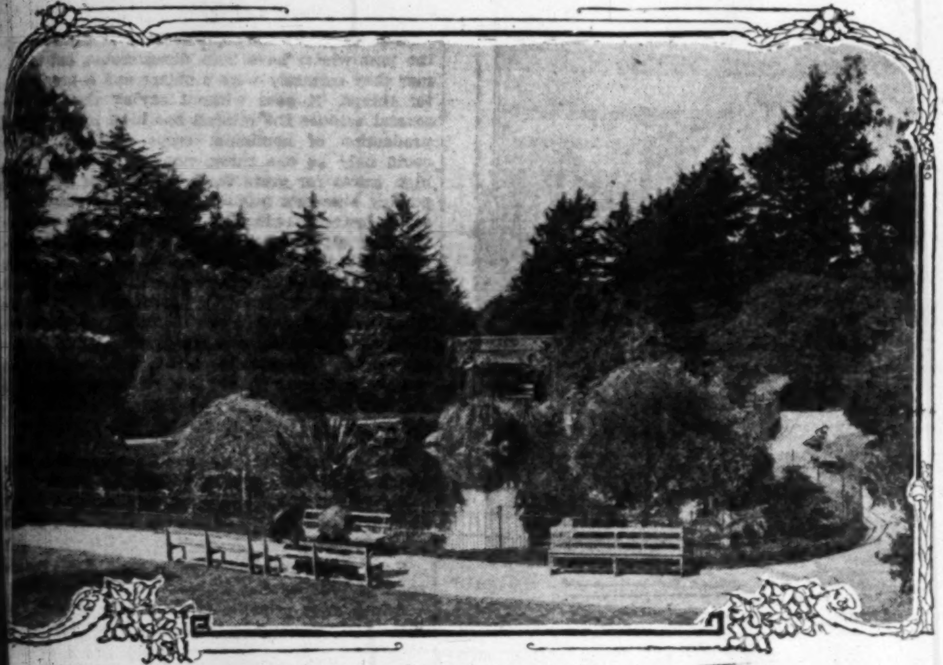
NEIGHBORHOOD PARKS.

A PLEA FOR CONCERTS IN ALL OF THEM ONCE EVERY WEEK.

IN our Los Angeles parks we have all too few band concerts. These concerts once a week in our largest parks do not reach the masses. Not every one cares to go to Eastlake or Westlake of a Sunday to hear music, and some way should be devised to bring music to the people rather than force the people to go to the music. There should be a concert one evening each week in every park in our city. The size of the park does not enter into the question, for all that is desired is to give these concerts where a sufficient number in the neighborhood will come to hear them.

In eastern cities it has been found that the concerts bring together all the families in a neighborhood without forcing them to spend 50 cents car fare for a family of five to hear a few musical numbers. All ages and classes come to these neighborhood park concerts for they all feel an individual interest in the park that belongs particularly to the section of the city in which they live. Many families look forward to these concerts as a chance to visit during the evening with others from near by. Beyond the mere question of enjoyment it cultivates a love for music and inspires many to buy musical instruments for the home.

These weekly entertainments do not call for a large cash outlay, for there is no need of costly band stands.



LAKE ALVORD, GOLDEN GATE PARK.

In some cities portable band stands are used, erected on a wagon and taken from park to park each day by a park team of horses. A well-equipped band of good men could be hired to play every evening and make a continual round of a half-dozen parks so that each section of population might have its weekly concert. It is quite certain that if our local park authorities would initiate such a series of musical entertainments that would be supported by the taxpayers and leave them better satisfied than with any other outlay of the funds made by the city. This method of interesting all the people of a city has been tried and found very satisfactory in many of the largest cities in this and other countries.

Compulsory Street Planting.

In Oklahoma City, Okla., an ordinance is in force requiring all property owners to level and seed all parkways as soon as the street abutting is graded. It also provides that where ten property owners on a paved or graded street petition for it the street shall be planted with trees twenty-five feet apart, and the cost shall be assessed against abutting property and added to the city taxes. Street trees and parkways are under control of the city park commission.

Shade Tree Commission.

In Passaic, N. J., they have a Shade Tree Commission that exercises complete control over the street trees, even going so far, of late, as to sue the city because men in repairing the fire-alarm system needlessly cut off some tree limbs. Quite a number of suits have been brought by this commission against persons injuring street trees or allowing horses to gnaw them.

How to Help a City.

Build more small parks, especially in the most congested parts of the city so that both children and adults may have rest and recreation amid trees and flowers without the necessity of a long trip across the city. Place [illegible] fountains for both [illegible] toilets for [illegible] lots [illegible] ment-houses, to keep the backyards tidy. One more very important point that does not affect Los Angeles or cities near the coast is the one of providing public baths for both sexes, both in private rooms and in open swimming pools. All of our lesser Southern California towns far removed from the coast should at least have a public swimming pool.

Niagara in Danger.

Those who are interested in the preservation of Niagara Falls should make it known to both Congressman and Senator, for this great natural wonder is in danger from the power companies. These unscrupulous vampires wish to rob the falls of every drop of water now rushing over the precipice and leave us nothing but a dry cliff. Everyone interested in keeping inviolate our great natural beauties should not lose this opportunity to protest against the destruction of Niagara.

Listing Billboard Advertisers.

It is proposed in some of our cities to print monthly lists of billboard advertisers and also the names of those who rent space upon their property for the erection of billboards. This last list will furnish the assessors with a list of those who obtain a revenue in this way and also call attention of the general public to those who sell their civic pride and patriotism for cash.

A Beautiful City.

Brussels, the capital of Belgium, is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. Formerly a fortified city, the embankments were changed to magnificent boulevards and extended into the country in every direction. Its street system is noted everywhere, and its public buildings are of the best styles of architecture and happily grouped. No European city has more beautiful fountains, lamp posts, etc., and in many places lamp posts and fountains are combined and make beautiful objects of street decoration.

Street Improvements.

In New York it has been proposed to pass a law whereby all cities may compel owners to pay for street trees planted by the city and also include in all contracts for highway improvement, the setting of trees along all public roads, and that no contracts shall be let for such improvement except the tree-planting clause is contained therein.

A Sense of Responsibility.

We have always advocated the cultivating of a share of confidence in the children in the care and tidiness of such portions of the public parks as are devoted to their special comfort. Wherever a sense of responsibility has been developed, it is quite natural for a child to regard as a special privilege any tasks within its scope which will mean something. By making the children and young people the allies of the authorities in maintaining and improving the pleasure grounds devoted to their use, much effective care has resulted at no expense, and with the comforting assurance that no harm will come under the watchfulness of eager young eyes always on the alert to demonstrate responsibility.

Encroachments on Existing Improvements.

Another question is rapidly coming to the front in this country of ours which will have to be met as time moves along, and that is the damage to existing beauty spots, parks and such like improvements, likely to occur from encroachments upon them by the requirements of commercial enterprise, or transportation facilities for the general public. This is already being experienced and press and public are busy discussing the problem. It is most discouraging to believe that after a park, for instance, has been established and has become a blessing to a community a public work of any kind could possibly prove of so much more importance that the park must be, in part at least, marred and probably destroyed, as to its usefulness as a park, to provide for the new necessity. Although we see such things happening all over the world, the old giving place to the new, the fact points a suggestion that in the study and planning of park systems it would be well to give attention to the possibility of the site being encroached upon for public service in the future. It also very strongly suggests that no encroachments should be for a moment permitted where it is in any way possible, by technical skill and ability to avoid interference with existing improvements even at largely added costs. Landscape beauty is of too permanent a nature to allow of disturbance, except upon absolute public need.

Art in Parks.

The commissioners of Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, have been in trouble over the question of art versus patriotism in connection with a soldier's monument, proposed to be erected in Fairmount Park, by one of the posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. How difficult it is, after all, to teach what true patriotism means. Uneducated taste, combined with obstinate persistence and wrong methods, waves a flag and claims patriotism as an inspiration to compel the erection of a public monument of poor quality, on a site which should command the highest that art can furnish. It is time that the authorities in charge of our beauty spots should brave the clamor of so-called patriotism and insist upon it that every soldier's monument, henceforth to be erected, shall be an ornament to the site, an object of art and a production that will appeal to future generations.

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

THE CACTUS FAMILY.

ONE OF THE MOST VARIED FORMS OF PLANT LIFE.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE cactus family is one of the largest and most varied of any in the vegetable kingdom and has, in combination, more grotesque and curious forms with beautiful flowers than any other group of cultivated plants. In size they vary from little gems less than an inch in height and diameter to giants of sixty feet high and three feet through the trunk. Some species spread over the ground, covering in area a hundred times their height, while others, not climbers, are but two inches through the trunk and will run up to fifty or more feet if supported to prevent their breaking off.

The natural order Cactaceae, to which family all cacti belong, numbers about a thousand species, natives alone to the Americans except a single parasitic genus known as the Mistletoe Cactus (Rhipsalis) found in South Africa. People are apt to look upon all cacti as curiosities, but there are more States in which cacti are native than those where none has ever grown. In the eastern half of the United States the plants are not common, and are confined to somewhat depauperate forms of the flat-leafed opuntias of which O. vulgaris and O. Missouriensis are good examples. The family ranges from Canada south to the lower part of South America and including the West Indies and other islands both in the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans.

So widely distributed have the cacti become that in many countries where it has been introduced, it has run wild and become a pest. Australia's is a pathetic instance, for there they have been forced, in some States, to legislate for its extermination. This extensive dissemination led some one to paint a beautiful picture of the parting of Ruth and Naomi wherein the two are standing beside an extensive cactus patch. Many other pictures portraying scenes of centuries ago present the same mistakes and the writer remembers hearing a Los Angeles D. D. who had traveled in the Holy Land, describing the trials of the children of Israel in the Desert of Sinai "journeying through a dreary waste with no vegetation save here and there a forbidding cactus." No cacti were ever seen outside of the Americas until the Spaniards discovered South America and took plants to Europe from whence they were introduced to the Holy Land.

The early introductions were nearly all of the "tuna" class, the large, flat-leafed, generally spiny plants so common around our old missions. Some of these are spineless, though scores of magazine writers have said Luther Burbank bred off the spines, and we believe that Mr. Burbank has made a like statement in print. The fact is that spineless cacti existed thousands of years ago, and in 1892 the writer obtained some from Mexico, some of which he shipped to Luther Burbank for experimental purposes. In spite of all statements to the contrary, the "spineless cactus" craze is largely a fake so far as commercial value is concerned. These tunas, both spined and spineless, are now distributed in all tropical and semi-tropical countries, and some foreign countries, notably Germany, possess more and finer cactus collections than does the United States.

Mexico contains more species of cacti than any other like area, but the largest of all, the Giant Cactus, is also found in the United States and extends but a short distance across the Mexican border. In our own State we have a great variety that ranges from our eastern boundary to the Pacific and out into the coast islands and from the Mexican line up to Bakersfield. Our own county of Los Angeles contains but one species outside of the flat-stemmed and round-stemmed opuntias, and that is Cereus Emoryi, found sparingly on the mainland north of the city, but somewhat more abundant on Santa Catalina and San Clemente islands. Other counties farther south and east are more favored(?.) These grotesque "denizens of the desert" are by no means useless, as aside from their ornamental value some species furnish food, others shelter, clothing, baskets, wine and other drinks, and still others furnish medicines, poisons, etc. Aside from food and drink obtained from the plant itself, many species bear edible fruits much relished by some people, and from these are made palatable drinks and delicious jellies. Few who make a study of the family are proof against its charms, and many who come to scoff remain to pray that they may take home a few cuttings, "just to get a start."

Dignified Date Palms.

In a young state the palm which furnishes the dates of commerce is not very attractive. Its leaves are narrow and sparsely pinnated and the leaf stem is too stiff to gracefully droop. As the plant grows larger it assumes more of character, and with old age becomes a dignified-looking object. The date palm was the first one planted in Southern California, and we have a few scattered representatives that are the most striking members of our palm family.

Ppopular Ferns—The Ptris.

Of all the Pteris group of ferns P. tremula is the most popular as well as being the quickest growing and one of the hardiest. In Southern California it is used both as a pot and as a bedding plant. P. cretica albo-lineata is a tough little plant of almost leathery texture, and will stand more sun than the first named. This plant has two sets of leaves; the infertile ones are very low in growth while the fertile ones shoot up to a foot in height. P. adiantoides is a beautiful plant and much resemoles a giant maidenhair fern, and this resembiance gives it its specific name. P. serrulata is one of the hardiest so far as withstanding low temperatures is concerned, and is generally thrifty under any conditions of soil and treatment. There are many fancy forms of the last-named and all are worthy of a place in fernery, pot or pan. We have rather a large-growing species known as the Silver Pteris that is beautifully variegated or margined with white. With all its beauty it has a "drawback" in the name of Pteris quadriaurita argyraea, though the nurserymen generally leave out the middle name, which certainly makes the plant more attractive to the prospective purchaser.

Carnation Planting.

The season for planting carnations is now upon us, and all planters should see that they procure young, thrifty cuttings rooted during the early part of winter; do not buy old potbound plants—they are valueless. Keep the newly-set plants well cut back or pinched, allowing no buds to form until October; good blooms will then be obtained in November and December. When it comes picking time, cut all flowers with long stems; the young plants will be the better for such treatment.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THAT the poultry industry is undergoing economic changes is clearly indicated by the complaints one hears among breeders catering to the trade in eggs for hatching, and also in the somewhat lessened demand for the smaller-sized incubators and brooders over what it was a few years ago. Locally, the prevailing high prices for the grain foods have had something to do with a declining market for eggs for hatching as well as breeding stock; but primarily (as applied to the country as a whole) the growing practice of selling day-old chicks by professional hatcheries especially equipped for the business is responsible for the economic change which is taking place. Complain as much as we may, there is no gainsaying the fact that the innovation has passed its experimental period and has come to stay. It is really surprising to note the development of the business during the past two years. So pronounced has it become that it is safe to say that the average person looking for a few hens never thinks of hatching them, but buys the live bird just out of the shell. Viewed in dollars and cents, it is also much cheaper, and certainly less troublesome.

That the practice, from a fancier's point of view, possesses negative tendencies, goes without saying. The product so turned out is bound to be move or less mixed, resulting eventually in a deterioration of the highest type of standard-bred fowl in all the breeds and varieties. The venders of day-old chicks will not exercise the care in the purchase of their incubator eggs that characterizes the real fancier growing a high-grade article of breeding stock. In the very nature of the situation this is hardly possible. Invariably selling his day-old live product at prices often less than that asked for eggs for hatching from the yards of well-known breeders, he is confronted with economic conditions which preclude the purchase of the best pure-bred incubator eggs; nor does the situation warrant any attention to the fine points of line breeding, nor the selection of eggs from well-known laying strains, except only in a broad and general way. Owing to these obvious facts, it seems to the writer that in its last analysis the practice will have a rather negative tendency on the quality and character of the breeding stock of the future.

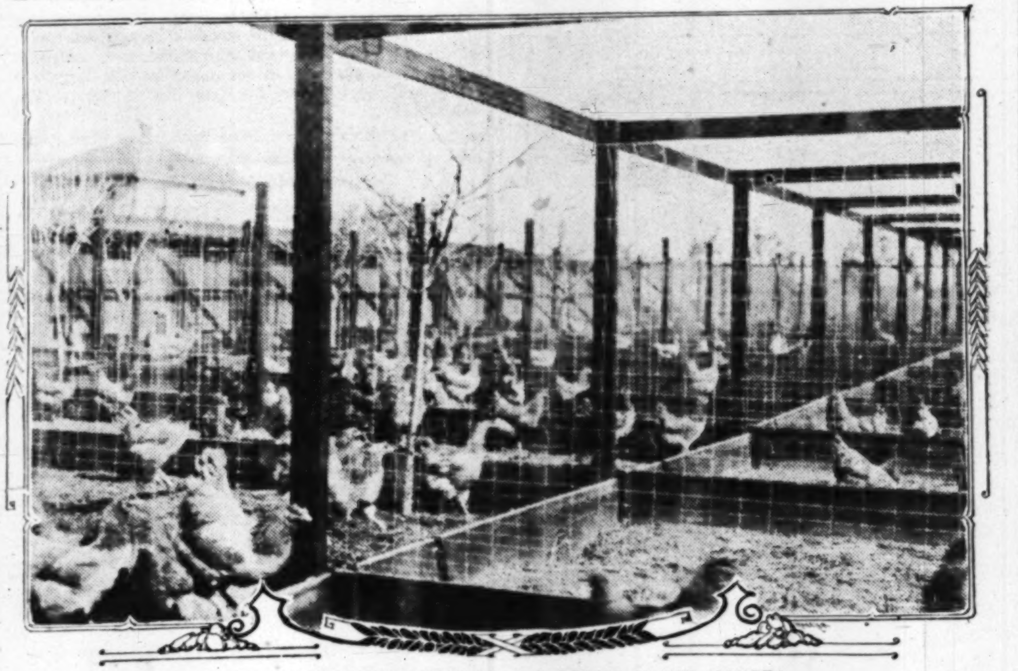
Its commercial influences on the market for incubators and brooders are toward an increase in demand for the larger machines, with a corresponding decline for the smaller sizes. Many people in the poultry business on a small scale will prefer buying the live chick to buying a small incubator and doing their own hatching. To be sure, we shall undoubtedly have as many laying hens to our credit; it will only be the economic means of securing them that seem destined to change.

More than one breeder has complained to the writer that the demand for hatchable eggs has declined in the past two years beyond the point where they are profitable. The result is that many are turning some very good birds on the market, while others are going out of the business. The law of elimination based on economic grounds will not long maintain a poultry plant catering to the demand for breeding stock beyond the period at which it ceases to pay. The only solution for the breeder with a fine strain of birds at his command is to augment his flocks until of sufficient size to enable him to put in his own hatching plant and thus sell the live product at a commensurate price, rather than the sitting of eggs. Only in this way can he meet economic conditions which are now working out successfully and have evidently come to stay.

A Plea for Co-operation.

Verily, God helps those who help themselves. The commercial poultry breeders of Southern California seem to have at last awakened to the fact that by more largely handling and marketing their own product they will command better returns. Sure. If the orange growers on the coöperative plan can handle citrus fruit successfully, why should not the growers of hen fruit follow suit?

It is a well-known fact that the local supply of fresh eggs finding a market in Los Angeles is inadequate to supply the demand; the result is that dealers resort to importations, chiefly from the Middle West States, with an occasional carload from Petaluma. Again, there is a large volume put into cold storage each year, usually from April to June. With these two sources of supply the dealers in a measure control the market, due not so much from ulterior motives as from necessity. Not being able to secure sufficient supplies from local sources, they are compelled to import the shortage. If once the local supply equals the demand, the situation would clarify, just as it has clarified in San Francisco, where the bulk of hen fruit is local and the price is largely controlled by the poultry interests centering at Petaluma. To bring this about involves economic conditions, which have not been alluring the past two seasons, when feed has been high and the price of eggs below the normal. These conditions, however, only accentuate the necessity of intelligent coöperation, which will enable breeders to buy their supplies in large quantities in the cheapest market, and at the same time to dispose of their product in the highest.



IDEAL SCRATCHING PENS ON J. J. DEAN'S PLANT, MONETA.

Coöperation signifies concurrent effort or labor; to foster, protect and develop. It is a means of uplift and creating, hence in its broadest significance it is of benefit alike to producer and dealer. Nothing, we take it, would be of greater benefit to the Los Angeles egg market than a reliable source of supply of guaranteed fresh hen fruit, properly graded as to size and color of shell, intelligent pack, and devoid of all the defects that usually characterize a miscellaneous lot of eggs derived from divers peoples and localities. The trade could well afford to pay a good price for such a product., because fully alive to the fact that the consumer always pays willingly for a good article. And it is right here that united effort on the part of breeders can accomplish the greatest good. Put up a prime article, date every egg with a guarantee as to its freshness, create a supply commensurate with the demand, and the market is theirs.

What Do You Know About This?

Under date of February 27 W. H. Willard writes to this department of The Times as follows:

"Why do you not say something in your valuable paper in regard to the injustice being done local poultrymen in regard to egg quotations? A carload of 'eastern fresh' arrives and local eggs drop from 9 to 20 cents per dozen, while 'eastern fresh' storage go up correspondingly. I will venture to say this is the only place in the country where it costs as much to produce an egg, and the only one where eastern storage eggs are quoted higher. Eastern hens are not laying this time of year."

There is no question but so-called eastern fresh eggs are often sold for California fresh ranch eggs, but that local hen fruit "dropped from 9 to 20 cents per dozen" is certainly new to the writer. What have our readers to say about it? If true, it is about time poultrymen were organizing along coöperative lines. Our correspondent should join the movement and tell the readers what he knows.

Want of Exercise or Too Fat.

P. K. L., of Orange writes that on January 18 he bought seven young White Rock hens and a cockerel. They were put into a corral 18x42 in which barley had grown to about a foot high. "The first day," he says, "we got three eggs, the second day two, the third day two, the fourth one, and since then none. The morning feed has consisted of table scraps, chopped, boiled and mixed or seasoned with an egg-making tonic. After they ate all the green, we have thrown them some at noon. At night they have had cracked mixed grain. The hens are clean, and healthy, and have plenty of shell and water. Everybody says it's because they have been moved, but should they wait so long before getting down to business? They are thoroughbreds, hatched from $5 eggs."

Your system of feeding seems about right; if you have erred at all, it may be in overfeeding, which would tend to fatten the birds and render them correspondingly inactive. See to it that they have plenty of exercise; feed the grain ration in litter, where they will have to scratch for it. Sometimes birds are quite a while accustoming themselves to changed conditions and environment. Make them contented, do not overfeed, and you should have hen fruit. Condiments and egg foods have their place; the danger lies in overstimulating.

Signs of the Poultry Zodiac.

To some people the copious rains we have experienced the past winter have been disagreeable, but to the farmer they certainly were a solace and a promise of better things. It goes without saying that for the past several seasons the rainfall has been inadequate for the production of maximum crops of grain. The result could only be one thing, namely, generally prevailing high prices for grain feeds, which was inimical to the poultry breeder's profits. The coming season ought to see a material reduction in the price of wheat, which is after all the poultrymen's mainstay for his fowls. With this reduction the business of growing chickens and eggs should improve. Certainly fewer chicks have been hatched the past few years, and a correspondingly larger number sent to the block, all of which seems to indicate a good demand for poultry products the coming season. It seems to us that the breeder who brings out big hatches now will not regret his enterprise next fall and winter.

Shell and Grit.

The way to build up a poultry business is to compel purchases by the superiority of your goods.

Before the warm weather really sets in, see to it that the yards and houses have been thoroughly cleaned and whitewashed.

Keep the youngsters growing, and divide the sexes as soon as practicable.

Afford your growing stock plenty of room. Even a little overcrowding is inimical to best results.

Grit ready for feeding is cheap, and a plentiful supply should always be available in the runs.

The English have perfected bantam classes in the Black, Silver Laced and Silver Penciled Wyandottes.

Be gentle with your birds and work with them in the same clothes as much as possible. Radical change in appearance makes you look like a different person, which is not conducive to a contented frame of mind with the hen. Proper foods, properly fed, in proper amounts and at the proper time is certainly a proper thing to do with a flock of fowl.

The editor of Poultry (Peontone, Ill.) offers $50 each for any ten hens bred by one breeder that shall average 200 eggs per year. Here's an opportunity for some California hens to "do business."

To a Newly-Born Baby.

AN UNCONVENTIONAL LETTER TO A RECENTLY ARRIVED INFANT.

From Manchester Chronicle.

MY DEAR SIR: I address you thus with conventional formality, because in this queer world into which you have just been born to be formal is to be respectful, and I have never been able to understand why youth, even extreme youth, is not as fully entitled to respect as adolescence, maturity, or old age. If we were half as reasonable as we pretend we are, and sometimes honestly believe ourselves to be, it is to youth rather than to age that we should pay our sincerest tribute of respect, for youth has done nothing, and can have done nothing, to forfeit that respect, whereas age has, more often than not.

Conventionally, I know, I ought to congratulate you on your arrival among us—it is always done in these cases—and for the last hour I have been racking my brains to discover any sound reasons for such congratulation. For me, for us, to congratulate you would be, it seems to me, little other than a left-handed sort of way of flattering ourselves. It would assume that you are a fortunate person to have come into such a nice set of people and into such a good and pleasant world as this we have made for you.

I say nothing of the niceness, or otherwise, of the people among whom you will spend your early years, but of the world I am free to speak, for that is impersonal; and I do not even dare to pretend to you that it is a pleasant or a good one.

One Simple Example.

I have read my newspaper this morning. It records, no doubt faithfully enough, the world's doings of yesterday, and, for much the most part, those doings were neither good nor pleasant. The record of them is a record of little else than crime and folly. Abroad there is the matter of war; at home there is the wail of hunger. In Bulgaria troops are marching to the frontier; in London unemployed men are marching to Berkeley Square. Meanwhile, the event of keenest interest and greatest importance—if we are to judge by the amount of space the editors have devoted to it—is the expensive effort of a husband and wife to prove each other guilty of a breach or breaches of the seventh commandment. That, sir, is what we, your intelligent and moral seniors, like most to read about on this, the second day of your life. Truly, neither a good nor a pleasant world!

Nor is it a world at all adequately prepared for your reception—you will soon discover that for yourself. When I say "you," I mean "you" generally, you considered as a baby. The world has had a considerable experience of babies; there has never been a moment when it has been without them; hundreds of thousands of them have been born into it every day. And yet—you will find it difficult to believe this, sir—it has not yet made up its mind as to what is the best food for babies; there is still a controversy between Breast and Bottle. For the moment the former seems to be getting the best of the argument, but it may be for the moment only; one never knows what the doctors may say next.

Points of Importance.

The feeding question is still an unsettled question; there are still mothers to be found among us who hold the most nutritious pabulum for tender infancy to be gin, cold pork, and mulled ale. And surely in a matter of this sort a mother's instincts should have [illegible]

As to the Bottle, sir, a subject in which I trust you are already beginning to take a lively, if not as yet an intelligent, interest, you will be glad to know that at last, after seventy years of investigation and experiment, science has finally decided on the best shape of [illegible]

As I said, I have been seeking sedulously for something on which I could honestly congratulate you. I have found one or two auspicious circumstances. You have been born in a healthy London suburb, and of parents with a sufficiency of income to assure to you at least comparative comfort.

Remember, for some time you will be dependent upon the whims and caprices of persons who are much bigger than yourself and almost ignorant, and that being so, it is inevitable that you will have many petty annoyances to put up with. You will, for example, constantly be bidden to go to sleep when the whole force of your vigorous young nature urges and charges you to keep wide awake. You will be compelled to lie down when almost your only desire is to sit up. You will be forced into clothes at times when you would much rather remain as God made you.

Oh, my dear sir, how violently you will hate those clothes, and how vehemently, and rightly, you will protest against them. A tightish band will be fastened round your body at the very place where you most desire to have looseness and freedom. Long garments will swaddle up your feet, and will effectually prevent your doing the one thing in the world that you will want to do most, to kick. Nasty, lacey stuff will tickle the tender texture of your neck, and (there is no getting out of this) pins will often prick you painfully. Sometimes your bath water will be too hot, at others too chilly; never, or scarcely ever, will it be at a temperature exactly in accordance with your preference.

Now, sir, when these several afflictions befall you there is one thing, and one thing only, for you to do, one form alone which your protest can take. Yell, yell at the top of your voice, and continue yelling until remedial measures are adopted. Do not forget that it is only by making the world uncomfortable for others that you can hope to make it tolerable for yourself, and thank your lucky stars that you can make it desperately uncomfortable for every one about you if and when you like.

You Hold the Cards.

For the first year or so, at any rate, of your life the game is in your hands, or rather in your throat; you hold all the cards. You can, if you will, make night hideous and day unbearable. Therefore, you will have only yourself to blame if you submit to the slightest inconvenience. If when you yell any one should incontinently slap or shake you, yell louder still; they will soon discover the folly of it.

By acting upon my simple advice—remember, I have been a baby myself—you may, as I said, for the first year or so, find the world a decentish place to live in. After that I am not so sure. As soon as you can toddle all sorts of untoward things will begin to happen to you. Then you will realize the truth of something else that I said—namely, that the world has been not at all adequately prepared for your reception.

You will find, for instance, that most of the articles of furniture, the chairs, tables, sofas, pianos, and things, have been constructed with pointed corners and sharp edges, and these, you will find, are just about on a level with your own eyes, so that if in trotting about the room you stumble you are almost sure to get badly hurt. Then, too, you will discover how pitifully easy it is to fall off things—off chairs, tables, sofas, beds—and how hard floors can be.

Where the Lunatics Score.

Some day probably it will occur to some one to make a room suitable to babies. The furniture of that room will have no pointed corners or sharp edges, and the walls and floor of it will be padded, so that the baby can tumble about and be none the worse for it, just as though he were a lunatic.

It occurred to us long ago to make those arrangements for lunatics. We don't allow lunatics to hurt themselves. But you will have to learn by experience to avoid dangerous obstacles, and in the course of learning it is quite likely you may lose an eye, or incur a permanent disfigurement. No sir, no; the twentieth-century house, even of well-to-do owners, has not yet been got ready to receive babies.

Then, yet a little later on still, your moral education will begin, and that you will find extraordinarily painful and disconcerting. You will not know what to make of that at all. You will be amazed at the unaccountable number of things that you are not allowed to do. Unless your parents and nurses are singularly wise persons you will find that the word most constantly on their lips is "Don't." You will learn that everything you most particularly want to do will by some almost uncanny coincidence turn out to be the very thing that they most particularly want you not to do.

What Naughtiness Is.

Then, if you are a thoughtful child, you will in a puzzle-headed way come to think that all your natural impulses are bad impulses, and thus you will get a dim perception of what the doctrine of original sin amounts to. You will learn that whenever you are natural or spontaneous the chances are a thousand to one that you are "naughty."

Let me now, while I am about it, explain to you exactly what "naughty" means, so that you will recognize it the very first time you hear it. It means anything that gives inconvenience or trouble to your immediate superiors; not that which is necessarily bad for you, but which is uncomfortable to them.

For example, if you are a robust, healthy boy, as God send you may be, you will often want to shout and make a noise, not by way of protest, as once you used to yell, but simply for the sake of expressing your joy in life, of letting off your superfluous energy. This impulse to make a noise may take the shape of shouting, as I suggested, or of banging some hard article against some other hard article, say a fire shovel, on the bedroom wall or the nursery door.

Good for Little Boys.

Now, as a matter of physiological and psychological fact it is extremely good for a little boy to shout and roar and bellow and bang. It expands his chest, it oxidizes his lungs, it sends the blood spinning through his veins, it strengthens his vocal chords. The boy who bellows is much less likely to grow up into the man who whimpers than the boy who gently hums.

It would be better for us all if we bellowed more. Also, it is not only extremely good, it is absolutely necessary, to let off superfluous energy. It is an antidote to sulks and grumpiness and pessimism. Therefore, you see, when you shout and roar and bellow and bang things about you will be doing just about the very best thing you can do for yourself. But you will be called "naughty" all the same, for, you understand, you will be making the house uncomfortable to other people. Unless you are curiously lucky I think you will find that whenever you specially want to make a noise some one will have a headache.

Oh, my dear sir, you have come into a world that is full of headaches.

A Bit of Your Mind.

In due course, I make no doubt, you will have whooping cough and measles and chicken pox, and quite likely scarlet fever. Now when these diseases come upon you I do hope you will up and give the world a bit of your mind. We shall richly deserve all you can say of us on these counts. It is disgraceful of us to have allowed you to come into a world in which these diseases are possible.

We could have made a clean sweep of them long ago if we had been anything more than half-men and had cared a millionth as much for our children as we pretend to care. We could have rid ourselves of them just as we have rid ourselves of the plague and typhus and church rates and the disabilities of the deceased wife's sister.

You will not catch the plague, sir, nor typhus, you will never have to pay church rates, and you may, if ever you want to, marry your deceased wife's sister, and I'll tell you why. Those horrors and inconveniences and disabilities affected grown-up persons, and so grown-up persons got rid of them. The others are called "diseases of children," and they remain.

Matters for Congratulation.

However, I will end with congratulations, after all. As you have been born in a sanitary district and of well-to-do parents, your chances of life, of pulling through to manhood, are fair. So, too, are your chances of comparative—mark, I say only comparative—health. Let me tell you, sir, that you might quite easily have been born in a place where your chances of pulling through would not have been worth talking about.

Had you decided to make your entrance in one of our industrial centers up in the North, for example, it is extremely probable, to say no more than that, that you would have been dead by this time. You have no idea what a lot of little chaps, just like you, perish within twenty-four hours of birth. And as for your ever attaining anything like comparative health—why, that would have been ridiculously out of the question. They hardly know what it means up there.

Just one word more. Don't, until you are an able-bodied youg man, with quick eyes, sharp ears, and active limbs, attempt to cross the street except under the charge of a policeman. If you do you will inevitably be run over by a motor car. HUBERT.

HORSE LIVES IN LUXURY.

FORTUNE LEFT TO EQUINE PET BY A BOSTON WOMAN AND IT IS TREATED LIKE A PRINCE.

[Boston Post:] An old bay horse, a wealthy and eccentric Boston woman and an odd legacy probated last week have just made James Moriarity, a coachman, the leading figure in one of the queerest situations ever created by a woman's will.

A lifelong lover of dumb animals, Miss Mary B. Duclos Snow, who recently died in Hartford, Conn., left $32,500 to be paid in annual stipends on "the sliding scale" to her "faithful" coachman, James Moriarity, for the care of her pet horses.

At the time when the will was made, nine years ago, five horses, each mentioned by name in the legacy, were alive, and the will provided that upon Mrs. Snow's death Moriarity should be paid a compensation of $2000 per year from the trust fund so long as any three of the horses remained alive, and that after the death of four of the horses he should receive $1500 annually until the demise of the last horse. When the last horse died, the coachman was to be given $800 per year out of the fund until his death.

Previous to the death of Mrs. Snow, all except one of the equine pets passed away, and now, to continue the earthly existence of Prince, an old bay steed twenty-eight years of age, decrepit, infirm and longing to give up the ghost, has become the burning ambition of the old coachman.

If Prince dies, Moriarity's annual income will at once be cut to $800 per year. As long as the horse can be coddled into continuing his existence he will draw $1500 by the terms of the legacy.

Today, housed in a luxurious box stall, swaddled in blankets and pampered as probably no old equine was ever before, Prince is an object of unparalleled interest and solicitation to his old caretaker.

Drive the Prince! Moriarity would as soon think of becoming a Tory. Each morning, after a carefully-prepared meal of lukewarm cereal prepared with cream and served in a dish, the horse is carefully assisted from his padded box stall to the barn floor, where Moriarity places his ward before the glass doors to allow the sunlight to reinvigorate the frame of the old steed.

If the day is exceptionally warm, Prince is taken for a short walk around the yard of the Snow estate.

If the coachman deems the weather too severe, Prince is merely allowed to thrust his nose through an opening in the window of the barn and refresh his lungs with the fresh air for a few minutes. Then he is tenderly led back to his stall and left until dinner time.

At noon his food consists of large quantities of milk and cream carefully mixed and a small bundle of English hay, but partly because the horse through age has lost most of his grinders, most of the hay remains uneaten. In fact, Prince now sniffs at any diet so commonplace.

During the afternoon, if the sun is shining, Moriarity again leads the horse carefully around the drive of the estate frequently six times, but he avers that six are usually too many for the "critter" and that five is about enough.

At "tea time" Prince gets another ration of mixed cereals and milk with an added portion of fine feed mixed with a little ground wheat.

Then he is bedded down for the night. Only the softest straw in large quantities is used for this purpose, and in addition, the old horse is tenderly blanketed even about his fore shoulders and neck.

To the old coachman the existence of his equine protegé has already become the all-important object of existence.

The will of Mrs. Snow, with its odd bequest, has become the subject of much discussion.

In addition to the legacy for her horses, $10,000 was also left for the care of her thirty dogs, now all dead, the stipend for their care to be paid to Miss Fnila C. Miller, of Orange, Mass. By the death of all the canines this money now goes to Miss Miller.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Return to First Love.

THAT horticulture is an inexact science no one has ever disputed, yet it seems that we should know some things about it, some times, and not be guessing at it all the time. But what a shock it is to scientific research and practice to learn, for example, that there is nothing real in the use of resistant grape stock to prevent the destruction of vines by the phylloxera. While the world was finding out this fact, if it is a fact, the vine growers have been exploited to a finish with high-priced resistants with hyphenated names sometimes to the extent of paying $1.50 for a single "pedigreed" vine of minus value. Of course, Belgian hares sold at a far higher price, even to $500 for a buck with a royal name; ginseng seed has brought its weight in gold or perhaps in diamonds; eucalyptus land is quoted at a figure that would confine Rockefeller's realty to a small farm, and our new fruit "creations" may be held beyond the reach of even the well-to-do if the capitalists who now control the Burbank output are anxious to realize promptly upon their investment.

It is true that no matter how hare-brained the public have been, or how prone the people may be in the future to jump into fads without awaiting the tedious but necessary test of practical experience, we know that finally demonstration will not be demanded solely by the Missourian, and that science will be required to bring its forces to bear upon practical proof and conclusion. I am not in the habit of involving sentences, although I write for an educated class of people. So I will put it this way: Horticultural science must give as much attention to doing things as it is now devoting to knowing things. Had it been given to this habit more thoroughly in the past, all France would not now be abandoning the use of resistant vines, nor all California going along blindly in their use because it is known that phylloxera cannot materially injure resistant roots. It will soon be dawning upon our people that they should have protected their "vinifera" grape roots against the introduction of the phylloxera. Had this plan been adopted twenty-five years ago and thoroughly enforced (which could have been done with 10 per cent. of the money lost from phylloxera and spent upon resistants,) a better and more abundant harvest would now be forthcoming from every vineyard.

Fault Not the Fertilizer's.

I MET a farmer recently who had a grievance against a prominent fertilizer company, and he asked me to condemn a certain brand of goods because it did not prove satisfactory in use. Of course I cannot do this. It may be that the agent of the fertilizer company forgot to tell the farmer that the "goods" would prove of little value in the inert soil to which it was applied, or the agent may not have known anything about the condition of the soil. A great deal of disappointment and loss might be obviated if it were distinctly understood that no fertilizing material, either in its natural state or acidulated will give the best and most permanent results unless applied along with decaying organic matter. The complainant in this case had his trees stimulated for a time with the commercial fertilizer used, but the reaction upon the trees, after the well-digested material had been utilized, many have brought the orchard to a lower condition than if no stimulant had been applied. The point is that this commercial manure had done just what it was manufactured to do, but under conditions not intended to be met by the manufacturer, and consequently the farmer, or the soil itself, was responsible for the failure.

Orchard fertilization is one of the most complicated matters the fruit grower has to administer. The very fact that our output of citrus fruits hangs closely about the 30,000-car mark year after year, though the citrus acreage has been enormously increased, is proof enough that we are not lessening the complications. The orange tree of the citrus belt is a delicate and unnatural organization. By heredity and treatment it has become abnormal, and has as far departed from the natural type of the seedling orange as the Jersey cow has from the wild cattle of the Pampas. As we leave normal types for commercial types of fruit trees, the questions of soil, cultivation and fertilization must be modified to meet the change of habits of the plants. Some authorities claim that the diseased or barren condition of many of the citrus trees affected is surely due to having developed an enormous fruit producer without having kept pace in knowledge as to how to keep the tree keyed up to its capacity without injury to the tree. Whatever may be the cause of failure in citrus fruit growing, I believe that the fundamental trouble is the inability to keep incorporated in the soil a reasonable amount of decaying organic matter. Hence all rules for fertilizing may fail.

Farmers Fairly Treated.

I HAVE seen one dozen Legislatures meet and wear away to a hurried adjournment since I became a citizen of California, yet I have not seen one that treated the agricultural and horticultural interests of the State with as much consideration as the present Legislature is showing. Is it because the fruit and kindred interests are grown to such importance as to demand this consideration? That in part accounts for it. Certainly not because the farmers have gone to Sacramento and demanded that their enterprises be looked after, for, with one bright exception, they have not appeared at the Capitol to ask for legislation. That exception was in the case of three bills relating to horticulture. One of these was the new county horticultural law, another the placing of the deputies of the State Horticultural Commissioner's office upon the statutory list and giving them decent wages and the other the appropriation bill for the proper maintenance of the State Commissioner's office. Favoring these measures I noticed James Mills, of Riverside, and A. G. Kendall of San Bernardino, and D. G. Overall of Visalia. These men were the authenticated representatives of several thousand fruit growers, and there were several others from the south effectively advocating these measures. The bills were all successful and the strange feature was that the members of both Senate and Assembly met these delegates half-way on every measure.

I conclude that in addition to the high quality of the present Legislature, a large majority of the members are in direct sympathy with horticultural affairs. Many of them are professional men and fruit growers also. One of the greatest and most successful lawyers in the Senate told me he had made as much money by farming as by the practice of law. He was given charge of one of our most important bills and put it through with signal ability. The fact is farming, and especially fruit growing, has become fashionable among professional and commercial men. There is now no line between the farmer and the denizen of the city. Country homes, better transportation, telephones, rural conveniences of all kinds, educational advantages and social life have combined already to unify our best interests. They have given us better representatives, more sympathetic officials toward country life and a better understanding of the country requirements than prevails in perhaps any other State. It is not a chance, nor a mere fluke that our legislators are playing fair with the countrymen of California. It is a habit, or soon will be, and for which we give thanks.

Postage Stamp Rates.

A MOVEMENT of some importance is on foot in the Sacramento and San Joaquin fruit centers to induce the transcontinental lines to place deciduous fruit shipments upon the same basis as those of citrus fruits. The rate is now $1.45 per hundred to central points, while that of oranges is $1.15 to the same places. If the postage-stamp rate were applied to deciduous fruits, the shippers claim it would aid them in securing a greater and more general distribution of their fresh fruits, which must prevail else the business will languish and great losses occur.

The Southern Pacific holds in rejoinder that there are several differences between deciduous and citrus fruits in shipment, from the carrier's point of view. Citrus fruits move practically all the year, and the greater portion of the crop moves without refrigeration; there is less hazard in handling it, and more tonnage can be loaded upon a refrigerator car than is the case with pears, peaches or grapes. Moreover, the railroad company fears to attempt the postage-stamp rate with the deciduous fruit shippers for fear their eastern connecting lines may make trouble about it. If any change in rates is attempted, much less the whole scheme of deciduous rate making, the California shippers would be in danger of greater tariffs, say the railroad people, and well-enough had better be left alone.

Meantime, the railroad has offered to take off 15 cents a hundred from the Indianapolis rate, 5 cents and 10 cents from two other rates, and let it go at that. The fruit growers' committee has not yet accepted the sop offered, but are playing for greater reductions.

Falling Into Line.

INDIANA is the first eastern State to seriously consider the enactment of a law similar to that of California's, providing for the county inspection of nursery trees. A committee of the Indiana Legislature has under consideration a measure providing for the appointment of a State Commissioner of Horticulture and for the township trustees of each township to appoint inspectors. As is usually the case with the nurserymen on the other side of the divide, they are in opposition to the proposed regulations and the American Nurserymen's Association has sent its representatives to Indianapolis to prevent the enactment of the bill. The State Entomologist is fighting the law, as it proposes to abolish his office. California inspectors and commissioners know what a farce the said entomologists make of their tree inspections, and pay no attention whatever to certificates from these eastern officials.

We have cried against the California horticultural laws for their grave defects, but our laws are perfect compared with the so-called horticultural acts of the East. There, the State Entomologist is supposed to visit all the nurseries once a year. His certificates received upon trees sent to California are often a year old and are utterly worthless. It is reported that the commission merchants are lobbying against the Indiana bill because it forbids the sale of diseased apples. What an alliance for the nurserymen to form! Those who are trying to better the fruit growers' conditions over there are up against about the worst combination to be met anywhere. The American Nurserymen's Association is in small business indeed.

remember grandmother's garden and the place which the lilac had there? "Lay- grandma called them. How sweet they were. a lamentable fact that the average home gar- is minus lilac bushes, especially the up-to-be of interest to know something of the his- lilac. There is a tradition that the lilac was to this country by Dr. John Durand, a who came to America from La Rochelle, 1690. Dr. Durand came first to New Ro- Y., but afterward settled in Derby, Conn., died in 1727. How much we owe to the French for his gracious act done to keep in remem- fatherland. Peace to his ashes! We could these had mingled with the earth under the on Highland Park, Rochester, N. Y., or that night hover over that enchanted spot and fragrance of the flower he loved so well.

evolution of the lilac—the countless varieties ling its own sweet perfume, the wide range perfection of form; what a delight they to the doctor who had such tender love for that, in that far-off time when a sea voyage such, he brought with him his lilac bush. We imagine how he cherished it and watched but how little he dreamed of the perfection that should be attained by the plant first brought to us from the homeland.

improved varieties of the lilac have been cultivated in the best nurseries, they are not known. The old common lilac and its white still occupy the greater portion of the field. the reason for this is that these plants mul- by suckers, and by this means our neigh- them is able to supply many others without in this way they have spread through nearly munity. The Persian lilac is the next best quite largely planted. But aside from is a great number of beautiful varieties which if they could be seen in bloom would be revelation to most people.

is asked: "How shall I pant?" Not plants of one or two kinds, but a mass of a more of plants, in as many kinds. They failed to give satisfaction.

gation of the many varieties now in have used as stocks the common lilac, and the common privet, Legustrum Germans have found the common European ash, Frabinus excelsior, to be an admirable stock for the same purpose, being superior to the privet in strength of growth and longevity, and less liable to be injured by moth grubs.

The lilac bears its flowers on the new growth. Old wood should be cut out immediately after the bushes have finished blooming. It is also well, as soon as the lilacs are past flowering periods, to go over the bushes and cut away all seed clusters. The result is a fairly good crop of flowers on what is considered the off year of this excellent old shrub. If it is allowed to develop seed, it generally has few flowers except in alternate years.

A man who has made it his business to know all about lilacs says: "Speaking of lilacs reminds me to say that I don't indorse what some people say about this plant being a nuisance because of its habit of sending up so many suckers from its roots. That it is prolific in this respect I admit, but there is no good reason for allowing them to grow until you have a thicket of bushes. Give your hoe blade the sharpness of a knife by filing it to a keen edge, and go over the ground about your lilacs at sprouting season, and shave off every sprout that shows its head above grass. You can do this just as easily and rapidly as you could cut off so many weeds and by doing it, you can keep your lilacs from spreading all over the yard. These bushes are nuisances only when allowed to have their own way. Give them the attention they need and they are easily kept under control. The secret of success consists in not letting them get the start of you."

The landscape gardener of the present day has a great work before him in beautifying the parks and lawns of the city; but the country gardens, with their shrubs, their flower beds with their happy-faced flowers, express the taste and individuality of the owner. Too many of us think it is a waste of time to keep the lawn nicely mowed, take time to grow flowers and ornamental shrubbery. If people would keep track of farm sales for a while they would find that all these things add materially to the value of farms.

But this is not telling the lilac story, but it is a good hint to see the nurseryman and order several bushes to use in that bare corner of the lawn.—[American Fruit Grower.

Predaceous Insects.

ON this trip to Europe Mr. Sbarboro performed another service, and one which will be of great benefit to the lemon growers of Capri in their efforts to fight the scale, which has spread over their groves. On the day of his departure for Italy Mr. Silvestria, a member of the Agricultural College at Portici, near Naples, asked Mr. Sbarboro to carry with him to Italy a box containing some 10,000 ladybugs, which he had gathered in Australia and wanted transported to Italy with the greatest care. "When I landed at Naples," said Mr. Sbarboro, "I found the officers of the Agricultural College waiting for me, and I handed over to them the precious ladybugs that had traveled so far. I was very much interested in finding out their condition, so a few days later went to Capri and visited the professor to whom the bugs had been consigned. He stated that while many had died, there were a sufficient number alive to be of great aid, for they propagate very rapidly. Their efficiency had already been tested by the professor by putting one on an infested lemon, and in a half-hour every bit of the scale was removed. He was very profuse in his thanks and declared that I had performed a valuable service to the Italians."—[Fruit Grower.

A Curious Bound.

NOT long since, the writer had occasion to visit the registry of deeds of one of the northeastern States to examine the records there relating to a certain parcel of real estate. Imagine the surprise experienced while thus engaged upon coming upon a deed, a portion of the description in which read as follows: "Thence northeasterly 40 rods 10 links to a pile of boards."

Only think of it, on a farm right here in the long-settled East! Some land owner grown so thoughtless and careless as to regard a pile of boards shiftlessly dumped on some portion of his land as a monument; and treating it as such in drawing a deed of a portion of it to some one else. How much thought and attention would such a man be likely to devote to the care of neat cattle, or to keeping his cultivated fields well tilled and clear of weeds! A great farmer, such a course, continued long, would lead one to become!

Yet as a matter of fact, too many of us are accustomed to allow refuse and rubbish heaps to stand on our premises, year after year. The writer can recall one such that remains now, just as it has been, since he was a boy; and twenty years of undisputed occupancy is usually accepted as establishing a permanent bound or monument, or as giving a good title to land.

More than one dump heap has held undisputed sway on our farm lands long enough to acquire absolute possession. But what we want to do is to order out all of these undesirable tenants; to treat them as intruders and give them notice to quit at once; handle them roughly, too, at that, if the customary twenty-four hours of grace expires and they are still on hand.

Out with them! We want no such unprofitable tenants in occupation of our lands. And we want no such thing as an ancient pile of boards to mark the extent of our land holdings, but neat walls and fences and hedges, instead; and such, as a matter of fact, we do have, to a degree not to be found anywhere else.—[American Cultivator.

Squaring Accounts.

W. L. PETERS of Riverside, or the Yucaipe, must think me an ungrateful wretch indeed. On November 11 he sent me a box of great Rome Beauty apples, expressage prepaid, and I have just received a letter from him notifying me to be on the lookout for the fruit. Now I do not believe the Times boys like apples, and it would be a base insinuation to intimate that they intercepted these "Beauties." The facts are that my address has been changed from the stone building on Broadway, to Sacramento, and not knowing that Mr. Peters contemplated sending the fruit, I could not apprise him of my new location. I hope the Times boys did get these magnificent apples, for there is no one I would rather should have them except myself. I beg the sender's pardon for not getting the fruit, and hope it will not occur again.

The firm of Peters & Evans will be heard from at the Seattle Exposition. They are preparing to send a fine exhibit to that city next season, together with other fruits from Yucaipe and Oak Glen. It may appear to the northwestern apple men that Southern California is the greatest apple country on the continent, and if there were a few thousand acres like these special localities about Redlands the northern men would not be mistaken. I paid $2 a box for Spitzenbergs a few days ago, and not nearly as good as I think the Rome Beauties were, and if this is disputed I can get plenty of testimonials from The Times office.

The Peters-Evans orchard will soon be a center for apple growers, for the orchard contains the following varieties, which will all soon be fruiting, and from which those expecting to plant may learn much to their advantage. The orchard is thirteen miles east of Redlands and two miles from Oak Glen. Here is a list of the varieties in this orchard: Little's Red, Scott's Winter, York Imperial, Nameless, Mammoth Black Twig, Hubbard Nonesuch, Arkansas Beauty, Salome, Red Cheek Pippin, Yellow Newton Pippin, Shackleford, Ben Davis, Winesap, Smith's Cider, Arkansas Black, Hoover, Rome Beauty, Stayman Winesap, Yellow Bellfleur, Jonathan, Roxbury Russett, Rhode Island Greening, Wagner, Baldwin, Cooper's Market, Paragon and B. C. Beauty.

Delayed Answers.

I HAVE expected to discover, in some unexplored depository in the Capitol Building an additional lot of an old publication entitled "Cultivation of the Citrus," and have been holding B. T. C.'s request until the books came to light. We can now state again that the supply is exhausted. Also, Dr. R. D. Robinson, Torreon, Mexico, is informed that he should ask for Bulletin 196, College of Agriculture, Berkeley, Cal., for the work upon eucalyptus culture. This answers several other queries as to where this book may be obtained, one inquirer being J. C. Harter, Redlands. The pamphlet is sent free. One answer of this kind may be helpful to many people, and I hope to have such inquiries continue.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

Sit Up and Take Notice.

MANY physical ailments are directly due to the "sloppy" position assumed by the average person in sitting and standing and walking. The organs in this way become displaced, and ill health naturally follows. Where actual displacement of the bony structure has taken place, osteopathy will be found beneficial, but it will avail little if a person keeps on doing wrong. Dr. Gulick of New York recently summed up his advice on this subject neatly and briefly when he told people to keep the back of the neck against the collar.

Here are interesting statements on the subject by Dr. Latson in Outing:

"Of the many physical defects to which human flesh is heir the most common and the most injurious in its results is the displacement downward of the upper part of the body. Such displacement—prolapsus we call it in medicine—is shown by the flattened chest, the depressed and protruding abdomen, the prominent outstanding collar bones and the flaring shoulder blades.

"As an indication of the remarkable prevalence of this deformity I may mention that, as the result of an extensive series of examinations covering several thousand subjects, I found less than 1 per cent. of bodies that were not collapsed and depressed. In other words, more than ninety nine out of every hundred people have crooked spines, lowered chests and displaced structures.

"It may be remarked that in every case those exceptional people found with straight spines, flat backs, expanded and uplifted trunks, accompanied by the absence of any prominences or hollows over the collar bones or shoulder blades—in every case those people were notable for vitality and ability. Two of them were successful vocalists—one, perhaps, the most famous oratorio basso now living. Four were women, singers, standing among the highest in that profession. One was a giant porter, whose strength and endurance were the wonder of his fellows. One was a great preacher; another the most successful prize fighter known to the ring.

"This peculiar and exceptional type of body is always associated with power, mental or physical or both."

Again, a dispatch from London quotes an English physician as saying, in the Lancet, that all consumptives should spend as much time as possible in a "face-down" position—preferably on a couch designed for the purpose. No one who suffers from lung trouble, he says, should lie on the back, but should recline face downward. If this is done, the spasms of coughing will be much less frequent.

To this it might be added that whenever a recumbent position is assumed, as in sleeping, it is best to lie as nearly as possible face down. The gentle pressure of the body on the abdomen facilitates the digestion of food.

Man is the only animal that reclines on the back. Also, man is the only animal that goes erect—with the exception of apes and bears, that do so occasionally. The gradual assumption by man of this erect position has been the cause of many physical ailments.

When, during the day, a man is not standing, he is usually sitting, a still more unnatural practice. And then, when he goes to sleep, he again is the only animal that lies on the back, another unnatural practice.

In a recent issue of the Medizinische Klinik, a German medical magazine, a writer discusses the subject of sitting, which he properly declares to be an unnatural and unhealthy position. He says it particularly tends to encourage piles, and also affects other organs, such as the brain.

The writer shows that in early days people did little sitting, lying around even at their meals, and usually this was on the right side or on the abdomen, a position that favors digestion. The writer points to the significant fact that it was only in later years, when sitting became popular, that people began to develop big bellies.

There are good suggestions in this article. It is true that a business man has little opportunity to recline during the day, but he may occasionally find brief opportunity to do so, and then he can make the most of it after business hours. Also, as above suggested, learn to sleep on your abdomen. You will find it exceedingly beneficial, and in this way you will be able to dispense with a pillow, which is unwholesome—or at least, to use a very thin one. At first you will find you soon tire of such a position, but gradually you can become accustomed to it.

In conclusion, here is a piece of advice that is as valuable as it is brief: Keep your upper lip stiff and your back straight. A stiff upper lip will aid you in fighting the battle of life successfully, and a straight back will insure a proper position of the internal organs, which is a long step toward good health.

Plumbers' Trust and Medical Trust.

WRITING from Sacramento, in reference to a vicious bill introduced in the Legislature, the correspondent of The Times said:

"Under the terms of the bill it would be illegal for a rancher to direct his hired man to connect a piece of pipe to a watering trough, or to do many other little jobs that do not require an experienced plumber."

And under the terms of authority of the medical trust it is unlawful in California for a person to administer to a neighbor a wet pack, or a rectal injection, or to give advice in regard to diet, if a charge is made for the services.

The new naturopathic bill—after it is signed by the Governor—will, to some extent, remedy this condition of affairs, but it does not go far enough.

The following dispatch from Chicago was recently published in The Times:

"Chicago physicians have formed a union, an amalgamated organization identical to the plumbers' union. Dr. Henry F. Lewis of the Chicago Medical Society vouches for this statement. In a communication to the Physician's Club he declared that any members of the medical fraternity who publicly hold up their hands in 'holy horror' at the thought of division of fees, themselves secretly participate in the practice."

The speaker expressed his sympathy with the idea of consultation between physicians and surgeons, in regard to the fee that they should charge.

Roosevelt's Medicine Chest.

IT is announced that President Roosevelt will take with him on his hunting trip a large medicine chest, containing 15,000 doses of tabloids, nearly half of which are quinine; also, that he will carry no liquor with him.

Well, from a hygienic point of view, it would be better if he would take with him a little good whisky and less "dope."

Mind and Body.

IN an article on Christian Science, published in The Times of March 7, the author, W. E. Brown, who represents the "publicity department" of Christian Science in Los Angeles, said:

"Since the discovery of Christian Science that all disease is, in its last analysis, mental, much proof of this has been produced from other sources. Recent experiments show that anger, malice, hate, lust and other similar qualities develop poisons in the system which disturb its normal action, causing functional and organic disease. It is now maintained by eminent physical scientists that there can be no effect apart from mental causation. This point once grasped, the accomplishments of Christian Science are seen to be natural, normal and logical; entirely devoid of the miraculous or supernatural."

Mr. Brown is quite true in stating that mental conditions may cause disease. On the other hand, no mental conditions, however favorable—no New Thought "affirmations," or Christian Science "demonstrations"—can offset the effects of wrong living. If you continually eat wrong food, or eat too much, you will inevitably become sick, no matter what the attitude of your mind may be.

All is not mind, any more than all is body. Man is a wonderful combination of both. "As a man thinketh so is he." Also, as a man eateth so does he think.

Do not permit yourself to lose sight of this self-evident proposition.

Dangerous Rat Poisons.

THE following communication is addressed to the Care of the Body by Benjamin Russell, superintendent of warehouses, United States Customs Service, port of New York:

"I have had presented to my notice an article in your issue of the 7th inst. on the 'Danger in Rat Crusades' and attention is called to some experiments made under my supervision here.

"As this matter of rat extermination is one of very great importance in this country, I have to say I heartily coincide with the views expressed by the 'Southern California Practitioner' that there is great danger to human beings in experimenting with so-called rat virus, and I can assure you that no one is better aware of this than myself."

Mr. Russell goes on to refer to a virus invented by a physician of the Pasteur Institute of Paris which he claims is effective, and entirely harmless to human beings.

As the editor of the Care of the Body department has previously said on more than one occasion, it is not only absurd, but harmful, to be killing off rats, flies, and other vermin, unless at the same time you remove the filth upon which those vermin feed, for, as previously observed here, if—which of course is impossible—you could succeed in killing off all the vermin in the world, you would, within a very brief period, see a pestilence that would sweep the human race off the face of the earth.

Clean up. Remove filth. Keep food materials in vermin-free places. Then you will be little troubled with rats, or flies, or other now beneficent and necessary scavengers.

at Restaurants.

PONDENT sends the following communi-me two years since adopted the 'no-breakwith great benefit to myself, I would like to -meat' plan also.

you have heard of the bulbous-nosed party astonishment of his friends, was assisting strongly in obtaining a strict prohibition law, and who replied when joked about it: 'Sure I'm in favor of the law. What I'm ag'in' is the inforcement of it.'

"My wife says that I am a vegetarian on the same plan, and this of course may be the case, although I make the excuse to myself, that I find it hard to get a lunch at 11 o'clock—having had nothing to eat before that time—at a city restaurant, as my business compels me, which will satisfy me, unless it includes meat of some kind. The vegetarian restaurant's vegetable veal cutlets, etc., seem like harmless humbugs, at three prices to me, and I have finally picked out two places which seem to come closest to meeting my requirements all around, including cost and service.

"I inclose the bill of fare for both these places. If the subject is one which will be of general interest to the readers of the 'Care of the Body,' I will be glad to have you state your idea of what can be picked out of them, which will fill the bill for me, and no doubt for many others who, like me, are at least theoretical vegetarians."

One of the bills of fare inclosed is that of an expensive restaurant. The other is one where the prices are lower.

For a man who selects a meal in regard to the hygiene of food—who is exceedingly particular in what he eats—it is not an easy thing to pick out a satisfactory meal from the menu of an ordinary restaurant. Especially is this true where a person does not consume the semi-animal products—milk, cheese, butter and eggs. Where, however, a person is not so over-particular, a palatable and nutritious meal may be selected from the ordinary bill of fare without including meat. You will scarcely be able to get away from salt and sugar, and the juices of the vegetables, with their necessary organic salts will, in most cases, have been discarded. Still, you need not starve in the presence of plenty.

There is always fruit to be had, raw and cooked; also salads of various kinds, but when prepared they usually contain vinegar, which is bad. Then there are the vegetables, the various kinds of cereal foods, of which the number now is legion, different kinds of breads, crackers, and toasts. Maccaroni or spaghetti, either in the Italian style or with cheese, may usually be had. There are eggs in various forms, and different kinds of cheese.

For instance, here are five simple meals that might be selected from one of the menus inclosed by the correspondent:

(1) Marcaroni au gratin; watercress; apple fritters with maple syrup.

(2) Spinach and poached egg; baked potatoes; sliced pineapples.

(3) Mushrooms; stewed tomatoes; banana fritters.

(4) New butter beans; ripe California olives; lettuce; baked apples.

(5) Rice with cream; asparagus; prunes; Oregon cream cheese.

Usually at first-class restaurants some kind of wholemeal bread may be obtained. In ordering salad you should ask for the green stuff without "fixings," otherwise they will use vinegar, which is not wholesome.

In this way the non-flesh eater may be able to eat with some satisfaction at an ordinary restaurant for a time, but he could not keep it up indefinitely without having trouble with his conscience or his stomach—or both.

On the other hand, the vegetarian restaurants, besides being, as the correspondent suggests, expensive, are, as a rule, unsatisfactory, offering a surplus of starches and sweets, besides the absurd imitation flesh foods. The man who knows how to eat can, however, always manage to pick out a meal.

The real hygienic eating place has yet to be introduced. When there is a sufficient demand for it, it will come. Meantime, it might be of advantage to some restaurants if they would provide daily in their menu a few dishes for those who abstain from flesh foods. In the latest edition of The Times Cook Book are a number of meatless dishes.

Working Women.

MRS. TAFT, a daughter of J. P. Morgan, and other women at Washington are interesting themselves in the condition of working women, especially of the women employed by the government.

There are many women who need attention and help more than those employed by the government. Uncle Sam is a liberal employer. It is the women who work long hours in the slums of large cities and in ill-appointed factories who most need the attention of humane persons. If women must work long hours for small wages it should be at least insisted that while they work they may breathe pure air—or air as pure as can be obtained.

Injurious Food Preservatives.

IN the Care of the Body of March 7 was reproduced from Good Health, the Battle Creek magazine, an article on benzoate of soda, which chemical Dr. Harvey Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, has declared, after exhaustive tests, to be injurious to health. The manufacturers induced the president to appoint a "referee board" of consulting scientists, to upset Dr. Wiley's objections, which they have done—for a time.

In its March number, the National Food Magazine devotes its leading article, of three pages, to this subject. The writer declares that this controversy over benzoate of soda and other chemical preservatives in food products "is liable to grow in importance until every member of Congress is engaged in it, and until it develops into one of the bitterest political wars ever waged in this country."

"It was recently mentioned in The Times that Dr. Tom She Bin, one of the best known Chinese physicians in the United States, had been charged with practicing without a license. The doctor is a graduate of one of the leading colleges of medicine in China. He came to this country many years ago. En route plague broke out on the ship. The vessel's physician was unable to cope with it, but it is said that Dr. Tom saved every case. He was retained by the steamship company and served on Oriental lines for several years. He then began to practice among his countrymen in San Francisco, but after the earthquake came to Los Angeles. In view of the fact that a majority of plague cases in San Francisco have proved fatal under the care of white physicians, it might not be a bad idea to get Dr. Bin to go up there and see what he can do."

foods preserved by this substance. The writer says:

"It is a powerful preservative which makes foods keep for an indefinite period of time after they are packed. It is a mask that can be worn by the vilest factory refuse and half-rotten products to deceive the consumer into believing that they are pure and wholesome. It is an embalming substance which is injurious to the digestion just in proportion as it is powerful as a preservative, for digestion itself is nothing more nor less than a process of decomposition of food."

These greedy and conscienceless packers who would put out filthy and poisonous foods are not, by any means, out of the woods. They have not back of them the support of a large proportion of the reputable food manufacturers of the country. There has been formed an "American Association for the Promotion and Purity in Food Products" composed entirely of food manufacturers and dealers. At the first meeting of this association resolutions were adopted protesting against the use of benzoate of soda, because of the many illegitimate practices it permitted. The National Canners' Association at its recent convention also adopted resolutions opposing the use of chemicals.

This is a matter that directly affects every American home. You say that people use preservatives for many years, and do not suffer therefrom. How do you know that they do not suffer therefrom? How many insidious diseases, the cause of which is not suspected, are due to chemically preserved foods, some of which, when put up, are fit only for the garbage crematory?

Some people suppose that they only consume these preservatives once a day, or perhaps not so often. They are away off—that is to say, if they eat as most people do. For instance, you are quite likely to find this benzoate of soda in your pickles, in your preserves, in your canned fruits, in the "dope" you drink at a soda-water fountain, and in your candy. Thus your system gradually becomes impregnated with a poisonous chemical that must inevitably undermine your digestion and injure your health.

A writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association says:

"The case against benzoate of soda, from the standpoint of the man in the street, has been well summed up by Federal Judge Anderson in a suit brought by some manufacturers to enjoin the State Board of Health of Indiana from enforcing that portion of the Pure Food Law relating to the use of this chemical: 'I am impressed with the proposition that this stuff, benzoate of soda, is put in there for reasons that make its prohibition reasonable and proper—to cover up careless methods of manufacture. Dirt and insanitary conditions can be concealed by putting this stuff in. It is not necessary to put it in if the materials are properly handled. If its use conceals the fact that proper methods have not been used, a rule of the State Board of Health prohibiting its use is reasonable.'"

Meantime, as previously suggested, it would be interesting to know what pull was exercised by these manufacturers in obtaining a reversal of Dr. Wiley's decision. There is a "nigger in the woodpile" somewhere.

Simple Dietetic Sense.

THE following is contributed to the Care of the Body by Bruce Hubbard of San Bernardino:

"So much has been said and written concerning diet that it would seem that nothing new could be advanced on the subject. I shall not attempt anything original on this occasion, but shall aim to impress an idea already advanced.

"Alexander Pope has aptly said: 'There are only a few certain things in this world. So, on this subject, we find a few certain things from which to draw our conclusions. The first fact is that humanity is suffering from a great number of physical ills. Many of these troubles seem to have their origin either directly or indirectly in improper diet. As people seem to be making an effort to get nearer to nature, I shall endeavor to discuss this question from the standpoint of nature. For this purpose I shall compare man with the lower, undomesticated animals. So far as we have been able to observe, animals in a state of nature suffer much less than man from disorders arising from a wrong diet. Now comes the question, what is the chief difference in their lives in regard to diet? Some animals, as the buffalo, wild horse and deer, are strict vegetarians, and manifest a marked degree of health and activity and in some instances great courage. Another class of animals, namely the lion, tiger, leopard and many others, live so far as we know, exclusively on flesh. They, also, exhibit great health, strength and courage. Again the question confronts us. Wherein lies the difference? It's simply this: All of these animals live on a diet in most cases restricted to a single article of food. The buffalo, so far as we know, in his natural state, eats nothing but grass and drinks nothing but water. On the other hand, the carnivorous animals eat meat only and drink water. In the bodies of these animals are found as many different tissues as are in the human body, yet the entire organism is maintained in good condition upon only a single article of diet.

"While I regard a vegetable diet as best for man, I do not think meat so injurious as many hygienists would have us believe. Many hunters and trappers have kept strong and healthy to a good old age on a diet chiefly of meat. These same men feared nothing, and were as ready to fight as the bears they hunted. It is the indiscriminate mixing of many kinds of meat with many kinds of vegetables and cereals that gives rise to so many internal disorders. Now, when we add many kinds of drinks to our vegetables and cereals and meats, it can readily be seen that fermentation is quite likely to occur. It also seems to me quite reasonable to suppose in such a case that the organs of digestion and assimilation would have quite a difficult task to perform.

"Referring again to the lower animals, we find, so far as we are able to discover, that they have lived in the manner referred to above for perhaps thousands of years; at any rate, for many generations. We also know that there is a tendency in all organic beings to adapt themselves to conditions. As a result of this tendency the alimentary organs of these lower animals have become perfectly adapted to the digestion and assimilation of the particular food upon which they have so long lived. Now we come to a strong point in our argument. The lower animals have lived, as before stated, for generations on the one-kind food and we feel safe in saying they are not subject to any greater number of diseases than they were many generations ago. Man has steadily enlarged the number of foods he consumes, and the number of his diseases have increased about in proportion to the increase in his diet.

"As I have no intention of enlarging upon the foregoing statements I will sum up with these conclusions:

"First—The lower animals have lived for ages on a single article of diet with no increase in disease.

"Second—Man has constantly increased his diet and his diseases have also increased.

"Third—We may safely conclude that the human family would profit much by living nearer in accordance with the so-called inferior animals, so far as diet is concerned."

These suggestions are entirely in line with statements that have been made over and over again in the Care of the Body. It matters far less what you eat as how you eat it and how much. As the writer says, one of the chief points, is not to mix together at a meal too many articles of food that quarrel and produce fermentation in the stomach. We see the result of this in slop-fed hogs—and men.

At the same time, there are other circumstances to be noted in considering why the animals are more healthy. They live natural lives, in the open air. They do not worry, and they stop eating when they have enough—except "civilized" hogs.

Again, remember that no animal besides man except the hog—and that animal only after it has been "civilized" by man—is omniverous. Also remember that no animals begin to show such a percentage of disease as hogs and men. Man is not naturally omnivorous. He is frugivorous, like his cousins the apes. While, after thousands of years, he has succeeded in accustoming himself to the use of flesh food, it has shortened his life and woefully increased his physical suffering.

Finally, remember that all these animals eat their food in the natural form. They do not cook it. Even the trapper does not eat canned or cold-storage meat. He gets it fresh.

By following this rule, you may expect to live out your allotted span, as do the wild animals—barring accidents or killing by "sportsmen"—but you will not, of course, be able to live forever, as some misguided people foolishly pretend to suppose. You may, however, die naturally of old age, which not one person in ten thousand does now, among what we call "civilized" people.

A Letter from Dr. Haig.

DR. ALEXANDER HAIG of London has a world-wide reputation as the leading proponent of the uric-acid theory of disease. The editor of the Care of the Body recently sent Dr. Haig a clipping from the Medical World, in which the subject of disease was treated in the usual superficial manner of those who look to the effects instead of seeking the cause. In acknowledging receipt of this clipping Dr. Haig wrote as follows:

"Many thanks for your interesting cutting from the Medical World of November. It is as you say, weak argument, and treating of effects in place of causes.

"Old superstitions die hard, especially when self-interest is on the side of superstition. It does not pay (regarding the matter from a 'trade' point of view) to cure a migraine right out with diet. It is much better to deal in pseudo-scientific obscurities and treat it with drugs which only palliate. One case of migraine may mean £20 or £30 per annum to the doctor if it is not cured.

"Thus is what was once a noble profession debased to the level of trade by greed of gain. The only remedy is to pay so much a year to be kept well—pay to stop during illness—matters would move then in the opposite direction. [Just what the Care of the Body has frequently advised. Ed.]

"The worst mistake in the article is where the editor speaks of 'neurotic individuals,' 'toxic neurosis' and 'highly-strung nervous individuals.' These words as he uses them are almost devoid of meaning, but the evil effect of such ignorant jargon is that it directs attention away from the fact that these things are the results of quite simple causes, and that the causes being removed, the results soon follow. So long, however, as people look at these things as an 'intelligent' jury does at what they call 'death by the visitation of God' when they want to get to their lunch and be done with the business anyhow, of course nothing can be done.

"For me 'narcotic, nervous and high strung' mean only colloemia and weak heart, causing defective circulation in the brain and cortex, and when you have got rid of the colloemia and strengthened the heart the individual assumes a quiet different character."

Healthy Jews.

IN La Semaine Medicale (Paris, December 23) Dr. L. Cheinisse had an article (translated in the Literary Digest) in which he brought up the question whether Jews are immune to alcohol. This is not the only kind of immunity attributed to those of Hebrew race. The author notes that they are also credited with immunity to plague, dysentery, typhus, and malaria. Dr. Cheinisse concludes that this immunity, if it exists, is rather due to social and religious conditions.

Not so. The exceptional vitality and freedom from disease of the Jews is undoubtedly, as heretofore pointed out in these columns, due to the fact that they have for thousands of years followed the hygienic laws of Moses, many of which are in close accord with the laws of nature, especially those relating to cleanliness, and the avoidance of pork and other objectionable foods. It is true that of late many Jews have fallen away from a strict observance of these laws. It will be found that they will gradually suffer in consequence, although for generations they will benefit by the wisdom of their forefathers.

Doubtless, religious and social conditions have also contributed in no small degree to the good health of the Jewish race.

The following item is reproduced from the New York Herald:

"Superficial scrutiny of the vital statistics yields the Jew a prominent position in the sanitary world, if longevity serves as an index of hygienic living. With the average length of life for all Christian people placed at 36 years and 11 months (1900,) the Jew may hope to reach 48 years and 9 months.

"Neuville (1885,) inquiring into the comparative duration of life and causes of death of Jews and Christians in Frankfort, learned that one-fourth of the Jewish population was living beyond 71 years, while only one-fourth of their neighbors was living beyond the age of 9 years and 10 months. Abbott claims that 'they (i. e., Jews) are much less frequently the subjects of tuberculosis and acute epidemic diseases than any other race of mankind.'"

Beans.

A MINING prospector recently thanked the editor of the Care of the Body for having, as he declared, saved his life. The man had been in a very bad way, physically. He had been living, like most other prospectors, mainly on beans and bacon—much beans and little bacon. After reading an article in the Care of the Body, he cut out the "frijoles," and within six weeks was all right.

Dried beans are an article of diet that should be used in great moderation, more especially by those who lead a sedentary life. They are a highly-concentrated food. They contain an excess of protein, and they also contain a percentage of xanthin, an equivalent of uric acid. This is mainly found in the hulls. Also, the hulls are indigestible. The evil effects of a free consumption of beans can be greatly modified by passing them through a colander, to remove the hulls, and by always eating with them some raw green stuff.

It is said that Pythagoras, who was a vegetarian, forbade his disciples to eat beans. Beans form a large portion of the dietary of the Hindus, and this, to some extent, accounts for the lack of virility displayed by the great mass of those people.

An Ohio correspondent of the Medical Brief tells of a case in which a small tapeworm was found in an egg.

This is not unprecedented, or surprising. The hen is even a greater scavenger than the hog. Well-cooked eggs are not so digestible as raw eggs, because the albumen is coagulated by the heat. They are, however, safer to eat.

Reading Glasses

Shortly After the Age of Forty Years

even a person with perfect eyesight may expect to need reading glasses. If one is "near sighted" the necessity of such aid will be postponed according to the degree of the defect. "Exceptions prove the rule," but this is the normal condition. The cause is the loss of the elasticity of youth, and is a tax levied by the hand of time. This condition cannot be banished by denying its existence.

Do not let your vanity rob you of the great aid and comfort that can be supplied by the use of well fitted glasses.
